7. All New Contributors are Required to Forward with their First Answers their Real Names and Addresses for Registration; such names and addresses will not be published except in the case of Prize-winners.

8. The nom-de-plume chosen by competitors should not exceed 12, and must under no circumstances consist of more than 14 letters.

9. Competitors must on no account change their noms-de-plume they have once assumed.

10. On the announcement of the Prize-winner's nom-de-plume, the successful competitor must write and make formal application for the Prize, stating the address to which the cheque must be sent. Any competitor failing to do so within three months of winning the Prize will forfeit all claim to the same.

11. No communications can be received on post-cards, by telegraph, or by hand. They must all be sent by the time named above. All post letters addressed—

PUZZLE EDITOR OF "TRUTH," Carteret-street, Queen Anne's-gate, S.W.

"TRUTH" PUZZLE, No. 921.

Dormer (real name and address will be printed in due course) £2 2 0

SPECIAL NOTICE.—THE "TRUTH" DOLL AND TOY SHOW.

It is intended to publish next week full particulars as to the Prizes which will be awarded in connection with the coming Truth Show. As has already been announced, the First Prize for the Doll-Dressing will be a Lady's Gold Watch kindly presented by the Goldsmiths' and Silversmiths' Company, of Regent-street. It may be mentioned also that Truth Brooches will be given to all ladies dressing a certain number of dolls. The supply of the latter has now grown appreciably small, and applicants who desire to participate in the competition should make early application for the dolls, large or small, or both, which they may require.

It is necessary to repeat that the Truth Toy Fund for the purchase of 25,000 new Toys for the Hospital and Workhouse children of London, is now open, and that subscriptions are urgently needed in order that the Christmas Distribution may be carried out in its entirety.

"TRUTH" PUZZLE, No. 910.

This competition has been productive of exceptional trouble and delay through the failure of many of the competitors to strictly observe the conditions laid down when it was first announced. There is, let me add, some excuse for the many offenders, inasmuch as I believe they offended unwittingly against the given instructions. They were unaware of the fact, that is to say, that their lists contained the names of horses in training, which names had been expressly tabooed. The result has been, as many readers of this page will be aware, that two competitors announced as prize winners have been in succession disqualified on the above account. Warned by this double experience, I have submitted several other lists chosen by me as specially good ones to the scrutiny of a sporting friend, who has informed me that these also are disqualified for a similar reason, viz., the inclusion amongst them of names already borne by horses in training. In this way at least half a dozen of the best lists have been necessarily adjudged ineligible. In the end, however, I have been able to find a list of names amongst which there is none borne by a horse at present in training, and the prize is accordingly awarded to Analyst for the following twelve names:—

1. French Polish. 2. Mountaineer. 3. Goldseeker. 4. Fortification. 5. Panacea. 6. Repartee. 7. Desperado. 8. War Song. 9. Golden Pippin. 10. Pearl Barley. 11. Grace Darling. 12. Succour.

"TRUTH" PUZZLE, No. 922.

After taking into full account the conditions laid down when this competition was announced, it has been decided to award the Prize to Hopetown for the following quotation. I would, at the same time, congratulate the many competitors who succeeded in finding seven quotations on their patient and successful research.

The Prize Quotations.

1. The very brightest Sunday autumn saw.—Wordsworth, "The Brothers."
2. You saw the man—on Monday was it?—Tennyson, "Walking to the Mail."
3. Some weeks before Shrove Tuesday came about.—Byron, "Beppo," stanza 1.
4. On a Wednesday morn of St. Joseph's eve.—Longfellow, "The Blind Girl of Castel Cuillé."
5. Blessedest Thursday 's the fat of the week.—Browning, "Holy Cross Day."
5. But L——d! that Friday I was fou.—Burns, "Holy Willie's Prayer."
7. When Saturday night is market night.—Dante G. Rossetti, "Jenny."

"TRUTH" PUZZLE, No. 923.

The Prize in this competition will be awarded next week.

"TRUTH" PUZZLE, No. 927.

The usual prize of Two Guineas is offered this week to the competitor who best succeeds in writing

The Words of an Original Song Suitable to be Set to Music, and not Containing more than Twenty-four Lines in all.

In case a refrain is used in the song the lines in it need only be reckoned once should they be identical at the end of each verse. Any metre which is suitable for music may be used, and the song may be grave or gay, sentimental or humorous. All songs must reach me by the morning of Monday, November 9, at the latest.

Answers to Correspondents.

 The real name, with the address, of Viti, winner of a half of Prize No. 918, is Miss Frances E. Palmer, Hillsyde, Seaton, Devon.

White Lion.—Your anagram, "A marked man! up to his flat teeth in human blood," did not reach this office in time to be published with the other specimens.

Hibernian.—I have made the desired substitution.

Arturus.—There is not time, I fear, for such a competition as you suggest. The appointment may be made any day.

Viti.—Your nom de plume was published as "Vitio" in mistake. The names should have read "Viti and S.J."

Wings and Old Peter.—Your anagrams on "Abdul Hamid" arrived too late to be printed with the others.

Imara.—Thanks for your letter.

Heron.—I think you may fairly claim your nom de plume.

THE PUZZLE EDITOR

"TRUTH" PUZZLE, No. 924.—ASSORTED SPECIMENS—GOOD AND OTHERWISE.

PROVERBS OR EPIGRAMMATIC SENTENCES MADE BY TAKING WORDS TO BE FOUND IN THE NUMBER OF "TRUTH" DATED OCTOBER 15.

 Each competitor has sent with the sentences published over his or her name references to the pages and columns, &c., from which the words composing it were taken. It has been thought unnecessary, however, to publish these references save in a few of the earlier "Specimens."

THE PUZZLE EDITOR.

1. If you court a young woman, and you are won, and she is won, you will both be one.

If (p. 910) you (p. 906) court (p 869) a (p. 896) young (p. 896) woman (p. 909) and (p. 900) you (p. 907) are (p. 902) won (p. 898) and (p. 902) she (p. 896) is (p. 907) won (p. 869) you (p. 907) will (p. 888) both (p. 881) be (p. 879) one (p. 897).

2. The person who can least spare it is often most willing to give others a piece of his mind.

The (p. 929) person (p. 886) who (p. 887) can (p. 918) least (p. 873) spare (p. 886) it (p. 927) is (p. 928) often (p. 923) most (p. 921) willing (p. 871) to (p. 922) give (p. 895) others (p. 925) a (p. 924) piece (p. 885) of (p. 926) his (p. 920) mind (p. 874).

3. There is a time when nothing may be said, a time when something may, but no time when all things may.

There (p. 897) is (p. 885) a (p 897) time (p. 885) when (p. 897) nothing (p. 906) may (p. 869) be (p. 869) said (p. 870) a (p. 871) time (p. 870) when (p. 871) something (p. 888) may (p. 872) but (p. 885) no (p. 873) time (p 870) when (p. 890) all (p. 894) things (p. 874) may (p. 874).—Lancelot.

The best plan is, as the common proverb has it, to profit by the folly of others (by Pliny the Elder)

The (p. 873, line 5, col. 1) best (p. 873, line 37, col. 1) plan (p. 912, last line but one, col. 1) is (p. 912, last line but five, col. 1) as (p. 913, line 12, col. 1) the (p. 913, line 5, col. 1) common (p. 897, line 1, col. 2) proverb (p. 929, see puzzle 924) has (p. 929, see puzzle 910) it (p. 929, see puzzle 910, line 3) to (p. 926, line 8, col. 1) profit (p. 926, last line but three, col. 1) by (p. 929, puzzle 924, line 2) the (p. [illegible], puzzle 924, line 3) folly (p. 917, review of "In the Valley of Tophet") of (p. 895, line 25, col. 2) others (p. 895, last line but nine, col. 2).—Bladud.

Young men think old men fools and old men know young men to be so. (Quoted by Camden as a saying of one Dr. Metcalf.)

Young (p. 894, col. 2, line 24) men (p. 873, col 1, line 14) think (p. 889, col. 2, line 32) old (p. 894, col. 2, line 22) men (p. 897, col. 2, line 31) (fools p. 887, col. 2, line 21) and (p. 869, col. 1, line 2) old (p. 909, col. 1, line 11) men (p 883, col. 1, line 35) know (p. 887, col. 2, line 25) young (p. 896, col. 2, 3rd line from bottom) men (p. 877, col. 1, 7th line from bottom) to (904, col. 1, line 30) be (p. 879, col. 2, line 11) so (p. 897, col. 1, line 52).—Excelsior.

The man who says there is nothing new under the sun will change his opinion when his wife next asks him to pay her bill for millinery.

The (p. 869, col. 1, line 1) man (p. 885, col. 1, line 33) who (p. 911, col. 1, line 28) says (p. 870, col. 2, line 32) there (p. 869, col. 1, line 33) is (p. 869, col. 1, line 41) nothing (p. 877, col. 1, line 40) new (p. 872, col. 2, line 29) under (p. 881, col. 1, line 56) the (p. 870 col. 1, line 1) sun (p. 927, col. 2, Sun Insurance advertisement) will (p. 869, col. 2, line 44) change (p. 894, col. 1, line 8) his (p. 879, col. 1, line 3), opinion (p. 873, col. 1, line 39) when (p. 870, col. 1, line 26) his (p. 909, col. 2, line 3) wife (p. 885, col. 2, line 35) next (p. 891, col. 1, line 73) asks (p. 880, col. 1, line 1) him (p. 883, col. 2, line 7) to (p. 912, col. 1, line 2) pay (p. 869, col. 1, line 36) her (p. 914, col. 1, line 3) bill (p. 894, col. 1, line 24) for (p. 911, col. 2, line 3) millinery (p. 914, col. 1, line 6).—Almaviva.

Truly the light is sweet, and a pleasant thing it is for the eyes to see the sun.—(Ecclesiastes xi., 7.)

Truly (Cottell's letter, 911) the (p. 875, second line) light (p. 895, Paris Notes, twenty-third line) is (p. 869, first line) sweet (p. 914, Recipe for Cooking Goose) and (p. 869, first line, second column) a (p. 871, first line) pleasant (p. 900, second column, third paragraph) thing (p. 872, first column, ninth line from bottom) it (p. 873, second paragraph, first column) is (p. 872, sixteenth line) for (p. 872, second line from bottom first column) the (p. 873, sixth line) eyes (p. 913, Girls' Gossip, fifth line) to (p. 912) see (p. 913, second column, fourth line from bottom) the (p. 913, second column, first line) sun (Sun Life on cover).—Forget-me-not.

Is it not peculiar that rogues, imposters, offenders against the laws find at last a grave-stone signed by —Truth?

Is (p. 869, col. 1, line 17) it (p. 869, col. 2, line 6) not (p. 870, col. 1, line 4) peculiar (p. 870, col. 2, line 5) that (p. 871, col. 1, line 10) rogues (p. 887, col. 1, line 29) imposters (p. 888, col. 1, line 8) offenders (p. 893, col. 1, line 58) against (p. 893, col. 2, line 35) the (p. 894, col. 1, line 2) laws (p. 894, col. 1, line 8) find (p. 896, col. 1, line 36) at (p. 897, col. 2, line 20) last (p. 899, col. 1, line 41) a (p. 907, col. 2. line 6) grave (p. 908, col. 1, line 59) stone (p. 909, col. 1, line 21) signed (p. 909, col. 2, line 38) by (p. 910, col. 2, line 12) — (p. 911, col. 1, line 20) Truth (p. 911, col. 1, line 38).—Impérieuse.

We have every right to make war in a good cause, we have no right to make peace for a vile policy.—Makmax.

(N.B.—All the words in the foregoing will be found in page 929, except "right" and "make," which occur on page 930.)

Call no Peer a happy man until he has gone over to the great majority.—Imsel.

A public man should have a public mind, or private ends will be served at public cost.—Pierepone-te.

A Radical Premier wins the approval of his party but three times—on his appointment, on his resignation, and on his death.—Rewob.

1. Out of experience, effort, and thought comes knowledge, achievement, and act. 2. Out of need, failure, and error comes desire, success, and fact.—Sulbor.

Women have more force in their countenance than we have in our laws, and more power in their crying than we have by our argument.

What I wanted to send, but could not find the words for it, was the following:—"Women have more strength in their looks than we have in our laws, and more power in their tears than we have by our arguments."—Hibernian.

In the concert of Europe it is a condition that there shall be no solo on the programme.—Bowzer.

Young men think old men are fools; but old men know that young men are.—Scotus Viator.

For age and want save while you may, no morning sun lasts a whole day.—Pigtail.

1. You should never put your foot one step further forward than you can keep it down. 2 The best way to keep great acts in memory is by refreshing them with new ones.—Echo.

1. All men love truth; the majority of men prefer truth to be on their side. 2. Truth does not always call for accuracy of detail, but in giving a right impression. 3. Knowledge is a step which few may climb, while duty is a path which all may walk. 4. Justice is like the kingdom of God: it is not with us as a fact, but it is within us as a great desire.—Granite.

One man can take a horse to the water, but any number can't make him drink.—Rich Man.

What pain to the father of falsehood to look at all the people racing to try and obtain the prize from TRUTH! But if there were no prize would they run as fast?—Christie Dean.

The World has charm for us all in youth, but our older judgment asks for TRUTH.—W. G. B.

We are inclined to over-estimate the effect of opposition to truth, simply because opposition makes itself heard, whereas conviction comes home without any loud outcry (adaptation from Eliza Cook's journal).—Dry Monopole.

It is necessary to know a great deal, but it is well to be careful to whom we open our mind (this proverb is original).—Rex.

As the light of a single star is a relief to the dull appearance of midnight, so is one act of charity to the meanness and narrow-mindedness of uncouth humanity.—La Plata.

Lord Bacon says: If a man look sharp and intelligently, he shall see fortune; for though she be blind, she is not invisible.—Iota.

He that would put on a public gown must first put off the private person (Old proverb from Maunder's "Treasury of Knowledge."—Gervase.

Beauty is truth—truth beauty; this is all ye know on earth, and all ye need to know.—Heron.

TRUTH, with clear eye and strong hand, has seen and put down many a crying grievance.—Irma Lee.

1. A wit in his own eyes is often a fool in the eyes of the world. 2. You must be content to lose a fly if you mean to catch a trout.—Viva.

There is a journal called TRUTH, which desires to make men and women as good as itself.—Londoner.

HONESTY.

1. Pay your debts when they fall due,
In paying them, yourself pay too;
Your purse is then no empty net,
Freedom it holds—no dun, no debt.

FRIENDSHIP.

2. Join your china end to end,
But a broken friendship who can mend.

DEMOCRACY.

3. Trades' unions are death to many a score,
But union is strength, if righteous, 'tis sure.
4. The houses of the great now empty lie.
Rich folks creep in, they fatten, then die.
5. Are the friends of our age the friends of our youth?—St Miac.

Shame the devil by telling truth; tell truth and shame the devil. O, while you live tell truth. (Henry IV., act iii., sc. 1, Part I.)—Don't Care.

As now, thanks to "Truth," our Rosebery is "off,"
Will "Truth," from his well, himself fill the trough. Nitram.

A bird in the ladies' new bonnet is seen, but not in an osprey's nest.—Pansy.

1. When gold untold
Shall reign supreme,
Then poverty
Will be its queen.
2. Toady the great,
Spurn equal and mate.
Then when you die
All eyes will be dry.
3. If labour fights capital for undue pelf,
She cuts her own throat to destroy herself.

TRUTH.

4. A lie that is told,
A life to save,
Will lay its honour
In early grave. St. Miac.

1. Said Kity to a reverend Dean,
"What reason can be given,
Since marriage is a holy thing,
That they have none in Heaven?"
"They have," says he, "no women there."
She gives him quick reply:
"Women there are, but I fear much
They have not any priests."
(Not original.)

2. A blind man cannot judge of colours, but Truth, though a blind woman, can see through all others.—Das Ding.

Benevolent readers of TRUTH, support and give assistance to the TRUTH Toy Show; and make many a poor miserable hovel into sunny happy homes.—Granite.

The Sultan turned round, and he looked bright and jolly
As he winked at the concert in note and words spoken,
While Europe appears to endorse the great folly
Of "working the pump while the leakage runs open" Sceptic.

To die be given us, or to attain!
Fierce work it were to do again.
Eiffel Tower.

In a great country of the East,
Its Sultan see, a worse than beast—
Bloodthirsty monster, devil-man,
Peer him, Satan, if you can!

N.B.—The exigencies of the competition are trying. If I had been warranted in putting the above as follows it would not have been so bad:—

At Yildiz Kiosk in the East,
The Sultan sits in shape of beast;
Dame Europa's bogie-man,
Match him, Devil, if you can! Rick.

When exhausted with barren toil, or harassed by a sense of failure and disappointment in the eager struggle to get hold of TRUTH, we may turn for relief and amusement to the consideration of one of the many less important, but still attractive and interesting, puzzles invariably suggested for solution in that excellent paper.—Orlando.

"TRUTH" PUZZLE, No. 925.—ASSORTED SPECIMENS—GOOD AND OTHERWISE.

ACROSTICS ON THE NAME OF QUEEN VICTORIA.

 As there is some available space a first selection of "Acrostics" is published below. THE PUZZLE EDITOR.

Victoria's reign——
In British hearts, I ween,
Comes there to-day the will, with might and main,
To sing, as ne'er before, "God Save the Queen."
On no head has a crown
Rested so nobly, brilliantly, so long:
In virtues none has won so great renown,
Assisting Right and putting down the Wrong
Malignant.

Vested and throned with inherited glory,
Islands the jewels that shine in thy crown,
Cold were the heart that could reckon thy story
Trite in the telling, or free from renown;
Only ungenerous tongues can deny thee
Regnant, the honour that comes at thy call,
In the kings' line there are few that come nigh thee,
And at the last thou excellest them all.
Imsel.

Victoria, thou whose reign has been
In deeds more glorious than its peers,
Covering a greater span of years
Than that of English king or queen,
Oh, may'st thou long be spared in love,
Ruling a people richly blest
In thee their Sovereign; till, at rest,
A nobler crown is thine above.
Toomevara.

Veiled in the glory of her years, she reigns,
Incomparable; evermore maintains
Crown'd dignity and matchless queenly grace.
To none has been vouchsafed so long a space,
On England's long-enduring Throne, and none
Ruled wiselier. Victoria has won
Immortal honour, and the world's acclaim;
Ages will own the lustre of her name.
Maison Blanc.

Victoria! We're proud of our noble Queen,
India's Empress and ruler thou also hast been;
Cheer, boys, for one so mighty and grand,
Thou having reigned longest over our land.
O, Monarch, still further may thou sit on the throne,
Ruling with justice as hitherto shown.
Imperial Majesty, before thee I bend,
And trust God may guard thee safe to the end.
Carlos.

Virtue enshrined thee from the first, oh Queen!
In courtly pageant and domestic scene,
Crowned by thy people's love; no trace of stain
To mar the beauty of "the longest reign."
Others have ruled us over fifty years;
Ruled none so feeling for our joys and tears.
In far-off times shall memory on this day
All hearts arouse to greet thy longest sway.
Tulip.

Vanquished, O Edward, lies thy haughty head:
In truth, old Henry, thou art very dead:
Comes a more happy reign, of larger space
Than Farmer George's of the heavy face.
Once the Great Sun-King, 'mid his subjects' tears,
Ruled wretched France for over seventy years:
In milder regence may our Queen outstay
All Louis' seven decades of decay.
Beaumont.

Venture a prayer for Britain's Queen,
India's Empress, and mother of men
Certain a record, it is, I ween,
To rule for fifty years and ten.
On that anniversary day in June
Remember the good she has wrought,
In Royal and the home commune,
All bear fruit, to the wisdom fraught.
Londoner.

Victoria! whom God long preserve,
India's Empress, Britain's Queen,
Caressed in love, thy country serve
Through years that ne'er thy sires have seen!
Our good Queen Bess, than whom kings none
Reigned greater, or with keener sight,
India ventured, Armada won,
As glorious shadows of thy might.
Nitram.

W. B. COCHRANE & CO.,
STOCK AND SHARE DEALERS.
13 and 14, CORNHILL, LONDON, E.C.
Telegrams: "Reinvest, London."
Bankers: London and Westminster, Lothbury, E.C.
Accounts opened for the Stock Exchange Fortnightly Settlements, and also upon the usual Cover System. Accounts opened for Three-monthly Settlement without Carrying-over Rates being charged.
Prospectus, Monthly Investment Book, Mining List, and Market Reports, with the latest advices, forwarded gratis upon application.
W. B. COCHRANE & CO., 13 and 14, Cornhill, E.C.

For ECZEMA and all Skin Diseases wash with this Soap.
DR MACKENZIE'S ARSENICAL SOAP
Produces a lovely complexion, and cures Spots, Pimples, &c. 6d. & 1s.

For ECZEMA and all Skin Diseases wash with this Soap.
DR MACKENZIE'S ARSENICAL SOAP
Produces a lovely complexion, and cures Spots, Pimples, &c. 6d. & 1s

The most emollient and soothing Toilet Soap in the World for irritable skins. Madame ADELINA PATTI writes from Craig-y-nos Castle:—"I find Dr. Mackenzie's Arsenical Toilet Soap most excellent." Beware of the many imitations. Have Dr. Mackenzie's or none.

Used on the Tooth-Brush

In the Morning a few drops of

SOZODONT,

THE PLEASANTEST DENTIFRICE in the WORLD,
WILL SWEETEN THE BREATH ALL DAY.

SOZODONT

KEEPS THE TEETH, LIPS, AND GUMS HEALTHY, AND OF A GOOD COLOUR.
It Cleanses the Teeth, and the spaces between the Teeth, as NOTHING else will do.
THERE IS NO SUBSTITUTE.
In Toilet Case, complete, 2s. 6d.
BE SURE OF HAVING SOZODONT.

The most popular and most appreciative since 20 years.
FRANZ JOSEF
Aperient Water is the BEST.
The only Palatable Natural Aperient Water.

CORALLINE Keeps the Teeth WHITE and SOUND.
A Delicious DENTIFRICE. TOOTH PASTE.
ROBERTS & CO.,
Foreign and English Chemists,
LONDON— Post Free, 2/6 PARIS—
76, NEW BOND STREET, W. RUE DE LA PAIX, 5.
Sample Box sent free on receipt of post card.

FARADAY & SON's

Electric Light Fittings

NEW DESIGNS for SEASON '96

2 & 3 BERNERS ST.
LONDON W

10/6 THE "PELICAN" SELF-FEEDING PEN 10/6
(PATENTED)

WRITES INSTANTLY AND CONTINUOUSLY.
Has Extra Large Reservoir of Ink. Secure against Leakage in any position. Flow of Ink regulated with the Greatest Nicety.
POLISHED VULCANITE, HANDSOMELY ENCHASED, FITTED WITH SPECIAL BARREL PEN in 14-ct. GOLD, IRIDIUM-POINTED. Also

THE "NOTA BENE" STYLOGRAPH OR FLUID PENCIL
(PATENTED)

5/- 5/-

IS READY FOR INSTANT USE, WITHOUT ANY ADJUSTMENT. MAY BE CARRIED IN ANY POSITION, WITHOUT FEAR OF LEAKAGE.
POLISHED VULCANITE, HANDSOMELY ENCHASED, WITH NEEDLE, SPRING, & NOZZLE, MADE OF THE PRECIOUS METALS.
Sold by all Stationers. Wholesale only by the Sole Manufacturers, THOS. DE LA RUE & CO. Ltd., Bunhill Row, London, E.C.

Clarke's "Pyramid" Night-Lights.

Single Wicks. In Boxes containing 8 Lights, to burn 9 hours; or 12 Lights, to burn 6 hours.

THE "BURGLAR'S HORROR."
Far, Far and Away the Best.

Should be lighted in a front and back room in every house as soon as it is dark.

N.B.—No paraffin or other dangerous material used in the manufacture. No water required.

"PYRAMID" AND "FAIRY" LIGHTS ARE THE ONLY LIGHTS THAT CAN SAFELY BE BURNED IN LAMPS.

Sold by all respectable Dealers everywhere. Manufactured by CLARKE'S PYRAMID and FAIRY LIGHT CO., Ltd., Cricklewood, London, N.W., where all letters should be addressed.

Double Wicks. In Boxes containing 6 Lights and Glass, to burn 10 hours; or 10 Lights and Glass, to burn 6 hours.

BOVRIL

IS THE VITAL PRINCIPLE OF PRIME OX BEEF

OBTAINED FROM SELECTED CATTLE REARED ONLY IN AUSTRALIA AND SOUTH AMERICA.

IT GREATLY IMPROVES AND ADDS PIQUANCY TO HASHED BEEF OR MUTTON, RAGOUT OF GAME OR POULTRY, MEAT PIES OR PUDDINGS, CROQUETTES OR RISSOLES; AND

IN THE

PREPARATION OF STRENGTHENING SOUPS, SAVOURY SAUCES, AND RICH GRAVIES, IT IS OF SUCH SPECIAL VALUE THAT ALL WHO DESIRE APPETISING, NOURISHING VIANDS USE BOVRIL IN THE

KITCHEN.

BOVRIL LIMITED, Food Specialists, LONDON, E.C.

Directors { THE RIGHT HON. LORD PLAYFAIR, G.C.B., LL.D. DR. FARQUHARSON, M.P., AND OTHERS.

A WONDERFUL MEDICINE

BEECHAM'S PILLS

Have been before the Public for more than fifty years, and have now the greatest sale of any Proprietary article. This has been achieved without the publication of testimonials, the convincing fact is, that BEECHAM'S PILLS RECOMMEND THEMSELVES.

WORTH A GUINEA A BOX

FOR ALL

Bilious & Nervous Disorders

SUCH AS

Sick Headache, Constipation, Weak Stomach, Impaired Digestion, Disordered Liver and Female Ailments.

Annual Sale, SIX MILLION BOXES.

Sold everywhere in boxes 9½d., 13½d. and 2/9 each.

STRAINED VISION.

DISTRESSING HEADACHES, indigestion, simulated neuralgia, and nervous depression, are frequently caused by some peculiarity of the Vision, which can at once be overcome by the use of proper glasses. See "OUR EYES" (Now in its Sixteenth Edition), price 1s.; by JOHN BROWNING, F.R.A.S., F.R.M.S., President of the British Optical Association, &c.

Or consult, free of charge—

MR. JOHN BROWNING,
OPHTHALMIC OPTICIAN,
63, STRAND, LONDON, W.C.

ROYAL EXCHANGE

ASSURANCE.

SETTLEMENT POLICIES
Guaranteeing FIVE PER CENT. on the sum assured. No Trustees Required.

DEATH DUTIES
Provided for by a small annual payment through life.

ANNUITIES
Special Terms for Impaired Lives.

For Rates, apply to the Secretary,

Chief Office—ROYAL EXCHANGE, LONDON.

RUBINAT.

BEST

RUBINAT.

APERIENT.

Source Dr. Llorach.—SPANISH APERIENT MINERAL WATER. Dr. WEX, Official Chemist to the town of Hamburg, places Rubinat before the most vaunted of the German purgative waters. Is invaluable in all gout and intestinal complaints.

—Has none of the drastic and ofttimes irritating effects of other waters, which chiefly depend for their action upon magnesian salts of which they are largely composed.

E. GALLAIS & CO.,
90, Piccadilly, London, W.

RIDE —SWIFT— CYCLES

They are manufactured by the pioneer firm of the cycle industry, and the result of a quarter of a century's experience by practical cyclists and experts, which is responsible for the world-wide reputation of these famous machines.

THE SWIFT CYCLE CO., LTD.

(LATE COVENTRY MACHINISTS' CO.)

Showrooms—15 & 16, HOLBORN VIADUCT, E.C. WORKS IN COVENTRY.

Printed for the Proprietor by WYMAN & SONS, Limited, Great Queen-st. W.C. and published at 10, Bolt-ct. Fleet-st. E.C. in the Parish of St. Dunstan's-in-the-West, in the City of London. Cheques and Post Office Orders should be made payable to REGINALD E. BOOKER, "Truth" Buildings, Carteret-st. Queen Anne's-gate, S.W.

· TRUTH ·

"Cultores Veritatis Fraudis Inimici."—Cicero.

No. 1036. Vol. XL. Thursday, November 5, 1896. Price Sixpence.

NOTICE.

In response to various communications which reach me on the subject, I beg to notify that the terms of Subscription to Truth, which are payable in advance, are as follows:—To any address in the United Kingdom, for 3 months, 7s.; 6 months, 14s.; and for 12 months, 28s. The Thin Paper Edition is forwarded to countries within the Postal Union for 3 months for 7s. 8d.; 6 months, 15s. 4d.; and 12 months, 30s. 8d. Cheques and Post Office Orders should be made payable to the Manager, Truth, "Truth Building," Carteret-street, S.W.

A reprint of the Truth report on the Kilburn Sisterhood can be obtained at the Publishing Offices, Bolt-court, Fleet-street, price 2d.; by post, 2½d.

ENTRE NOUS.

THE Queen is to return to Windsor Castle from Balmoral at the end of next week, and during her Majesty's five weeks' residence there a succession of dine-and-sleep guests will be entertained by her Majesty, including Royalties, Ambassadors, Ministers, and a few unofficial personages.

I stated some weeks ago that the Queen has proposed to have the Thanksgiving service next June in St. Paul's Cathedral, a piece of news which appears to have reached the daily newspapers only within the last few days. I understand that the project has been abandoned, in consequence of the utter impossibility of the Queen ascending the long flight of steps by which the great west door of the Cathedral is entered. It is therefore probable that Westminster Abbey will be the scene of the service, as in 1887, for the Queen can there pass from her carriage into the nave, and thence into the choir, without having to encounter a single step.

A lot of the most idiotic nonsense has been printed about the Council which the Queen held at Balmoral last week. It was stated that a special train would not be run from London because the proceedings at the Council would be formal, and only Privy Councillors now in Scotland would be summoned. A special train has never been run in connection with a Balmoral Council, and at all these functions the proceedings are invariably of the most purely formal character. It seems to be supposed that a Council is a scene of debates and discussions, whereas everything is strictly regulated by etiquette, and the business goes like clockwork, being simply routine work. No Privy Councillors were summoned, as there were two already at Balmoral, and the Duke of Fife always comes over from Mar Lodge on these occasions in order to form a quorum. The Pall Mall Gazette announced that the Duke of Devonshire was going down to Balmoral to the Council, which was a pure invention, and then it stated that Lord Cross would "preside," as he was the Minister in attendance on the Queen. Is it really supposed that any one except the Sovereign could "preside" at a Council?

The Duke of Coburg, who is now at Sandringham, will pay a visit next week to Lord and Lady Amherst of Hackney at Didlington, their fine place near Brandon, when there will be a large party to meet him. There is some of the best shooting in Norfolk on the Didlington estate, which comprises upwards of 10,000 acres.

I learn that the Duchess of Coburg and Princess Beatrice, who are now at Darmstadt, will join the Duke next week at Clarence House, and that on the 16th they are all going to Windsor Castle for a few days on a visit to the Queen.

The Duke and Duchess of Connaught, who are to arrive at Buckingham Palace on Friday, the 14th, from Germany, will go next day to Windsor Castle, on a visit to the Queen until Monday the 16th, when they are to proceed to Henley Park, near Guildford, where they will be the guests of Lord and Lady Pirbright until Friday, the 19th, when they are to return to Bagshot Park for the winter.

I announced several weeks ago that the Duke and Duchess of York are to pay a visit during the winter to the Duke and Duchess of Portland at Welbeck Abbey, Notts. Their Royal Highnesses are to be the guests of the Queen from Saturday, December 12, until Monday, the 14th, at Windsor Castle, and on leaving the Palace they will proceed to Welbeck, travelling from King's Cross to Worksop. There will be three days' shooting through the famous preserves on the Welbeck estate, and there is to be a lawn meet of the Rufford Foxhounds at the Abbey during the Royal visit, which will terminate on Saturday, December 19.

Colonel Byng and Major Legge are to be the Equerries-in-Waiting on the Queen during November. Colonel Byng is in the vicinity of Balmoral, and he will return to Windsor with the Queen. Major Legge's duty is to begin on the day of her Majesty arrival at Windsor.

All the Royal residences on Deeside have been "lent" by the Queen during the present autumn. Abergeldie Castle is occupied by Lord and Lady Carrington, Birkhall House by Lord and Lady Clanwilliam, and Abergeldie Mains by Colonel Henry Byng and Miss Byng.

Lord Cadogan has publicly announced that he does not intend to resign the Viceroyalty of Ireland, and the announcement has been received in Ireland with a moderate enthusiasm, in marked contrast to the feeling displayed on his assumption of the office more than a year ago. Lord Cadogan speaks of the onerous duties and high responsibilities of the post. As in his case they seem to allow of a "season" in London, an autumn in Scotland, attendance at most of the race meetings in England, and, in fact, the ordinary routine of a nobleman's life, his views on the subject of hard work are somewhat unique.

Ireland, being forsaken by—and taxed for—Royalty, wants above all things in a Viceroy one who will be an Irish Viceroy first and an English nobleman afterwards. Lord Cadogan has not entered into the spirit of his place, as some of his predecessors did. The marriage of his daughter in London was undoubtedly felt as a slight in Dublin, and, rightly or wrongly, Lord Cadogan was credited with having submitted in too courtierlike a spirit to having the Dublin Castle Season curtailed because Royalty was in mourning. In fact, Lord Cadogan has yet to prove himself the man for Ireland.

The Lord-Lieutenancy of Anglesey, which has become vacant by the death of Mr. Richard Davis (who sat for the county in several Parliaments), will be given to either Lord Anglesey or Sir Richard Williams-Bulkeley.

The Dowager-Duchess of Leeds was a clever and a very amiable woman, and her death is sincerely lamented by a very large circle of friends. The late Duchess should be honourably remembered for her untiring and practical zeal in the cause of popular education. She took the greatest interest in all the schools on the Duke's estates, and delighted to assist in the teaching of the children. For many years the Duchess maintained at her own expense an excellent school at Hackforth for the Hornby estate children, and she was an active member of a local School Board. The Duchess had been in failing health since the sudden death of her husband about a year ago. She was beloved by all classes in the Bedale district of Yorkshire.

I want to know why, when the amount paid on a person's will is announced, we are only told what was the extent of his personalty? The Estate duty is paid upon a specific sum, which is made up of personalty and realty. It is true that the calculations by which the two items are respectively arrived at are not the same, and the payment of realty may be deferred; but this does not alter the fact that the amount paid, or to be paid on the two jointly is known.

A correspondent writes:—

I am sure that your suggestion to the Sleeping Car Company to allow their Bâle car occasionally to run to Lausanne, would prove remunerative to the Company. It ought to go to Bâle and Lausanne, viâ Dellemont, on alternate days; or, as I presume that it would have to go back the way it went, it ought to go one journey back and fro to Lausanne, and the next one back and fro to Bâle. This would not inconvenience the Bâle passengers, on the return journey to Calais, for as it is they are not allowed to go to bed before reaching the frontier, which is only a few miles beyond Dellemont. There is a large inflow of English to the shores of the Lake of Geneva, and by the alteration suggested they would use the car far more than they do at present. I have always wondered why this has not already occurred to the Company.

It may interest the passengers by the train de luxe to the Mediterranean to know that the reduction in price inaugurated this year is due to the action of Lord Salisbury. He, as is known, has a villa at Beaulieu, and he betook himself to his villa with his family. He subsequently wrote to protest against the exorbitant charge, pointing out that he got better accommodation when going to Scotland, for an extra charge of five shillings.

The International Sleeping Car Company need not go far for a hint as to the best way of providing single sleeping berths. I do not know Sweden, but a traveller in that country tells me that on one of the Swedish lines a sleeping car is constructed with a compartment for two beds, which can be divided off when required by a sliding door or partition, leaving a compartment on each side quite big enough for all practical purposes. The sliding door can be fastened on each side, so that privacy is insured. Had such a convenience been provided by the International Sleeping Car Company, the poor old lady, whose story I told last week, would not have had to fly from my presence. By closing the door and bolting it on her side, she could have guarded herself effectually against the possibility of beholding me in my night attire.

From another correspondent I hear that no lady need now travel under apprehensions of being outraged by the spectacle of a male creature like myself putting himself to rest in a sleeping car. For long past, I am given to understand, the officials have been most particular in relegating ladies travelling alone to compartments for dames seules. "In fact," says my informant, "in the height of the season a single lady, or, for the matter of that, a single gentleman, cannot always obtain a berth, although there may be a vacant one in the car."

Among much correspondence that I have received in reference to the recent expression of my views on "Tips and Tippers," a specially interesting communication comes from a Continental hotel-proprietor who started in life as a waiter, and who has travelled enough to have a considerable knowledge of hotels as a guest. With such a range of experience a man should know the subject from every point of view. He tells me, in the first place, that all efforts on the part of hotel-keepers to suppress

For the TRUTH HOTEL LIST, see page 1192 in the present issue.
For HOSPITALS and APPEALS, see page 1191.
For AMUSEMENTS, see page 1190.
For OUR PUZZLES, see page 1205.

tipping have been failures. A notable attempt in this direction was made by a combination of Swiss hotel-keepers in 1870. They decided to double all wages (which had previously been fixed on the understanding that they would be supplemented by tips) and to forbid tipping. The only result, however, was that the proprietors paid double wages, and that the tipping went on as before, so the arrangement naturally collapsed. My informant, indeed, tells me that it has been maintained to this day at the Lucerne Schweitzerhof, but I fancy this will be news to many visitors to that hostelry.

It is, of course, idle to suppose that tipping can ever be suppressed—whether by the action of hotel-keepers or anybody else. It is far better to recognise the system openly. This might be done to a certain extent by hotel-keepers issuing a scale of tips for the guidance of those guests who might desire to give them, while notifying at the same time that no servant is authorised to demand them. The correspondent to whom I have referred above points out that visitors frequently expect hotel servants to do work for them which lies outside their ordinary duty. Ladies, he says, are in these days more and more given to expect the chambermaids to act as ladies' maids. He tells me of one instance in which an English family wintering at Grasse persuaded the floor-waiter to sit up three nights a week with their invalid son, and in other ways gave much extra trouble, and yet after a long stay left without giving the waiter or any other servant a shilling. This is a sort of meanness of which a certain proportion of the travelling public are sure to be guilty, and there is no reason why hotel-keepers should not protect their servants against it, by giving notice that servants required to do any work outside their regular duty have a right to expect remuneration for it.

The philosophy of tipping I take to be this: that a tip is a payment for something additional in the way of civility, attention, and usefulness, over and above what is included in the man's contract with his master, or his master's contract with you. If you expect hotel servants to go beyond the mere literal performance of their duties, to be civil, attentive, useful, and anxious to please on all occasions, you must reward them for this. By the same rule, you have it in your power to punish them when they have failed to show an obliging spirit by withholding your reward. But as long as an hotel servant goes out of his way to make you comfortable, he has a right to expect recognition of his efforts. He is not a philanthropist. Whatever he does is in the way of business, and the man who refuses to recognise this is a churlish curmudgeon, who only deserves the barest and meagrest performance of the servant's contract.

Those of my readers who bike—and is there one among them who does not?—may be glad to hear of the arrangements which the Westminster Cycle and Auto-car Company offers for their convenience. This Company is ready not only to stable, clean, lubricate, and repair cycles, but by arrangement with the District Messenger Company is ready to fit you up a call-box, which will enable you to have your cycle brought round or fetched away by merely ringing the bell. At 10s. 6d. per annum for use of the call, and 1s. 9d. per week for all other services, these are luxuries which will probably be widely appreciated, especially by ladies.

The following letter was lately received by a gentleman who had rented a shooting in Scotland, and whose name had probably become known to the writer of the letter through that circumstance. The writer is a Mr. Charles E. Hope, and his address is at 61, Bedford-road, Ilford:—

> SIR,—In the midst of your shooting festivities may I ask you and your friends to remember another who is in the very deepest distress, &c., and almost unable (through no fault of his own, but the rascality of others), to get bare necessaries.
>
> I am a professional gentleman, without an office at present, and (as for the next twelve weeks or so it is the Long Vacation) most gloomy outlook. I am trying to get a clerk's place, but unfortunately my clothes have got so mean-looking it is very difficult to make oneself presentable. Just now, unless I can immediately find a friend to assist one with a little, I am afraid it means not only the loss of my last few sticks, but absolute ruin. My wife and family and myself have lately been living upon the proceeds of my law books, &c., &c.

It would be interesting to know how many shooting tenants have received similar communications from Mr. Hope during the present season, and how much he has obtained by means of such letters. So far as I can learn, he is not a very deserving object of charity, nor is his account of himself strictly accurate. A representative whom I sent down to interview him learned from his wife that he was trying to raise money to open an office, which certainly does not tally with his suggestion that he only requires the means of making himself respectable in order to obtain a position as clerk.

Prince Christian has consented to accept the office of President of the Royal Counties Agricultural Society for next year, when the Society's Show is to be held at Reading.

With the return of winter, evictions have been resumed on the estate of Sir John Orde in North Uist; but, so far, the humane work has not made much progress. According to a report in the Scottish Highlander, the sheriff's officer and his assistants succeeded in clearing one house of its occupants—a man and three or four ill-clad children being thrust out shivering on a bitterly cold evening, and left without a place to shelter them from the weather. But on three succeeding days the evicting party were unsuccessful, the houses which they intended to attack containing invalids, and the demeanour of the crowd making it unsafe to proceed to extreme measures. The paper I have mentioned denounces Sir John Orde's proceedings in some very strong language; and as to the callous and abominable cruelty of these evictions which he is carrying out, or attempting to carry out, there can scarcely be two opinions. What is being done is, however, in perfect keeping with the character this exemplary specimen of a Highland landlord has long borne.

In referring last week to the portrait of Sir W. Mac Cormac, which his friends are having painted for presentation to the Queen's College, Belfast, I forgot to mention that the painter commissioned is Mr. H. Harris Brown. Many will remember his portrait of Dr. Mandell Creighton in the Academy, which most of the critics, my own among the number, pronounced to be one of the best portraits of the year.

HISTORY OF FEMININE COSTUME. Tracing its evolution from the earliest times to the present. 38 illustrations. Price 6d. Published by LIBERTY & CO., LTD., London and Paris. (To be obtained from principal Booksellers or Publishers direct.)

I wonder that no American supporter of Mr. McKinley has called attention to the fact that the ancestors of the inhabitants of the United States insisted, nearly a thousand years ago, on their monarchs pledging themselves not to do what Mr. Bryan puts forward as a remedy for all the ills of mankind. Under William the Conqueror and his son, William Rufus, the Kings of England claimed the right to debase the coin, and a shilling was paid by each hearth every three years on condition that they did not use this prerogative. This tax—which was practically Royal blackmail paid to prevent the Sovereign from swindling—was abolished by the Charter of Henry I. If really the owners of silver mines are so powerful in the United States as to oblige all to contribute to them, it would be far better for the inhabitants of the United States to follow the example of their ancestors and to pay "moneyage," as it was called, in order to induce them to forego this debasement of coin.

The betting on the candidates has been one of the most remarkable features of the American Election contest. In the following circular, issued by a well-known New York publishing house, betting is combined with business in a highly ingenious fashion:—

October 14, 1896.

GENTLEMEN,—The business depression is lifting. Confidence is becoming stronger every week. Perhaps your business needs to catch some of this improvement.

The enclosed announcement of the Christmas number of the ——will point the way to wide awake advertisers.

To convince you of our confidence that the cause of Sound Money will win, Free Silver be defeated, and that improved trade conditions will follow, we repeat our offer of last month; to insert your advertisement in our Christmas number, going to press October 22, and make no charge for the same should the Free Silver candidate for President be elected in November.

Scores of advertisers have accepted this proposition. Will you be among them?—Yours very truly, &c.

I do not wish to be outdone by an American publisher, and, as I am about to publish a Christmas Number myself, I make all advertisers the following offer. Should the present Government be turned out of office, and a Radical Government, with Sir William Harcourt at its head, be installed in its place before January 1, I will return the payments made for all advertisements ordered from this date to be inserted in my Christmas Number. This offer, however, is to be void should my solicitors advise me that it is a breach of the Corrupt Practices Act.

The British Art Students' Club, 17, Rue Bréa, Paris, will be glad to receive old copies of TRUTH, or any other papers or magazines, if any of my readers can spare them. The club is by no means a wealthy one, and is an institution of great use, especially to lady students in Paris. Any papers which may be sent should be addressed to the Directrice, at the club.

The following epistle has been sent to me:—

The Hertfordshire Standard and St. Albans Citizen.
St. Albans, October 27, 1896.

SIR,—On page 937 in your issue of TRUTH for the 15th inst. you refer to the book-publishing department of my business, and in reply I desire to call your attention to the full statement, together with a challenge to you, which I have printed in the last number of my Hertfordshire Standard.—Yours, &c.,
TRUMAN PRESS.

Unfortunately I do not take the Hertfordshire Standard regularly, but somebody has forwarded me a cutting containing what I suppose to be the "full statement," and "challenge" to which Mr. Truman Press refers. From this I conclude that Mr. Truman Press is suffering under an acute form of mental disturbance, accompanied by halucination. He says that I have accused him of indulging in "some sort of trade trick in connection with his publication of various biographical works," and he suggests that the trick charged against him is that of charging £3. 3s. for a book which can be got up at 2s. 6d., and he accordingly delivers me his challenge to produce a similar book at 2s. 6d. a copy. Nothing to the effect suggested, or capable of that construction at all, has appeared in TRUTH respecting Mr. Truman Press. The reference to this gentleman in TRUTH of October 15 was as follows:—

It appears that Truman is now engaged in an effort to induce all the fools in Surrey to pay him sums of nine or twelve guineas for the privilege of having their biographies and portrait inserted in a book which he is publishing by subscription. This is a trick on which Truman and Manning Press have been engaged for years, and as long as they can find idiots enough to keep the game going, no one can blame them for working it for all it is worth.

To this I added that my office-boy contemplates publishing a volume of biographies "in the Manning Press style" at 2s. 6d. per head, beginning with "Middlesex Muffs," to be followed by "Nottingham Noodles," "Yorkshire Yokels," and others in the same well-known style. If, therefore, Truman Press wants to challenge anybody, he should address himself to my office-boy. He would do better, however, to encourage a brother biographer by sending the boy half-a-crown, together with his own portrait and a few facts about his life; in which case the lad will get to work as soon as possible on a volume to be entitled "Hertfordshire Humbugs." Seriously, the only imputation that has been made against Mr. Truman Press in TRUTH is that he trades upon the vanity and simplicity of nonentities desirous of immortalising themselves, and unless he can show that this is not the case, he had better hold his peace.

Talk about Mrs. Malaprop's nice derangement of epitaphs! Why, the good lady cannot hold a candle to the gifted journalist whose scholarly essays illumine the editorial column of the Leamington Advertiser. The other day he based his leading article on the announcement that the Mayor had presented a mace to the Leamington Corporation. Having sagaciously remarked that such an emblem of "administrative pomp and dignity. . . . . strengthens pusilanimous power in the eyes of the populace," the writer gracefully passed on to a dissertation on the subject of maces, which would, he considered, "be particularly malapropos to the present occasion."

"HÔTEL BURLINGTON," AT SUNNY BOSCOMBE. (200 rooms.) Every luxury. Delightful grounds. Magnificent golf links. Sea-water baths. Moderate charges.—Bournemouth East Station.

Here are a few gems which, though detached from their setting, give some idea of the dazzling brilliance of the whole composition:—

The word mace is derived from a word in the ancient Volapucke language which signifies in our vocabulary "social sovereignty;" and the mace is found as the symbol of authority in all quarters of the globe, "from Greenland's icy mountains" in the North to the more fertile provinces of their immediate antipodes. The oldest mace in the British Museum is one supposed to date back to the beginning of the first Roman Empire, when King Rameses Primus occupied the throne of Cæsar. . . . Every schoolboy knows why Cromwell bade his Ironsides to "take away that bauble"—because for the time being the mace had ceased to represent the power of the young Pretender. . . . In addition to its historical connection with Cromwell's accession to the throne, it was, historians tell us, the identical mace with which Richmond split Wat Tyler's skull when he tried to stab Richard III. on Hampstead Heath. In literature the mace is often introduced. Shakespeare uses the word as an alternative for sceptre in his fine apostrophe to his great patron Queen Anne:—

> And thou great Anna who three realms doth grace
> Do'st dext'rous wield thy "lingerie" and "mace."

Shakespearean students aver that the mace referred to here was the sceptre which Her Majesty was fond of carrying about; while the old-fashioned word "lingerie" was commonly used at the time by Shakespeare and "other" courtiers as a comprehensive term for various other items of the Sovereign's queenly regalia.

Was there ever such a progeny of learning?

The selection for the Presidency of the Academy seems to lie between Mr. Val Prinsep and Mr. Briton Rivière, with a slight shade of odds in favour of the latter. If I were an Academician I should vote for the former, because, in choosing a President I should make my vote depend upon my opinion as to who would best fulfil the duties of the post. Mr. Rivière may be a good speaker, and may be able to represent art well in its social relations; but whilst his is a case of "may," Mr. Prinsep's is a case of "is."

Now that a prelate about to enter his seventy-sixth year has been appointed to the Primacy, it may be hoped we shall hear no more of the proposed "reform" in retiring parish clergymen at the age of seventy, which has been of late in much favour by a number of Bishops, notably by "my lord of Exeter," who appears to have overlooked the fact that he has himself celebrated his seventy-first birthday, and yet nobody has heard a hint that he intends to resign. If there is to be a measure of this kind for the "working" clergy, its provisions, most assuredly, will have to be extended so as to take in the "upper" clergy. Bishops are as subject to the infirmities of old age as any other men, and, as strength decays, they come to be governed, as are other men, by members of their family (male and female), or by any persons who undertake their work or minister to their daily comforts. Such cases lead to an inconveniently capricious administration of the diocesan affairs, and to systematic jobbery in the dispensation of patronage. Sydney Smith declared that, as the mind of the prelate decayed, he had seen "wife bishops, daughter bishops, butler bishops, and even cook and housekeeper bishops." In the present reign there have been several cases when it was notorious that the diocese was ruled by the female members of the aged prelate's family.

The New Silk Waisteoatings for Gentlemen's Evening Dress and Morning Wear can now be seen at Ulster House, Conduit-street, W.

The Bishop of Worcester has an eye to business even in the midst of his lamentations over the death of Archbishop Benson. Bishop Perowne proposes that the memorial to the late Primate should take the form of a fund for endowing the new See of Birmingham. There is no chance that this ridiculous and very impudent project will be adopted, as it would practically be more of a benefit for the Bishop of Worcester than anything else, and he alone would profit by it. There is no necessity whatever for a division of the diocese of Worcester, which was thoroughly and admirably worked by the late Bishop Philpott, and now the labours of his successor have been considerably lightened by the appointment of a Suffragan, who holds one of the best livings in Birmingham. Bishop Philpott was able to manage the diocese single-handed, because he lived at home and devoted himself entirely to his proper business; whereas there are many prelates who spend a full third of the year away from the sphere of the work which they are so generously paid to perform. Bishop Perowne's own pecuniary contribution towards the division of his diocese is mean in the extreme. He now gets £5,000 a year, and if the See of Birmingham were started he would be relieved of the heavier half of the diocese. The Bishop, however, offers only one-tenth of his stipend towards the endowment of the proposed new See. Why the Bishop of the lighter half of the present diocese of Worcester should in future get £4,500 a year, while his "brother" of the new and much more laborious See of Birmingham is to receive only £3,000, I fail to understand.

I read with alarm letters in the Times last week, one from the Rev. R. Jamblin, the other from the Rev. N. J. Devereux, of Hoxton, which seemed to suggest that an Archbishop of Canterbury has more to do than one mortal can possibly accomplish, and that he ought to be relieved of some of his duties. Can it be, I thought, that he is beginning already, and that this is the first hint of schemes to relieve Canterbury of its archiepiscopal functions, and hand them over to archiepiscopal curates (paid by somebody else), in the manner so successfully carried out in the diocese of London? However, I was somewhat reassured by the latter part of Mr. Devereux's letter, in which he suggested that, as the first step to the proposed reform, Addington Park should be sold in building lots, and a commodious residence at Canterbury be taken for the Archbishop in its place. This does not sound like Bishop Temple at all.

Seriously, it is a welcome sign of the times to find a clergyman arguing, as Mr. Devereux does, that, while the country clergy are starving in all directions, bishops should not be provided with a minimum income of £3,000 per annum, in order to enable them to keep up "palaces;" and urging that Addington Park, Lambeth Palace, Fulham Palace, and London House should at once be sold off, and the proceeds put to some useful purpose. When my vote is required for any purpose of this kind, it may be counted on for certain. I only wish that I saw a chance of living till the time when it is asked for.

Canon Eyton has replaced Sub-Dean Duckworth as the Canon-in-Residence and Sunday afternoon preacher at Westminster Abbey, and he will be on duty there until December 1. The Bishop of Stepney (Dr. Brown) is to preach at the morning service next Sunday on behalf of the East London Church Fund.

Somebody asks if I can explain the meaning of this note on a printed paper announcing a series of services at Christ Church, St. Leonards-on-Sea:—"The Lord Bishop of the Diocese grants a Dispensation from Abstinence on Friday, November 6, to all who shall take part in the services of that day at Christ Church." Really, it is impossible for me or any body else to account for all the vagaries of the High Church clergy. In this instance, however, it is possibly thought that the services will be of so exhausting a nature that those taking part in them would not be able to get through the day without recruiting their energies.

A resident in Exeter calls attention to an extract from the "Exeter Diocesan Calendar," dealing with "Dean Boyd's Exhibitions for sons of the Clergy in the Diocese of Exeter." It is there stated that "by the Dean's will, no candidate is eligible whose parents have an income exceeding £500 per annum," and among the exhibitioners is Mr. N. W. A. Edmonds. Am I right in supposing that this gentleman is a son of Canon Edmonds? The Canonry held by Canon Edmonds is worth £1,000 a year, and, as has already been explained in TRUTH, the Exeter canonries, unlike so many others, are not depreciated in value in consequence of the agricultural depression. Is there any proviso in the Dean's will which makes others than the children of parents whose income is less than £500 a year eligible under any circumstances? If so, it would be well that this proviso should be made public, for to state that the Exhibitions are limited in this way, and then to enumerate among the Exhibitioners the son of a man worth at least £1,000 a year is calculated to suggest unfavourable reflections.

It is a gratification to me to find myself in agreement with Lord Salisbury on any matter, and most of all on one relating to the Church. This is my proud position on the occasion of Bishop Creighton's translation to London, which, as remarked in last week's TRUTH, is the best and most popular appointment that could have been made. The new Bishop of London is a scholar and a gentleman, a man of wide sympathies, and few prejudices, and it may be predicted of him that he will rule his new diocese wisely and firmly without giving offence in any quarter.

By the way, in speaking last week of the "Bishop of Rochester" as having been disqualified for the Primacy by the present state of his health, I was, of course, guilty of a slip of the pen, as I trust every reader will see for himself. The Prelate I had in my mind was his Lordship of Winchester, late of Rochester.

If you want to entirely Furnish your House or select any article of Furniture or Carpet, &c., send for HEWETSONS' Illustrated Priced Catalogue.—HEWETSONS, Tottenham Court-road, London.

Miss Florence Firmstone, of Winchester, I am sorry to find, remains unconvinced by my criticism of her indiscriminate appeals for shillings to help people in whom she is interested. So far is she from being convinced, that she now makes the fact that she has obtained shillings from people in previous instances, the ground for appealing to them for "just one shilling more." Two recipients of this appeal write to me, quite independently, that if they had known that they were thereby incurring a fresh solicitation, they would have resisted Miss Firmstone's blandishments in the first instance. For this reason I think it well to let those who have not given the lady their first shilling know what may be the consequence of so doing.

In TRUTH of September 17 appeared some remarks on letters emanating from Mrs. Mary E. Eyres, of Lincoln, who when she sees a man's death in the paper, writes, through her daughter, to his widow to offer mourning collars and cuffs, together with profuse expressions of sympathy. On October 28 the Vicar of St. Botolph, Lincoln, wrote to tell me that I "ought at once to contradict the statements respecting my parishioner, Mrs. Eyres, in a late issue of TRUTH." Why I should contradict them I do not see, as neither the vicar nor any of the friends of Mrs. Eyres who have written to me on the subject suggest that my statements were in any material respect untrue. In the paragraph in question I expressed my doubts as to the accuracy of Mrs. Eyres' account of her family history, and these doubts have been set at rest by the information since given me, which shows that Mrs. Eyres is a lady in reduced circumstances, and that her representations as to her position are true. All that I said beyond this was that the system of offering sympathy and soliciting orders at the same time is "offensive and impudent," and to this opinion I adhere.

I have much pleasure in making known a very generous offer made by a lady residing at Weston-super-Mare. This lady, who lives in a large house facing the sea, is desirous of receiving, at her own expense, a few children of professional men or others of the middle-class who are in need of change of air, and whose parents are not in a position to send them to the sea-side. The lady in question is both fond of children and experienced in their management in sickness and in health, and she will also, to the best of her ability, look after their education as well as their health. The only limitation she makes to her offer is that she cannot take infectious or other serious cases. She does not wish to have the children at Christmas time, but she could take two or three at once until the beginning of December, and some more early in the New Year. I doubt not that many will be found only too glad to avail themselves of such generosity, and any desirous of doing so should address the Rev. Ll. Baldwyn, Weston-hill, Weston-super-Mare.

The following amounts have reached me towards this year's Toy Fund:—Jonathan, 8s.; Capt. D. H. Colnaghi, £1; M. C., 10s.; H. A. H., 10s.; P. C. J., £1.

The recent appointment of the son of Sir Ralph Knox to the Army Service Corps is one of the most flagrant and iniquitous War Office jobs that have been perpetrated of recent years. I believe I am right in saying that this young man has again and again failed to pass into the Army both by the ordinary entrance and through the Militia, and there is not a single precedent for the appointment of a Militia Subaltern to the Army Service Corps. It is true that when the Corps was originally constituted, Militia Officers were made eligible for commissions in it, but this was only done from a doubt as to how far Regimental Officers would volunteer for service in the Corps. That doubt has been set at rest from the first by the fact that an abundant supply of Regimental Officers has always been forthcoming. At the present moment there are something like two hundred officers, who have held commissions for years, in the Army awaiting admission to the A.S.C., and their claims are all set aside in favour of the son of a War Office official who has conclusively demonstrated his inability to obtain an Army commission. Rarely have the interests of the Army and of the taxpayers been more shamelessly sacrificed to personal considerations and private influence; and from the taxpayers' point of view the scandal is the more flagrant, inasmuch as the official who thus uses his influence to advance his family at the public expense is the head of the financial administration of the Army, and the man of all others who ought to be above suspicion in such matters.

A slashing article (No. 2) on Artillery Organisation written over the signature "Another Officer" in the current number of the United Service Magazine is from the pen of a well-known writer, who is also the intimate friend and adviser of the Commander-in-Chief. According to the writer's view, the Royal Artillery is a hotbed of smothered discontent and crime, due to the tyranny of its commissioned officers. If a tenth part of the statements made in the article are true, the Royal Regiment, instead of being reformed, ought to be straightway disbanded.

The following case may be interesting to the officer who wrote the other day to tell me that any parent can easily satisfy himself as to the probability of his son passing the Army medical examination, by previously taking the opinion of his family doctor, or some other private practitioner. A retired officer, who is bringing up his son to his own profession, had him examined by Sir James Paget, Sir Joseph Fayrer, and the then President of the Royal College of Surgeons, who unanimously pronounced him perfectly fit for the Army. The lad had had a fall from his pony when a child, and had sustained a slight injury to his arm, which appears to have prevented him holding it in a certain position, but he was a man of sound physique, a first-rate shot and tennis-player, and had won two cups at Harrow for jumping and running. There would, therefore, seem to be not the slightest reason why he should not have been passed into the Army. The father, however, hearing that of late every pretext had been taken for rejecting candidates, managed, by a little diplomacy, to obtain the opinion of an Army doctor, who was in a position to speak with authority. From this doctor he learned that his son would certainly be rejected, and the young man had accordingly abandon the profession, to preparing for which he had already devoted much time and money. This case itself is one of some hardship, but it is insignificant beside many in which candidates have been prepared for, and have passed their educational examination, only to be rejected on some trumpery medical pretext; and it shows that under ordinary circumstances the mere opinion of a civil practitioner is of no value whatever for ascertaining the probable decision of an Army Medical Board.

A sergeant, R.H.A., writes as follows from Aldershot:—

Dear TRUTH,—I wish you would bring to the notice of the Commander-in-Chief how hard it will be on non-commissioned officers of the horse and field artillery if his present proposal to separate the mounted from the dismounted branches is carried out.

Hitherto we N.C. Officers of the mounted branch have had a fair share of appointments as master gunners and district officers. If the separation is carried out these appointments will be given exclusively to N.C.O.s from the "foot" artillery, and we shan't get a chance.

I am writing as much in the interest of the Service as of the N.C.O.s of horse and field artillery, as it is admitted that the best master gunners and district officers come from the mounted branch of the regiment. An N.C. officer of "foot" artillery spends most of his time in boating, fishing, bathing, playing with position finding instruments in cells, and other similar sedentary pursuits. After ten or fifteen years of this kind of life, he loses his energy, figure, and military spirit, and it is notorious that he contrasts unfavourably with his smarter and more active brother in the mounted branch.

I hope, therefore, you will bring our case to notice, as, if the scheme is carried out, there will be no openings for commissions left for N.C. officers who, like myself, have worked hard to obtain our first-class certificates of education in order to qualify for commissioned rank.

If my correspondent's description of the "foot" artilleryman's life is accurate, considerable extra expense must be incurred by Mr. Fleetwood Wilson's department in providing suitable clothing to cover the "figures" of these portly warriors. But what I take special note of is, that the Aldershot sergeant differs from his officers who are always pressing on my attention the necessity of the step which he deprecates. I hear a great deal about this question from the officers, but I should like to hear more about it from the point of view of the 32,000 N.C.O.s and men who are enrolled in the ranks of the Royal Artillery.

A number of N.C.O.s and men of the 1st Dorsetshire Regiment, who had applied for transfer to the Home battalion, have just been refused. Something like thirty had put down their names, and less than half these have been allowed to go. Their grievance is aggravated by the fact that the men selected, or at any rate two sergeants out of the number, have not been selected by seniority. The battalion completed its eight years' foreign service last February, and several among the N.C.O.s who applied for transfer have done considerably more than that period of foreign service. Doubtless there are practical difficulties in the way of allowing these men to come home; but I cannot help thinking that it ought to be within the power of our military organisers to arrange matters so that no man should be kept more than nine years abroad against his will.

The luxury of a bath is incomplete without the addition of SCRUBB'S CLOUDY HOUSEHOLD AMMONIA, which refreshes and exhilarates.

As the public has been much exercised of late over the neglect of old and disabled soldiers, the following case should attract attention. On December 25, 1894, Lance-Sergeant C. Lynn was invalided out of the 2nd Battalion Royal Irish Regiment on account of varicose veins contracted through service in India. At the time of his discharge he was within forty days of completing the service which would have entitled him to a pension of 1s. 5d. per diem for life. Had he been allowed to reckon two years which he had served as a boy, he would have earned his pension long before his discharge, he having enlisted at the age of fourteen years and ten months. In the first instance Lynn was awarded a life pension, and one quarter's pay at the rate of 1s. 5d. a day was paid to him. He was then informed that, owing to his being forty days short of the qualifying period, he could not have a life pension. His pension was at the same time reduced to 11d. per diem for one year, at the expiration of which, after medical examination, it was continued for six months longer. It was then stopped. There is no ground for saying that he is incapacitated in any way, but the withdrawal of the life pension under such circumstances is an act of great harshness and injustice. The man was invalided against his own wish. He was naturally anxious to stay on until he had at least completed his remaining forty days of qualifying service. The most rigid stickler for economy will hardly deny that a point ought to be strained in his favour.

I hear now that some London publicans are refusing to serve Volunteers in uniform. My informant, who is a man in the Scottish Rifles, was absolutely refused refreshment in a public-house in Swallow-street, of all places, on returning from some night operations at Caterham. This is the reductio ad absurdum of the boycott of soldiers at public-houses, for the same man would be allowed to drink a glass of beer in his civilian capacity who is refused it during the brief period when he dons his uniform. In this instance the publican seems to have absolutely refused to serve the customer, not content with merely relegating him to one particular bar. This, I take it, is perfectly illegal, and I would suggest that the London Scottish should enforce the law against this publican, or, at any rate, bring the matter before the notice of the Licensing Justices.

Here is a suggestion which I offer to Army reformers. It is that all soldiers should have some special garments, overalls, or something of that kind, for fatigue work which involves any special damage to clothing. I offer this suggestion as the result of the innumerable complaints which soldiers send to me of the hardship of having to pay for clothes damaged in fatigue duty of one kind or another. In the King's Own Regiment, now at Malta, I am told that nearly 500 men have, during the last month or so, been put down for khaki trousers, at their own expense, in consequence of the damage to their clothing by the dirty fatigue work which they have had to perform. In addition to the ordinary work, I understand that a number of men are told off each day to work for seven hours at the aërated-water machine, at which their clothing often gets seriously damaged. For work of this kind the men should be provided with aprons, or some other protection to their clothes, such as is worn by workmen in civil life. It seems to me that here is an opportunity, by the exercise of a little common sense and forethought, to practically put several pounds a year into Atkins's pocket, without taking it out of any one else's—unless it be the tradesman's who at present gets the orders for the new clothing.

An inquest was held the other day on a patient (Private McGuiness, 2nd Royal Scots Fusiliers) at the Fort Pitt Hospital, Chatham, who had died from an overdose of medicine, to which he had helped himself. The verdict was "Death from misadventure," but it seems highly doubtful whether the jury would have contented themselves with this finding if they had had the whole of the circumstances before them. From evidence furnished to me, but not produced at the inquest, it appears that at the time when the unfortunate soldier got up and helped himself to the medicine which killed him, one N.C.O. and eight men of the Medical Staff Corps staff at Fort Pitt were absent from the hospital, and engaged in gardening operations at the new quarters of the officer commanding No. 10 Company. This was not an isolated occurrence, a fatigue party from three to eight strong having been similarly engaged every day for a fortnight before the fatality. One of the men thus employed should by rights have been in charge of the cupboard containing the medicine which McGuiness swallowed, but on being taken off duty to go gardening, the man had handed his keys to the wardmaster, who unquestionably had more duties on his hands than he could possibly attend to. In this state of things, the unfortunate patient—knowing apparently that it was time for his dose, and no one being at hand to give it him—got up and helped himself to six ounces of a mixture intended for another patient, and marked in one ounce doses. Not a word about the gardening was allowed to transpire at the inquest, and the local military authorities, with that adroitness in dragging a red-herring across the scent which seems to characterise military authorities, have actually put a dispenser under arrest on a charge of making the fatal mixture too strong. I trust that what I have now said will be the means of putting the Director-General on to the right scent, and that he will follow it up until he has got the whole of the facts about the employment of M.S.C. men in the C.O.'s garden, and the bearing of it upon the fatality at the hospital.

In my Military Pillory this week I give the place of honour to a little incident at Limerick, which illustrates a point that I have often argued. Why any one should advertise the fact of a recent bereavement by bedecking his person and stationery with black I do not know; but it is a custom prevailing among all classes, and many seem to derive some strange consolation from it while their grief is still in its heyday. If the custom is recognised in the Army—as it is by allowing officers to wear mourning bands—surely the recognition ought to extend equally to all ranks. A driver in the Royal Artillery may feel just as much grief as a major for the loss of his father, and is probably just as desirous of showing respect for his parent's memory. The black button with which the offender contented himself in this instance is not a very obtrusive symbol of affliction :—

OLD SPICED ELDERBERRY WINE prevents chills; delicious winter beverage. 15/- per doz. reputed quarts. Carriage paid. Cash with order.—CARTER & Co., Old Refinery, Bristol.

11th Field Battery, Royal Artillery, Limerick.—A driver in this battery lately lost his father. He subsequently appeared on duty with a minute piece of crape over one of the buttons of his serge. The crape was immediately spotted by a major, who ordered the man to remove it at once. The major was of course only performing the strict letter of duty, but most people will probably agree that he would have performed it better had he managed not to see the button.

2nd Wiltshire Regiment, Portsmouth.—The married N.C.O.s of this battalion are highly indignant over an order requiring them, when on their turn of duty as orderly or waiting orderly sergeant, to live and sleep exclusively with the company in which they are doing such duty. Under ordinary circumstances, this means separation from their wives and families for a week, but, owing to the furlough season and the dearth of N.C.O.s in the battalion, some of the 2nd Wilts men have lately been on duty for as long as eleven days at a time, during which period they are forbidden to live in their own quarters, a hundred yards or so off. This order professes to be a re-issue of one enforced many years ago in India; but it seems doubtful whether there is any precedent for the issue of such an order in England.

R.A. Barracks, Maryhill, Glasgow.—Some time back an order was issued that all N.C.O.s and men not on the married establishment were to go out of barracks as soon as possible. There were then in the battery stationed at Maryhill Barracks three sergeants, one bombardier, and two drivers, not on the married establishment, and also one private of the Medical Staff Corps. The two drivers and the M.S.C. man were promptly ejected, but not so the N.C.O.s. The bombardier has since filled a vacancy on the married establishment, but two sergeants still remain who are not on the establishment. If the order is to be over-ridden in favour of anybody, equity suggests that it should have been in favour of the men who can least afford to pay house rent.

Royal Irish Rifles, Aldershot.—At Ramillies Barracks—possibly in other Aldershot barracks also—the allowance of oil for each lamp is two pints per week, issued on Mondays and Thursdays. The allowance is entirely inadequate, and does not keep the lamps going for more than four nights, the men being consequently left in utter darkness for the remaining three nights, and having sometimes to prepare themselves for parades under these conditions. Although this grievance is reported from the Royal Irish Rifles, it is probably experienced in some degree in other barracks, and why gas is not in general use at Aldershot is a mystery which only the wiseacres at the head of our military arrangements can solve.

2nd Cheshire Regiment, Buttevant.—There has been no meeting of the sergeants' mess of this battalion for several months past. Whose business is it to see that the regulation on this subject is carried out? Complaints of a similar nature are continually forthcoming from one regiment or another, and it is clearly absurd to make a regulation requiring a monthly meeting unless some means are provided for enforcing it.

Donegal Artillery, Letterkenny.—The sergeant-major here (a Militia N.C.O. of over thirty years' service) is at present holding the following posts, several of them carrying extra pay:—Canteen manager, canteen accountant, canteen treasurer, librarian, and caretaker of officers' mess and quarters. A sergeant of the same corps acts as recruiting sergeant (permanent), pay sergeant, canteen cashier, and tailor—the tailoring and accoutrement mending alone being worth from £15 to £20 a year. This pluralism is obviously most unfair to the rest of the permanent staff, and, in the case of some of the posts held by the sergeant-major, seems difficult to reconcile with the regulations.

1st Wiltshire Regiment, Karachi.—Complaints are again rife in this battalion of men being put on grass-cutting fatigue. The matter was referred to in TRUTH a few months back, and the practice was immediately stopped. This clearly shows that such work is not considered desirable, and it is to be hoped that steps will now be taken which will effectually prevent its repetition.

The Civil and Military Gazette of Lahore, referring to the issue of the Ashanti decoration, writes:—

In the name of Thomas Atkins and Jack Sepoy, may we remind a munificent Government that the medal for the relief of Chitral has not been issued, or, we believe, even struck? It is now a year and five months since Chitral was relieved, &c.

As there seems now little possibility of any Chitral medal being issued, I would ask those who took part in the Chitral campaign to look at the article in TRUTH of October 15, containing ex-king Prempeh's letter to the Commander of the British forces. They will see from this that not only did Prempeh offer before the expedition started to make his submission and give hostages for his good faith, but he met the expedition with a letter informing the officer commanding that he had ordered his subjects to offer no resistance to the British forces, and had disarmed them in order to make sure of this order being carried out. When the soldiers who endured the perils and hardships of the Chitral campaign understand this, I feel sure that they will be the last to wish for anything in the shape of a decoration in recognition of their services.

When anybody at the War Office seriously devotes himself to the improvement of the supply of raw material for our army, the first thing he will do is to take steps to improve the position of the Volunteer Cadet Battalions. Of the utility of these corps there can, I think, be no question, whether looked at from the point of view of the boys who are enlisted, or from that of the Regular Army, to which each battalion is certain to supply a considerable number of recruits. At present the support of this most useful work is largely left to private benevolence, and in most cases this benevolence is chiefly that of the officers themselves. As the result, most of these corps are in a languishing condition for want of funds, and their utility is greatly restricted.

Some attention was drawn to the subject the other day through the final demise of the 1st C.B. East Surrey Regiment, and I believe there are many similar battalions in London which are kept alive with the greatest difficulty. Nor does this remark apply to London alone. I was earnestly entreated a short time back to invoke public sympathy on behalf of the 1st C.B. Norfolk Regiment. During the time that this corps has been in existence over two hundred boys have passed out of it, of whom 20 per cent. have joined the Regular Army, Militia, or Navy, while 25 per cent. have gone into the Volunteers. Yet this corps is saddled with a debt of about £350, incurred in training the lads, for which the officers are personally responsible, and it is a disgraceful fact to every one but the officer concerned that the late Adjutant was driven into bankruptcy in consequence of his liability for the debts of the battalion. Apart from their military value, Cadet Battalions are of the greatest service in supplying boys when they leave the public elementary schools with wholesome discipline, healthy recreation, and interests which will save them from the dangers of running wild in the streets when they are not at work. The 1st C.B. Norfolk Regiment has its mess-rooms, provided with games and newspapers for winter evenings, its football, cricket, and swimming clubs, besides the parades, drills, marches out, and field days, which are in a great measure an amusement to the lads. Anyone can see for himself the social value of such an organisation, and any one who subscribes to keep such a corps afloat is a public benefactor.

Epps's Cocoa is always found grateful and comforting both for breakfast, supper, and luncheon. It is sold in packets & ½-lb. tins, and labelled "James Epps & Co., Ltd.," Homœopathic Chemists, London.

A brother tax-payer wrote to me the other day deprecating the issue of the Lee-Metford rifle to Cadet Volunteer Battalions. So far as I know, the new rifle has not yet been issued to these corps, but from a recent order published in one of them, it seems that the Cadets are to have them as soon as the other Volunteers have been armed. There are, of course, two sides to the question; but seeing that a great many boys pass through Cadet Corps who do not take up Volunteering permanently, I question whether the money of the tax-payer might not be better spent than in arming them with Lee-Metfords, especially in view of what I have just said as to the impoverished state of many battalions. A substantial capitation grant would help more towards the efficiency of most battalions than the same money's worth in magazine rifles. My own opinion is that such grants should be made annually to every Cadet Battalion which is in a fairly efficient condition.

About three years ago Mr. James Stevens left £50,000 to the Lifeboat Institution on the condition that twenty boats, with his name upon each, should be placed round the coast. In less than six months all these boats could be built, but I have not yet heard of one of them being on the coast. How many are placed, and what is being done with the money?

This reminds me to ask once more what has become of the bequest of Mr. Berridge of £200,000 for the advancement of sanitary science? The money was placed in the hands of trustees, and it seems to me full time that they should render some account of their stewardship to the nation, to which the bequest was made.

With regard to the recent complaints of rowdyism on Cape steamers, I have had a communication from the secretary of the Union Line, pointing out a mistake which was inadvertently made in my last paragraph on the subject. It seems that the statement I quoted from one of the Cape papers gave the result of inquiries at the London office of the Company—not, as I supposed, at the Cape Town branch. The correspondence which was going on between an aggrieved passenger and the agent at Cape Town had not at that time reached the office in London, and nothing was known there of the complaints. There seems to be no question that the passenger referred to had good cause to complain of his treatment at the hands of certain of his fellow-passengers, at any rate prior to his transference from the third to the second class. Judging, however, from the thoroughness with which the matter has been investigated, the Company fully recognises that it is its duty to protect its customers from such molestation and persecution, and no doubt a little firmness on the part of captains and officers will in future keep turbulent and insolent parties in order.

A characteristic correspondence has taken place between Whitehall and the widow of the late Mr. D'Elboux, of the Ordnance Survey Office at Southampton, the discreditable circumstances attending whose death have already been detailed in TRUTH. Mrs. D'Elboux made an appeal to the compassion of the Treasury, pointing out that her husband had served beyond the time qualifying him for pension, and that his death (which left his family destitute) was due to the harsh and inconsiderate treatment he had received in the office. The Treasury replied that the appeal had been forwarded to the Board of Agriculture. The Board of Agriculture next told Mrs. D'Elboux that the case did not come under the Superannuation Acts, and in reply to her complaints about her husband's treatment, delicately hinted "that for some time past your husband's physical powers were unhappily not equal to the adequate discharge of the duties entrusted to him in the Service, with which he had been so long and so honourably connected." Mrs. D'Elboux's answer was straight and to the point:—

> If my late husband was unequal to his duties, why was he not recommended to retire on his pension that he had earned by his forty-three years' faithful service, instead of being goaded on to do his work faster?

To this the Board discreetly replied that "they can add nothing to their previous letter." For once in a way, a Government Office really finds itself at a loss for an answer.

The place of Financial Secretary to the Post Office which Mr. Algernon Turnor has just resigned, is worth £1,500 a year. There is a good deal of speculation as to whether the promotion will go "in the office," or whether the Duke of Norfolk will pitchfork some outsider into the post, as was done by Lord Beaconsfield in 1880, just before he resigned. Mr. Turnor, who was a clerk in the Treasury, had been Lord Beaconsfield's private secretary for six years, and he desired to provide for him, and this was the method adopted. It was a very nice arrangement for Mr. Turnor, but was far from being acceptable to the secretarial staff at the Post Office, as it had been reasonably expected that the vacancy would be filled up by promotion in the ordinary course.

Commencement of term at Cambridge has been signalised by the discharge of a flood of obscene literature upon this University by a quack doctor in London, a large proportion of these things being sent to freshmen. This is a matter in which the University authorities might well take action, and no one is in a better position than they are to put the pressure upon the Postmaster-General which is required in order to stop the circulation of all such filthy garbage through the post. I would again suggest to head-masters of public schools that they should combine with the college authorities at Oxford and Cambridge in some action of this kind.

The other week a branch of the Postal Clerks' Association was established by the staff at Cardiff Post Office, one of their number being appointed as secretary. It so happened that his annual increment of salary had become due to this clerk on the day he was selected as secretary of the branch; but two days later he was handed an official paper dealing with his work during the preceding twelve months, and challenging his claim to the increment. Whether this was an instance of cause and effect or merely a coincidence can only be guessed, but it has a decidedly suspicious and ugly look in view of the facts—first, that the Association got itself disliked by those in authority at Cardiff through bringing certain irregular promotions in that office to the notice of Lord Tweedmouth's Committee; and, secondly, that in the attempt to stop the increment of the secretary of the new branch, there has been a marked departure from the usual practice, which is to challenge such increments about a fortnight before they become due, not two days afterwards. In these circumstances the Postmaster-General would do well to make some inquiries before acting upon any recommendation from Cardiff in regard to the clerk in question.

FIRE PROTECTION OF COUNTRY HOUSES.—Merryweathers' system. Economy, convenience, efficiency. Illustrated particulars post free.—Write MERRYWEATHERS, 63, Long-acre, London.

With reference to the hard case of a Savings Bank clerk, which was dealt with in last week's TRUTH, I hear that instead of being compulsorily retired on a pension he has now been transferred to another branch of the G.P.O. This was the course I advocated, and I am glad to know that it has been adopted.

I wish that the clerk at the G.P.O., who wrote to me the other day anent the hardship of having to buy his own ink, could see a list furnished to me of the material which a sub-postmaster has to supply his employers with in the course of a year. It is so short a time since I went in detail into the treatment of sub-postmasters, that I hardly feel justified in devoting more space to the subject now; but for the credit of us all, I trust that the recent departmental inquiry will lead to some genuine and practical attempt to improve the sub-postmaster's position. To keep a man in a responsible official position working seven days a week, and often one or two nights as well, on a beggarly wage of a few shillings a week, and then to compel him to provide, not only clerical assistance, but notepaper, string, sealing-wax, and other office material, is a disgrace to a wealthy country.

Some time back, reference was made in TRUTH to the inadequacy of the Parcel Post arrangements at Ryde. A resident in that town now informs me that a week or two ago he saw a postman delivering parcels from a hand-cart, with a sack-load of parcels on the top of it. During the absence of the postman, these parcels were, of course, left quite unprotected. For the Post Office to conduct its business in this careless way, seems to be no better than taking advantage of the Postmaster-General's legal immunity from unpleasant consequences in the event of the loss of goods entrusted to him.

During the year ended September 30 the Corporation of Glasgow spent exactly £3,393. 13s. 10d. in deputation expenses; that is, in sending its members to London and elsewhere on various municipal purposes. The expenditure of so formidable a sum of money in twelve months has naturally created great indignation, which is increased by the fact that last year the expenditure on deputations was only £1,336, the increase this year being, therefore, fully £2,000. The most extraordinary item in the account is a sum of £612 for the visits of a number of Councillors to Coventry, Bristol, Brussels, Hamburg, Berlin, Hanover, Dresden, Budapest, Vienna, Milan, Genoa, Paris, and Rouen, to inquire into the use of mechanical motors for tramways. On one of these trips four members of the Council and three officials went on what has proved so far an abortive mission, when, if it were necessary to send so far, one competent expert could have done the work far more satisfactorily and for far less money.

Perhaps I did an injustice to the Belfast Corporation in the suggestion I hazarded last week as to their reason for maintaining the cells at the police-station in such an indescribably foul and insanitary condition. A report just presented by a Special Committee of the Corporation shows that the condition of the cells is really only in keeping with the condition of a large part of the city, and it may possibly have been felt that it would be absurd and inconsistent to provide a few score prisoners with advantages in the way of pure air and sanitary surroundings which are denied to many thousands of the population outside. The report enumerates various causes of the high death-rate in Belfast "to which municipal responsibility directly extends," among them being the erection of thousands of houses—many quite recently—on insanitary sites; the continued existence of slums that have been condemned as unfit for human habitation; the inadequate supervision exercised over the construction of streets, sewers, and drains; the number of open sewers, cesspools, and other nuisances; and the "feeble and ineffectual" administration of the Public Health Acts. All these matters are dealt with in detail, and the whole document constitutes about the most damning indictment of a municipal body that I have ever read.

I do not quite see where the profit of the Railroad Companies comes in under the privileged-cab system. The law recognises the station as private property, and therefore the law is with the railroads. But I should say that the law would be fairer if it laid down that wherever a cab sets down it may take up. As a matter of fact, there often is an absence of cabs at a station. The railroads say that their system secures good cabs and honest drivers. I have found the dishonest cab-driver the rare exception, but I think that it will be admitted that these exceptions are encountered as much amongst cabmen hired at stations as elsewhere. On the whole, therefore, I am inclined to think that those who use cabs would gain more than what they may lose were there free trade at the stations.

To say, however, that a service of private omnibuses is not useful at stations is nonsense. Many families prefer a commodious omnibus to being stuffed together in a cab. The omnibus, moreover, carries far more luggage than the cab. But what I should like to see is the introduction of the American system of delivery. There, a tin disc bearing a number is slipped by means of a loop on each article of the passenger's luggage, and he receives discs bearing the identical numbers. Whilst on the train an employee takes these counter-discs and writes down the address to which it is wished that the luggage should be sent, and it arrives at its destination not many minutes after he does. It is true that the employee can walk in America through the train when in motion to collect discs, and that here he cannot. But this might be met by the counter-discs and the addresses being taken on the arrival of the train by some employee on the arrival platform.

CARPET BEATING SEASON.—The Queen says: "A good place to send carpets to is the Compressed Air Carpet and Tapestry Cleaning Company, Brook Green, Hammersmith, W. Dust blown out. No beaters used." To prevent deception carpets cleaned by this process bear the Trade Mark on the back.

A more suicidal policy than that adopted by those who are responsible for the present agitation in the cab trade can scarcely be imagined. From the outset the public have looked on at the dispute with the most languid interest; but if, figuratively speaking, they are now to be employed as battering-rams wherewith to demolish the gates of privilege erected by the different railway companies, it will not be long before they declare most emphatically against the cabman and his ways. The threatened step of a general strike, if carried out, will place the coping-stone of folly upon the present edifice of blunder. A (the cabman) quarrels with C (the railway companies), and, in order to enforce his argument, falls foul of B (the public), turning him from a passive spectator into an active opponent. Can anything more idiotic be well imagined?

The inhabitants of Aldershot are being urged by the Aldershot News to sign a memorial to the Lord Chancellor in favour of the appointment of resident civilian magistrates for the town. Such an addition to the Bench is certainly required, for at present there is not a single permanent acting magistrate living in the Aldershot district; and, what is more, the justices who come into the town to attend the Petty Sessions are all of them retired military officers. Considering that the urban district of Aldershot has a population of 15,000 exclusive of the camp, it is ridiculous to suppose that there is any difficulty in finding gentlemen qualified for appointment; and apart from the public convenience of having magistrates resident in the town, it is highly desirable that a civilian element should be introduced. No Bench ought to be confined to members of one particular class, and from all that I see of military tribunals nothing could be more unsatisfactory than a Bench constituted like a court-martial.

The great Sangster case, which has excited general attention in Scotland, was decided last week by the Court of Session, and the judgment will meet with universal approval. Captain Sangster was drowned while bathing in Loch Carn, and the General Accident Assurance Corporation refused to pay the amount of the policy, on the ground that either he had committed suicide, or had incurred an obvious and unwarrantable risk. The Court has unanimously decided against the Corporation. Captain Sangster was in good health and easy circumstances, and there was not a particle of probability in the theory that he committed suicide, while it would be preposterous to forbid a person who is insured to enter deep water although a good swimmer. If Captain Sangster's representatives had been poor people, they would, no doubt, have lost the amount of the policy, from financial inability to fight a costly and protracted battle in the Law Courts.

A very unjust piece of jobbery has been committed by the Secretary of State for Scotland in the appointment of Mr. Andrew Rutherford to the post of Sheriff of the Lothians and Peebles. Mr. Rutherford has been Sheriff-Substitute for fourteen years, but his colleague, Mr. Hamilton, has held his appointment for exactly double that time, having been appointed in 1868, besides which he had acted as Sheriff-Substitute for two years prior to that date. Throughout that time Mr. Hamilton has been most indefatigable in his attention to his duties, and there is not a shadow of reason for the appointment of his junior over his head, unless it be private or backstairs influence.

Is it possible that the amateur magistracy are not always entitled to their familiar designation of the Great Unpaid? I ask the question because a county J.P. of thirty years' standing informs me that it is not unusual in his part of the country for a magistrate to demand a fee of a shilling for witnessing the signing of a document which requires to be so certified by a magistrate. He wishes to know whether there is any authority for making such a charge, and I shall be glad if any of my legal friends can enlighten him and me on the point.

A correspondent who sees a good deal of the proceedings at Lambeth County-court sends me some notes and reports showing the salutary methods which Judge Emden adopts in dealing with extortionate claims by Messrs. Shylock & Co. According to my correspondent, his Honour has become a perfect terror to the members of the tribe in his district, thus setting an example which some other County-court Judges would do well to emulate. There is, unfortunately, great diversity of practice among these functionaries. In some courts the usurer is encouraged and emboldened by the readiness with which his exactions, however preposterously extravagant they may be, are enforced. In others—and I am glad to add the Lambeth Court to the list—the Judges take a broader view of their duty, and, even if they are obliged to give judgment for some rapacious and unscrupulous Shylock, so order it that he will get his pound of flesh only in minute instalments, spread over a long period.

One of the magistrates has written to me in reference to a case of cruelty to a child at Mallow Petty Sessions which I pilloried last week. He says the child was no doubt harshly treated, but explains that it was on account of the extreme poverty of the parents that the small fine of 1s., with 15s. costs, was inflicted, and that in addition to this penalty the stepmother was put under a rule of bail. I am also informed that the magistrates subscribed a small sum to keep the child in the care of a relative until she could be sent to an industrial school. I willingly give publicity to this statement, but I feel bound to add that this magisterial compassion for poverty would impress me more if it were not almost exclusively reserved for persons convicted of offences of violence and cruelty. It never, or hardly ever, comes into operation in cases of petty larceny, poaching, or vagrancy.

In my Legal Pillory this week I give some further specimens of the justice dispensed at Quarter Sessions, together with the usual array of cases from the police-courts. Throughout the list the contrast between the punishment meted out for offences against the person or cruelty to animals on the one side, and for offences against property or the Game Laws on the other, speaks for itself; and the only point to which I would specially refer is that mentioned in the report from Hayward's Heath. It will be seen that, in addition to sentencing a man to a month's hard labour for poaching, the Bench ordered him to find sureties for his good behaviour, or, in default, a further six months' hard labour. The Clerk remarked that "the Act left the magistrates no option;" and it is true that it does not if their worships decide to demand sureties. But they are not, of course, under any obligation to make this part of the sentence, and it seems to me a monstrous thing that they should elect to do so, the result being that the defendant in question will have to serve seven months' imprisonment for an offence for which one month was more than enough:—

Preston Quarter Sessions. Before Mr. H. W. Worsley Taylor. Peter Caffrey, charged with unlawfully wounding Joseph Patten. Prisoner kicked prosecutor in the ear, splitting it, and otherwise injured him. One month.

Preston Quarter Sessions. Before Mr. H. W. Worsley Taylor. George Murphy, an old man of 69, charged with begging, after previous convictions for vagrancy. Twelve months.

Bucks Quarter Sessions. Jesse Brooks, convicted of indecently assaulting a girl aged nine years. Three months.

Bucks Quarter Sessions. Henry Fletcher, convicted of stealing two blouses and two silk skirts. Six months.

Hamilton Sheriff Court. Before Sheriff Davidson. William Jackson, convicted of culpable homicide. He assaulted his infant son by knocking his head violently against a wall, fracturing his skull, and beat him with his fists. The child died immediately afterwards. Previously convicted of wife assault. Twelve months.

Durham Quarter Sessions. Before Mr. J. Lloyd Wharton and other magistrates. Thomas Gage, charged with shopbreaking. Five years.

William Smith, charged with stealing a quantity of lead. Five years.

Inverness Sheriff Court. Before Sheriff Blair. James O'Neill, convicted of culpable homicide. He threw a man violently on the kerbstone, causing his death. One month.

Leeds Quarter Sessions. Before Mr. J. E. Barker, Recorder. Henry Birch, pleaded guilty to stealing an overcoat. Four months.

Grimsby Police court. Before Aldermen Jackson, Dobson, Louth, and Smethurst, and other magistrates. Edward Jacob Jarrod, charged with assaulting Gertrude Harrison. He knocked her down, hit her on the face, and kicked her on the hips, thigh, and abdomen. Fined £1. 1s.

Grimsby Quarter Sessions. Before Mr. Appleton, Recorder. Charles Rushby pleaded guilty to stealing three haddocks. Three months.

Beccles Police-court. Before Messrs. B. G. Freeland, W. M. Crowfoot, J. S. Crisp, and C. Smith. Samuel Roofe, charged with poaching. Two months.

Accrington Police-court. Before Messrs. R. H. Rowland and W. Ratcliffe. William Westwell, convicted of an aggravated assault on his wife, who had been living apart from him. He knocked her head against a wall, tripped her up, and whilst she was on the ground he kicked her on the head and lower part of the body. He afterwards jumped on her and she became insensible. Fined £2. 10s. and costs.

Hayward's Heath Police-court. Before Major-General Pemberton and Mr. R. Caffyn. Thomas Ront, labourer, charged with poaching. One month, and a further six months in default of finding sureties not to offend again for a year. Prisoner said he did not know of any sureties. The clerk said he would have to remain in prison if no sureties were found; the Act left the magistrates no option.

West Bromwich Police-court. George Scarrott charged with cruelty to a donkey. He stabbed the animal several times in the inside of the mouth, badly lacerating the tongue and making it bleed profusely. Fined £1. 15s., including costs.

Woodbridge Petty Sessions. Before Captain Carthew, Colonel Whitbread, and Hon. W. Lowther. John Wolton charged with trespassing in pursuit of game. Fined £1. 19s. 6d.

West Riding Quarter Sessions, Wakefield. Before Mr. W. Sheepshanks and other justices. George Taylor, convicted of unlawfully and maliciously wounding his wife. Three months.

West Riding Quarter Sessions, Wakefield. Before the same justices. Benjamin Lockwood, aged 63, charged with stealing a pair of boots. Six months.

Hatherleigh Petty Sessions. Before Messrs. H. M. Veale and E. J. Oldham, Colonel Arnold, and Mr. Thomson. W. C. Blatchford, charged with assaulting his wife. He struck her on the face and head, blackening both her eyes, and then proceeded to kick her. She had frequently been ill-treated, and applied for a separation order, which was granted. Fined 5s.

Newbury Borough Police-court. Before Messrs. E. Harris, J. Absalom, and J. Elliott. A man and woman named Hindle, charged with stealing a pair of boots from a shop door. One month each.

Exmouth Police-court. Before Mr. C. A. Langton. Ambrose Timerick, charged with sleeping out. Prisoner seemed to be in a very bad state of health. Three days.

Beverley Police-court. Before the Mayor, Dr. Calvert, and Alderman Sample. William Pickering pleaded guilty to assaulting his wife. He gave her a black eye, and threatened her with a knife. It was his twelfth appearance at the court. Fined 10s. and costs.

Doncaster West Riding Police Court. George Smith, labourer, charged with trespassing in search of game. Fined £2.

I am not sure whether I understand the decision of the Queen's Bench Division in the organ-grinding case, but if I do, it is nonsense. As I read it, you may order an organ-grinder to desist from grinding, but must give him your reason for so doing. It is not said that he is to be the judge of the sufficiency of the reason, nor is it even said that the reason given must be the true one. The giving of a reason, therefore, seems to be a senseless formality, and, so far as I can see from the Act, it is the Judges, and not the Legislature, who have introduced this absurdity into the law. I read somewhere the other day, that England is the only civilised country in which organ-grinding is not regulated by law. If so, we are bound to regulate it in our own defence, or we shall become the prey of all the outcast organ-grinders of the rest of the world. As the first step in that direction, I adhere to my favourite remedy of a "close time" for grinding.

It is an agreeable change to hear of a Bailie talking such good sense from the Bench as Bailie Chisholm did at Dalkeith the other day on the occasion of a number of boys being summoned for playing football in the street. No doubt this is a source of annoyance, but in Dalkeith the juveniles who indulge in games in the streets have the excuse that there is nowhere else for them to go, the town being without any public park or recreation-ground. It seems from the Bailie's remarks that the landed proprietors refuse "either for love or money" to sell a field for the purpose, and though the question has been agitated on and off for the past fifty years, the municipal authorities cannot screw up their courage to exercise their compulsory powers for acquiring land. As the Bailie suggested, it is really therefore the landowners and the authorities who are to blame for the nuisance which is caused in the streets, and it is a pity they cannot be prosecuted and fined instead of the poor children.

WATER SUPPLY FOR MANSIONS, &c.—Artesian Bored and Driven Tube Wells, Wind Engines for pumping, &c.—State your requirements to ALFRED WILLIAMS & Co., 39, Gt. Eastern-st., London, E.C.

A very extraordinary course has been adopted in the case of George Young, formerly an attendant at Gateshead Workhouse, who was convicted of a grave crime at Durham Assizes last November, and sentenced to ten years' penal servitude. After this man's conviction, information came to light in regard to scandals at the Workhouse, which led to an investigation by the Local Government Board. The disclosures which were then made convinced many persons that Young had been the victim of a gross miscarriage of justice, and steps were taken to bring the whole of the facts under the notice of the Home Secretary. The result is that Young has now been released on a ticket of leave which will keep him under the supervision of the police for more than nine years to come. Sir Matthew White Ridley's decision is utterly illogical and indefensible. If Young was guilty of the heinous crime with which he was charged he deserved the ten years' penal servitude, and the Home Secretary ought not to have set him at liberty. If, on the other hand, he was wrongfully convicted, or even if there is any doubt in the matter, he is clearly entitled to a free pardon. It would appear that the Home Secretary has taken a middle course because he is not convinced one way or the other; but, if that is his view, surely the accused should have the benefit of the doubt.

Last week two men named Charles Wright and Robert Warrington were charged at Sleaford Petty Sessions with poaching, the evidence showing that they were found with a net in which one rabbit had been caught. Neither defendant had ever been summoned before for any offence whatever, and each has a large family dependent upon him. But the magistrates, Messrs. H. Smith and J. A. Cole, look upon any violation of the sacred rights of the game-preserver as the most heinous of crimes, and so, notwithstanding the fact that it was a first offence, these two men were committed to gaol for a month's hard labour, with a further six months if they fail to find sureties for their good behaviour. This shameful sentence has aroused a strong feeling of indignation in the neighbourhood, but I do not suppose it will cause a moment's uneasiness of conscience to the two Dracos who passed it. The Smiths and Coles of our enlightened rural magistracy think it quite in the natural order of things that two respectable workmen should be sent to gaol, and their wives and little children left to starve, all on account of one paltry rabbit.

Equally scandalous in its way was a decision of Sheriff-Substitute Buntine in a case at Stirling Sheriff Court the other day. Three young men were charged with trespassing in pursuit of game. There was no question that they trespassed in the walk they took, but that in itself is not a crime; and the only evidence—save the mark—that they were in pursuit of game was that they each carried a catapult. This sufficed, however, for the Sheriff-Substitute, and he mulcted each of the accused in a penalty of £1. 19s. 8d. Apparently any youth who possesses a catapult in the Stirling district renders himself amenable to the Game Laws.

I would call the attention of the Blackpool police to a man named C. H. Nevill, who seems to be carrying on at Oxford-road in that town a game very similar to that of Henry Miller, late of High Holborn. Nevill is another of the infallible system men. In a case which I have before me he received £20 from a client in September, and never paid a farthing, or sent in any account until October 8. He then forwarded an account, showing a small profit in favour of the client up to September 24, when the system, as usual, began to go wrong, until by September 28 the losses had swallowed up the £20 and the small profit as well. In forwarding the account Nevill wrote:—

> If you will look on page 23 of my book you will there find there was three losing weeks last year, and we have had the same this. It certainly was unfortunate for you it should happen the first week you started. Had you recommenced again last week, as I asked you, on £20 there was a profit of £4. 8s. . . . . If you will only start again at once, I am confident that before Christmas you will be more than pleased with my system.

This is the story of Miller and all the rest of this fraternity over again, and if the law can touch one, there can be no reason why it should not hit them all.

Can anything be more anomalous than that "astrologers" should be prosecuted and sent to gaol in one town and be allowed to advertise their business without interference in another? The other day, one of these fortune-tellers got three months' imprisonment at one of the Police-courts. As against this, "Madame Sinclair," of 89, Victoria-street, Bristol, advertises in country papers under the head of "astrology," and undertakes to tell anybody's fortune, fortunate seasons, ruling planets, &c., for twelve stamps and a stamped envelope. Similar advertisements may be found in hundreds of papers. On what principle do the police wink at them?

With reference to the begging-letter writer Charles Leicester, first cousin once removed to the late Right Hon. Lord de Tatley, the Honorary Secretary of the St. Leonards Mechanics' Institute, where this man has been having his letters addressed, writes to inform me that the committee have requested Leicester to discontinue having his letters addressed to the Institute. Leicester is not a member of the Institute, but had been using it as a member of the public on payment of one penny. The Secretary adds to the information I gave last week that this man was known as a regular reader of TRUTH. I hope that he has profited by what he has read there during the last two or three weeks.

A few months back I referred to a new terror in store for subscribers to charities in the shape of a book entitled "The Charitable Ten Thousand." The book is avowedly nothing but a list of regular subscribers to charities, compiled for the purpose of assisting all seekers after subscriptions in the pursuit of their prey. Finding that the book is being extensively pushed, and that the original price of 10s. 6d. had been raised to one guinea, I sent a representative to interview the author respecting his sinister enterprise. He is an elderly individual named Grant, and appears to be a genial cynic. He made no attempt to disguise the character of his work, and was proud of its success. Owing to its having gone off so well, he had thought it advisable to put the price up, and the result had justified his anticipations. I gather that he possesses an extensive and peculiar acquaintance with the business of subscription-hunting, and congratulates himself on his skill in utilising the humbug of philanthropy for his own ends. He related with obvious enjoyment how he had put into his little list all against whom he had a grudge. The Charity Organisation takes an uncharitable view of Mr. Grant, so down went all the subscribers to the C.O.S. among "The Charitable Ten Thousand." Grant is now running an "Anti-Liberation Society;" and all those of his subscribers who have got into arrear with their subscriptions have been enrolled for their sins in Grant's "Ten Thousand." These facts will doubtless be of interest to purchasers of the volume—especially those who have come in at the one guinea tariff.

SCOTT ADIE, 115, Regent-street, London, for Shooting Gowns, Cawdor Capes, Travelling Ulsters, Jackets, Racing Coats, Carriage Rugs, Mauds, Shawls, and Scotch Tweeds. Patterns post free.

This is not Mr. Grant's first effort at exploiting the charitable. Many years ago he started a "Charity Protection League," for the purpose of protecting the public against the Charity Organisation Society, and "saving the London hospitals." He seems to have carried on the League quite single-handed, and himself acted as committee, honorary secretary, and treasurer —no doubt with a view to saving expense. To what extent the public supported this enterprise he has never made known. He does not seem to have extinguished the Charity Organisation Society, but as the London hospitals are still safe, while Mr. Grant himself is still living and prospering, and is in a position to sell lists of ten thousand substantial and reliable subscribers at a guinea the list, the "Charity Protection League" cannot be held to have existed in vain.

I was asked the other day if I knew anything about the "Women's Trading Guild," prospectuses of which had been received by some few readers of TRUTH. It was the first I had heard of the Guild, but in searching for further enlightenment I came across an amusing story. The Guild is the latest idea of a gentleman who has a fad for starting co-operative schemes, and who has succeeded in spending a good deal out of his own pocket without succeeding in putting very much into other people's. He advertised for ladies who would interest themselves in a work of this character. To him came a Miss Ella Wilson, of 34, Corinne-road, Tufnell Park, N. Miss Wilson was full of enthusiasm for the idea, and she, like Ko-Ko, and Mr. Grant of the Charity Protection League, "had a little list"—a list of benevolent persons whose support and cash could be almost counted upon for certain. The benevolent founder of the "Women's Trading Guild" at once saw the importance of enlisting Miss Ella Wilson's services, and employed her to send out circulars to all the benevolent people on her little list. That is how so many of my readers came to receive prospectuses of the "Women's Trading Guild," with a nice little covering letter from 34, Corinne-road, Tufnell Park, signed "Ella Wilson."

The next development of the story is highly interesting. Reference was made in last week's TRUTH to the arrest of Miss Nellie Lane, alias Lloyd, alias Hamilton, alias Merton, alias Morris, alias Brookes, alias Lyle, of the Leeds "Carlton Society," and the St. John's Wood "Kensington Association." "Ella Wilson" is another alias of this Protean damsel, and she was actually arrested at 34, Corinne-road, Tufnell Park, where she was living under that name. The circulars which she had issued from that address for the "Women's Trading Guild" only produced one answer, Miss Ella Wilson's "list" proving less efficacious than she had represented it, and I understand from the promoter that the Guild has in consequence perished still-born. The only lady, in fact, to whom this philanthropic effort on behalf of the sex proved of any service was the enterprising sample of womanhood now under remand at Portsmouth. I did not ask the benevolent founder of the Guild what he paid her for the use of her list and the work of sending out the circulars. I had not the heart.

Owing, I suppose, to the attention I have lately devoted to the subject of chemists' and druggists' prices, I have been introduced to the sad story of an Irish apothecary, who started in business in England without ascertaining whether his Irish qualification was sufficient to legally justify him in so doing, and has, in consequence, been prosecuted by the Pharmaceutical Society of Great Britain. Being interested in this subject, I sent down to make some inquiries of the Pharmaceutical Society in London, as to their reasons for refusing to recognise the Irish qualification. They tell me that, in their opinion, the Irish examination is an insufficient test of a druggist's qualifications for dispensing work, and that they consequently do not recognise licentiates of the Irish Pharmaceutical Society. This really seems to me to be another grievance from Ireland, not so much from the point of view of the Irish chemist as from that of his customers. Is an Irishman's internal economy less precious in the eyes of the law than that of an Englishman or a Scotchman? Is a pill or a draught good enough for him which would not be fit for an Englishman or Scotchman? If not, I do not see why the qualifications for a dispensing chemist should be lower on the west side of the St. George's Channel than on the east.

One of the arguments invariably put forward by the agricultural section in this country is that the low price of wheat is responsible for, or, at any rate, commonly attended by, general depression in trade, and consequently bad times for the working classes. At the present moment there is a boom in wheat, and prices are higher than they have been for many a long day, with the result that the bakers have seized such a favourable opportunity to advance the price of bread. But the question to which I should like to receive a satisfactory reply is, why should the baker be permitted to take advantage of the rise without being compelled to reduce his prices on a fall? The price of wheat has been abnormally low for a long time until just now, but the price charged for the loaf has practically never varied for the benefit of the poor. I am utterly opposed to State interference with the methods of private trading, but when the "staff of life" is in question, I do not think that the fraternity of bakers should be permitted to have everything entirely their own way.

A Scottish life office in London, in a circular describing the business it transacts in connection with reversions, writes:—

> It may be useful for you to know that we are ready to consider proposals for insurances against issue.

Doubtless many will find it useful. But how is it done?

A little matter for the head officials of the South-Western Railway. There is a gang of platelayers who work chiefly in Honiton Tunnel. They used to receive one shilling per week more than their neighbours working in the open air. Recently, the latter have had a rise of one shilling, but for some reason it has not been granted to the Honiton Tunnel men. Many months ago they sent in an application through the proper channel, backed by their inspector, but, having received no answer, they conclude that it has never got as far as headquarters. Has it?

We often talk about "buying a man at our price and selling him at his own," but I doubt very much, if it came to a question of fixing an actual sum, whether we should be "in it" with that interesting tradesman—the brigand—who, "by strict attention to business," appears to flourish upon Turkish soil. The last victim to the lawlessness of that portion of Europe is Captain Marriott, of the Norfolk Regiment, who was annexed by these enterprising gentlemen whilst on a shooting expedition in the vilayet of Aidin. But, however gratifying it may have been to this officer to learn that he was actually considered worth £15,000, it must be much more satisfactory to him to find that his market value has already gone down one-third, and I should say that, sinking all ideas of vanity, he would be only too glad if his captors announced that "no reasonable offer would be refused."

The English in British Guiana do not seem satisfied with almost dragging us into war with the United States to defend certain outlying districts that they insist belong to the Colony, but which, Sir Edward Clarke says, do not. At present these wily Colonials have announced that, unless we come to their aid, their sugar industry will have to be abandoned. The aid that they suggest is that we should all agree to pay them 3d. per pound for their sugar, although it can be bought elsewhere at 2d. per pound. Under these circumstances, they will have to give up the growing of sugar cane. As a matter of fact, there are very few English in British Guiana, and, as the place is situated in the tropics, the work is done by coolies. Sanguine indeed must the few hundred sugar planters be if they suppose that any one is likely over here to pay a tax on sugar, in order that these few hundred may make money by employing coolies to till the sugar cane for them.

In his interesting account of the lines on which Mr. Bright prepared his speeches, Mr. Chamberlain might have added that he wrote out and read a great portion of them. In his best days he used to stand, when delivering them, with a large number of pages of paper in his hand, and he put by his side each page when he had exhausted it, making no sort of concealment. I remember once talking to him in the House of Commons smoking-room about "notes" a little before he delivered one of his most admired speeches. He had his "notes" before him, and, as an illustration of his mode, he handed them to me. There were passages fully written out, which I afterwards heard him read verbatim. A man, he said, has no right to make a speech in the House of Commons without careful preparation.

Mr. Disraeli, who, like Mr. Bright, could make debating speeches without notes, used generally to learn by heart the speeches that he delivered at public meetings. He would have down the gentleman who habitually reported them to Hughenden and make the speech to him, which the reporter took down in shorthand. When delivered, the reporter had the speech before him, and he used to say that Mr. Disraeli hardly altered in the delivery a single word. Lord Randolph Churchill also had this gift of memory. He knew a speech by heart by writing it, nor did he require to go over it after writing it, so sure was he of his memory. Talking once with him about this gift, he read to me an article in the Times, then handed it to me, and repeated it almost without a single fault. The late Lord Derby used to read all his speeches. Not only did he write them, but he had them printed before delivering them, and copies were almost invariably sent beforehand to the Reporters' Gallery. I once saw one of these printed documents. It struck me that Lord Derby had a very curious idea of what was likely to produce laughter, for after phrases which certainly did not seem calculated to make any one laugh, he had interpolated the word "laughter." The late Lord Leighton used to learn by heart his orations at the Royal Academy dinners. He used to say that he could see the manuscript before him, and that, as he spoke, he in his mind's eye turned over the pages.

WINTER SEASON, 1896.—How can last year's Sealskin Jacket be made to do duty as a fashionable garment for the present season? Take it to the International Fur Store, either 163 or 198, Regent-street, where special attention is given to remodelling these most useful garments. Perfect fit, great attention, and moderate charges may be relied upon. The only addresses of the International Fur Store (Jay's, Ltd.) are 163 and 198, Regent-street, London, W.

CARRIAGES INSURED AGAINST ACCIDENTAL DAMAGE, whether caused by collision, falling, kicking, or bolting of horses, or being run into by other vehicles. Prospectuses post free.—CARRIAGE INSURANCE COMPANY, LIMITED, 17, Pall Mall East, S.W.

Speaking last week to his brother Scots at Stirling, Sir H. Campbell-Bannerman denied that the selection of Lord Rosebery as Premier was due to any exercise of Court influence. How, then, was it that the Queen did not consult Mr. Gladstone as to his successor according to usage, and how was it that she did send for Lord Rosebery, who was not even the Liberal Leader in the House of Lords? The Conservative newspapers urged that he was the most fitting man to succeed Mr. Gladstone as Liberal Premier, but obviously the most fitting man in their estimate was the man least likely to allow the Liberal Party to fall into Radical hands. Are we, therefore, to understand that the Queen acted on this advice, and that it was in no way conveyed to her that some of Mr. Gladstone's late colleagues wished that his lordship should be sent for to the Palace? The world, it used to be thought, rested on a tortoise, but it was vainly asked on what the tortoise rested. Who was the tortoise on which Lord Rosebery's selection rested?

Sir Henry goes on to explain that a Leader of the Liberal Party is not chosen by the Party, and to prove this he instances the case of Lord Hartington, who, he says, on Mr. Gladstone announcing his retirement from public affairs, was only elected Leader of the Party in the Commons. But he forgets that Lord Hartington, by this election, became the Leader of the Party. When the Tory Government was placed in a minority, the outgoing Premier advised the Queen to send for Lord Hartington, because he was the Liberal Leader, and entrust him with the formation of a Liberal Ministry. This she did. Lord Hartington, after some negotiations advised her to send for Mr. Gladstone. His personality was so overwhelming, and the desire of every Liberal that he should resume the Leadership so strong, that he undertook the task of forming an Administration. But the Queen fully recognised that he could not be asked to do this, before the offer had been made to Lord Hartington, as Leader of his Party, because he was its Leader in the Commons.

When history comes to be written—if ever truly—it will become clear that Lord Hartington's leadership was an attempt by the Whigs to oust Mr. Gladstone, and that it failed because the latter was supported by the Radicals. Writing of this episode, Archbishop Magee says:—

"Gladstone has helped himself back into the running for the Premiership; but he has done so by more than ever committing himself to the Radical programme, and so disorganising the Liberals, whose Whig section is still powerful, and still distrusts him.

According to the St. James's Gazette—an evening newspaper which I am in the habit of reading, because it not only gives me a good epitome of the day's news, but expounds the Tory and the Jingo view on politics, often with considerable ability and always with frankness—Mr. Gladstone declines to be drawn on General Gordon, "the man whom he deliberately sacrificed and disgracefully abandoned," for the same reason that Bill Sikes would have preferred to keep silence on certain transactions in his life. Now, there is a good deal to admire, and a good deal to regret in the career of General Gordon. But, in any case, Mr. Gladstone neither abandoned him nor sacrificed him. Gordon was sent to Khartoum to evacuate the Soudan. Instead of doing this, he declared war proprio motu, and shut himself up with all the Egyptian troops that he could get hold of in Khartoum. Mr. Gladstone, being Prime Minister, gave Lord Wolseley a free hand, and put at his disposal the force that he deemed necessary to bring back from Khartoum Gordon and his followers.

A correspondent writes:—

May we not expect next year to read something like the following in the Jingo newspapers:—

"After yesterday, an invitation to lecture at the Imperial Institute will be regarded as an insult by every self-respecting Englishman. A Mr. Draper had been invited to deliver a lecture there upon the Geology of China. It would seem that this Draper had been residing in a town on the coast of China. A band of British pirates had attacked it, but, after killing many of the natives, they had been captured by the Chinese Police and handed over to the British authorities, by whom they were condemned to a term of imprisonment. Mr. Draper, who had been long engaged in business in this Chinese town, had joined with its inhabitants in resisting these miscreants.

"This fact is enough to brand the lecturer as a traitor to the English name, for it would appear that many of our most honoured noblemen and financiers advanced money to purchase the piratic vessel, and were to share in the booty that it was hoped would accrue from the venture. The audience, consisting as it did of the élite of Society, greeted Mr. Draper with a storm of indignation. They shouted 'traitor' and 'renegade' at the top of their voices. The lecturer was unable, notwithstanding the efforts of the chairman, to obtain a hearing. A Mr. Hart said that he wanted to know what sort of a geological formation was a person who took up arms against his countrymen. A Mr. Rogers observed that he had not the pleasure to know such a cur and a boaster as the lecturer. This caused violent scenes, and the chairman declared the meeting at an end. Cheers were then raised for the British Empire and the captain of the pirate craft, and the Union Jack was waved, and the proceedings concluded. We learn without surprise that some of our cosmopolitan contemporaries discern no impropriety in the presence of a renegade Englishman on the platform of the Imperial Institute. The 'Little Englander' may be the right man in the right place, when he appears before some meeting of Radicals and other such vulgarians, but if he dares show his face again in an Institute under Royal patronage and where society delights to congregate to enjoy the amusements of a music-hall, he must understand that he will do it at his peril. The shouts that drowned the voice of the renegade Draper, and the abuse that was launched against him by the patriots Hart and Rogers, are signs of good omen. They show that, however the commonalty may be led astray by false guides, the heart of Society beats true.

"We understand that next week there is to be an entertainment at the Institute, at which Miss Lottie —— will appear in her inimitable song and red petticoats. Mlles. Vesta, Violet, Peggy, and Polly will dance an Imperial Institute version of the cancan, several members of the Primrose League will perform on the banjo, the mandolin, and the Jew's harp, and the Poet Laureate will recite his inspiriting and patriotic 'Jameson's Ride.' Fellows on this unique occasion will not be admitted free, and will only be allowed to introduce a friend on payment of one guinea. Entrance by the side door only."

Some calculator added up the number of Dervishes who had, according to the newspapers, been killed during our Suakim military operations. I forget what the amount was, but I remember that it

THE LONDON HOSPITAL, E., APPEALS FOR SUBSCRIPTIONS. This Hospital for Men, Women, and Children, is the great General Hospital for the toiling poor of East London, & hel is sorely needed was considerably more than the entire inhabitants of the Soudan. So now, if I am to believe the telegrams from Rhodesia, more natives have been either slain or have surrendered than were supposed to have existed in the whole of Charterland, and yet it would seem there are plenty left to be killed or captured. I suspect that these "surrenders" have a good deal to do with the gang of promoters of the Chartered Company having found themselves obliged to underwrite a large issue of shares at a premium of 100 per cent. If they cannot catch all the Matabele and the Mashonas, the report that they have done so may serve to catch investors for these shares.

ALFRED B. PEARCE, 39, Ludgate Hill, London. China and Glass for Home and Colonial use. The oldest Glass House in London. Established 1760.

I asked last week what we should say to a Boer celebration of Majuba Hill. I am told that such a celebration takes place annually, and that "Majuba Day" is a general holiday throughout the Transvaal. "It causes," says my informant, "much friction with the English population." So I should imagine, and what my correspondent says on the subject tends to justify the remarks I made about the celebration of victories generally. The Boers have a right, of course, to celebrate the battle which won them their independence, but they would do better to bury the hatchet. That is the policy which I recommend to all disputants when they have had their fight and settled their differences.

A Liberal paper considers that it has convicted me of inconsequence because I said last week, when speaking to my constituents, that the people ought to choose their Leader, and, later on, that Sir William Harcourt was my Leader. How, it asks, can the people elect their Leader? What I contended for was, that the Leader of the Liberal Party in the House of Commons is, de facto, the Leader of the Liberal Party, because he has become Leader of the House of Commons by the selection of the Liberal Members of that House, acting in their capacity as Representatives of the Liberal electors. As Sir William Harcourt is, with the approval of every Liberal in the House of Commons, the Leader there, it logically follows that he is my Leader so long as I am a humble unit in the Party. How by this I lay claim to be a "Grand Elector" I fail to see. Far from it, I modestly accept a principle which secures to the Party that its Leader shall be in the House of Commons, and which, so far as is possible, puts the question of Leadership outside all personal rivalries.

The same journal complains that I, being on the Committee to inquire, inter alia, into the origin of the Matabele war, stated that "events had shown that I was right in putting down the Matabele war to Stock Exchange interests." I said this again and again in Parliament, before I was on the Committee. Why, then, should I unsay it now? I am open to alter my views if the contrary of this can be shown by inquiry; but until shown, I retain my opinion, just as Mr. Wyndham, who is on the Committee, retains, I presume, his opinion that the Transvaal raid was a laudable undertaking.

A leading Liberal writes:—

The Unionist Press almost every day tells us that Harcourt acted so unfairly towards Rosebery that he has lost the confidence of all Liberals, and that the Liberal Party will lose all claim to respect if it fails to induce Rosebery to lead it again. The latter suggestion I hardly think is likely to conduce to the end desired, for if—as I believe—we are not ready to accept a Leader selected by the Queen, we are still less likely to leave the selection to our political opponents. But I deny absolutely that Harcourt acted unfairly. You gave last week a perfectly true account of what led up to Rosebery's Premiership. Mr. Gladstone did offer to continue to lead the Party if an immediate dissolution was agreed to, and his colleagues refused to accept his further Leadership under this condition. A few of the Cabinet did refuse to serve under Harcourt, and this led to the majority expressing their personal preference for Rosebery. Thus the cabal of a minority succeeded, because the majority was faced with a split in the Cabinet, if it did not knock under to it. The Queen did not consult Mr. G. as to his successor as was usual under the circumstances, but sent for Rosebery. If Harcourt had declined to serve, the position of the Party would have been seriously damaged. He, therefore, consented to remain as Leader in the Commons; but the policy and the tactics of the Cabinet during the last Session of the late Parliament were not his, except in regard to the increase in the Death Dues, which he was only allowed to insert in his Budget in consequence of a threat of resignation. What the Cabinet that had rejected him as Leader decided, he did his best to carry into effect in the Commons. When this policy culminated in defeat in the Commons, and, subsequently, in the country, a letter of Rosebery's was circulated, in which the late Premier declined any further political connection with Harcourt. The position, therefore, was this: Rosebery was the titular Leader of the Party; Harcourt was the actual Leader of the Party in the Commons. If at any time the Party secured a Parliamentary majority, Rosebery as Leader would have been called upon to form a Government, and he had announced that in this case, his first step would be to cashier Harcourt. How, under these circumstances, could Harcourt consult with Rosebery in respect to the management of public business? What he did was all that he could do. He led the House of Commons with marked ability, and consulted with the leading gentlemen seated with him on the front Opposition bench, every one of whom is now on the best of terms with him.

I agree with you that we ought to rally to the doctrine that the Leader in the Commons is the Party Leader. To have a man recognised by the Party as Leader is the only way to get out of back stairs intrigues, and so long as they last, the Party will be without cohesion. I am convinced that the large majority of Liberals in the House are prepared to recognise Harcourt as Leader, whilst, from all that I hear, the Liberals outside the House are strongly for his Leadership. They never rightly understood why he was ousted from the Leadership on the resignation of Mr. Gladstone in favour of a peer, who had struck no roots in the country. The Party machine did its best to create a Rosebery boom, but failed, and the result of his Leadership to the Party is not exactly likely to convince men that his selection was a wise one. It was, in the opinion of most Liberals, tainted with intrigue, and the conclusion in the minds of most Liberals was, that it had been an attempt on the part of the Court and of the aristocratic wing of the Party to convert Liberal officialism into a colourless Whigism, differing in very little except in name from the political creed of our opponents.

SCRUTATOR.

WHAT IS THE EASTERN QUESTION?

WHAT is the Eastern Question? It is a struggle by Russia to have the key of the door to the Black Sea, either in her own hands, or in the hands of some Power over which she exercises paramount influence, and by us, who would have the key, nominally in the hands of all European Powers, but, practically, in our own, in order that Russian war vessels in the Black Sea may be confined to that sea, and that, in the event of our being at war with Russia, we may be able to undertake military operations against the Russian towns on that sea. Our object cannot be secured without giving the Sultan of Turkey a free hand over the Christian races in his dominions. Only by sacrificing the well-being of these races, and subjecting them to the most terrible misery we have, up to now, attained it. Wherever Russia sought to emancipate them, we stepped in to prevent their emancipation, and on the last occasion that we acted as a police force for the Sultan, we entered into an engagement to defend his Empire by force of arms if attacked by Russia, for which we received Cyprus.

Hunting Men can now Insure their Horses against Death and Disablement. Prospectuses post-free on application to the Imperial Live Stock Insurance Association, Ltd., 17, Pall Mall East, S.W.

At length public opinion amongst us, influenced by the accumulation of horrors that have been committed by the Sultan on the unhappy beings whom, in pursuit of our policy, we have handed over to his tender mercies, has been aroused, and has loudly declared that it will no longer allow our "Statesmen" to disgrace us by such a negation of humanity. Unless, however, the pressure is kept up on these "Statesmen" I fear that under some specious guise they will revert to their iniquitous policy.

What, then, should be our course? To see clearly what it ought to be, the facts with which we have to deal must first be realised. The Black Sea is a land-locked lake, communicating with the Mediterranean by a long narrow passage. The shores of this lake mainly belong to Turkey and to Russia. Consequently, the only way in which the Ports of Southern Russia can obtain an exit to the high seas is by way of the narrow exit. This exit is in the hands of the Turks, and, geographically, Russia is the only country that can weigh with sufficient force on the Turk to oblige him to govern with humanity the Christian races subject to him.

If, therefore, we wish cruelties that are a disgrace to the entire world to cease, we must give to Russia a free hand to act. The Cyprus Convention must be abrogated, and the inhabitants of Cyprus must be allowed to decide on their own future destinies; Turkey must be recognised as within the sphere of Russian influence alone; and, as a necessary consequence, the exit from the Black Sea must fall under Russian military influence. This would not prevent its use by other Powers in times of peace, whilst per contra the Russian Black Sea fleet would have a right to enter the Mediterranean, like our own. To this solution of the Eastern Question all the Continental Powers are agreed. Austria is the only one that would prefer the status quo, but the assent of Austria is to be bought by some rectification of her eastern frontier, and, even if this were not so, she is powerless to hinder anything which may meet with the approval of Russia, France, and Germany. This approval is due in part to the conviction that the solution is the only natural one, and in part to the objection that the Continental Powers entertain to the habit which we have developed of treating the entire Mediterranean as though it belonged to us. I have never heard any ground alleged to show that the solution would in any way harm us. The only reason for our opposition is that it has long been our traditional policy to hinder any approach on the part of Russia to the Mediterranean, and that every country is inclined to adhere to its traditional policy without weighing its merits and demerits.

When the position of things on the Black Sea is thus regulated, it will be necessary for us to consent to a European regulation of our position in Egypt. My objections to our occupation of Egypt are twofold. 1. We are there in defiance of our pledges to Europe that the occupation would only be temporary, and this brings our good name into discredit, for the grounds that we allege for remaining there may be equally alleged at any time in the next hundred years. 2. This occupation, far from being an advantage to us, is a serious danger. The shortest road to our Asiatic dominions is viâ the Mediterranean. Were it not for this, we should have no more concern with that sea than with the Baltic. At the western exit we have the fortress of Gibraltar. At the eastern exit we have solidly established ourselves at Aden, for the Red Sea is practically a prolongation of the Suez Canal. In the event of a great maritime war, we therefore could close the eastern exit to the ships of the enemy, and, if we are masters of the high seas, we could also, thanks to our possession of Gibraltar, close the western exit to the enemies' ships, sending all our commerce to the East by the alternative route of the Cape. We might or we might not endeavour to hold the Mediterranean. I believe that the opinion of tacticians is that we should do well not to attempt to do so. But whether we do, or whether we do not, it is evident that a small British force occupying Egypt would be a source of weakness rather than of strength to us. It would compromise the question whether it would be tactically wise to hold the Mediterranean, and, if we did hold it, Egypt would be defended by our Navy, and would not depend upon this small army, which could not well be increased because we should want our troops elsewhere. Therefore, I entirely agree with Mr. Courtney. that we should do well to come to some arrangement with Europe in respect to Egypt.

The only reply, so far as ever I can see, to men like Mr. Courtney, who would have us put some limit to the enormous responsibilities that we are every year augmenting, is vague abuse. They are dubbed "Little Englanders," as though the British Empire were so little that to rest satisfied with it is mean and contemptible, They are called foolish, ignorant, and traitors to the honour and glory of the country to which they belong. And yet the views which they uphold are those on which the Liberal Party acted for many years: they were entertained by the idiot Bright, the imbecile Cobden, and the traitor Gladstone. Only a very short time ago, they were articles of faith in the creed of every Liberal in the country. I have no more doubt that they will once more become popular than I have of my own existence. Every country has its fits of Jingoism. The Athenians had such a fit when they rushed into the Sicilian expedition that ruined them. The French had an attack of it when they shouted à Berlin, and lost Alsace and Lorraine. These fits fortunately are eventually temporary in their nature. I am inclined, indeed, to think that the nation is beginning to recover from the very sharp attack of this malady, from which it has been suffering. The military gentlemen on the war path, the financiers who hope to profit by every annexation, the fools who rejoice in their folly and call on the world in arms to come on in order that we may have an opportunity to show the metal of which we are made, still beat the big drum; but their appeals and their outcry are losing their effect. Vainly the Press Jingo wields the drum-sticks, and curses all who dare to differ from him. A more silly, swaggering, blustering creature than this Press drummer never existed. His ignorance in all matters appertaining to our foreign relations is positively phenomenal, and this is only equalled by his conceit in himself. One day he throws down the gauntlet to America, another day to France, another day to Germany, and another day to all three. When he is not swaggering he is cringing. If he finds that a foreign country is not frightened by his blatant abuse, he humbly turns to the Power that he has reviled on the previous day, and proposes to it our alliance. When the annexation of some territory is announced he is happy, although the territory may be a worthless acquisition, and he explains that, in laying hands on it, we have been actuated by no sordid greed, but by an anxious wish to better the lot of its inhabitants, for the more selfish is the aim, the more is it concealed under a plea of universal philanthropy. Now he is thirsting for some tropical jungle in Africa where white men cannot live; now for a Pacific island, the savage natives of which can only exist by eating each other; now for some region of eternal snows in Asia. Nothing satisfies his strange earth hunger; one annexation is made a plea for a further one. But if any other country follows our example, he denounces it, as though it had committed a crime towards humanity. The Press Jingo always reminds me of a magpie. There is the same irrational and pernicious greed, and the same solemn air of being the wisest of God's creatures.

HEWETSONS, TOTTENHAM COURT-ROAD, LONDON, send their Illustrated Catalogue POST FREE, and it is acknowledged to be the best Furnishing Guide extant.

TYPEWRITERS AND CYCLES FOR SALE OR HIRE. Great bargains in Standard Machines.—N. TAYLOR, Manager, 74, Chancery-lane, London. Established 1884.

This sort of gassy vaunting fool has always existed in every nation and in every time. In England, the good sense of the nation has usually kept him down, but since the Liberal party was tricked into adopting the foreign policy of its opponents, he has raved without restraint. If we are to accept him as our guide, philosopher, and friend, and to act as he would have us, some great disaster is before us. This is why I have so persistently protested against the capture of the Liberal Party by the Jingoes, and this is why I would have Liberals return to the old faith, of which Mr. Gladstone was the most honoured exponent. If we rest satisfied with what we have got, if we cease to meddle in matters that do not concern us, if we hold to our plighted word instead of glorying in violating it, we may rest assured that no foreign country will seek a quarrel with us. At the bottom of these endeavours to embroil us with all foreign nations, and to treat the world as though it were our oyster, is the hope that the country will be diverted from all internal reforms, and that the advancing wave of Democracy will be arrested. The device is old and stale, but unfortunately it too often succeeds. There is nothing against which Radicals should be more on their guard than against the Jingo red herring.

This red herring has always been a potent arm of defence in the hands of the classes. Again and again, when the Radical pack has been in full cry, and the quarry has been almost within their jaws, they have allowed themselves to be drawn aside by a herring. When, however, their opponents do not provide them with one, there is considerable truth in the sneer of Sir Michael Hicks-Beach, that they are "like a pack of young hounds straying over a great woodland, each hunting his own cub." It would be well, indeed, if all Tory cubs were run down and destroyed, but it is certain that this can only happen if they are dealt with one by one, and if the House of Lords, which is the drain in which they take refuge when pursued, is well and securely stopped.

THE BROAD ARROW AND THE ARMY.

In last week's TRUTH I charged the Broad Arrow with a gross offence against the lex non scripta of journalism, as well as against the code of honour prevailing among gentlemen in all professions. The allegations were given in sufficient detail to enable the facts to be at once identified by those familiar with the case. The Broad Arrow in its last issue answers the indictment with the following paragraph:—

> TRUTH's two columns of abuse of The Broad Arrow may be answered in half-a-dozen words. TRUTH's story is an absolute fabrication.

To this off-handed dismissal of the subject the rejoinder may be almost equally brief. The story thus declared to be an absolute fabrication rests on the statements of three officers holding Her Majesty's commission. The army and the public have, therefore, to choose between the veracity of these officers and the assertion of the Broad Arrow that they have fabricated, and, it might be added, circulated the story. If the editor and proprietor of the Broad Arrow prefers to leave the matter in this position, I have no objection.

I would only add to this that in the following article the reader may see for himself on what slender grounds the editor of the Broad Arrow is capable of pronouncing a statement to be a "fabrication," and of "giving the lie direct" to those whose assertions are not to his taste.

THE OTHER CAVALRY SCANDAL.

On July 2 some particulars were given in TRUTH of a story in circulation in Service circles in India respecting the bullying of a subaltern in the 20th Hussars, then stationed at Mhow. The story was told apropos of the 4th Hussars scandal, and as evidence of the need for some exhaustive inquiry by the War Office into the subject of bullying in Cavalry regiments. Briefly, it was that a subaltern, a few days after joining the 20th BRANDAUER'S CIRCULAR-POINTED PENS. Neither scratch nor spurt. Glide over the roughest paper with the ease of a soft lead pencil. Assorted sample box, 7 stamps, from the Works, Birmingham.

Every requirement for Furnishing tastefully at least expense is amply illustrated in the Galleries and Catalogues of HAMPTON & SONS, Furnishers & Decorators, Pall Mall East, S.W.

Hussars, was taken by a party of his brother officers to the riding school, forcibly put on a horse barebacked, and made to gallop round the school, while his tormentors laid their whips across him until he was so seriously injured that he subsequently had to go on the sick list, notwithstanding threats of the unpleasant consequences that would follow if he disclosed what had happened to him. In mentioning this story I did not take upon myself the responsibility of guaranteeing its accuracy in all particulars; but I stated that it was current in India and so far believed that an officer of another regiment, stationed near the 20th, had communicated it to an officer in London, who had in turn repeated it to me, as a matter calling for explanation or denial from the regiment if untrue, and for notice from the War Office if substantially accurate.

The publication of this statement in TRUTH very speedily brought from India further evidence, which seemed to show clearly that substantially the story was true. Nor did I for some time receive anything in the shape of an authoritative contradiction. In the last week in August, however, the following letter reached me. I reproduce it verbatim in order to explain the action which I have taken in regard to it:—

Mhow, C. I.,
1 Aug '96.

SIR,—I have just seen your paragraph headed more Cavalry rufianism in which you make a vain attempt to mix my Regt up.

I thought you were more a man of the world than to allow yourself to be caught by the tittle tattle that goes about. You know for certain it is third hand and for all you know it might be as it has turned out to be a grossly fabricated story which does not in the very least concern you. I hope you will inform your informant that for the future he better mind his own business and not be made such an ass of for the future. I take the matter up as the subaltern in question is in my squadron and the makings of a very smart Cavalry soldier. Any treatment he has had from the hands of his brother subalterns has only tended to improve him if possible and he is perfectly capable of taking care of himself. If busy bodies only leave the subalterns of the XX Hussars alone they are quite capable of looking after themselves and are now as happy a crew as could be found in any Regiment.

Yrs faithfully
H. BEAUCHAMP Major
XX Hussars.

From the language, spelling, and general literary style of the above letter, I could hardly doubt that it was a hoax, designed to throw discredit upon Major Beauchamp and the 20th Hussars. Before dealing with it, therefore, in TRUTH, I wrote to Major Beauchamp, requesting him to let me know whether he had really addressed such a letter to me. I have now received his answer. He says that the letter is genuine, and explains the delay in replying by his having been away on leave. The above document, therefore, must be now taken as the official reply of the 20th Hussars to the ugly story which was told in TRUTH of July 2.

As regards the form of the letter, I do not desire to say much. A man may be a good officer and a brave soldier, and yet not be much of a hand with his pen; although I am bound to say that, judging from my own extensive experience of the British Army, soldiers of the present day, even down to the last recruit enlisted from the Board School population, write as a rule as good letters as men in any other walk in life. But the substance of Major Beauchamp's letter is of more importance than the form, and the only remark I will make upon his language and literary style is that, in view of what follows, they are not without significance as evidence of the "tone" prevailing in this regiment. The Major, it will be seen, after a few preliminary sarcasms which are unworthy of notice, tells me that the story about the treatment of a subaltern in his regiment is "grossly fabricated." Having done so, he proceeds almost in the next sentence to talk about "the subaltern in question" in a way which clearly shows that the gross fabrication has, at any rate, enough foundation to enable him at once to identify the victim of the alleged outrage. In the next sentence we get a little farther, for we find that "the subaltern in question" has been subjected to "treatment" of some kind "from the hands of his brother subalterns," that this treatment has "tended to improve him if possible," and that he is now "perfectly capable of taking care of himself." While, therefore, characterising the story as "grossly fabricated," Major Beauchamp clearly shows that there was foundation for it, and absolutely refrains from any attempt to explain what the foundation for the story was, or how much of the statement in TRUTH he really intends to deny. I think every reader will agree that such a disclaimer is most unconvincing and unsatisfactory, and that if this is all that can be offered in the way of denial or explanation by the 20th Hussars, the regiment would have done better to keep silence.

It is not worth while to discuss this singular document further, because since the first reference to this case I have obtained evidence which places the matter on a totally different footing from that on which it was left in TRUTH of July 2. It was there given, as Major Beauchamp observes, at third hand. I have now testimony of a direct character, of the value of which I am satisfied; and I have no hesitation in saying that the statement as to the bullying of this subaltern in the 20th Hussars in TRUTH of July 2 was, in all material respects, true. In two particulars only does it require correction, namely, that the incident did not take place in India or at the time alleged, but at Colchester just before the regiment went abroad. This correction has obviously no bearing upon the gravity of the facts, and in no way alters the effect of the story. I should also state that from the evidence which I now have it would appear that, when they took their victim to the riding-school, the officers concerned had sufficient regard for themselves to bolt the door. What, therefore, actually occurred inside can only be known by the evidence of their victim and themselves. But this much is certain: that the luckless subaltern was ridden round the school until he got a bad fall, and was picked up insensible, and that he was on the sick-list for some weeks afterwards with a bad knee. I have also good reason to believe that the story came to the ears of Lord Beaumont, then commanding the regiment, and that he at once had the offenders before him, and delivered to them a reprimand and a warning, which had the effect of keeping them quiet for the rest of the time that he remained with the regiment. Unfortunately, that was only a few weeks. If I am in any way misinformed as to this last point, I trust that Lord Beaumont will not hesitate to tell me so, for his evidence, either one way or the other, has now an important bearing upon the story. Whatever Lord Beaumont may or may not have done, however, I assert that the foregoing is the truth about the "treatment" which Major Beauchamp alludes to as having been received by this young officer from his comrades of the 20th Hussars, and these are the exact particulars, so far as they can be known by others than the parties immediately concerned, of what the Major describes as "a grossly fabricated" story.

MORTLOCK'S China and Glass Business, Oxford-st., has entered its 150th year, being founded by John Mortlock in 1746. It is carried on by John George Mortlock, the great-great-grandson of the founder, who solicits patronage and recommendation.

No aperient water can boast of such sure and beneficial purgative efficacy as the "Franz Josef." It was known on the Continent twenty years ago, and is now sold everywhere.

So much for the statements which appeared in TRUTH of July 2. But this particular incident in the riding school at Colchester is merely one in a long series. Since the 20th have been in India the same sort of thing has gone on, and, from such evidence as is forthcoming, it would seem that the regiment has a record for this period unparalleled in the annals of the Army. In view of what I have now learned, it is easy to understand how stories to the detriment of the 20th have reached other regiments, nor is it to be wondered at if, among so many incidents of a similar character, some confusion of dates and places should have arisen. The persecution of the unfortunate subaltern who figures in the Colchester riding-school affair appears to have been kept up systematically from the time Lord Beaumont left the regiment, and without the faintest shadow of justification. The favourite form of pastime was that of dragging him from bed in the middle of the night and knocking his property about. I am told that he has more than once gone to the quarters of married officers in the garrison at Mhow either for protection, or to escape the ordeal of appearing in his own mess. One of the incidents which occurred at Mhow is fully on a par with the riding-school affair at Colchester. On this occasion the same subaltern was taken out of bed at night, made to put on a pair of drawers, and, thus habited, taken out and put on a horse without stirrups. A large bonfire had been lit in the compound, and over this the subaltern was made to jump, in the presence of an admiring crowd of natives, including all the syces of the regiment. It had doubtless been expected that he would get a fall, but he managed to stick on his horse, and being thus disappointed of their fun, his tormentors then took away the saddle and made him jump the bonfire bare-backed. This also he succeeded in doing without accident, the truth being, as I am informed on very good authority, that the young man is an excellent rider, and not only has in him, as Major Beauchamp puts it, "the makings of a very smart cavalry soldier," but is a much better rider and officer than the majority of his amiable comrades. There is no doubt that this long course of persecution, as in the case of Mr. Hodge and Mr. Bruce, was carried out with the express intention of driving the victim out of the regiment, and I am told that on various occasions when he was ill-treated he was told that he had better resign. On one occasion he actually took steps to obtain a transfer, notwithstanding which the bullying still continued.

The humility and degradation thus imposed upon a brother officer in the presence of natives will strike all Army men who know India as a far worse piece of ruffianism than the performance in the riding-school at Colchester; but even this can be capped from the recent history of the 20th Hussars. One night, after mess, a young officer who had only just joined was actually made to don the clothes of one of the native waiters, turban included. He was then made to go behind the scenes, and bring out drinks to his brother officers as they reclined in their chairs. Not satisfied with this, his "comrades" then made him go to the hut of one of his own native servants, knock at the door, and, when the native opened it, salaam his own servant. This ceremony can only have been devised, as every Anglo-Indian will admit, for the purpose of subjecting the victim to the very lowest degradation that ingenuity could devise. The men who could expose one of their brother officers to such humiliation in the eyes of all the native servants and hangers-on of the regiment must be utterly devoid of all sense of what is due to their own profession and to the honour of their countrymen in India. The proceeding is, in fact, an insult to the whole Army, and stamps the men who could perpetrate it as utterly unfit to hold the Queen's Commission.

With regard to the ill-treatment of the particular subaltern who figured in the Colchester affair, I am told that the responsibility is in no way confined to the junior officers of the regiment. In proof of this, the victim once made a complaint to a senior officer of the regiment, who pretended to listen to him, and then actually went and gave him away behind his back, with the result that on the very same night he received a further castigation. This is only what might be expected, for it stands to reason that such outrageous blackguardism as that described above could not possibly have gone on, as it did for many months, without the knowledge of some at least of the senior officers, more especially if it be true that a severe warning had been given to these subalterns by Lord Beaumont before he left the regiment. Let there be no attempt, then, in this case, on the part of the War Office, to suggest, as in the cases of Messrs. Hodge and Bruce, that the victim of this persecution received all the protection and support which he had a right to expect from the senior officers of the regiment.

It is, I hope, unnecessary for me to say that in publishing these facts I have no intention of suggesting that they represent a state of things prevailing to any considerable extent in the Army. On the contrary, I am confident that nine out of ten, or ninety-nine out of a hundred British officers who read these statements will agree with me that the men who could perpetrate such blackguardly brutality are a disgrace to the Service, and that for the sake of the whole Army such practices require to be exposed, punished, and suppressed. I would again repeat that it was in consequence of the indignation and disgust which the story of the riding-school incident created in other regiments that the attention of TRUTH was originally called by an Army man to the doings of the 20th Hussars. I am told that for some time past the 20th have enjoyed an unenviable reputation both in Service and civilian circles, and a witness, to whom I am indebted for much interesting evidence, remarks that nothing could be more significant than the general feeling which prevailed in the garrison at Colchester towards the officers of the 20th, as compared with the popularity of other cavalry regiments which have recently been stationed at the same place. The truth seems to be that in some few cavalry regiments, owing probably to the peculiar circumstances under which commissions in the cavalry are obtained, a few unmannerly bullies, or wealthy and ill-bred snobs, get the upper hand, and set the tone to the whole regiment. A strong C.O. will keep such gentry in check and redress the evil; but a man who either does not see what is going on, or thinks more of his own popularity than the interests of his juniors and the reputation of the regiment, lets things take their course. Then follow such results as the horsetroughing of Mr. Hodge, the riding-school affair at Colchester, or, perhaps, the most detestable incident of all, the salaaming of a native servant by an officer of the 20th Hussars at Mhow.

SOLUTION OF TURKISH PROBLEM.—If the authorities at Constantinople would only supply themselves with that eminently soothing and strengthening liqueur, GRANT'S MORELLA CHERRY BRANDY, their difficulties would vanish, placidity of temper and the power of good government would follow as surely as the dawn succeeds the night. Sold everywhere.

It seems incumbent on me, before leaving this subject for the present, to make some reference to an article devoted to the TRUTH allegations about the 20th Hussars which appeared on the 29th ult. in the Broad Arrow—the journal whose title to speak as an organ of the Service I dealt with last week. I should have referred to it sooner, but it was not brought to my notice until the greater part of the present article was in type. The editor of the Broad Arrow is good enough to inform his readers, almost in the words of Major Beauchamp, that the story originally told in TRUTH "is a downright fabrication, a wicked falsehood." He also has the assurance to represent himself as having hoped that I "should condescend to investigate the veracity of my information" and offer a full apology, and as having been disappointed in this hope, although he has "allowed ample time for its fulfilment." His consideration in thus allowing me time to fulfil the duty which he has allotted to me has been entirely misplaced, for, as I said some time ago, there is no probability that I shall ever be guided by his views or hopes in editing TRUTH, and it is a pity that he did not say what he has to say about the 20th Hussars when I invited him to do so many weeks back. The reader will judge, from what has been already said, that I have lost no time in "investigating the veracity" of everything that has reached me in relation to this matter, and in point of fact I have been continually in communication with various witnesses in India from the middle of July until last week. The result is now seen. I fear that the result will lead to some further disappointment in the office of the Broad Arrow, and that the expected apology from me will now appear more remote than ever; but this is hardly a matter about which anybody outside the office of the Broad Arrow will seriously trouble himself.

The Broad Arrow professes to have made "full inquiries" into the story told in TRUTH of July 2. It would seem that its ideas on the subject of a "full inquiry" appear to be on a par with those prevailing at the War Office, which it so ably represents. Before he has read the result of this precious inquiry very far, the reader learns that the source of the Broad Arrow's knowledge is an "informant who inhabits a bungalow adjacent to that occupied by the alleged victim," and who "had never heard anything about the matter until he read it in TRUTH." This informant apparently has been conducting the Broad Arrow's "full inquiries," and he reports the following incident as the possible foundation of the riding-school affair which he had read about in TRUTH:—

> About the end of March last some of the subalterns of the XXth repaired to a bungalow inhabited by four of their number, one of whom was the "last-joined subaltern." The time was after mess, and we are prepared to admit that in the intervals between songs, &c., the "last-joined subaltern" was induced to distinguish himself. It was in fact suggested that he should ride his pony over two low mud walls in the compound. The youthful warrior readily assented, and indeed, instead of being "flayed" by his brother officers, we have only too good reason to believe that he fleeced them of several sovereigns in consequence of his success. Arrayed in his pyjamas, jack-boots, a blazer, jersey, &c., the "last-joined subaltern" mounted his pony, cleared the walls in fine style, and returned to finish the evening, after having raised himself considerably in the already favourable opinion of his brother subalterns by his pluck and good horsemanship. In short, he seriously accepted a challenge only given in joke, won his money, and has been happy ever after.

It seems hardly necessary to discuss this anecdote seriously in view of the full information of the riding-school story and the other incidents from the recent history of the 20th Hussars which I have recorded above. The Broad Arrow's veracious informant is, from the fact of his occupying the next bungalow, and from his intimate knowledge of the facts, presumably an officer of this gallant regiment, and this presumption is strengthened by the similarity of the language used in describing "the last-joined subaltern" to that used by Major Beauchamp in the letter printed at the beginning of this article. Very possibly the incident which this witness describes actually took place, though I take the liberty of doubting whether, even then, the description gives an accurate and unvarnished report of all the circumstances. But an incident that occurred at Mhow last March cannot have given rise to the allegations now made as to what took place in the riding-school at Colchester. The officers of the 20th, when they read the original story in TRUTH, must have well known that the circumstances alluded to had taken place in England and not in India. In putting forward the above statement, therefore, through the Broad Arrow, they are obviously taking advantage of the inaccuracy as to date and place in the story which first got about, and endeavouring to mislead the public by representing this story as an exaggerated and distorted version of a totally different incident. Very possibly they, or their Press representative, will now seek to represent the Broad Arrow narrative as the true explanation of the bonfire-jumping business at Mhow. But this again will not do, for the simple reason that the victim of the bonfire-jumping pleasantry was not in March last "the last-joined subaltern," but the same officer who had been ill-treated in the riding-school at Colchester, and on other occasions. I doubt whether he was even "the last-joined subaltern" at the time of the Colchester affair. The only "last-joined subaltern" who figures in the direct evidence which I now have is the youngster who was dressed in mess-waiter's clothes and made to salaam his own servant. Perhaps the Broad Arrow may be disposed to make its "full inquiries" a little fuller by ascertaining from its informant in the next bungalow to the last-joined subaltern what is the official 20th Hussars' version of the mess-waiter incident. It will be interesting to know; but whether any one outside the regiment will swallow information supplied from that quarter is a different matter.

SPA WINTER SEASON.—Balmy climate. Only 12 hrs. from Lond[illegible]. Cercle des Etrangers, with every Monte Carlo attraction, always open. Hotel tariff from 10fr. per diem. Address, Jules Crelay, Sec.

The only significance of the ignominious attempt that has been made to dispose of the riding-school story lies in the evidence it affords that the officers of the 20th are prepared to stick at no subterfuge or misrepresentation to escape from the ugly charges made against them. For this I am prepared. My witnesses on the spot tell me that point-blank denial is the answer which has been given locally to the original TRUTH article, and they add, what I can readily believe, that since that article reached India, a complete change has come over the manners and customs of the regiment, the bullying and other cognate forms of blackguardism have disappeared like magic, and that the subaltern who had previously been the butt of all his brother officers, has suddenly found himself the most popular individual in the regiment. This may account for the flattering allusions to the "last-joined subaltern" in the Broad Arrow article, and to the "subaltern in question" in Major Beauchamp's letter to me. One has seen this sort of thing among schoolboys, when an unpopular individual who has been persecuted to the point at which the intervention of superior authority is threatened, suddenly finds himself the recipient of the most flattering attentions from his late tormentors. Everybody knows how much all this is worth.

The point, then, is, not what is the present state of things in the 20th Hussars, but what it has been any time since the regiment was at Colchester. This is not a matter which can be settled to the satisfaction of the public by a newspaper controversy. In view of the grave allegations now made against the conduct of numerous officers in the service of the Queen—and made upon direct, trustworthy, and authoritative evidence—it becomes the imperative duty of "the Secretary of State and his military advisers" to intervene in the matter. A full and exhaustive inquiry ought to be ordered, into all that has gone on in the 20th Hussars for the last year or two—an inquiry not conducted by inviting the officers implicated to furnish explanations, and then putting forth these explanations with the War Office imprimatur as established and unanswerable facts—but an inquiry in a judicial form, at which all the evidence available will be heard and properly tested on both sides, and at which some officer shall preside who can be trusted to look into the case from an independent standpoint, and with a desire, not to whitewash an ugly scandal, but to arrive at the whole truth, and nothing but the truth. Three months ago I should have said that Lord Wolseley was the man to insist upon thrashing the matter out in this way, and administering a lesson which would put a stop to Service blackguardism once and for all. If he understands his duty to the Army and to the country, he will take this course now. But after the lame and impotent conclusion arrived at in the case of the 4th Hussars scandals, the public may well feel a doubt as to whether there is any form of misconduct on the part of "officers and gentlemen" at which the War Office will draw the line.

NOTES FROM PARIS.

THE FRIENDLESS KAISER.

THE Emperor and Empress of Russia rusticated a good deal at Darmstadt. One of their rustic pleasures was to roast potatoes in embers in the pinewoods, and to gather and cook mushrooms. The species of mushroom was the cèpe, which one can now have à la Bordelaise in Paris restaurants. But I fancy the august couple cooked them in thick cream in a pie-dish after the Russian manner. Their Imperial Majesties must have annoyed the German Emperor by not returning home by way of Berlin. He had set his heart on having them at Potsdam. The Grand Duke of Hesse delights in bothering the Kaiser, now that he sees the hand of President Faure and Nicholas II. clasped above the Reich of 1871. The work of Prince Bismarck is falling to pieces, and Russia is regaining her old footing in the smaller States of the Fatherland.

Russian patronage from the accession of Catherine II. to the death of Alexander II. meant brilliant matrimonial settlements for the daughters of those German Princes who accepted it, and openings for their younger sons. Servitude for servitude, they liked the gilded and garlanded chains of St. Petersburg better than the undisguised iron of Berlin. In making Copenhagen his summer home, the late Czar suffered the old German ties to relax. But his son intends to pass his holidays with his wife at Seeheim, as his grandfather used to spend his at Jugenheim, which was farther from the Grand Ducal capital. Darmstadt has now a young and lively Court. The Grand Duke was never studious. He went to a Hessian University, Giessen, where he did pretty nearly what he liked. His father was indulgent to the degree of weakness, and would not suffer any of his children to be curbed by governor or governess. Any of them who had serious tastes might follow them; those who had not might go in for amusement. The girls were in a groove formed by their incomparable mother; the son was not. He is, without being clever, a pleasing, companionable person, light-hearted, still youthful in feeling, and good-natured, unless when he wants to tease. The teasing propensity has now an Imperial butt. The six children of the Princess Alice have been at heart with the Empress Frederick in her bitter trials. The Grand Duke is one of those who hold that the Emperor, before dismissing Bismarck, should have consulted every German Prince.

In all Germany the Kaiser has but two friends—the Grand Duke of Baden and the King of Saxony. But as they are old he may soon find himself friendless. The Courts of Bavaria and Würtemberg are sullen. German Princes have all at once become sensitive about their prerogatives. Guelph feeling is not dead in Hanover and Brunswick, and will be fomented. People there would rather have Guelph Courts than Kriegsdirektors. The Hesses, Oldenburgs, and Mecklenburg-Schwerin revert Russia-wards. M. Hanotaux has permeated his mind with the instructions of Richelieu and Mazarin to their agents at the Congress of Westphalia. These diplomats were to magnify Particularism, reduce the Empire to a mere title-giving shadow, help to frame an unworkable bund, and do their utmost for the possession by France of the left bank of the Rhine. They had thus all the German Princes save the Hapsburg Emperor with them. The Berlin Kaiser, while the great Eastern and Western Powers are closing round him, amuses himself by proving to the world his universal genius. He has found in the Yellow Terror, to which he gave pictorial expression, an excuse for making up to Nicholas and the plutocracy of all countries. But they think they can hold down the "perturbators of order" without him. If they encourage him to make war on Socialism, it is to leave him friendless in Germany. They think his message to President Kruger has alienated the snobocracy and other 'ocracies in England. The Netherlands will not hear of a German Prince as a suitor for their Queen, and rather favour the third son of the Crown Prince and Princess of Denmark—who are very much in the Russian sphere of influence. There is a Prussian Princess at Athens, but, as she embraced the Greek religion without asking the Kaiser's leave, they were not for some years on speaking terms, and there is still unpleasant coldness. M. Cambon has reported to his chief that the family photos sent from Potsdam to the Sultan are of no account in his eyes. Like all Turks, he is quick to understand financial advantages; and these Russia offers him. Sweden lives in terror of being dragged into hot water by an Imperial visit. The Seeland part of Denmark is now a citadel, and full of hostile feeling towards the Reich. Italy complains that the Emperor's visits and military requirements have ruined her. She has accepted her future Queen from the hands of the Czar Nicholas, who was, as he did not take her himself, in honour bound to find her a crown matrimonial. He slipped into the bridegroom's palm £80,000, and gave the bride a tiara and earrings, bought in Paris for £40,000.

One can hardly wonder at Prince Bismarck feeling exasperated. How reckless and ruthless he was in trying to undo the effects of the Treaty of Westphalia and to set Germany on an independent footing! He sees the edifice he hastily nailed together going to pieces. In 1851 Persigny was sent on a secret diplomatic mission to Berlin. The King of Prussia, whom the Nicholas of that day held in leading strings, asked the indiscreet friend of Louis Napoleon to dinner. His Majesty at table was seized with a sneezing fit. He tried to keep it down. "Sneeze away, sire!" cried Persigny. "France is no longer under Louis Philippe. The balance of power in Europe is restored. Yes, sire, you may now sneeze as much as you like, without having to ask the Czar's leave." May we live to see the Kaiser ask of both Nicholas II. and M. Faure la permission d'éternuer?

In the hurry of the Czar's visit I had not time to speak of the death of Mme. Delpeuch, wife of the Postmaster-General, and niece of the late M. Spuller. She died of a malady brought on by suddenly hearing of M. Spuller's death. He had been a most considerate and generous uncle to her and her sister. Mme. Delpeuch was unaffectedly good. Her head remained unturned on the high peak to which the play of political parties raised her husband. He is one of three brothers, all distinguished men. I live in the same house with their mother—the widow of a country doctor. My flat is, relatively to hers, large, and has the greater advantage of facing a park. She is attended by a femme de ménage, who comes in to cook and do housemaid's work. The old lady is worshipped by her sons, with whom she takes turns in dining three times a week. Each of them would like to have her living with him, but she is attached to her plain ways. However, she has some fine dresses, which she wears at their grand dinners. Every morning she goes, with her basket on arm, to the market. Her conversation is interesting, her amusements little feminine handicrafts and reading. The old lady has a choice library, and is never tired of the great authors. Would you find a woman like this in England? One might in Scotland. No nation in the world owes so much to her women as France. Mme. Delpeuch has no idea what a great woman she is, but her sons have, and feel what a debt they owe her.

Lady Henry Somerset wins the gratitude of the Armenian world as Notre Dame de Bon-Secours. She has just opened the door of Castle Garden, New York, for the four hundred Armenians whom she sent from Marseilles. They were refused admittance because they had not £10 a-piece to show. Lady Henry and her friend, Miss Willard, overcame the surly Cerberus who kept them in the ship. The former thought of appealing to the higher reason and heart of the American nation at a public meeting in England against the Cerberus. But her eloquent cablegram did the work. The hapless four hundred were thus released from the horrors of a crowded steerage, and free to join relatives settled in the States. Otherwise they must have been tossed back to Europe.

Lady Henry Somerset has distinct French traits of character. She would look simple in silks and satins and elegant in a cotton gown. Her instinct d'élégance is perceptible in her whole person. She has the decision of clear ideas, astonishing energy, and can, like the Gauloises of old, put her shoulder to the mud-embedded chariot wheel. In speaking of her work at Marseilles last September, I said she had a French great-grandmother. I now find that the Cocks family, of whom the late Earl Somers was the head, were originally Lecocq—a Gallic name truly. Lady Henry is very much her father's daughter. He, too, had marked French characteristics, was more brainy than muscular, and had esprit, ready tact, and lively and obliging manners. No picture dealer could take him in. He greatly added to the artistic wealth of Eastnor Castle. Each addition harmonised with treasures that had been accumulating since the great Chancellor Somers began to furnish Reigate Priory. He was a great admirer of Watts, who did portraits for him of Lady Henry and Adeline, Duchess of Bedford, when they were children.

In former times passengers to Gloucester by the Great Western Railway had to stop at Swindon long enough to lunch at the station. Lord Somers often went to and from Eastnor Castle and often tried to have meals at Swindon, but was forced to leave off trying. There were then no Spiers & Pond contractors. In one of his halts he was given a veal pie in a turret of crust as hard as any tower at Eastnor. He thought he had seen the pie before, and in vain endeavoured to cut into the pie-crust wall. A merry thought came into his head. The Earl had a quantity of gummed labels for curios in his pocket. He gummed one of them on the bottom of the pie and left. A fortnight later he returned, ordered the same lunch, and found the label on the bottom of the turret that was set before him.

The Queen of Portugal is sure to be used as an advertisement for the Pasteur Institute. She went the other day to that establishment for the sale of germs, toxins, vaccines, and what not. In handling the tubes of toxins she committed herself to the opinion that Dr. Roux's horse serum is a sovereign cure for diphtheria. It takes seven years of the hardest study in Paris before a medical student is qualified to speak on so grave a matter. The Queen of Portugal has attended clinical lectures and acquired much useful knowledge in doing so. But could her studies be anything but superficial? She is too well off for strenuous and long-sustained application; and then she has to discharge regal, maternal, and social duties, that take up much of her time. Some of the greatest medical authorities in France are not sure about the Roux serum. The Queen of Portugal must be as tall as her grandmother, the late Duchess of Orleans. She is fine-looking and has at once a handsome face and good countenance. But the smile reminds one of the Duc de Nemours. It has, however, only just escaped being a rictus. The Portuguese expect their Queen to be an anjo de bondade, or angel of bounty. Maria Pia never put on the character, but was charitable. Queen Amélie likes to earn the name. Her charities, coming out of her own fortune, represent personal sacrifices.

LETTER FROM THE LINKMAN.

THE Government has decided, dear Lady Betty, to abandon Cyprus. The island will not be returned to Turkey, nor will it be transferred to any other Power, but arrangements are being completed, the object of which is to give Cyprus to the Cypriots, the European Powers undertaking to respect its independence. The announcement of this arrangement, together with the details of the agreement, will be officially communicated in due course.

The British Government took over Cyprus when the former was suffering from temporary theatrical insanity. The transaction flattered the ignorant and thoughtless portion of the British public, whilst that which was not ignorant and was thoughtful did not attach any importance to it. The possession of the island does not add to the strength of this country, but might, under certain circumstances, be a source of weakness. The Government must be congratulated, therefore, on having decided to take a step which may materially benefit the nation.

* * * * *

The following letter has been addressed to me:—

"SIR,—I have been visiting a friend in Shropshire who does not permit his guests to give money to his servants. He declares that he pays his own servants for the work which they do for him, and that if he occasionally requires them to exert themselves more than usual he expects to pay them for these extra services, and would be much ashamed were his guests to do this for him. The example of my friend, and the reasons he gives for his conduct, are so admirable that I think it will be for the common good that the public should be informed of them. I am a younger son, possessed of a very limited income, and my only holidays are those that I take when I visit some of my friends in the autumn. Most of my hosts send their carriages to the local station to meet their rich or married guests, but they order a cab to meet the impecunious detrimental, who, of course, has to pay the fare! Incidentally, may I ask, why is every country-house four miles from a station? The rich married people bring their lady's-maid and valet; the impecunious guest has to be attended to by one of the servants of the house. It follows, therefore, that he must give ten shillings to this particular servant. The butler must also receive a piece of gold, and the house-maids expect to find a few shillings left in the bedroom for their benefit. With regard to the keepers the amount of the fee differs. Some are not contented if they receive less than five pounds. Before visiting the friend, whose generous conduct I called attention to in commencing this letter, I went for the regulation three-day stay to a well-known house in Shropshire, and my expenses upon that occasion amounted to a few shillings less than £10, counting, of course, cab-fares at both ends, the railway-fare, and fees! At that rate, the hospitality of my friends, if I fully availed myself of it, would more probably effect my ruin than will my own prodigality. ADMIRALTY, WHITEHALL."

It takes much criticism to destroy custom. Otherwise the abominable system of giving fees to the servants of the host would long since have died out. There was a time when our ancestors gave money to the servants as they left a house after having dined there. This custom, fortunately for us, has been discontinued, and it is to be hoped that the one referred to in the letter published above will soon be abolished.

* * * * *

The death of Dr. George Harley will be much regretted by many who suffer, or imagine that they suffer, from complaints of the liver. The late Dr. Harley was the recognised authority in London upon diseases of that organ, and his opinion on these and many other abstruse questions of medicine was as much valued in Germany as it was in this country. A short time ago he caused a violent controversy to arise upon the subject of dry champagne. He maintained that dry champagne was injurious to all, especially to those suffering from the liver, owing to the dry flavour being produced by an acid fermentation. Dr. Harley considered that the sweeter kinds of champagne, drunk by the French, were more wholesome, or, to be accurate, less injurious. He will be regretted by many patients, for he was an amiable as well as a learned man, and the members of the medical profession suffer by his death the loss of a colleague who was much respected by them.

* * * * *

The last days of October and the first days of November have together produced an especially uneventful week. In times of abnormal dulness that particularly depressing institution, the Imperial Institute, may always be relied upon to supply matter for reflection. It is unnecessary to discuss here the merits of the circumstances involved in the Draper dispute. The Imperial Institute was founded by the Prince of Wales for a good purpose, but unfortunately the interested opposition of its enemies in the City, and the misplaced confidence reposed by the Prince in a gang of incompetent men, are hastening it to an inglorious end. The Institute should have been the heart of our vast colonial system, with its arteries and lesser nerves distributed throughout every part of the Empire. As it is, the Institute is little better than a semi-bankrupt concern, the main purpose of those who control it apparently being to entice shillings and sixpences out of the pockets of the public to keep the buildings out of the clutches of the Official Receiver. It is understood that the Prince of Wales now recognises that something should be done at once to rescue the Institute before the last spark of life is extinguished in it. If the rumour is true, it is shortly to be expected that the management of the Imperial Institute will be thoroughly overhauled; that more judicious and energetic action will be taken in the future than has been the case in the past; and that, instead of being a bad imitation of a polished Cremorne Gardens, it will presently become a prosperous, useful, and powerful instrument for the development of our immense colonial resources.—Believe me to be, very truly yours, MARMADUKE.

SPORTING NOTES.

THE Cambridgeshire victory of Winkfield's Pride was a genuine coup of the old-fashioned sort, of which even such dexterous tacticians as Lord George Bentinck, General Anson, or Mr. Frederick Swindell might well have been proud. The whole business was planned and executed with consummate dexterity, and Mr. Basset really appears to be as clever in dealing with his horses as was his predecessor at Tehidy, Lord de Dunstanville, in the management of his mines. The fact that Mr. Sullivan's steed would be a dangerous candidate for the Cambridgeshire was notified in TRUTH several weeks before the race was run, and on October 15 I wrote—"Winkfield's Pride, the Irish colt, is declared to be an absolute certainty, and with 6 st. 8 lb. to carry he is most leniently treated." Winkfield's Pride had been quietly backed ever since the weights appeared at outside prices, and after Bellevin's victory at Manchester, any decided movement in his favour would have brought him up to a very short price in the betting. His party, however, were too clever to proceed in this jolter-headed fashion. Bellevin was ostentatiously announced to be much fancied at Kempton Park, when he ran nowhere (there was no such preliminary trumpeting before his success at Manchester), and then it was given out in a vague way that Winkfield's Pride would not do after the other colt's defeat. The horse went down steadily in the betting, until the tide of his unpopularity set in with such force that the bookmakers offered against him as if he were dead. The climax of all this bedevilment came at Sandown Park five days before the race was run, when 200 to 1 was vainly offered against the colt. The sporting papers marked him as a doubtful starter, and one writer put forth an elaborate dissertation upon the event, in which Winkfield's Pride was never mentioned at all! After people had arrived at Newmarket, however, the money was being piled on the horse, and, indeed, he was being backed all over the country, the commissions being apparently unlimited, so his rise was much more sudden than his downfall, and he finally became first favourite. A bet of £20,000 to £2,000 was taken in one hand at Newmarket on Tuesday night. It is impossible to reconcile Winkfield's Pride's runaway victory at Newmarket with some of his previous form, but there is no excuse for the handicapper's ridiculous leniency towards him, as he was treated as if he were a very moderate colt, whereas his two-year-old running proved him to be an animal of high class. As a matter of fact, however, another stone would not have stopped him on Wednesday, for he won in a common canter, and had the race well in hand the whole way from start to finish. He is a remarkably good-looking colt, thoroughly racing-like, and a fine mover, with strong limbs and capital feet. The handicapper ought not to have dropped him from the 7 st. 11 lb., which he carried at Manchester in May, and the 7 st. 4 lb. which he was given in the Stewards' Cup, down to 6 st. 8 lb., as he was manifestly backward when he started on those occasions. The fact is that the handicapping of Bellevin at Manchester and of this colt at Newmarket were fatuity of the most desperate kind, which cannot possibly be justified. Omnium II., who is a grand horse, was chopped at the start, and he was only beginning to get into his stride when Winkfield's Pride was passing the winning-post.

I hope Omnium II. will be entered for next year's Ascot Cup, which race he would have won cleverly this year if he had been well ridden. French jockeys usually do badly over the Ascot course, and their horses have been "just beaten" there, when subsequent running clearly proved that the defeated steed must have had a stone in hand. Laodamia has grown into a splendid mare, and what a career she would have achieved if she had belonged to such an owner as the Duke of Westminster; but she has been pertinaciously and idiotically muddled and messed about from first to last. How well she ran as a three-year-old in the Cambridgeshire, with 8st. 9lb. on her back; and in that same season she was positively let off in the City and Suburban with 6st. 7lb.; but she did not start. Marco looked well, so did Shaddock and Quarrel; but La Sagesse and Victor Wild did not please the critics. Victor Wild goes to the stud now, and it is unlucky for his owner that he was not withdrawn from the turf several months ago. I would wish to caution my speculative readers against paying the slightest attention to the placings, as the race was really a procession from the Bushes, and as Winkfield's Pride had everything beaten even before that point was reached, most of the runners were judiciously eased, as there was nothing to be gained by persevering. Laodamia was ridden out because she had been well backed for a place; but let nobody be gulled into believing that Yorker would have been the winner if the Irish colt had been out of the way. The most wonderful feature about the history of Winkfield's Pride is his breeding. Winkfield is own brother to Morion, and having ricked his back, was sold by the Duke of Devonshire to go to Ireland for £15, while the dam is an own sister to Son o' Mine, that was weeded out of Lord Durham's stud because she was half paralysed. Under such circumstances the "scientific" breeders must have been pretty well petrified by the colt's runaway victory.

Anything more utterly muddy-minded and puzzle-pated than the conditions for the Old Cambridgeshire Handicap could not be imagined by the most depraved understanding. The result of the unpardonable blundering of the officials concerned was that Winkfield's Pride incurred only a 3 lb. penalty for his victory on Wednesday, and the bookmakers seemed to be crazy when they were content to take 2 to 1. The Irish horse won easily,

OLD SPICED ELDERBERRY WINE prevents chills; delicious winter beverage. 15/- per doz. reputed quarts. Carriage paid. Cash with order.—CARTER & Co., Old Refinery, Bristol.

Yorker again being second. Ghislaine, Bridegroom, and Pas de Danse, who were among the beaten lot, are all likely to win races during the next month. It is to be hoped that the conditions of this event will be revised before next season. There has never been anything, even in the "Calendar," so thoroughly asinine as the arrangement by which the winner of the Cesarewitch has to carry 14 lb. extra, the winner of a handicap of £450, 10 lb. extra, but the winner of the Cambridgeshire only 7 lb. more than it carried in that race! The force of folly could no further go.

Every one at Newmarket had become infatuated about Thais, who ran just as I had predicted would be the case. It was palpable to all beholders of the race for the One Thousand that Thais was "all out" to win, and that in another three strides she would have been beaten by Santa Maura. How, therefore, in the name of common-sense, could the Prince of Wales's mare be expected to win over a longer distance with a heavy weight on her back and the certainty of a fast-run race all the way?

There is only a poor entry for the Manchester November Handicap, and none of the events at that meeting have done well. The fact is that in wet weather the course at Manchester is thoroughly rotten, and the tragedy of Troon has aroused dismal recollections of the mishap to St. Angelo, so that owners do not fancy the meeting, particularly at the end of November. The entry has fallen from fifty-two last year to only thirty-six, and there is nothing remarkable about the "class" of the animals in the list.

One remarkable feature about this year's Cambridgeshire was the unbounded confidence of at least half a score of owners, the consequence being that the betting all round was much heavier than last year, and several horses were backed on the day before the race to win vast sums without their being brought up to short prices. There were some seven candidates which "could not lose," according to their friends, and this state of affairs greatly facilitated the manœuvring operations of the party connected with the winner. The money won has gone into few hands, and the result of the Cambridgeshire will stimulate speculation over the Liverpool Cup and other handicaps of the next month.

That the majority of backers are mooncalves of the type of Panurge's sheep is a flagrant fact, of which conclusive evidence was afforded at Newmarket by the rush to back Regret for the Limekiln Stakes. The horse looked ailing, and he went very badly before the race when proceeding to the post. He soon put the silly herd of plungers out of their suspense, for he was never fairly in the race at any part of it, being apparently unable to go the pace, which was a fast one, as Utica made running as hard as she could go. Balsamo again disappointed his friends, and Bay Ronald won as easily as when he carried off the Select Plate. After the previous form of Mr. Brassey's horse, it was astonishing that he should have been so entirely neglected by backers, for offers of 10 to 1 and 100 to 8 were everywhere to be heard. Bay Ronald however, cannot be trusted, as on his recent form the Free Handicap should have been a good thing for him, but he never showed prominently. It is, perhaps, as well for backers that this colt did not accept for the Cambridgeshire, as he then would have been heavily backed after his running during the Second October week. Gulistan, who was, no doubt, benefited by his severe race at Sandown Park, won the event very easily indeed, and it was worth £1,450. Thais was backed for a great deal of money, but she never had a chance with Mr. de Rothschild's colt, and the course was again too far for her. I may take credit to myself for having been alone in pointing out that Thais would fail to stay the Cambridgeshire course, and it may be hoped that next season she will be kept within her best distance, which is probably six furlongs. Gulistan had no chance with Canterbury Pilgrim in the Jockey Club Cup, and the bookmakers were insanely generous in asking for a mere shade of odds about the Oaks winner. A horse ought not to be asked to run three races within a week.

Oakdene, who just beat Goletta for the Criterion Stakes, having 8 lb. the best of the weights, will be worth looking out for at Ascot next year, as he is exactly the stamp of colt to show his best form up a hill. The best animals which ran in this race (so far as the future is concerned) are Mr. Baird's Honfleur, by Galopin out of Fleur de Marie, and the Duke of Westminster's Rust, half brother, by Blue Green, to Tarporley. Let a note be made for next year of this pair, as if they go on well they will certainly distinguish themselves. Oakdene has been tipped for a score of Nurseries, and people are wondering why he did not win before last Tuesday, when he was not backed for sixpence. I fancy there was but little merit in the Criterion victory, as Goletta showed, when she ran with Berzak in the Clearwell Stakes, that stamina is not her strong point, and here she was running over a most tiring course.

Vesuvian was mentioned by me months ago as being one of the best looking and most promising two-year-olds in the Kingsclere stable, and that a high opinion was entertained of this colt as a yearling is proved by the fact that he began this season with thirty-nine engagements. Vesuvian won the Dewhurst Plate very easily indeed, although manifestly backward, and if he trains on all right he will make a grand three-year-old. The Derby will certainly not be a "one-horse" race next year, as was so prematurely asserted a few weeks ago. Vesuvian is a powerful racing-like colt, and capable of great improvement. He won his race like a really good colt, and he was considered to be too backward to run up to the form which he had been credited with at Kingsclere. Berzak has probably had enough of racing for this season, and it was a great mistake to start Goletta again after her defeat on Monday, as she clearly wants a rest, and in my opinion we have already seen the best of this filly. Blue Water disappointed the Kingsclere people in the Free Handicap, which was one of the most valuable races of the week, being actually worth nearly £1,500. Flying Colours also ran very badly, as she had appeared to have an excellent chance after her easy victory at Sandown Park. Melfitana, who won this race, is an Italian-bred daughter of Melton. Orelio, the brother to Ormonde, made his long-expected début in the Houghton Stakes, and he was very heavily backed, but not so much by the stable as by the public. He is a great baby of a colt, and it is a pity that an animal so ridiculously backward should have been uselessly knocked about by being sent to Newmarket and raced in his present condition. Orelio may make a good three-year-old, but if the Derby of 1897 goes to Kingslere, it will be through Vesuvian. Cortegar is a very nice filly, by Galliard, and she ought to do well in the future.

The "back end" period will now set in with severity, and until the season closes at Manchester on the 28th we shall have the usual huge fields of very moderate horses at every meeting, with heavy betting, and constant and crashing upsets of public form.

There should be some interesting sport at Northampton to-day and to-morrow, at Gatwick on Friday, and at Hurst Park on Saturday. This week is certainly split up sufficiently, and trainers and jockeys will be in a state of chaotic confusion by the time it is over.

Next week is given up to Lewes (two days) and Liverpool, which is absurdly and unreasonably dragged over four days, although three would be amply sufficient. The Liverpool St. Leger of £500 will probably be won by Lord Stanley with either Melange or Chiselhampton, in the absence of Regret, who went home lame from Newmarket.

For Mosquito Bites nothing allays the irritation so quickly as SCRUBB'S CLOUDY HOUSEHOLD AMMONIA, and it is an immediate remedy for Wasp or Bee Stings.

CHINA AND GLASS. — Messrs. GOODE, Artists and Designers, solicit an inspection of their collection in their recently-extended South Audley-street premises, now by far the largest and most important in Europe. Messrs. Goode guarantee the excellence of all their productions, and invite a comparison of their prices with those of any co-operative stores.

The weights for the Cup were published on Friday, but all prudent people will leave this event alone until the day of running arrives. I shall next week attempt to predict the winner.

London Rugby football is about as badly managed in the way of fixtures as possible. Last Saturday there was not a big match in the whole of London. The only important fixture was that between the Harlequins and Rosslyn Park at Richmond. It was a very close and exciting game, and the Rosslyn forwards kept their form all through, and Cobb and Gibbon did a lot of work. Leake and Wells practically won the game for the Harlequins. The return of Turner among the Croydon outsides will materially strengthen the team, which is doing remarkably well. Kensington have shown such improved form this season that a draw was most satisfactory. Turning to the Universities, the Oxford outsides are playing a great game, and as they have a lot of pace this enabled them to give the Old Merchant Taylors the worst beating they have ever had from the Dark Blues. But the Old Boy forwards, although they have nothing like the physique of the men a few years back quite held their own. Balfour, when the Fours are over, may give up the river, and in that case his return to the scrimmage would be most valuable. Forward play will decide this year's match at Queen's, and unless Cambridge brightens up a lot, last year's victory will not be repeated. The Richmond forwards quite held their own, the Light Blues not having the ghost of a notion of shoving, and although the Londoners scored a narrow win, it must be borne in mind that the Light Blues have a great reputation. Richmond is now playing up to its old form and Schwarz is useful at half. By the way, Thomas's place-kicking for Cambridge is very accurate. Judging by the forward play at both Universities, it looks as though the scrappy heeling-out game was being played at the Public Schools without the slightest attention being paid to genuine rushing and shoving. Blackheath went down to Newport, and any doubt they may have felt as to the effect of the absence of A. J. Gould from the team has been set at rest. The visitors were outplayed forward, half, and three-quarter. Fegan made one strong run and scored. The curious thing is that the Welsh style, which is so successful in club games, is useless for International matches.

On some golf-links up north there were several greens which could not be seen when the approach was played. In order that those behind may know when the players on the green have holed out, a whistle is blown by a caddie. The whistle is attached to the flag in the hole, and the caddies nearly slaughter each other to get the right to blow. That is the only objection, which could be obviated by a rule that the winner's caddie blows, and if the hole is halved each can have a turn.

With the progress of golf a new species of player is developing. He is not a pot-hunter. He goes one worse than that. His methods are particularly his own. He is a sort of golfing bandit. He has a club handicap, but just as he is getting about half limit or a little under, he retires from club competitions. His play in these events has reduced his strokes to twelve or fourteen. There he remains for ever. He gets men to play him for half-crowns or golf balls on handicap terms. Naturally he wins from the unwary. He explains, when he is inclined to be very confidential that, perhaps, his handicap ought to come down, and it is paraphrasing his remarks to say that he finds this style of play is more paying than entering for club prizes and sweepstakes. No one takes his handicap down. The wary fight shy of him. He is a peculiar study. He does not want the meagre half-crown, but he has an insatiable greed for victory. Like a spoilt child, he cannot endure to be beaten, and so to satisfy this peculiar craving he plays games in this peculiar manner. He will return from such a game when he wins as elated and triumphant as if he had won an amateur championship. Defeat will make him wretched and despondent. His language towards the links, his clubs, his caddie, and his play will be choice and varied. He will swear he will never golf again. He is not a pleasant man to play with, and the only way to deal with men of this class is for the Handicap Committee to take the bull by the horns, and reduce the player's strokes when it is evident that he has much improved in his play, and yet fails to enter for any competition, success in which would entail a reduction. There is nothing unfair in such a proceeding. It would be ridiculous for a handicapper to give a man who once had twenty yards in a quarter the same start when he knew he was doing the distance in fifty seconds. The same principle should apply to golf handicaps, and if it did one would hear less of the pot-hunter or the bandit.

If half that one hears is correct there are likely to be grave complications in the Association football world before very long. The governing body of Association football has prohibited any private individual getting up a team to play any club without its permission first being obtained. The reason for the rule is that some persons are said have organised such teams, to have obtained a "gate" guarantee from the club that has been played, and to have failed to account satisfactorily for the money so obtained. In other words, the organiser is alleged to have put the balance of the money, after paying expenses, into his own pocket. Those who do not comply with this rule are, it is rumoured, to be expelled from the Association. That the rule is, in fact, aimed at certain persons who have taken a prominent part in amateur football, and who have made nothing out of the game, there can be no doubt. In order to test the validity of the rule, a gentleman who has arranged to take a team to play a well-known amateur club, is going to do so without first getting that permission. I doubt very much if he is wise in acting in that way. If the evil suggested does in fact exist, then there can be no doubt of the reasonableness of the rule; and even if amateurs legislated for themselves instead of being under the control of a professional body, they would have to make some such rule. It is simply puerile to talk about going to law in the event of expulsion following such a breach of the regulations. The position would be very different if an application were made and permission refused. Then no one could object to the match taking place without leave being granted. All the organiser of the team has to do is to make his request when he arranges the match. There could be nothing worse for amateur football than to make a test case out of straw.

While the Corinthians did not put such a strong team in the field, the Army had a better one than last year, and a fairly interesting game was the result. During the greater part of the game the Army had the worst of it, but Reilly in goal saved magnificently. Collier and Burnup did a lot of work forward, and C. B. Fry's excursions in Rugby football have not marred the vigour of his play. The London Caledonians boast that they get the best gate of any amateur club in the south, and they are probably right. At all events, they had a big gate to see their match against Oxford, when they played the same team as they had done against Cambridge. On this occasion their forwards were better, and the halves did not show such a marked desire to feed the opposing backs. The consequence was the Calics just won after a fast game, the Oxford forwards lacking combination, but then they have had practically no time in which to combine. The qualifying rounds for the Association Cup draw their weary length along. It is extraordinary that so much enthusiasm should be evinced about the results of games when the winners have as much chance of being in the final as they have of flying. No doubt the fact that the competing clubs are divided into local districts has a good deal to do with this keenness. In the League matches last Saturday the results were remarkable. Not a single home club scored a win, there were four drawn games, and in the other three games the visitors won. The finest performance was that of Preston North End, who simply romped round the Blackburn Rovers.

In billiards, Roberts finished up the match against North with as fine an exposition of play as one could wish. On the last day he practically monopolised the table, and rushed home an easy winner. Peall's display against Diggle was very poor. Mannock was quite outclassed on his handicap by Stevenson, who showed some pretty play.

In Richardson, a Shrewsbury Freshman, Cambridge have a promising cross-country runner, whom the President of the Athletics will do well to look after for the three miles at Fenners. The Essex Beagles walk was won by Fenton after a good race with Dover, while several other clubs had spins preparatory for coming races. Cross-country running seems to be flourishing in the south.

MAMMON.

From MOSES MOSS to BENJAMIN BOSS.

Sunday.

MY DEAR BEN,—By the time this reaches you the momentous issue as regards the Presidential elections in the United States will have been decided, and you will then be able to form a more correct estimate of the course of the Stock Exchange in the near future. In the meantime, the prevailing state of uncertainty has been utilised by the ursine party for the purpose of an attack, which has resulted in An Absurd Panic in Kaffirs.

The "Bears" no doubt calculated upon the disinclination of operators to increase commitments before Tuesday's elections had cleared the outlook; but even granting much nervousness on that account, it is difficult to see where all the sales of South African gold and land shares came from. There was no doubt a certain amount of forced closing, and sales were also pressed in connection with the Paris settlement; but I am assured on good authority that there are no more big blocks to come on the market for French account, and I can only suppose that the unscrupulous action of the "Bears" in setting about all manner of false rumours had a good deal to do with this final slump. It is perhaps a melancholy satisfaction to me that the chief trouble arose precisely in those stocks against which I warned my readers many and many a time when much higher, viz., Rand Mines, Limited, East Rands and Consolidated Goldfields; but even these have now touched a level at which it would be insane to press sales, while a sharp recovery is quite on the cards whenever the sinister forces which appear to be at the back of this movement are so inclined. Unfortunately, the collapse in the three above-mentioned securities has affected the shares of sound outcrop mines and substantial land companies; but this can only be a temporary development, and if holders sit tight, they will see their property again increase in value. West Australians have naturally been affected in sympathy with South Africans; but in their case there is even less reason for the setback, advices from the goldfields in that colony being very satisfactory. It boots not to say much concerning American Rails pending the elections, but there are evidently a great many people in New York who feel certain of McKinley's victory. Wall Street has been buying largely, and has again raised prices all round, while prominent bankers promptly took measures to stop a money squeeze, which was imminent. If McKinley should gain a sweeping victory, it is probable that the tension in the Money Market, both in the States and here, will be relaxed, as large amounts of hoarded gold will be liberated on the other side of the Atlantic. After a temporary reaction, Home Rails are distinctly better again; and the more favourable atmospheric conditions should help the traffics of the Southern Passenger lines considerably. Whatever way the American elections may go, I should think that Home Rails supported by improving trade will advance further. Nervousness concerning the issue in Washington has caused a good deal of selling of South American stocks, certain operators taking the view that if Bryan came in there would be general chaos. I do not anticipate any such thing, but the strong view thus taken in some quarters has to be reckoned with. Speaking generally, I should think that in the course of next week, when the elections are decided, and the Paris Bourse has got over its settlement, the tendency on the Stock Exchange will improve. Panic, at all events, should be guarded against. How unreasoning it is cannot be better illustrated than by the fact that while a few months ago scare followed after scare on the position in Turkey, people do not trouble themselves any more about this, except perhaps holders of Turkish stocks. There are strong indications that the Industrial market will receive increased attention on the part of the public. Not only is business in the cycle department more active, but the demand for brewery shares is again reviving, and such undertakings as Bovril are much in favour.

Home Rails.

Although the settlement disclosed considerable scarcity of Home Rails, and light rates were the order of the day, nervousness with regard to the American Presidential election at one time brought about a relapse, from which however the market has already shaken itself free. As speculative holders have pretty well cleared out, and stock generally is in strong hands, there appears to be no reason for anticipating any further realisations; and whatever may be the result of the elections, Home Rails can hardly fail to be benefited. If Bryan should come in, people won't buy American Rails, and will turn all the more readily towards Home Rails for investment and speculation. If McKinley wins, the effect on the market generally can only be favourable; but to this must be added the improved condition of trade in this country, which is shown by the reports from all quarters, and which is also illustrated by continued favourable traffics. An increase of £30,500 for the past week has raised the total increase for the past half year to £753,000. The North Western traffic increase of £8,101 for the week, and that of £7,362 of the North Eastern, were the most favourable; but the South Eastern also showed remarkably well with a considerable increase, which came on the top of good traffics last year. The returns of the Scotch lines continue most satisfactory, and the increase of the Caledonian for the thirteen weeks now amounts to £20,170, that of the North British to £26,770. The fact is that trade in Scotland is altogether on the boom, manufactured iron and steel being in great demand; while large orders are still being distributed for new ships, quite a flood of which have come to the Clyde firms at gradually rising prices. Engineers are reported to be running double shifts, and locomotive engineers have many months' work on order. No wonder, then, that at last large buying orders for Caledonian Deferred and North British Deferred are arriving from the North; and I confidently look for a considerable further advance in Coras (Caledonian Deferred), now standing at 58⅝, and North British Deferred, now quoted 46½. Equally promising are no doubt Brighton "A" at 177, and Dover "A" at 101¼. The Brighton season will, according to all accounts, be unusually brilliant, and London-by-the-Sea is filling fast. The South Eastern is doing even better, and its traffics show great elasticity, having hardly been interfered with by the recent unfavourable weather. Neither should it be forgotten that, both on the Brighton and South Eastern Deferred stocks, a considerable dividend has already accrued. The Heavies have displayed a firm front, and are again a point or two higher, North Eastern being the favourite owing to the flourishing condition of the shipbuilding and iron trades. Metropolitan Districts are recovering from the recent reaction, which was brought about by an exceptional occurrence. It is no secret that one of the members of the Syndicate, which has taken up the deep-level scheme, although he had passed his word not to part with his stock, "ratted" in a somewhat unscrupulous manner during the mid-October account, and delivered at the end of that account £175,000 stock to his astonished associates. One would hardly have thought that even an enterprising jobber, as he is, would go so far; but upon the whole the syndicate are to be congratulated that he "ratted" at that time, and not later on, his place having now been more worthily filled. Of the stock bought during the past account something like £60,000 has not yet been delivered, and it is evident that a "Bear" squeeze is quite on the cards. It has been rumoured that a delay would take place in consequence of the much regretted illness of the Chairman, Mr. J. S. Forbes, who returned to town on Wednesday last for the purpose of attending the Board meeting, but was unable to do so as he has been confined to his bed ever since. This, however, I understand, will not put off the carrying out of the scheme, which is being pushed forward with the utmost despatch by the solicitors, engineers, surveyors, and Parliamentary agents engaged in it.

Yankee Rails and the Presidential Election.

I am not going to prophecy at this time of day what will be the upshot of the Presidential election on November 3. When this letter reaches you the die will be cast, and one of the most important decisions in the history of the United States will have been taken. When one reads of such demonstrations as the monster parade of 125,000 sound-money men in New York on Saturday, one cannot help thinking that the good sense of the American people will triumph; but our Yankee cousins are a tricky lot, and I would not stake too much on their supposed good sense. At all events I was fully justified in advising caution when writing last week, and the sharp break in American Rails which took place a few days ago confirmed the view which I have taken. There has since been a considerable recovery, and prices are higher for the week in many instances, and several dollars above the lowest touched during the last few days. It will be of interest to again place before my readers a comparative table from which the highest and lowest quotations touched during the present year, and the prices for the past and present week will be gathered:—

—	Price Jan. 2, 1896.	High'st in 1896.	Low'st in 1896.	Oct. 23.	Oct. 31.
Atchison	14½	18 3/16	9	14⅜	14¾
Do. Five per Cent. Pref.	22	23⅞	14⅜	23¼	23
Central Pacific	15½	17½	13	14⅞	14¾
Denver	12⅜	14 11/16	10	12⅛	12⅛
Do. Pref.	42¾	51⅞	37¼	44⅜	44¼
Erie	14⅛	16⅛	11¼	15	15⅛
Do. First Pref.	23	42	22⅞	34¾	33
Lake Shore	144	155	138	151½	151
Louisville	44⅝	56¾	38⅞	46⅞	47¾
Milwaukee	69⅛	81⅝	61¾	75⅛	75
Mis., Kan., and Texas	11¼	13 13/16	8⅞	11⅝	11¼
Norfolk Pref.	8	15⅛	10⅛	16⅜	16⅛
Nor. Pacific Pref.	12½	22⅝	14	22⅝	22½
New York Central	98	101⅞	90¼	96	96
Ontario	13¼	16½	11¼	14½	14⅜
Reading	2	10 11/16	3⅛	13	13⅝
Southern Ordy.	8¾	11⅛	6⅝	8⅞	9
Do. Pref.	26½	34⅜	18½	26½	26
Union Pacific	4⅛	9¾	3⅛	8⅞	8½
Wabash Pref.	15¾	20 3/16	12	16¼	16¼

There has been a further advance on Tuesday and quotations will obviously undergo considerable modification according to the result of the elections. Should McKinley be elected with a sweeping majority Yankee Rails will doubtless experience a sharp advance and a temporary boom. A small majority for McKinley would leave matters very much where they are; while Bryan's victory would bring about a disastrous slump in Yankee Rails, which need not, however, necessarily affect other stocks. There is no doubt that a good many railroads have effected every possible economy for the last few years, buying nothing that could be dispensed with or postponed. With McKinley's election by an adequate majority, all the roads would at once begin to improve the condition of their properties because they would be satisfied that they would be safe; and this of itself would set many industries going. Then again, there is no doubt that of the ten millions of gold which were shipped from this side a considerable sum is being hoarded and would be released. A well-informed American authority, moreover, estimates that money to the extent of 200,000,000 dols. is at present being kept back unemployed in the United States, all of which would come out seeking investment if sound money was assured; while, on the other hand, European capitalists would again employ their money in the States, and American stocks would be bought on this side. Neither should it be forgotten that the advance in wheat and in grain generally has been of inestimable value to the American farmers, who are now enabled to make large purchases against the produce which they have sold at materially better prices than they could hope for at one time. The grain movement over the Railroads has assumed enormous proportions, and a car famine has already been created. The Chicago freight yards are full of loaded cars, and elevators everywhere are rapidly filling up. Grain shipments from all points in Kansas and Missouri to the gulf ports are described as being larger than ever before, and at Minneapolis, St. Paul, and Duluth, they are stated to be heavier than for years. The announcement that rates on grain will be restored from November 2 will also ensure larger profits to the Roads. Then, again, it must be considered that trade has been pent up of late in view of the uncertainty of the elections. Business thus is waiting, because the changes threatened are so serious that men are willing to face what they consider a certain but moderate loss, rather than risk the incalculable consequences possible. Canadian-Pacifics, after declining, have also recovered in sympathy with Yankee Rails, and both these and Grand Trunks would undoubtedly be greatly benefited by the triumph of McKinley, just as they would greatly suffer should the opposite prove the case.

Foreigners and South Americans.

Interbourse securities have been a very chequered market during the past week, as the Paris Bourse maintained a very gloomy tendency, and suffered from periodical spasms in South Africans, in Spanish, and in Turks. The talk about an internal loan in Spain does not look very promising; but there are also rumours that the Banque de Paris is likely to grant another loan, so as to provide some much-wanted funds for the empty Spanish Treasury. I should not be at all surprised if, notwithstanding their reverses in Cuba, Spain were to be helped once more over the stile, in which case the "Bears" might be seriously squeezed; but eventually the financial collapse must undoubtedly come. Turks have given way, but are not altogether at the lowest. The Turkish Government is in serious financial troubles, and politics in Constantinople do not look flourishing; but somehow or other the markets are not nowadays affected to any extent by the Turkish position. A sharp fall in Portuguese is by no means encouraging, and seems to foreshadow some disagreable surprise from that quarter. Argentines experienced a setback in sympathy with the other markets, but they are now recovering again. Some spasms also occurred in speculative Argentine Railway stocks, due to the action of several large operators, who closed their account in South Americans for fear that in the case of an unfavourable result of the American elections these might also be affected. Upon the whole, however, matters Argentine are looking more promising, as the rise in wheat must greatly benefit that country. Brazilians suffered another sharp drop, from which they are but slowly recovering. Mexican Sixes and Uruguay bonds, on the other hand, have shown a firm front. Costa Rica "A" have declined another point to 24, and so far no further news has unfortunately come to hand as regards the settlement of the debt. Honduras bonds have hardened to 5½, on the talk of some proposal on the part of the Honduras Government through a personage who has arrived here with powers to negotiate. At best, however, the proposal is likely to be a poor one.

Notice to Connoisseurs of Fine Dry Champagne.—Périnet & Fils' Cuvée Réservée, Extra Sec, is in magnificent condition, at Hotel Cecil, Hotel Savoy, Midland Grand Hotel, Spiers & Pond's Hotels and Buffets, and most leading Hotels & Restaurants.

THE KAFFIR CIRCUS—ANOTHER SPASM.

I was mistaken last week when I took the view that the long-continued slump in the Kaffir Circus had come to an end, and that the persistent and indiscriminate sales of South African mining securities would not be repeated. After a temporary recovery, a renewal of sales—accompanied by all manner of adverse rumours—brought down quotations of the gambling counters, to which I have repeatedly referred as more especially dangerous, to the lowest point as yet reached, Consolidated Gold Fields being at one time down to $8\frac{7}{16}$, East Rands to $4\frac{1}{4}$, and Rand Mines to $21\frac{1}{2}$. There may have been some substratum of truth in a few of the "Bear" points, by which it was sought to bang the market. For instance, it is quite possible that some Paris operator was in trouble, and it would not be surprising if a certain noble lord had had to close his account with a loss of £20,000; but subsequent events have proved that all the more important reports which were set about were absolutely baseless. Thus it was hardly likely that the Consolidated Goldfields' Directors had, as was alleged, reconsidered their announcement of a dividend of 15s., when they sent out the report making the official statement on Friday. The further rumour that President Kruger was fixing a quarrel upon the same Company was equally absurd, as Oom Paul has repeatedly declared that he does not wish to make the innocent shareholders in Transvaal Companies suffer for the misdeeds of others. A satisfactory statement which he made to Reuter's Agency with reference to the Bewaarplatsen, and which has been promptly confirmed by a decision of the Volksraad, moreover, does not bear out the allegation that the Boers want to worry the English Companies. The often repeated story of the withdrawal of Mr. Alfred Beit from the firm of Wernher, Beit, & Co., has also been contradicted. It boots not to repeat all the unfavourable rumours with which the air was filled at one time. Suffice it to say that, as far as I have been able to learn, none of these were true. The report again found credence that some of the big South African financiers had combined to make a "Bear" attack upon South Africans. That, too, does not seem likely, as it would be altogether opposed to their interests to entirely freeze out investors, and thus kill the goose that lays the golden eggs. That the Deep Level shares should have suffered severely I am not surprised at, and as the Rand mines are chiefly interested in these, the drop in the latter would thus be explained. I have never held a favourable opinion of the Deep Levels, but it is but fair to say that the reports with regard to some of these were false, as the mines in question had not begun to crush yet. In fact, the Exploration Company makes the official statement, as representative of some of the properties affected, that only two or three of the Deep Level mines have as yet reached the stage of crushing, and that nothing in the results obtained in those cases at all warrants the reports in question. By the way, the East Rand Company is, after all, going to make a new issue of shares. At the meeting to be held on December 14, the capital of the Company will be increased by 100,000 shares, which are to be offered to the shareholders, pro rata, at $4\frac{1}{2}$, at which they are said to have been guaranteed. A recovery has since set in in the shares chiefly attacked, Rand Mines being quoted $23\frac{1}{4}$, East Rands $4\frac{5}{8}$, and Consolidated Goldfields $9\frac{1}{4}$; but these prices are still in strong contrast with the prices touched last year, viz., Rand Mines, 45; East Rands, $12\frac{1}{2}$; and Consolidated Goldfields, 19. Nothing has demoralised the Kaffir Circus more than the disastrous result of the speculation in these three gambling counters, with which operators here and in France have been extensively saddled at high prices. They are responsible chiefly for recent scares, and it is most unfortunate that, regardless of intrinsic merit, the sound Witwatersrand gold shares should also suffer in sympathy with them. I cannot refrain from again pointing out that it is merely market conditions and scares which have brought about the fall in these, and that intrinsic merit must eventually prevail. Again let me beseech my readers not to speculate in South African mines beyond their means, and not to buy more than what they can take up and pay for. Whoever acts on this principle will in the end escape all loss, and in most cases reap a good profit. I gave last week a list of promising Transvaal properties, and I adhere to the view that any one who can afford to buy at present prices, or to average at the present level—always provided that he takes the shares up—will come right in the end. Many of the high-class Witwatersrand mines have now arrived at prices on which they yield good returns on the money invested. It may be safely assumed that, in view of the ample supply and lower cost of native labour, dividends similar to those earned in 1895 may again be looked for—that, for instance, Langlaagte Estate will again pay dividends at the rate of 40 to 50 per cent. per annum, New Primrose 50 per cent., Durban Roodepoort 60 per cent., Crown Reef, 100 per cent. Why, then, should these shares stand at only $4\frac{5}{8}$ to $4\frac{3}{4}$ for Langlaagte Estate and New Primrose, $6\frac{1}{4}$ for Durban Roodepoort, or $9\frac{5}{8}$ for Crown Reefs? I have taken these four mines at random, but the case of all sound Witwatersrand mines is similar, and the prices have perhaps only fallen because, not being able to sell their rubbish, operators have had to part with their good stocks. Again, several of the leading mines, such as Knights, have recommenced crushing with large batteries, and thus are on the eve of proving their large producing power again. Concerning the annual report of the Consolidated Goldfields of South Africa it may be pointed out that a much larger proportion of the assets is now represented by Deep Level properties than before, and although favourable reports by Mr. John Hays Hammond and Professor Becker on the future Deep Levels are subjoined, this feature is not encouraging for those who do not view Deep Levels in the same rosy light. The large interest in Simmer & Jack (715,000 shares at $4\frac{1}{2}$ £3,215,000) is, of course, a valuable one, but the Company has sold other valuable assets, such as 25,000 De Beers and 50,000 Village Main Reefs, and it has also saddled the public with a good many Deep Level shares. The annual report of the Johannesburg Consolidated Investment Company furnishes little fresh information, as the figures were available a month ago. The fact which appears from the accounts, that the securities are written down to the market value on June 30, and that the accounts, therefore, show a loss which has not yet been realised is satisfactory, and huge profits amounting to nearly £600,000 are shown to have been made on mining properties and shares, while profits from commission, interest on loans and revenue from house and landed properties have largely increased. After paying 25 per cent. dividend, the large balance of £331,686 is carried forward, out of which £250,000 is to be placed to reserve for the purpose of equalisation of dividends. In view of the disastrous period covered by the report, this result must be considered distinctly satisfactory. The meeting of shareholders of the Chartered British South African Company, on Friday the 6th inst., to authorise the new issue, of which I have already furnished particulars, is being looked forward to with considerable interest. I am glad to see that the Committee of the Stock Exchange propose in future to fix the carry-over quotations in the mining market officially. As this duty was formerly undertaken by certain firms of jobbers who were not exactly the most disinterested persons, this is a step in advance. But let us have also a properly drawn making up list to take the place of that hitherto issued by Messrs. Mathieson. The following communication reaches me from Johannesburg:—

Johannesburg, October 3, 1896.

It might be as well if you were to sound a note of warning respecting the many Transvaal coal ventures which will shortly be brought before the British investor. There is a perfect scramble here just now for anything in the shape of a coal farm, whether it be good, bad, or indifferent. I presume the most will be made of the recent coal famine here, but as that arose principally through the lack of railway facilities, it cannot be used as an argument for opening more pits. There is only a very limited demand for coal at present, and the collieries already working are well able to keep pace with it. The cost of transport only, from most of these new concerns to the gold mines at Johannesburg, will amount to over 20s. per ton, so that a good price must be obtained before even this can be covered, and as steam coal is now selling at about this figure, the prospects are not encouraging. Most of the coal is also of an inferior quality, and not fit for marine or export purposes, so that it must all be used locally, and any little extra quantity raised naturally tends to glut the market.—I am, &c., COAL.

CYCLING SUITS are a speciality at Ulster House, Conduit-street, London, W., where Ulsters, Overcoats, and Capes are kept ready for immediate use.

I do not anticipate that we shall see a rush of Coal Companies in the present state of the Kaffir Circus, but it may be as well to sound the warning which my correspondent "Coal" writes to convey. Diamond shares have, of course, suffered with the rest of the market, but all these are now recovering under the lead of De Beers, which are quoted 27¼. New Jagersfontein have maintained a very firm front at about 9.

GOLDEN WEST AUSTRALIA.

The West Australian market, which had so far resisted the effect of the surrounding gloom remarkably well, has also been affected by the complete collapse in South Africans; but the despondency and the "Bearish" talk are even less justified in this case than that in South African shares, for there can be no doubt that the West Australian goldfield has a remarkable future, and that a large yield of from 2 oz. to 5 oz. of gold per ton will be obtained from it for many years to come. In fact, a return of 2 oz. or 3 oz. of gold per ton would be quite sufficient to ensure very profitable working; but as an eminent engineer, who has recently returned from Western Australia, argues:—"You in London expect too much from us, considering that the goldfield is a new one, and that means of communication are very difficult. Hundreds of batteries are on the way to the various mines, and many thousands of tons of machinery are encumbering the ports and railways. Give us six months' time, and you will find that the leading mines will respond most satisfactorily by a large and increasing output." I would advise my readers to exercise some of that patience without which no "adventurer in mines" can expect to make money. I grant that mining Companies have been rushed forward too quickly, and before many of the properties were sufficiently developed; but there are already many large mines producing excellent results, and more will fall into line every month. I have repeatedly urged that new flotations should be stopped, unless the mines are ready to crush, and this view is evidently being enforced by the present state of the market. Ignorant critics, and pronounced pessimists, should be confronted with the statement that English-owned West Australian Companies have this year crushed 133,376 tons of ore for a yield of 337,380 oz. of gold, or an average of 2½ oz. to the ton, and this in the infancy of the goldfields, and without reckoning the gold to be still extracted from the tailings, for the working of which arrangements are now being made. I am glad to say that most of the readers of TRUTH are taking a very sensible view of the position, and are ready to exercise that patience which is the highest quality of a mining investor. This brings me to the criticisms of a person who has sent me a long letter in which he takes the view that I have been deceived by those connected with certain Westralian Companies, notably Hampton Plains. I cannot, of course, control the general drift of the markets, and I am unable to guard the public against scares; but I have convinced myself that those controlling the destiny of the Hampton Plains have not sold a single share, and have been buying largely of late; while there can be no doubt as to the intrinsic merit of the Company, except on the part of those who are wilfully blind. It is evident, however, from the remarks of this particular correspondent, that, for reasons best known to himself, he wishes to run down the West Australian goldfield altogether, and, under these circumstances, time only can decide between him and those who have carefully studied the whole position, and are therefore in a better position to judge than a flippant critic of "Bearish" propensities. When I last wrote on Lake View Consols they were quoted 6⅞; they have since touched 7¾, and, although they have reacted, I should not be at all surprised that before the special settlement is fixed in about three weeks' time they will again reach a high quotation. It is, of course, not possible for one section of the Mining market to display strength while the other is suffering from an attack of abject panic. Under this influence London and Globe Finance and West Australian Exploring and Finance have also reacted to 4⅜-½; but these Companies' shares have strong backers, and, what is more, the Companies' results to be announced next month, and the dividends to be declared, will be such as to justify the important advance which I have anticipated for some time. Great Boulder have also fluctuated, but upon the whole have preserved a firm front at 6⅜. The production for the fortnight ending October 26 has been announced as 2,142 oz. from 710 tons. It would not be easy to find on any other goldfield three such mines as the Lake View Consols, the Great Boulder, and the Ivanhoe. This is what a well-known engineer told me the other day; but he says the Lake View Consols is the best of them all. I hear, by the way, that Mr. Charles Kaufman is engaged on a report on all the properties controlled by the London and Globe and West Australian Exploring and Finance Corporations, and that when completed it will be sent to all the shareholders. Hit or Miss shares have recovered to 1⅛ on a cablegram stating that a partial clean up of 116 tons crushed (assay value, 2 oz. 8 dwt.) gave 157 oz. of refined gold, the tailings assaying 8 dwt. The engineer adds that the difficulties have been overcome, and that a gradual increase in the returns may be expected, 20 stamps being now running. As so much has been made of the Hit or Miss disappointment by the "Bears," this must be considered as encouraging. From the Wills Consolidated a cablegram has been received stating that 10,000 tons of ore are available for treatment. Samples from different parts of the mine average 1 oz. 10 dwt. In the incline shaft the ore is stated to be worth 5 oz. 10 dwt. per ton. The first annual report of the Directors of the West Australian Venture Syndicate, to be submitted to the meeting on the 6th inst., shows a net profit of £104,089, of which £37,965 is realised cash profit. In addition to the interim dividend paid in October last (when the whole of the Ordinary capital then paid up was returned) a payment of 5s. per share on 39,450 Ordinary shares and of £24. 13s. 1½d. per share on 400 Founders' shares is now recommended, making £34,725 returned to the shareholders, while the large surplus profits are kept in hand. The Menzies Mining and Exploration (O'Driscolls) Corporation announces that crushing was started on October 26. This, by the way, is the eighth Menzies Company which has entered the list of producers. The mill of the Black Flag Proprietary Company will start on the 14th inst. With regard to the Mona Gold Mine Company, Limited, the following is a copy of a cablegram received from Messrs. H. J. Saunders & Co, dated October 29:—"Have struck the lode No. 1 shaft 100-ft. level, 3 ft. in width; samples assay 6 oz. per ton; reef promising further improvement in width." Another dead set has been made against Hampton Plains, but one of these days the "Bears" will have a rude awakening. On a moderate estimate the shares are worth double the present price, and as Mr. Allen H. P. Stoneham pointed out at last Monday's confirmatory meeting, three important discoveries have been made since the previous meeting. It is also most satisfactory to learn from him that the Coolgardie Waterworks Company, which takes its water from the Hampton Plains Estate, will in five weeks' time be able to pump 100,000 to 150,000 gallons of water per day into Coolgardie. West Australian Goldfields have also been raided by the "Bears," but are recovering again at about 6. Considering the Company's large and valuable interests and the comparatively small capital, these shares will doubtless command a much higher price when the present attempt to disparage the IRROY'S Champagne. VINTAGE 1889. Carte d'Or. Extra sec.

IRROY'S Champagne. VINTAGE 1889. Carte d'Or. Brut.
ERNEST IRROY & Co., Reims. Established 1820.

West Australian goldfields passes away. In this respect, I am glad to notice the manly and intelligent defence of these goldfields in the Sunday Sun, by Mr. Michael Davitt, M.P., who speaks with some authority, having been in Western Australia a year ago. I wonder what the much reconstructed Golden Leaf, Limited, has made out the interest it obtained in the Kinsella Gold Mines, Limited, considering that the last-named shares are now almost valueless, and whether it will fare better with the Salisbury Murchison since promoted by it. Some interest has of late been taken here in the General Gordon Mine, a Colonial flotation with a capital of £125,000 in £1 shares. This mine is situated in the north-west of Ranowna, or White Feather. Rich ore has been disclosed in the prospector's shaft assaying anything between 5 and 150 oz. of gold to the ton. At greater depth, ore of an assay value of 3 oz. to the ton has been struck, and a ten-head battery is nearly ready for crushing. The mine is held in high esteem in the colony, where the £1 shares, 7s. paid, stand at a considerable premium, and now that a London register has been opened, active dealings in the shares are looked for here. The Hampton Gold Hill Mines, Limited, announce to the shareholders that after long negotiations they have succeeded in securing for the Company a property consisting of two mining leases in the Kurnalpi district, which has been very favourably reported upon by Captain Oats and Messrs. Bainbridge, Seymour, & Co.; 90 per cent. of the purchase price being taken by the vendor in fully-paid shares. Working capital to the extent of £20,000 has been provided, and the 10s. shares fully paid at 3s. 6d. look very cheap. A cablegram, which has just been received, furnishes excellent news with reference to the Lady Shenton. The battery started on September 29, and the clean-up on October 29, after 356 hours' run, yielded 1,264 oz. from 300 tons of ore. This is even better than the previous crushings, and brings the total so far crushed from the Lady Shenton up to 1,114 tons of ore for 4,415 oz. of gold. The mine is thus bearing out the statement made by Mr. John Girdwood in a communication to the press, according to which all the previous rumours about the pinching-out of the reef are unfounded; and the mine is in a better position than it ever was before. This shows how false are most of the rumours which are being set about regarding the West Australian mines.

Indian, New Zealand, and Other Mines.

With such surroundings as I have discussed under "The Kaffir Circus," it was not likely that the Indian section should show strength, and, especially in the case of Ooregum Prefs., a considerable decline is marked; while Mysore Gold—notwithstanding a dividend of 7s.—are lower at 7½ x.d. There has also been a set back in Champion Reefs and Nundydroog; but Coromandel are firmer; and there has also been some demand for Goldfields of Mysore at 21s. Amongst Australian mines, other than West Australian, Aladdin's Lamp have eased off to 2¾, although another dividend is in sight. Mount Lyell are somewhat firmer at 7⅞; and in Charters Towers' Mines, Mill's Day Dawn United, New Queen, and Day Dawn P.C. have hardened. British Broken Hill, however, are lower. Croydon Consols have been firm at 10s. 6d., and North Croydon Consols at 3s. 6d. to 3s. 9d. A cablegram has been received, according to which 211 tons have been cleaned up for 880 oz. of bullion on the Croydon Consols, making 1,253 tons, with a yield of 6,607 oz., the approximate value of which is £20,000. All this has been obtained since the last dividend was paid, and it will be seen therefore that the dividend of 1s. per share (on the 5s. shares, 4s. 6d. paid) which is to be distributed during the present month, is practically in hand. On the North Croydon Consols the shaft has now been carried down to 170 ft. It is expected to strike the Croydon Consols lode at about 200 ft. New Zealand shares have moved irregularly, a fall in Waihi Silverton, Waitekauri, and New Zealand Joint Stock being offset by advances in Taitapu, Komata Reefs, and Preece's Point. In the general foreign section, Rio Tinto have experienced a sharp rise on French support. There have also been improvements in Frontino and Bolivia, Montana, and Linares, but Tolima "B," Richmond, and Banner Gold are lower. A steady business is passing in Grand Central at about 2¼. From the Golden River Quesnelle Mine a complete report has now been received, dated October 3, according to which good progress is being made with the construction of the race way and the dam, all facilities being at hand for the economical and thorough completion of the work.

New Enterprises and Issues.

The prospectuses of the following new Companies and issues have been placed before the public during the week:—

The Washington Music Hall, Limited.—This Company has been formed to acquire the freehold property known as the Washington Music Hall, Battersea, S.W., together with a gymnasium and the Royal Standard and Washington Saloon public-houses adjoining, with the licences, fittings, scenery, &c., &c. The capital is £55,000 in shares of £1 each.

Any one who reads this prospectus carefully through will wonder that, while the estimated value of the premises fittings, stock-in-trade, &c., is put down at £72,500, the vendor should be willing to accept £70,000, payable in such a manner as to leave £5,000 working capital. There must be some reason for this reduction, and it would be as well to have this fully explained before investing any money in the concern.

St. James's Restaurant, Limited.—This Company has been formed to acquire the St. James's Restaurant, Piccadilly, and 69 and 70, Regent-street, with the leases and the whole of the furniture and other appointments upon the premises, for the purposes of the business. The capital is fixed at £107,000, divided into 11,400 Five per Cent. Cumulative Preference shares of £5 each, and 50,000 Ordinary shares of £1 each.

The excessive capitalisation does not make this appear a tempting venture.

Chicago Edison Company.—This is an issue of 1,200,000 dols. First Mortgage Five per Cent. Thirty-year Gold bonds, redeemable at the option of the Company, on six months' notice, in 1911, or any year thereafter. The principal and interest are payable to bearer in United States gold coin free of United States taxes. The London Scottish American Trust, Limited, of 75, Lombard-street, E.C., offer the above bonds for sale at the price of £217 per 1,000 dols. bond.

Cave, Austin, & Co., Limited.—This Company has been formed to acquire and amalgamate the businesses of wholesale and retail grocers, tea dealers, provision merchants, wine, spirit, and beer merchants, &c., carried on by Mr. A. J. Cave, Messrs. A. J. & C. H. Cave, J. & A. Austin, Limited, and Mr. James McCabe, in London and elsewhere. The capital is £130,000 divided into Preference and Ordinary shares of £1 each.

Victorian Gold Estates, Limited.—This Company has been formed to acquire and develop as a parent Company an extensive mining property, comprising about 9,000 acres, situate on the great Basaltic plain, in the county of Talbot, province of Wellington, in the colony of Victoria, Australia. The capital is fixed at £350,000, in shares of £1 each, of which 125,000 (including £100,000 for working capital) are now offered for subscription at par.

The property acquired is most extensive, and comes before the public under powerful auspices, viz., the London and Globe Finance and West Australian Exploring and Finance Corporations, who have guaranteed the whole of the cash capital required. This, of course, is a new parent Company, which will have ample opportunities of forming subsidiary enterprises, and the reports of the experts are most emphatic as regards the auriferous value of the property. The small amount of cash consideration required by the vendors, viz., £25,000 out of the total capital of £250,000, is illustrative of the confidence felt as to the prospects of the undertaking.

The Collingwood Goldfields, Limited.—This Company is formed for the purpose of purchasing leases containing 398 acres of auriferous properties situated in Collingwood Golden Bay, New Zealand, and known as the Golden Gulley, Quartz Ranges, and Appos Flat, and also to acquire all the water rights included in that tract of country covering an estimated area of 30,000 acres. The capital is £150,000 in shares of £1 each, of which £50,000 is to be reserved as working capital.

The British "Pattison" Hygienic Cycle Saddle Company, Limited.—This Company has been formed to acquire the British patent, together with all improvements since made by the inventor relating to improvements in saddles for cycles and other like vehicles. Capital, £100,000 in £1 shares.

Not being a cyclist, I will not venture to say whether this saddle is good or not, but the estimated future business, as well as the profits, are extremely roseate for an invention comparatively untried, while the purchase-money is, in my opinion, most excessive. I look upon this as a very doubtful venture, and one that had better be left alone.

The Rosser Cycle and Vehicle Brake Company, Limited.—This Company has been formed to acquire and take over as a going concern the business of the Ajax Cycle Company, carried on by F. W. Rosser at Ferns-road, Stratford, London, E., and the letters patent for an improved brake pan, or shoe, for road vehicles, engines, &c. The capital is £50,000 in shares of £1 each.

This venture is promoted by the Investors' and Contract Agency, Limited, and the purchase price is, in my opinion, out of all comparison with the—presumed—advantages offered. Improvements in brakes will, no doubt, still be discovered, and more than one may be found to supersede this in its utility; investors, therefore, had better be cautious in dealing with this issue.

The Insurances Corporation, Limited.—This Corporation is formed with the object of carrying on every class of business taken by Insurance Companies (except life assurance) on the principle of underwriting or re-insurance. The capital asked is £1,000,000, in shares of £10 each.

This Corporation purposes simply to cover ground already looked after by existing Insurance Companies, and in which there is a very keen competition. I cannot see any prospects of a remunerative return for a Company of this description for a long time to come.

The Sydney Gardens Hotel (Bath).—This Company proposes, with a capital of £40,000 in Preference and Ordinary shares of £5 each, to acquire the Sydney Gardens Estate in the city of Bath, for the purpose of erecting a hotel with all modern advantages. There is also a Debenture issue of £10,000 in 200 Four per Cent. Debentures of £50 each, which together with the Ordinary and 3,000 Preference shares are offered for subscription.

My Letter Box.

The following are replies to inquiries from various correspondents:—

Government, &c., Bonds.

A. G. Tirol.—I do not see any reason for exchanging from one series of Turks into another. Impecuniosity.—A fair investment; but of course subject to any future wars which might arise between Japan and other countries.

Banks, Trusts, and Financial.

W. G., Hull.—I have repeatedly given my opinion on the "system" of Douglas, Hungerford, & Williams, and advise you to have nothing to do with it. Mrs. J. S., Romford.—If you are coming up to London periodically, why not take a small safe at the City Safe Deposit, 13 and 15, Throgmorton-avenue, E.C.? The rentals are £1 1s. and upwards per annum, and you would always have access to the documents when you want to cut the coupons off. The arrangements are such that the safety of all articles is absolutely secured. H. G. F. S.—Try the Scottish Widows' Fund and the Royal Exchange Assurance office. R. A. F. K.—I have repeatedly warned my readers against colonial land and mortgage Companies of this class, and advised sale of these particular shares long ago. Yet it might be advisable to hold now. P. B, Bolton.—You cannot be a regular reader of Truth, or else you would know that I do not approve of "our own investment system" of Douglas, Hungerford, & Williams. Obviously, these gentlemen are not philanthropists, and you must be aware that I have for years carried on a campaign against syndicate touts. Mrs. M.—The name of a smart firm of City solicitors, who will assist you in recovering your money from a well-known outside broker, has been forwarded in your envelope at your request. Liverpudlian.—The issue of Six per Cent. First Mortgage Debentures of the Mexican Cotton Estates of Tlahualilo has been well received, and the bulk has been applied for. You will, however, still be able to pick up a few thousands at par (£100) if you act promptly. You can buy these either through a broker or through Mr. William Morrison, Founders'-court, Lothbury, London, E.C. J. T.—You cannot be a regular reader of Truth, or else you would know that I do not advise dealing with these syndicate touts, and am constantly warning people against them. Also see remarks under "Various Investments." Violet.—I quite agree with you that it is a bucket-shop swindle; but I have been warning people for many years past against these people, and do so in almost every issue of Truth. A. C. B., Sunderland.—I am glad to hear that so far you have received your money from these syndicate touts. That these people will continue to act as philanthropists for you is not likely, and if you wish to learn anything more about the practices of such outside dealers I refer you to my article in Truth of October 22, under the heading "The Tricks of the Syndicate Touts." F. W. W. D., Perthshire.—I am sorry to hear that you have lost money through Kynnaston, of 114, Fenchurch-street; but I have so often warned people against the syndicate touts that I am surprised that, if you are a regular reader of Truth, you should have been caught by such people. Devonian.—The two first-mentioned offices are wealthy American Companies, and if McKinley should be elected by a large majority there can be nothing against their standing.

Home Rails.

J. H. W.—Yes, there appears to be every prospect of Caledonian Deferred Ordinary and North British Deferred recovering to the figures at which they stood a few months ago. Both Companies have never been in a better position than they are now. Guardian.—I see no particular reason for selling at present.

American and Foreign Rails.

E. E. L.—I cannot really advise you in the matter. You should try and find the numbers of the bonds held by your late father. Jumbo.—1. The reorganisation has not yet been taken in hand, but will, no doubt, be promptly proceeded with after the Presidential elections. 2. As far as I can learn, yes.

Mining Shares.

Plym.—You must have bought the Transvaal Gold and Exploration shares before the amalgamation with the Lydenburg Mining Estates, and the shares in the new Company—which is now known as the Transvaal Gold Mining Estates—have not yet got a settlement. That is what you are kept waiting for. Dinah.—1. A mine with considerable possibilities, if the Sheba Lode is struck. 2. Hold for the present. W. X. Y. Z.—Have nothing to do with this concern, or else your second state might be worse than your first. No option but to wait. X. W.—Promising Companies; but of course it is impossible to say if they are safe for a substantial rise. Hold for the present. Golf.—No option but to hold now. Lucy.—The present is the worst possible time for selling South African shares. If you are able to hold for another month you will doubtless get much better prices. Sigil.—These West Australian Companies are doing fairly well, and there is no reason to sell. There has been a good deal of realising by nervous holders, which accounts for the relapse. Thistle.—Yes, I still consider that the Company is promising, but I do not advise a purchase of the Founders' shares at present. You know all about the Wealth of Nations from the circular recently issued; hold. W. H., St. John's.—No option but to hold your Mining shares Nos. 1 to 3. Drummer.—1. No option but to hold for a recovery. 2. Hold, but do not average yet. 3. Ditto. Merman.—Yes, you might safely put some money into W.A. Share Corporation and W.A (Gold District) Trading Corporation at present prices. Inner Temple.—1. The Menzies Golden Rhine is promising, and the other shares, Nos. 2 to 7, should also be held for a recovery. S. H. G.—The prospects of this Company are very good; but the South African market generally is so weak that these shares have suffered. Dante.—I gave particulars of the present position of the New Primrose in Truth of October 1, and have nothing to add to it. The only thing you can do is to hold for an improvement. This also applies to New Crœsus. Kandy.—Hold Nos. 1 to 3 for a recovery. Terrier.—No option but to hold; a recovery will doubtless come along in time. W. H. S.—This market is at present very weak, but in time you should be able to get out of your shares. Gemini.—Block 50 Hampton Plains is doing well, and I see no reason for selling now. The shares have only fallen in sympathy with the rest of the Mining Market. Mining, South Wales.—1. Yes. 2. This is not the time to sell Mining shares such as those held by you A to G; hold for a recovery. I do not think much of No. 4. Taffy.—Why do you not write to the London Secretary of the New Bultfontein, 6, Drapers' Gardens, London, E.C. S. X.—These shares have only fallen in sympathy with the rest of the South African market. They should be held for a recovery. Rod.—London and Globe Finance should be held for an important advance. Hold the other shares, but do not average yet. Irishman, Paris.—The mine is being developed, and the information is favourable; but as with other West Australian mines some patience is now needed. A. C., Mullingar.—No option but to hold the shares, Nos. 1 to 5, for a recovery. Herby.—You went into these shares at the wrong time, and bought at the top. There is no option now but to hold until the market generally improves again. Novice, B.—No option but to hold. Roland Hope.—In the present condition of the Mining Market there is nothing to be done but to hold the shares, Nos. 1 to 7, for a recovery. The slump is altogether unjustified, and you, apparently, have plenty of time to turn round, as you do not require the money until next May. Hyson.—1. Yes, I think if you proceeded against this outside broker through a sharp firm of City solicitors they would very likely pay up before the matter would get into court. 2. Of course, not too much time should be lost. 3. If you send me a stamped addressed envelope, I will forward the name of a smart firm of City solicitors. Martinmas.—I think there is every prospect of this Company taking a turn for the better, and you should hold now. Gladiator.—Gladiator Mining shares should be held. The fall is unjustified. Thane.

Champagne.—Périnet & Fils' Cuvée Réservée. Vintages 1884, 1887, and 1889, are of unrivalled quality and highly recommended for present consumption. Of all Wine Merchants.

—I do not advise purchase of the shares Nos. 1 to 6 mentioned by you. You can do better in those recommended in my letter. N. M. S.—1. I do not see how you can get out of the matter. 2. Hold; but do not buy more to average yet. The Lake View Consols, which is a very rich mine, is one of the best purchases in the market. J. B. T.—1. You may congratulate yourself on having sold East Rands at 6⅝; they are now 4½. 2. My contemporary is not always right. 3. I do not care for these. 4. No. Leontodon.—Fair mining risks; but I do not advise purchase just now. Agnew.—Hannan's Proprietary Development is a good property, and the price has only fallen in sympathy with the rest of the market. Hold. Pym.—No option but to hold these shares; they are likely to recover. Buffles.—Yes, you should hold these shares. West Cheshire. — Yes, present quotations are tempting for the formation of a small trust in South Africans and West Australians. Amongst your list Nos. 1 to 16, the following are the most suitable:—Langlaagte Estate (1), Randfontein (3), Knights (5), Johannesburg Investment (12), W. A. Exploring and Finance (15), and London and Globe Finance (16). Inquirer, Scarborough.—1. No; I do not advise purchase of Lady Bess. 2. I am glad you are doing so well in Croydon Consols; you should hold for a further rise. 3. No option but to hold for a recovery. 4. I advised sale of these when higher. At present hold, but do not average. 5. No; I do not advise purchase of Campana. Mine, Cork.—No; I do not advise purchase of these shares. You can do better in those recommended in my letter under the "Kaffir Circus" and "Golden West Australia." Pioneer.—This has been a very disappointing mine, and the present weakness in the South African market is an additional drawback. I can only advise you to do the best you can. The documents are returned. Ferrum.—No option but to hold your shares Nos. 1 to 8 for a recovery. Argon.—1. I stated the position of Langlaagte Star in TRUTH of October 29. 2. I referred to this matter in TRUTH of October 15. The business is a good one, but it has been badly mismanaged. 3. Yes; no option but to hold. W. M., Hampstead.—You are both unfair and impertinent; and what you say about the West Australian market shows that you are either altogether ignorant of the position, or else that you are a confirmed pessimist. I am content to let time prove that I am taking a correct view of the position in Western Australia, which is based upon information carefully collected, and confirmed by the best authorities. You pick out a few disappointing mines. What do you say of Croydon Consols? Chercheuse.—1. No option but to hold now. 2. Yes. Arthur.—I can obtain no more information on this point. Veritas Floreat.—Great Boulder Junction Reefs stand at 1⅛. I am glad to hear that you have done so well in Croydon Consols; thanks for the compliment. Cripple Creek Pioneer.—This is not the time to sell. You should hold for a recovery, although some of the shares mentioned were not well selected. Anonymous.—I cannot attend to anonymous letters. All communications must be accompanied with the names and addresses of the writers as a token of good faith. Allowance.—Nos. 1 to 4 are fair mining risks. Cardiff.—You should consult a solicitor. B. H. W.—1. The occurrences in connection with Westralia, Limited, are certainly very reprehensible; but what is to be done if the shareholders will not take an interest in the matter and enforce their rights? 2. The W. A. Exploring and Finance and London and Globe Finance Corporations' meetings will be held in December. Investor, Sunderland.—Amongst the shares mentioned Nos. 1 to 10, I consider Langlaagte Star (3) and North Croydon Consols (6) the best purchases at present prices. Pavo.—No reason for selling Johannesburg Water. I do not like the other Company at all. D. J. A.—There is nothing for it but to hold your shares Nos. 1 to 10 for the recovery, which must come about sooner or later. K. L.—You certainly ought to have received the scrip long ago; why not apply direct to the Company. F. P., Tetbury.—Your talk is too absurd to be reasonably discussed, and you will find in the end that I am right. C. F., Ealing.—No option but to hold for a recovery. Beginner, Lancashire.—You had better make the investment in question in West Australian Exploring and Finance and London and Globe Finance, which are more stable than the others. Scarboro'.—I have not heard of the amalgamation. Your shares, Nos. 1 to 6, should be held for a rise. H. R. H.—A low-priced share, which may eventually come to the front again. L. H.—Under the circumstances there is no option but to hold all the shares. With reference to the August crushings of the Lake View Consols, there is a clerical mistake. It should be that 1,508 oz. of gold was realised at £6,315, or £4. 3s. 9d. per ounce. T. W. G.—You will find some particulars with regard to the General Gordon Gold Mine under "Golden West Australia." N. W. F.—I think you had better hold your North White Feather Reward shares and pay the call, as the news from the property is favourable.

INDUSTRIAL SHARES.

Flint.—1. A fair investment; but I do not look for much of a rise for some time to come. 2. No. 3. The dividend is to be paid on the Deferred shares. C. J. S., Clapham.—Impossible to tell just now. The nitrate trade is now in the dumps. A Constant Reader, Cirencester.—If this is stipulated in the articles of association the Company would have a right to do so; but you might remonstrate with the Secretary on the point. Doubtful, Dorking.—I do not think much of these Hotel shares. E. P. Reading.—Write to the Secretary of the Company. Depressed.—Why do you deal with these outside brokers? You will never be treated properly by them. You should close your account at once. I have returned the documents. H. T. G.—Yes, the Mexican Cotton Estates of Tlahualilo Six per Cent. Debentures at par (£100) are an excellent investment, and you cannot do better. Rona.—1. I have no favourable opinion of this concern. 2 and 3. No. Nemoni.—I am afraid that the electrical shares in question are not promising, and I have never thought it advisable to recommend them to my readers. H. S. B.—I cannot answer generally; you must tell me what particular Company you refer to. J. F. P.—A fair investment, but no catch. J. C. B., Edinburgh.—I know nothing of the concern in question, which seems to be a small Liverpool business. On the face of it, I should certainly have nothing to do with it. Stoneycroft.—I have repeatedly warned my readers against United Alkali shares, and do so still. You cannot be a regular reader of TRUTH or else you would not have bought them. A Small Investor, Beeston Hill.—All depends upon the issue of the Presidential elections in the United States. If this is satisfactory, everything in that country will take a turn for the better. Teufel.—I do not consider Dock stock progressive in present times, and do not advise the investment. Hew.—The middle price on October 17 was $\frac{15}{16}$; but obviously you would only be able to sell at a fraction lower owing to the jobber's turn.

MIXED INVESTMENTS.

Clio.—1. No option but to hold. If the American Presidential elections turn out all right there will be a general recovery. 2. Certainly hold West Australian Share Corporation shares, which is stated to be doing very well. Munro.—1. This is not known yet. The office is at 14, Regent-street, London, S.W. 2. Certainly hold Buffelsdoorn. 3. I do not like Simpson's Lever Chains, and said so when the price was much higher. 4. I do not think much of these. 5. No. 6. It might be worth while to hold for a possible recovery. 7. Possibly, when this Company is doing well. Bull with Sore Head.—1. I gave the latest information with regard to Langlaagte Star in last week's issue under "The Kaffir Circus," and strongly advise you to hold these and all the other shares in question. There will be eventually a sharp recovery. W. P. E.—No particular reason to buy this Railway Scrip, and I do not advise purchase of Cycle Components. I should think that Gladiators and Bagots are better worth buying. Q. E. D.—1. I have repeatedly stated that I do not like this West Australian Finance Corporation. 2. I certainly advise holding Metropolitan Districts for a permanent increase in capital value. 3. No reason to sell now. W. T. H., Cork.—1. From all I can hear this Company is doing well. 2. I do not like Hall Mines, and have repeatedly said so. Eager.—No particular reason for selling these bank shares; but you might have a very good chance of a comparatively quick profit by investing in Randfontein as proposed. King.—1. I can hear nothing of the Mammoth Gold Mine, and have a poor opinion of it. 2. The mine seems to be a good one, but the management is very bad; write to the secretary. 3. I should say there is every prospect of a recovery in these Indian mining shares. 4 and 5. Yes, subject to the issue of the Presidential elections Westralia.—Some of the stocks mentioned by you are very promising; but you might as well make your investments in mining shares from my recommendations under "Golden West Australia" and "The Kaffir Circus." Chilians (14) are a good investment. Molly.—1. No reason to sell Canadian Pacific Debenture Stock now. Neither is there any reason for selling Nos. 2 and 3, which will, however, depend upon the result of the Presidential elections. With regard to No. 4, I must refer you to my letter. 5. High rates of interest are not compatible with safety; and the fact that this institution closed its doors some time ago illustrates this remark. A. X., Enquirer.—I do not see that you can get any redress; but in future deal only through a member of the Stock Exchange, and not through outside brokers. The South African shares should be held now. You certainly ought to have bought your Hit or Miss at a lower price than that charged to you. Amongst the other shares mentioned by you, Great Boulder Proprietary (3) and Nundydroog (4) are the best. Nemo Black.—You should hold all your Home Rails for a rise, as these are well selected; and there is no option but to keep the South Africans for the present, and also the Americans now that the Presidential elections are at hand. If you run shares in the market, you cannot claim to see the stocks. I cannot advise upon the solvency of stockbrokers; but the man in question is an outside broker, and I advise you to deal only through a member of the Stock Exchange. G. T.—I do not think this a very good security for the amount. Carlo.—I must refer you to my letter, and you must make the selection yourself. Trustic.—1. You might hold for the present, as the Caledonian Railway is doing well. 2. Yes, I think they will eventually go better. 3. Colonial bonds and British Corporation stocks would give what you require. Collingwood.—After the heavy fall you should hold now; a recovery is probable. Sapientia.—1. Hold the Argentine Railway Debenture stocks Nos. 1 and 2; and there is no reason for selling Chilians (3) now. No. 4 is a fair investment at present price, and I have never thought much of the Electrical shares (5), and do not do so now. No. 6 had better be held now. Shamrock.—1. A fair West Australian mine. 2. I do not think much of this cable property. 3. Fair value; but, if you have a profit, take it. Perambulator. — 1. I have never had a good opinion of Richmond Consolidated, and have not now. 2. No catch. Desirions.—Amongst your shares, Nos. 1 to 9, the Americans should now be held to await the issue of the Presidential elections. No reason to sell the tea shares or the mortgage debentures (6); and it is not the time for selling the others. Do not buy yet. H. P. L.—1. Yes, Bovril shares are likely to advance: I gave full particulars of the new Company in TRUTH of October 22 under "Various Investments." 2. A fair investment. 3. A mining property; you cannot say that any mine is absolutely safe. 4. A fair mining risk. 5. No particular temptation to buy these. Irishman, Strabane.—The decline in these shares is so completely unfounded that there is no option but to hold. Both are doing exceedingly well, and this refers to all your mining shares. L. S. D.—1. Yes, the new Uruguay Loan is a fair investment, yielding upwards of 7 per cent. per annum. 2. You might mix these with the Six per Cent. Debentures of the Mexican Cotton Estates of Tlahualilo at par (£100). Spec.—1. The slump in the South African market is so general, that everything is affected. There is no option but to hold, although you should never put too much money into one particular mine. 2. There is likely to be a rally in these. Country Lad.—I do not think much of No. 1. Sell No. 2 on a rise. No. 3 is a promising New Zealand mine. No. 4 will probably come along again when the rising in Rhodesia is over, and there is no option but to hold No. 5. Dungarvan.—I do not think much of the tea shares Nos. 1 and 2; but No. 3 is a promising investment, and No. 4 is also doing better now. A. W., Birmingham.—1. You can make your selection from my letter. 2. No reason to sell Slaters now. 3. Amongst these Preece's Point are the most promising; but you can do better by following the advice given in my letter under "Golden West Australia." H. I. M.—You have done quite right to buy yourself the Six per Cent. First Mortgage Debentures of the Mexican Cotton Estates of Tlahualilo at par. They are a good investment. With reference to your further proposed investment, Alabama Midland Five per Cent. Gold Bonds would be very suitable, and you can safely buy these the moment you hear that Mr. McKinley has been elected to the Presidency of the United States.

VARIOUS INVESTMENTS.

The Bank of England has at last taken the step which I advised some time ago, viz., to borrow on Consols and other securities so as to make its rate more effective. If this had been done a month earlier it would have been much better, but it is not too late now. The hardening of the Money Market has not done any harm to high-class securities, as it is not expected that money will become any dearer, and should Mr. McKinley be elected President of the United States a good deal of hoarded gold will be released. Consols have advanced to 108½, and 3½ per cent. India Stock has improved to 117½. British Corporation stocks and Colonial bonds have been fairly steady, and it is evident that, barring accidents, the present level is a pretty safe one for investors. Under these circumstances, those who have hitherto held back in the hope of lower quotations of gilt-edged securities, might now proceed to make their investments. Silver has marked very little change for the week at 30d., and Rupee paper has advanced nearly a point to 62½. Cycle shares have, upon the whole, improved, and at times a good deal of activity was shown. The Swift Cycle Company appears to have met with a favourable reception, more especially in Dublin, where the shares are quoted at ⅛ premium; and I quite look for a further improvement, in view of the very moderate capitalisation, and of the favourable outlook for the cycle trade generally. Gladiators have been largely dealt in, and the Ordinary are firm at ¼ premium. Rumours continue to prevail that the Bagot Company will be taken over by the Dunlop. At one time these shares rose to 1¼ premium, and even now are in demand at ⅞ premium. Beestons have declined to 4, and Cycle Components are down to 3⅝ x.d., but Dunlop Deferred are in good demand at 1 7/16. With reference to the Nitrate Railway, I understand that a movement is going on for the appointment of a committee of investigation, which, under all the circumstances, appears to be advisable. The Debentures of the Mexican Cotton Estates of Tlahualilo has met with a good reception, and, as they pay 6 per cent. interest, those who have picked these up will make a safe investment, combined with a high yield. Bovril shares have advanced to 5, and so eagerly have these been mopped up that there is very little supply left in the market. I hear that the issue of the new Bovril Company will be made in a fortnight's time, and there is very little doubt that not only will the public receive the Company exceedingly well, but that the shareholders in the old Company will also be anxious to convert. Frank Tarrant & Co. continue to send out glowing circulars in which they invite subscriptions for their "special joint deals," while boasting that they have closed their "Spanish special joint deal" at the magnificent profit of £118. 2s. 6d. net on every £30 subscribed. They allege that they sold Spanish on October 6 at 61⅝, and were able to repurchase on October 20 at 57¼. Now is it at all likely that Frank Tarrant & Company are such philanthropists as to allow their clients to participate in the profits made in a blind pool of this kind? This is evidently the opinion of a correspondent, who sends me a copy of the letter he has sent to Frank Tarrant & Co. in reply to their circular:—

> Keep your circulars till they are applied for—they are a nuisance. I pay no attention to "touts." In transacting Stock Exchange business I employ a broker I know, not a strange "tout." If you can really make such enormous profits, stick to them; never give them magnanimously to strangers, and be content with a modest 10 per cent. commission. You are either very generous or very foolish. Did you see the TRUTH items about your firm recently? If false, why don't you prosecute the paper for libel?

I wish that all readers of TRUTH took so sensible a view of the doings of the syndicate touts. Instead of this, I continue to receive absurd inquiries from people who wish to know whether they should deal with these people! J. Edwards & Co., stock and share dealers of Talbot House, Arundel-street, London, W.C. are to the fore with another boastful circular concerning "Operations successfully closed" in 1895 and 1896. They also append numerous complimentary extracts from customers—without their names and addresses—merely mentioning the various cities and towns; as a correspondent points out, "Irishmen don't appear to swallow the bait," as no extracts from clients residing in Ireland are published, a fact upon which the denizens of the Emerald Isle are much to be congratulated.—Your affectionate Uncle,

MOSES.

All Rights Reserved.]

QUEER STORY;

MARY JANE'S MOLAR.

"NOW then, Master Dick, be off now, do. I can't let you stay here worritin' all the morning; and me so busy, with a lot of company coming to-day, and a big dinner to get ready. Besides, you know your mamma doesn't like your being in the kitchen, and she'll only scold me, if she finds you here. Now do be off!"

"Ah, you're such an old duck, Mary Jane, that I can't tear myself away from you—not even to oblige the mater."

"Go along with your nonsense, Master Dick!"

"'Tisn't nonsense, Mary Jane. I think you're the most nailing cook I've ever seen. I say, do let me have one of those meringues."

"Indeed I can't, Master Dick. They're for the dinner to-night."

"Oh, just one! It will never be missed out of all that lot."

"I tell you, Master Dick, I can't."

"Oh, come now, Mary Jane, don't be hard on a fellow. I am such dead nuts on meringues. I tell you what it is. Exchange is no robbery. If you'll give me a meringue, I'll give you—a kiss."

"Well, I never! What next, I wonder, Master Dick?"

"You used to like kissing me before I was ten, and went to school—when I struck against it. Now I'm thirteen, I guess you'd like it better."

"Indeed, Master Dick," laughed the cook, a buxom young woman of thirty-five or so. "And what makes you guess such rubbish as that?"

"'Tisn't rubbish; it's fact," answered Dick, with a knowing wag of his curly head. "The older a fellow gets, the more the women want to kiss him, you know."

"Heart alive, Master Dick, what things you do say!"

"Ah, I haven't been all these years in the world for nothing, Mary Jane. And I just about know the ropes, I tell you. When a fellow's a nipper—that is till he's about ten, you twig—the women kiss him. But when he grows up a bit, they get shy and expect him to kiss them. What's more, they're beastly sick if he doesn't; though they sham not to be. They are so jolly artful."

"A pretty character to give us! And at your age, too! I never did."

"It's true, though, ain't it? Come along now, you old brick of a Mary Jane. I'll give you one kiss, and you'll give me two meringues in exchange, won't you?"

"There now, Master Dick. Have done! Have done! You took me so by surprise or I'd never have let you! And you shouldn't be so rough! There! See what has happened."

For in the course of the brief struggle which had occurred, a small white object had fallen to the floor from Mary Jane's mouth and rolled under the dresser.

In an instant, Dick had pounced upon it and picked it up.

"Moses!" he exclaimed, as he held it between his thumb and finger, and scanned it curiously. "A double-tooth. Is it a real 'un, Mary Jane?"

"Give it me, Master Dick. No; it isn't. I paid for a set of ten at the rate of a pound a-piece. And I shouldn't wonder if you haven't broke it."

"Seems all right, I think. I say, what a rum looking beggar it is. What's it made of? How did it manage to come out?"

"Lor, sir, how inquisitive you are. It had worked loose in the plate. I meant to have it fixed in next time I went into the town. But give it me, do!"

"Right you are. But just hand over those meringues. Three? Thanks, awfully. You are a brick. Here's the grinder. I say, I'll stand the damage. Oh, goodness! That's the mater coming! So long!"

And mischievous Master Dick disappeared through the back door into the garden.

Mary Jane just had time to arrange her cap and slip the tooth into her pocket, before her mistress entered the kitchen.

"I just came back, cook," explained the lady, "to say something that I quite forgot when I was giving my orders after breakfast. I think I told you that Miss Startivant was coming to-day?"

"Yes, ma'am," said Mary Jane, assuming a rather wooden expression. Miss Startivant was her mistress's aunt; a rich, but miserly old maid, who often stayed there, and, as often, omitted to "remember" the servants. It may easily be guessed, therefore, that she was no favourite with the worthy folk below stairs.

"What I forgot to order for this evening's dinner," continued her mistress, "was a plum tart. My aunt is particularly fond of plum tart. You had better send out into the garden for some of those fine Orleans plums. And I hope, cook, that you will be careful to make your very lightest crust. Miss Startivant is most particular!"

"Very well, ma'am," replied Mary Jane, looking still more wooden.

"That is all then, I think. I told you about the meringues, didn't I—and the grouse, and the veal, and the toasted cheese? You will be careful about the toasted cheese—won't you? It is another favourite dish of Miss Startivant's, and she is accustomed to splendid cooking at home."

"I'll not fail to do my best, ma'am," said Mary Jane.

Her mistress had hardly gone, before Harriett, the head-housemaid, looked into the kitchen.

"So that old skimp of a Startivant's coming to-day," she remarked, with a sniff.

"Yes; and I've got to make a special plum tart, with my very lightest crust, all in the old cat's honour," said Mary Jane, with sarcasm.

"And I've had particular horders has to the shaking up of her bed," said Harriett. "Ugh! I'd like to shake her up. And if it wasn't for my own credit, she should have her bed all clinks and lumps—that she should!"

"And if it wasn't for my credit," chimed in the cook, "she should have a crust to that plum tart as 'ud give her a pain in her chest for three days."

"Of course, we can't blame missus for making a fuss with her," pronounced Harriett, with magnanimous fairness.

"Certainly not. Missis is her only niece, and looks to the future. I'd do the same, if I was in her place."

"So would I; but 'tisn't only the old cat's stinginess that makes me mad with her. It's her nasty affected ways. Did I tell you how I catch her, last time she was here, posing and sniggling in front of the glass in the drawing-room, when she thought she was there alone, just before dinner one night? Oh, it was 'orrid! And her all false, too; 'air, colour, teeth and all."

"I can well believe it, 'Arriett. She's always tryin' to pass herself off for young; and making up to be sweet and bewitchin'. There's that Mr. Lemaine, now, that missis has asked here to please 'er. It's downright scandalous how she runs after him. Quite immoral, I call it."

"So do I. Well, I must be off to see about shaking up that bed," said the housemaid, turning away.

"And I must be getting the plums for that tart," said Mary Jane; adding to herself, with a toss of the head, as she went, "Best Orleans plums, indeed? If I had my way I'd make it of the greenest damsons I could find."

About half an hour later, as she was returning from the garden with her pie-dish well filled, she again ran up against Master Dick. Dick himself had been in the garden annexing a few apricots and peaches, to take the sweet taste of the meringues out of his mouth; and also, as he had explained to the incensed gardener who caught him flagrante delicto, because fruit in the morning was so jolly wholesome for a fellow. It was altogether so novel a thing for Master Dick to take his stand upon dietetic principles that the gardener was momentarily nonplussed; and the young gentleman had slipped safely away with his pocketful of spoils before the other had fairly recovered from his surprise.

"Hilloa! Mary Jane!" exclaimed Dick, "what ripping plums! They are our best Orleans—ain't they? You're never going to put them into a tart?"

"Missis have give special horders hon the subjeck," replied Mary Jane.

"Oh, I know why that is. It's all because that greedy old Aunt Matilda is coming to-day. The mater always kills the fatted calf for her. Blowed if she's worth it, though. She's never tipped me so much as a thin 'un, ever since I've known her."

"Lor, Master Dick, ain't she really now? And you're not the only one she's forgot to remember, neither."

"She's as rich as Crœsus," grumbled Dick. "She could sport me a flimsy, and never miss it."

"Ah well, Master Dick. Everybody has their way. And partin' ain't her way. That's the fact."

"I shouldn't altogether mind if she was to choke herself with one of those plum-stones," said Dick, piously. And then he added, "'Tisn't so unlikely either. She's awfully keen on her grub. Feeds in the most horrid, greedy way. It is quite disgusting to see her."

This remark came rather strangely from a young gentleman whose own appetite was nothing if not voracious; and who, moreover, had just now, within an hour of a phenomenally hearty breakfast, polished off a trifle of three meringues, and a dozen or so of wall-fruit. But Dick was sublimely unconscious of any inconsistency.

"Tummas have said the same thing, sir," replied Mary Jane, "and Tummas have lived in the genteelest families."

"It doesn't matter to Thomas so much as it does to me," observed Dick, with a critical, superior air. "She isn't Thomas's aunt. She is mine; and whatever she does reflects itself on me, so to speak. When Jones minor was staying here last Christmas, I was quite ashamed of introducing him to Aunt Matilda. A fellow's relations have no right to give him away. Well, I'm off now for a ride on my bike. Mind you make that tart as beastly as possible. You might use salt instead of sugar, or cayenne instead of spice."

And with this undutiful suggestion, Master Dick strolled away.

"By Jove!" he muttered to himself, as he got out his bicycle, "a sov or two would come in handy just now. There's that fifteen bob I owe at the tuck-shop, and ten more to Saunders major; and my sub to the Footer Club. I wish I could squeeze the oof out of Aunt Matilda. But there's no chance, worse luck. Hang it! What's the use of an aunt if she don't tip a fellow? She don't deserve to have a nephew at all."

"Now, Dick," said his mother, to her mischievous son, in the course of the afternoon, "do be a good boy while your Aunt Matilda is here; and do be civil and polite to her. Last time she was staying with us your rude behaviour towards her distressed me extremely."

"All right, mums," answered Dick, with a quite unexpected cheerfulness of acquiescence. "I'll do the civil to Aunt Matilda this time. I'm beastly sorry I was so rude to her before."

"That's a good boy! And mind, at meals, for instance, that you're ready to jump up and get auntie anything she may want. She thinks so much of that sort of thing."

"Never fear, mums. I'll keep my optics open. I'll sit next her at dinner, to-night, if you like; and then I shall be able to wait on her better."

"Will you really, Dick?" said his mother, delighted at the readiness with which he acceded to her suggestions.

"Y-e-es—to please you, mums, dear. It'll be awful slow for me. But, for your sake, I'll do it."

"Thank you, Dick; you dear, affectionate boy. Come here and let me kiss you."

Dick submitted to his mother's embrace, with considerable qualms of conscience. She was certainly the sweetest, most unsuspicious of women. It would be a shame to deceive her; and yet the idea which he had in his mischievous young mind was awfully droll—irresistibly amusing. He didn't think he could resist it; in fact, he was sure he couldn't. And it would serve Aunt Matilda right—the mean, shabby creature. It was, even, a duty to punish her for her stinginess; an act of virtue, of high morality. He must not shirk it. It would be as bad as funking at football, or taking a licking from Jones minor. No, he must go through with it, like a man.

It was with some such argument as this that Master Dickie silenced his conscience. Coming from him, it was almost as good as his enunciation of the dietetic properties of peaches in the morning. However, it answered its present purpose, which was all that was required of it; and his mind was made up to persist in his scheme.

Aunt Matilda arrived at six o'clock, with two enormous boxes, swathed in wrapping, and innumerable smaller impedimenta. Thomas, the footman, had, with much reluctance, to carry the larger luggage upstairs; Harriett, the housemaid, conveyed the smaller parcels with no better grace. When they were out of hearing of the unwelcome visitor, they expressed themselves about her in no complimentary terms.

"This here's what might be called gratooitous labour," said Thomas, panting under the larger of the boxes.

"And called gratooitous 'cos there ain't no gratooity connected with it," observed Harriett, perpetrating a pleasantry.

"I've always been used to ladies," remarked the footman.

"Any one could see that with half an eye, Tummas."

At dinner that evening, Dickie, in accordance with his expressed resolve, seated himself next to Aunt Matilda. He was a very gentlemanly boy—when he cared to be so—and his air and manners were taking and agreeable. To-night he was on his very best behaviour. He conversed with Aunt Matilda in a modest deferential way that pleased her mightily, and caused his mother to beam and smile approval upon him. He would scarcely let Thomas wait upon his aunt. Did the worthy lady seem to be wanting anything—bread, salt, sugar, wine, what not? Dickie was on his feet in an instant. Aunt Matilda waxed quite gracious at his attention. She thought to herself what a wonderfully improved boy Dickie was! "And all went merry as a marriage bell," until the arrival of the puddings.

"Now, aunt," said the lady of the house, "Let me send you some of this plum tart? Cook remembers how you appreciated her plum tarts on former occasions, and she has made this one in your especial honour."

"Thank you, my dear, thank you; I will take a little."

"There's no cream, mother," said Dickie, looking round at the sideboard, "and plum tart is nothing without cream. Hadn't Thomas better fetch some?"

"Yes, dear, certainly. Thomas, just tell cook to send in some cream, at once, please."

"All right," added Dickie; "you see about the cream, Thomas. I'll hand auntie her tart."

And he sprang to his feet and took up the plate, which his mother had loaded with the purple, juicy plums.

"Crikie! How hot the plate is!" exclaimed Master Dick, setting it down hastily on the sideboard, at the back of his mother. And then he went round for his napkin, and with its assistance conveyed the plum tart safely to his aunt.

"I hope you haven't burnt your fingers, my dear," said Miss Startivant, affably.

"Oh, nothing to speak of, aunt, thank you."

By that time Thomas had returned with the cream, to which, as to all her favourite dainties, Aunt Matilda helped herself generously. She then attacked the luscious mixture on her plate. Dickie kept his eye upon her, as though anxious to anticipate any want of hers that might arise. Indeed, he seemed so intent on being polite to her in this respect, that he forgot other requisites of politeness, and stared at her rather unduly. A lady eating plum tart would probably prefer not to be looked at at all. The process of disgorging the stones—a harmless necessary process—can scarcely be performed gracefully. This plum tart was full of stones, of which Miss Startivant duly got rid and ranged them along the side of her plate. But at last she came to one which appeared to cause her some peculiar trouble and embarrassment. She put it into her spoon in the ordinary course, and laid it on the plate; then, however, she suddenly gave a start, half made a grab at it with her thumb and fingers, looked nervously round, and, seeing Dickie with his eyes turned her way, hastily thrust her spoon over the plum-stone and laid it down. A minute later, Thomas came and removed her plate. Aunt Matilda looked round with an anxious, uncertain sort of expression on her face, and seemed about to call him back. Her niece noticed it.

"I beg your pardon. Hadn't you finished, aunt?" she exclaimed.

"I—oh yes, thank you, my dear. Quite finished—quite finished," said Miss Startivant, hastily.

But something had clearly upset her; and she was distrait and cross for the rest of the evening. Even to Mr. Lemaine she scarcely made herself so gracious as usual.

Next morning, when his mother had gone off to attend to the housekeeping, Dickie found his Aunt Matilda alone in the drawing-room. He approached her with rather a mysterious air, and, putting his hand into his waistcoat pocket, drew something carefully forth between his thumb and finger.

"Oh! Aunt Matilda," he said, in a low, confidential voice, "here's some property of yours. I—I—saw you shed it last night, you know. Of course, I said nothing about it, with other people there. But I got it back from Thomas directly after dinner, and here it is. Only Thomas and I know anything about it, and I made Thomas swear to hold his tongue until after I had seen you."

As he spoke, he handed his aunt a very fine specimen of a porcelain molar tooth.

Miss Startivant thrust it away from her with an almost hysterical scream.

"It's not mine—not mine. You d-don't suppose that I wear false teeth, you stupid boy!"

"Oh, I say, aunt," ejaculated Dick, evidently incredulous. "I—I saw it come out of your mouth."

"Yes—yes. But it was among the plums in the tart. It was, indeed. You believe my word, don't you, Dick?"

"Of course I do, auntie," said Master Dick, sweetly;

THE SANITARY ENGINEERING CO. (Carter Bros.), 65, Victoria-st., Westminster, for making Sanitary Surveys in London or country.

"and as the tooth ain't yours, I must try to find an owner elsewhere. There's Uncle Edward out in the garden! I'll go and ask him whether he dropped it into the tart."

"No; no! On no account," interposed the lady, quickly.

"Well, here's Mr. Lemaine just coming in now. We'll ask him whether he——"

"Certainly not, Dick. Are you mad? Put the tooth away at once."

And then she added, suddenly changing her tone, and speaking coaxingly, "The tooth isn't mine, but—but—it's such an—an—indelicate thing to—to—keep exposed. Do put it back in your pocket. And you won't talk about it, Dickie dear, will you? Promise me."

"Oh! I won't talk about it. But I'm not certain of Thomas, you know. Thomas is a dreadful chap to let out secrets—a regular sieve. Of course," he added, generously, "if I hadn't spent all my pocket-money, I'd manage to ensure Thomas's silence for you, auntie. But I'm so stony broke just now——"

"I certainly shall not pay him any money," interrupted Miss Startivant, freezing up instantly at the mere suggestion of such a thing. "I would never bribe a flunkey, especially as the tooth has nothing to do with me."

"No! I'll tell Thomas that. But Thomas is an awful unbeliever—a regular infidel. It's because he's such a fibber himself, I suppose. He's a splendid servant; but he has no principles; the mater says so. He's capital company, all the same. Mr. Lemaine tells me that when he's up valeting him, he keeps him amused all the while by——"

"What would Thomas want to hold his tongue?" interrupted Miss Startivant, with a sudden change of tone.

"Hum," said Dick. "I don't know. I'll go and ask him. But I'm afraid he's awfully grasping, auntie, dear!"

* * * * *

The grasping Thomas stuck out for five pounds—and got it. At least, he didn't get it. He only got a sovereign. Mary Jane had the same sum for the loan of her molar. The other three pounds were not accounted for. But when Dickie went back after the holidays, he paid his account at the tuck-shop; his loan to Saunders major; his sub to the Footer Club. He also stood a supper of sweet-stuff to his whole dormitory.

MUSIC.

THE MILLENARY "MIKADO."

THE "Mikado," one of the most popular of Gilbert and Sullivan's operas in the provinces, in America, and more particularly on the Continent, has, of course, been performed a good many thousand times in various parts of the world. The Dutch know it as "Het Mikado"; it has been given all over Germany; in waltz-loving Vienna it disputed pride of place with the operas of Johann Strauss; and three years ago, at the Unter den Linden, Berlin, Sullivan was immensely disgusted to find Nanki-Poo played by a lady, who eventually became a member of his company, and who, indeed, was no other than Frau Ilka von Palmay. In the course of its merry career, it must have extracted some hundreds of thousand pounds from the public to the artists, some of the money, no doubt, adhering en route to the pockets of the authors and the management. In London it reached its thousandth representation about a month ago, when both its authors were holiday-making. It was not, therefore, until last Saturday that the feast could be kept. A pity it was that Mr. D'Oyly Carte, who has been so intimately connected with this form of art, was then too ill to be present to personally receive congratulations; but Mr. Gilbert was on the stage, and Sir Arthur Sullivan in the orchestra, while an attempt was made to convert the house into a sort of Japanese theatre by handsome hangings of Liberty silk, festoons of chrysanthemums, and Chinese lanterns. The opera has often been better played, for the artists of 1885 are now eleven years older than they then were, and, with one or two exceptions (the most brilliant being Mr. Passmore, a most amusing buffoon, who is cast for Mr. George Grossmith's old part of the executioner, Ko Ko), the new-comers are scarcely equal to their predecessors. Still, although every joke is now a "chestnut," and the tunes have been whistled by street-boys innumerable, the "Mikado" holds its own as the most attractive of the Gilbert and Sullivan series. Whether it will ever have an equally profitable successor remains to be seen, although in point of fact the result of "The Grand Duke" showed pretty plainly that the public interest in such things is not so keen as it once was.

The Savoy school of opera, as best represented by the "Mikado," has despite the cheap sneers of the now almost-forgotten Sir George Macfarren, enjoyed a long life. Old playgoers will recollect that it was called into being owing to the inanities of French opéra bouffe. That silly style of after-dinner entertainment, as faked by Farnie and illustrated by damsels in tights, superseded those effervescent parodies which Offenbach started but could not keep up, even as "La Grande Duchesse" and "Orphée aux Enfers" superseded the old burlesques of the school of James and Thorne, Rogers and Clarke, the music of which was borrowed from grand opera or the music-halls. Mr. Gilbert himself tried this burlesque work in his version of "Robert the Devil," produced in the early days of the Gaiety, but he soon dropped it when "Trial by Jury" and "The Sorcerer" sounded the advent of topsy-turveydom. "Gilbert and Sullivan" was, at any rate, a welcome relief from opéra bouffe, and Gilbert's paradoxes and Sullivan's refined melodies have delighted a whole generation. What form of post-prandial amusement fickle fashion may next adopt, belongs to the realm of prophecy. There are indications that so-called musical comedy is fast pegging out, and in some quarters there is a talk of trying to revive French comic opera. Meanwhile, at the Savoy they are preparing the new opera by Messrs. Lohmann & Burnand and Sir A. C. McKenzie, which is said to be a mixture of the comic and the more serious elements.

The Hanley Festival, a two days' affair held last week, was chiefly notable for the production of a new cantata, entitled "King Olaf," by Mr. Elgar, of Malvern, a gentleman who so far differs from the majority of his fellow composers, in that he possesses both ability and money. Why he took up such a subject as "King Olaf" is not quite clear. Olaf was a Christian who declined to turn his cheek to the smiter, and had his own ideas concerning the best methods of a religious propaganda. Matrimony and the sword were his chief arguments, but baptism to the Christian faith was in his eyes a necessary preliminary to marriage. This worthy King, a creation of Acworth and Longfellow, summoned the Norwegians to Nidaros to witness his conversion. The principal feature of the ceremony was the destruction of Odin's idol, shattered in twain by a blow from Olaf's sword. Ironbeard, the chieftain, intervenes, but is killed for his pains, the Christian king thus ridding himself of a future father-in-law likely to prove disagreeable.

Olaf, following out his theories, thereupon marries Ironbeard's daughter, Gudrun, previously, of course, having her baptised. But Gudrun loves her father's memory, and Olaf, not unjustifiably startled, on waking, to discover her bending over his sleeping figure with a dagger in her hand, very prudently sends her about her business. This, I suppose, is the earliest mention in the Saga of a Christian divorce in Scandinavia. Then comes one of the best numbers of the cantata, the choral ballad set to Longfellow's lines, in which the appearance at the feast of the one-eyed Odin is described. King Olaf, having got rid of Gudrun, next makes love to ex-Queen Sigrid. That lady has no objection to share his throne, but declines baptism, whereupon Olaf, with even less than usual of the gallantry of the period, strikes her on the cheek with his iron glove. His next lady-love is Thyri the Fair, who married King Burislaf, but left him after a week and a day. Thyri is introduced, among other reasons, in order that she may take part with Olaf in a melodious love duet, set to lines by Mr. Acworth. But Nemesis is at hand, and the Danes, stirred up by the jealous Sigrid, make war upon King Olaf, who is killed in a naval battle. This work, with the "Golden Legend," the "Hymn of Praise," Barnby's "The Lord is King," Beethoven's choral symphony, and "The Spectre's Bride," made up the programme of the Festival. The North Staffordshire choir is a very good one, and music is indeed extensively cultivated in the Potteries.

I mentioned last week that Madame Melba will not be a member of the Covent Garden troupe next year. The statement, however, that her contract has been "cancelled" is a fiction, for no contract was ever signed, because the parties could not agree upon terms. There may, in fact, be several changes at Covent Garden next season, and at present there is some doubt about the reappearance of M. Alvarez. There is, however, yet plenty of time to settle matters, and the noble and legal personages who have assumed the direction of the Opera have, I believe, already made several continental trips new-artist hunting.

M. Jean de Reszke and the Comtesse Mira de Maille de la Tour Landi resolved, after all, not to wait for the Papal dispensation, and were duly united by civil marriage in Paris last week, two days before the great tenor left on Saturday for the United States. This will probably imply the retirement of M. Jean de Reszke, at any rate, within the next two or three years. He has at present arranged nothing beyond Covent Garden next summer, although at the time he left Paris he was in negotiation with Frau Cosima Wagner to appear as Siegmund and Siegfried in the projected revival of "Der Ring des Nibelungen" at the Bayreuth cycle August 2 to 5. If, indeed the tedious rehearsals which Bayreuth thinks necessary can be avoided, the matter will probably be arranged, and the one-pound seats in the Festspielhaus will then run up to a big premium.

Dr. Richter, in a most interesting conversation reproduced in last Sunday's Sun, has exploded the nonsensical theory of the alleged universal employment of the French pitch. In Glasgow, Leeds, and elsewhere, Dr. Parry and Dr. Stanford are doing their best to induce the authorities at great expense to have the organs altered to the diapason normal, on the plea that this has been adopted by every Continental nation. The direct contrary seems to be the case. Dr. Richter truly points out that the French pitch is not used at all in the majority of continental countries. It is in fact confined almost exclusively to France, Belgium, and Spain, while the greater musical nations, such as the Germans, Austrians, Russians, and most of the Italians use the Vienna pitch, which is exactly a semi-tone lower than ours. It is so easy to transpose the exact semi-tone that the awkward French pitch has wisely been discarded in favour of that of Vienna. If Dr. Richter makes any change here in the pitch at all, it will most likely lie in the adoption of the pitch of Austria and Germany, although to have three different pitches will make confusion worse confounded. Those who have at so great an expense altered their concert organs to the diapason normal will probably before long regret their precipitancy.

Dr. Richter made his final appearance here on Monday and afterwards left for Vienna. He had a splendid programme at Queen's Hall, including Beethoven's choral symphony and some of Wagner's most popular works. The concert season, indeed, has begun with a vengeance, and there are now about five and twenty performances a week. Last week the "Creation" opened the year's business at the Albert Hall, Professor Bridge then making his début as conductor. He is far better at the work than the late Sir Joseph Barnby, who, indeed, of recent years, took things a great deal too easily. Herr Balling has once more introduced the viola alta, an enlarged tenor violin, which was tried at the Crystal Palace by its inventor, Herr Ritter, a few years ago. At the Crystal Palace on Saturday a good performance of Sullivan's "Golden Legend" drew a big house. Mr. Bispham introduced at St. James's Hall on Saturday three of Brahms's new and so-called "Serious" songs, one founded upon a text from the Apocrypha contrasting the death of the rich and of the poor, being a deeply impressive piece of music. I should like to hear it sung by an artist of the rank of Mr. Santley. Señor Sarasate on Monday started his violin concerts, so popular with the fair sex. He won his chief success less in the classical works than in his own "Airs Ecossais."

It will have been noticed that a great many new performers of various sorts and grades of merit are being brought over from the Continent. They can hardly be said to be in search of British gold, for the majority of them pay for their introduction here. The dodge is either to induce them to defray the expense of a recital—about £25—or to join with others in a sort of omnibus concert, each new artist then being required to take a certain number of tickets. It is for this reason that the phenomenon is occasionally witnessed of a not very interesting performance, given by some utterly unknown people, attracting a large audience. The seats which have been paid for by the artists are of course distributed gratuitously, to the delight of the deadheads and to the considerable profit of the manager. The average continental artist nowadays seeks not so much money, as a London reputation, before he or she returns to the Continent.

The Barnby Memorial Concert, of which there had been some talk, has practically been abandoned, so far, at any rate, as the Albert Hall is concerned. Indeed, as a matter of fact, in these cases it is very necessary to strike the iron while it is hot, and a Barnby concert at this late hour would hardly pay its expenses. The Barnby Subscription, which now amounts to £1,300, will doubtless be increased, but the Corporation of London have already voted £500 to Lady Barnby and £200 to the children. Moreover, the Royal Choral Society have raised among themselves a private subscription, which has paid for the bronze bust of Barnby, now placed in the Albert Hall lobby. They have also resolved to spend £50 of the money on a monument over the grave, which at present is merely turfed, and the balance will be handed over to the children.

LETTERS ON BOOKS.

MY DEAR MR. WYNDHAM,—Perhaps there is something to be said for the paradox which brought about the conversion of the Jew Abraham in Boccaccio. Having made a pilgrimage to Rome to see the source and sun of Christian light and heat, and found there the Borgias at the height and in the depth of their orgy of infamous power, he argued that only omnipotence could keep a Church so governed on its legs, and forthwith became a Christian. "The Memoirs of the Cardinal de Retz" (1) would be an admirable work to put into the hands of a heretic of the Jew Abraham's turn of mind in order to ensure his conversion to the true Church. It is hardly too much to say that the three Cardinals who figure in it, and commit remorselessly every crime in the calendar, are, from a Christian standpoint, ideal scoundrels. De Retz himself, however, was such an exceptionally good priest according to the standard of the day, that Louis on his death-bed commended him to his Queen for promotion to the Archbishopric of Paris on the grounds that he had once refrained from violating a young girl who was in his power, and that he had once shown magnanimity in a duel. That he deserved this

(1) "Memoirs of the Cardinal de Retz." Containing all the Great Events during the Minority of Louis XIV. and Administration of Cardinal Mazarin. Translated from the French. (London: H. S. Nichols & Co.)

(2) "Memoirs of the Court of Marie Antoinette." By Mme. Campan. With a Biographical Introduction from "The Heroic Women of the French Revolution." 2 vols. (London: H. S. Nichols & Co.)

(3) "Isn't it Wonderful?" A History of Magic and Mystery, by Charles Bertram, together with his Reminiscences. With Numerous Illustrations by Phil May, A. C. Corbould, Bernard F. Gribble, and other artists. (London: Swan Sonnenschein & Co.)

(4) "The Enemies." By E. H. Cooper. (Westminster: Arch. Constable & Co.) Price 6s.

(5) "Handy Reference Atlas of the World." Edited by J. G. Bartholomew, F.R.S.E., F.R.G.S., &c. Fifth Edition. (London: John Walker & Co., Limited).

commendation may be inferred from his reflections and resolutions upon his appointment to the Archbishopric :—

I considered that the strictest morals are necessarily required in a bishop. I felt myself to be more obliged to be strictly circumspect as my uncle, who had preceded me in the see, had been very disorderly and scandalous. I knew likewise that my own corrupt inclinations would bear down all before them, and that all the considerations drawn from honour and conscience would prove very weak defences. At last I came to the resolution to go on in my sins, and that designedly, which, without doubt, is more sinful in the eyes of God, but with regard to the world is certainly the best policy, because he that acts thus always takes care beforehand to cover part of his failings, and thereby to avoid the jumbling together of sin and devotion, than which nothing can be more dangerous and ridiculous in a clergyman. This was my disposition, which was not the most pious in the world, nor yet the wickedest, for I was fully determined to discharge all the duties of my profession faithfully, and exert my utmost to save other souls, though I took no care of my own.

Need I say that memoirs, written in a spirit of such candour by a man of such historical importance and experience as Cardinal de Retz, are of singular interest? Even more interesting, perhaps, to those who are not sated with the subject will be Mme. Campan's "Memoirs of the Court of Marie Antoinette" (2), with a biographical introduction from the "Heroic Women of the French Revolution." The hapless Queen was heroic at least in her death.

Nothing in her life became her like the leaving of it.

Whether, however, she was in her life the heroine Mme. de Campan describes is a different and doubtful question. But what question in history is not doubtful? Here is Cardinal de Retz's interesting confirmation of the famous saying about the necessary falsehood of history attributed to Walpole, but originally President de Thou's :—

Upon the whole Turenne and I could not help making this reflection that what we read in the lives of most people is false. We were both grossly mistaken—I, for supposing him to be frightened; he, for thinking me calm and undisturbed.

What a mysterious figure, for example, does the Man in the Iron Mask make in history? Only, I believe, because of a foolish preference for the mysterious in human nature. According to these Memoirs of Marie Antoinette, he was a man of no importance who did not even wear an iron mask! He was a Piedmontese, who was transferred with the transfer of the Governor from the prison of Pignerol to that of the Bastille. And the story of the mask probably arose from his Italian habit of wearing under a blazing sun a mask of velvet, and showing himself thus shielded upon the terrace of his prison. Even the celebrated silver plate, which was said to have been thrown by him from his window, was so thrown by another prisoner from another prison in the time of Cardinal Richelieu! In truth, the presumption is against the marvellous in history, not merely or even chiefly because of its intrinsic improbability, but because of the insatiable and indiscriminating appetite of human nature for miracles and for mysteries, which the historian at once shares and panders to. It was the same De Thou (who anticipated Walpole in the aphorism against the credibility of history) that wrote "Populus vult decipi; decipiatur." This should have been the motto of Mr. Charles Bertram's autobiographical account of his career as a conjuror, "Isn't it Wonderful" (3), in which he kills the goose with the golden eggs by explaining as well as describing his principal tricks. Alas! his explanations are as disillusioning as marriage, according to Congreve's cynical couplet :—

Women are like tricks by sleight of hand,
Which to admire, we should not understand.

What a comparatively poor piece of business, for instance, even "The Vanishing Lady" trick appears when the whole apparatus is shown you in diagrams! "I have," writes Mr. Bertram, "performed in the course of the same evening before the sandwich-board men and at Marlborough House"—to the credit at once of his art and of his heart: yet, considering the vast numbers of interesting people of all ranks he has met, his experiences are disappointing. The chapter entitled "Some Incidents" was hardly worth printing, while the mysterious M. Charlier, who disappeared as unaccountably as "The Vanishing Lady," is the only personage that interests you in the chapter, "People Whom I have Met." I have not been fortunate in the only novel I have read of late, "The Enemies" (4), in which a minx marries a prig to their mutual misery.—Believe me, my dear Mr. Wyndham, ever yours very sincerely,

DESMOND B. O'BRIEN.

P.S.—If you want a handy atlas you cannot do better than get the new edition of Mr. J. G. Bartholomew's (5). I do not know what your experience may be, but mine is that a big atlas is really of little use, or rather little used, owing to its cumbersomeness. This volume, however, gives a great many maps and a great deal of information in a surprisingly compact and convenient form, and for all ordinary purposes it is just as good as the larger works.

GIRLS' GOSSIP.

DEAREST AMY,—Now that the season for fancy balls is close at hand, the picturesque dresses worn by Miss Winifred Emery and Miss Eva Moore at the Haymarket in "Under the Red Robe" will very certainly be often taken as models. Renée de Cocheforêt's first gown is simply sweet. It is fashioned from old-world brocade of the softest and richest sort, the colour a pale and tender yellow, the square tabs of the period being piped with claret-colour, and the bodice relieved with touches of the same. The bodice is cut low, and a necklace of large jewels, besides a smaller one, is the only supplementary covering of the neck. The addition of a small cloth cape to walk abroad in, is more for ornament than warmth, since the only portion of it that approaches the chest is the cord that fastens it. The grey felt hat, uptilted at one side and adorned with large feathers, is a very telling headgear.

Miss Eva Moore is the sweetest picture of a mournful and devoted wife, in her pale blue cloth, tabbed with silver, and relieved with cherry colour. Her fair curls are arranged Henrietta Maria fashion, and she is such an all-round pictorial success that her portrait should be taken in front of a looking-glass, so as to give the back view as well.

I enjoy a good audience as much as I enjoy a good play. Don't you? The Haymarket was crammed the night we were there, and some lovely gowns were worn. One was rose-coloured broché, with a black satin bodice, finished with a folded drapery of red velvet round the shoulders. There was not a scrap of other trimming, and, indeed, it would have been worse than irrelevant, obscuring the fine lines of a splendid figure. Another gown was white chené silk with clusters of pale flowers brocaded on it. The bodice was chiefly lace, and had only one sleeve, the other being replaced by many folds of lightsome lace, held, apparently, by one big diamond clasp at the top of the arm. The other arm had an elbow sleeve of pink satin ending in a fold or two of black velvet. A large knot of black velvet held the lace in the middle of the bodice, and from it rose the loveliest pink chrysanthemum with petals "wide dispread."

I fell in love with a cape that sat in front of me. It was ermine, lined with rose-coloured brocade, and bordered with sable down the fronts and round the collar. Such a delicious thing! Another delectable garment was an ermine tippet, with a deep point at the back, a very high collar, and long stole ends in front, each furnished, I noticed, with a small pocket made of gathered lace, drawn together with elastic. This struck me as an admirable idea, for it took up no room and yet afforded an asylum for the poor banished and hunted handkerchief, disallowed a home by tailors and dressmakers.

The "pottihaffy" accounts for only one pocket. I think I noticed—yes, I'm sure I noticed—something in the other. Guess what it was? Of course you are right. A powder puff.

BEAUTIFUL DRESSES FROM PARIS, together with the newest fashions in Mantles, Lingerie, and Millinery are to be seen at MADAME OLIVER HOLMES, 61, New Bond-street, W.

So far as I can understand, Prince's Skating Club, at Knightsbridge, opened this week, is not available for any but members. The ladies on the Committee include the Marchionesses of Lansdowne, Londonderry, and Granby, the Countess of Minto, who skates so beautifully, Lady Ribblesdale, Mrs. Asquith, and Miss Balfour, with many others. The ice is made by Stoppani's patent, and is similar to that of the Paris Palais de Glace. The season does not end till Easter, and the club is open to members every day, including Sunday, from 9.30 a.m. till 7 p.m., as well as three nights in the week from 9 to 11.30. Men members pay a subscription of 10 gs. for the season, ladies 8 gs., non-skaters 3 gs. There is to be no entrance fee for the first 500 members.

Redfern has some very tempting gowns in his show-rooms just now, both for evening and day wear. Bee is having a coat made there, and while she was being tried on Clare and I had a good look at the "pretties." Think of a cape with a yoke and collar of white caracul bordered with an inch-wide band of black, the cape itself consisting of black caracul set in very full to the yoke. Such a comfortable garment, and yet so smart. A theatre coat in black brocade, with a design of coloured rosebuds strewn over it, was made with a large hood lined with sable and a high collar of the same fur. The sleeves were very large and full, so that the most extensive dress sleeves could be packed away inside without the smallest injury.

But at the moment we were more interested in warm afternoon dresses. The newest of the models were displayed on dolls, and how the fingers of the workgirls could get round such tiny pleats and folds I cannot think. One of these little figures was invested with a gown of rough red cloth, the skirt trimmed with three graduated rows of black braid, and the bodice opening over a vest of red silk, with relief of black braid. A brown cloth dress had two divergent lines of black braiding down the front breadth of the skirt. The bodice was exactly in the form of a mess jacket opening over a full red velvet vest. The sleeves, nearly plain, were finished with braid at the wrists.

Brown and red are both very much worn, and are very fashionable in combination, as you will gather from these descriptions.

A dress entirely brown was made with a tucked chemisette of brown chené silk, with tight rucked sleeves of the same, frilled down the outer seam. This could be carried out in any colour. Would it not be nice in deep prune colour and rhododendron pink?

So becoming, "don't-cher-know?"

Quite in your style was a seal sack coat with pleats down the back, beautifully cut, and hanging closely in to the figure in a way that embellished it exceedingly. It had full, wide sleeves. It was most insinuating; and almost equally persuasive was another in blue cloth, double-breasted, and with revers and collar of astrakhan. It was braided in military fashion across the fronts, and braid was carried down the seams at the back and finished with the usual trefoil. The sleeves had also lines of braid down their whole length and trefoils at the wrist.

Smart, dear, so smart. And is it not the clear duty of every woman to be as smart as circumstances will permit?

I know you will eagerly answer in the affirmative.

The Prince of Wales was at Miss Cara Batten's wedding, which was a very smart one. St. Mary's, Cadogan-street, was decorated with tall palms and tropical plants for the occasion, and the bridesmaids, pretty girls, wore most becoming dresses of mignonette-coloured Roman satin, with hats to match, and lovely bouquets of shaded chrysanthemums. The bride was a sweet little girlish figure in her white muslin Empire robe, and she looked quite lovely, carrying her sheaf of snowy lilies under the pure white veil. She answered the responses in a clear, high voice like a child's, and indeed she is little more. Her mother wore a handsome gown and cape of mouse-coloured velvet trimmed with Russian sable, a toque of mauve velvet, to the tint of which her bouquet of orchids was exactly matched. I noticed Lady Granby, wearing brown and a cape of mirror-grey velvet or plush. Sir Edward Lawson talked to Mrs. Robert Webster, who had a green cape and a very wide black velvet toque with a large jewelled clasp resting on the hair in front.

Have you ever noticed the mean way in which some women's skirts cling in at the heels? There is something so ugly about it that the word "squalid" seems to me to be the only one to express it. I fancy that it has some connection with overfed ankles. Let me know if you have ever observed the phenomenon, and what you think about it.

Clare sends me the following from Dublin:—

DEAREST MADGE,—Amidst the old institutions which the changes of these progressive days threaten most seriously, "Home" stands out prominently: the old home idea that was the peculiar pride of dwellers in the British Isles. Do you remember the lines by some well-known poetic admonisher of youth—Watts, I think—enjoining "peace at home, Where sisters dwell and brothers meet"? Many homes have already completely changed all that; it is no longer a case of sisters dwelling and brothers meeting under the family roof-tree. Modern sisters are no more stay-at-home than their brothers; the development has been considerable since the days when "my lady" surrounded by her maidens, sat working tapestry in her bower; the spinning wheel has gone into the hands of the "collector," the needle and thimble seem likely to follow suit and to pass into the category of curios in a not very distant future. The subject was forcibly brought before me through observation of the daughters of the house in which we were staying last week. All daughters are more or less new nowadays. There was none of the less about Betty and Gwyn. They were distinctly the new products of these, the real old times. "The girls are never at home," their mother said plaintively. "Just like the boys! I don't see them from morning till night," which was indeed the case. Fifty miles of cycling a day—these girls thought nothing of it—did not leave much margin for home pursuits, and then there were the serious claims of hockey and golf, to say nothing of football. The weaker sex, indeed! That idea, too, must change, like all the others. Weakness was the very last thing one thought of in looking at these clear-eyed, straight-limbed maidens, fresh of complexion and vigorous of movement, who, starting from home after an early breakfast were only back in time to dress for dinner, and to eat it, too, with the appetite begotten of a long day's exercise in the open air. It is just the same with girls of a serious turn; they are at colleges, classes, schools, studios, anywhere but at home. Soon, whether homely or not, there will be no such deserted place as home. Fred says they are all rapidly becoming either cripples' homes or homes of rest for the aged. One wonders if the domestic virtues have a future. Will the forsaken household gods turn, in their abandonment, to thoughts of vengeance?

Dublin is rapidly filling for the winter; the opening of the Law Courts has brought all the leading legal officials, not, all—as in former days—into the town, but within reach of it. The Lord Chancellor continues to reside at Howth Castle about nine miles distant from Dublin, whilst the Lord Chief Justice, going further afield, is settled at Castletown, co. Kildare, for the winter. He was quite as prominent a figure on the opening day of the Kildare Hunt as on the opening day at the Four Courts, filling his seat in the saddle with the same graceful ease with which he fills his seat on the Bench, report says. The working of the new and intricate Land Act is an absorbing topic in the country just now. Was there ever such land as that of our island? So difficult to handle, to manage, to settle! All my life long there has been, at ever lessening intervals, a new Land Bill for Ireland. Talk of the new woman, her difficulties and dangers, her arts and crafts! She is not in it with the new Land Bill. Not in it for causing heart-burnings, dissensions, and conflict of opinions, or for general intractability and unmanageableness. How simple was the "good old plan" of seizing property and holding it by brute force. If it was simple for the ancestor, however, it has turned out very complex for his descendant, in this country, at least.

Lord and Lady Dufferin have been receiving a very warm welcome back to their home in the county of Down. Did you read Lord Dufferin's most interesting speech at Belfast? Is he not a charming speaker? And always an Irishman, who resists, as so many of our countrymen who attain distinction do not, the temptation of belonging to any other nation. How monotonous it would be if all in these islands were English, instead of having three distinct nationalities to create variety—or more than three, counting the inhabitants of Wales and Man, as distinct from the English.—Yours ever, CLARE.

OBESITY.—The happy knack of forming a symmetrical contour and a perfect foundation for a well-setting gown is the especial art of Mesdames SYKES, JOSEPHINE, & Co., Anatomical Corsetières, 280, Regent-street, Oxford-circus, London, W.

It has been remarked over and over again that, for Autumn and Winter wear, a lady never looks better and more suitably clad than in a Redfern Gown. Messrs. REDFERN'S New Models are now ready. Inspection invited.—26, Conduit-street, W.

I have just read in an American paper that five o'clock tea in England is now a substantial meal, and that salads are a favourite dish at it. One of these salads is described as consisting of tomatoes, cucumbers, and bananas sliced together and dressed with cream and lemon juice. I wonder if it would be nice?

But what will they say about our meals next? Some months ago I saw in a States paper that in English country houses there are seven meals a day served, inclusive of an early cup of milk with scones, followed by a regular breakfast at nine, lunch at eleven, dinner at one, a glass of wine and slice of cake at four, tea at six, and supper at nine. I fancy this would considerably astonish the inmates of every country house in the British Isles.

This chartreuse of partridges is not difficult to make, and is an excellent way of using up old birds:—

Truss a couple of partridges into shape and braise them. Meanwhile, boil a quantity of evenly-cut strips of carrot and turnips; they must not be overboiled. Line a plain round mould with buttered paper, then line the interior with the carrots and turnips, making them fit closely together. Take a large savoy cabbage, parboil it for ten minutes in plenty of salted water, drain and squeeze dry in a cloth; now put it into a stewpan with 2 or 3 slices of parboiled bacon, an onion and some good stock, cover with the lid, and allow it to stew gently for three quarters of an hour. Then drain the cabbage free from stock and grease and chop it finely, line the mould very carefully with a layer of the cabbage, put the breasts and wings of the birds, cut into neat joints, in the centre, filling the crevices with the cabbage, put a layer of the cabbage on the top, twist a buttered paper over and bake the chartreuse in a slow oven for half an hour. The liquor from the braise must be strained and thickened with a dessertspoonful of potato flour. When it boils, strain and season with salt, pepper, a spoonful of tomato purée, a squeeze of lemon juice, and a tiny piece of anchovy butter. Turn the chartreuse on to a dish and pour the sauce round.

Ever, dear, your loving cousin, MADGE.

CIGARES DE JOY (Joy's Cigarettes) afford immediate relief in cases of ASTHMA, WHEEZING, and CHRONIC BRONCHITIS. Appreciated by Physicians and sufferers all over the world. Easy to use, certain in effect, and harmless in action, they are recommended for use by young and old. May be had of all Chemists and Stores in Boxes of 35 at 2/6, or post free from WILCOX & Co., 83, Mortimer St., London, W.

MODERN MOURNING.

Messrs. JAY

SUBMIT for INSPECTION WITHOUT CHARGE, in any part of the Kingdom, as at their Warehouse in Regent-street, a FULL SELECTION of MOURNING, either WITH or WITHOUT CRAPE.

SKIRTS, MANTLES, AND MILLINERY

Are READY for IMMEDIATE WEAR, and BODICES are COMPLETED to measure in a FEW HOURS.

JAY'S (Ltd.), REGENT ST., LONDON

THE MANUFACTURING

GOLDSMITHS' & SILVERSMITHS' COMPANY,

(The GOLDSMITHS' ALLIANCE, Ld. (A. B. SAVORY & SONS, late of Cornhill, E.C.) is transferred to this Company.)

Show Rooms: 112, REGENT STREET, W. (adjoining Stereoscopic Company.)

Supply the public direct at Manufacturers' Cash Prices, saving purchasers from 25 to 50 per cent.

Exquisitely Chased and Pierced Silver Dessert Dish, £10. 10s.

THE LARGEST and CHOICEST STOCK OF SILVER PLATE IN LONDON,

For Public Testimonials, Wedding and Complimentary Presents.

AN INSPECTION INVITED. ILLUSTRATED CATALOGUE POST FREE.

Goods forwarded to the Country on approval. Special designs and estimates free.

NATIONAL PROVIDENT INSTITUTION.

For Mutual Life Assurance.

Financial Year ends 20th Nov., 1896.
Invested Funds ... £5,000,000
Claims Paid £10,000,000

Established 1835.

Profits.—At the last (1892) Division, £651,000 Cash Profit was apportioned amongst the members, being more than 37 per cent. of the amount paid in premiums during the previous five years. There were then nearly 800 Policies, in respect of which not only were the premiums entirely extinguished, but also annuities were granted, or Cash Bonuses paid, whilst in the case of many policies the original sums assured are now more than doubled by the Bonus additions.

All persons now Assuring will receive an additional Share of Profit over later Entrants, at the next division, in 1897.

Endowment-Assurance Policies are issued combining Life Assurance at Minimum Cost, with Provision for Old Age.

48, Gracechurch Street, London, E.C. Applications for Agencies invited.

GRESHAM LIFE OFFICE.

Assets Exceed £6,000,000.

Special Terms for Naval and Military Officers.

ESTABLISHED 1848.

THE GRESHAM LIFE ASSURANCE SOCIETY, LIMITED.

Head Office: ST. MILDRED'S, POULTRY, LONDON.

GAIETY RESTAURANT, STRAND.

LUNCHEONS (HOT and COLD)—At Popular Prices, in BUFFET and RESTAURANT (on 1st floor). Also Chops, Steaks, Joints, Entrées, etc., in the GRILL ROOM.

AFTERNOON TEA—Consisting of Tea or Coffee, Cut Bread and Butter, Jam, Cake, Pastry, ad lib., at 1/- per head; served from 4 till 6 in RESTAURANT (1st floor).

DINNERS IN RESTAURANT—From 5.30 till 9 at Fixed Prices (3/6 and 5/-) and à la Carte. In this room the Viennese Band performs from 6 till 8. Smoking after 7.45.

American Bar. The GRILL ROOM is open till 12.30.

Private Dining Room for Large and Small Parties.

SPIERS & POND, Ltd., Proprietors.

Musical Instruments.

Mason and Hamlin Organs.
Mustel Organs.
Mustel Celestas.
Mason and Hamlin Pianos.
Rönisch Pianos.
Rönisch Organo-Pianos.
Metzler Pianos.
Alexandre Harmoniums.

NEW ILLUSTRATED CATALOGUES POST FREE.

METZLER.

Violins and 'Cellos by Degani.
Violins and 'Cellos by Collin-Mezin.
Mandolines by Angara and by De Meglio.
Guitars by Leblanc.
Auto-Harps by Müller.
Zither Banjos and Banjoretts.
Instruments for Toy Symphonies.
Pianoforte Chairs of New Design.

NEW ILLUSTRATED CATALOGUES POST FREE.

London: 40 to 43, GT. MARLBOROUGH ST., W.

The Piano Resonator

(DANIEL MAYER PATENT) LD.

PADEREWSKI says:

DEAR MR. MAYER,

I am delighted with your Patent Resonator, because I find that it makes the tone of the piano richer, fuller, and it adds greatly to its singing quality.

Sincerely yours,
I. J. PADEREWSKI.

London, October 11th, 1895.

Owing to Erection of Special Machinery, the Resonator can now be applied to Upright Pianos from £5, and to Grand Pianos from £10.

Address—
33, NEW BOND ST., LONDON, W.

ROWLANDS' Macassar Oil

Preserves, Beautifies, Strengthens the Hair;
Also in Golden Colour, 3s. 6d., 7s., 10s. 6d.

ROWLANDS' ODONTO

The Best and Safest Dentifrice; 2s. 9d., of Chemists and Perfumers.
Send Postal Order to—

A. ROWLAND & SONS, 20, Hatton Garden,
LONDON.

Great Improvements in Ladies' Watches—Reduced Prices.

BENSON'S SPECIAL MAKE KEYLESS LEVER WATCH

Silver Cases, £5

18-ct. Gold Cases. £10

Three-quarter Plate LEVER Movement, Compound Balance, Jewelled throughout, strong Keyless action, with Seconds Dial and Gold Inner Cases. In Hunting, Half-Hunting, or Crystal Glass Cases, Monogram free.

Illustrated Book of Watches, Engagement Rings, Brooches, Bracelets, &c., post-free.

18-carat Gold, £10. Silver, £5.
Sent Free and Safe at my risk to all parts,
Selections of Watches and Jewellery sent on approval.

J. W. BENSON, STEAM FACTORY,
62 & 64, LUDGATE HILL.
Also at 28, Royal Exchange, E.C., and 25, Old Bond-street, W., LONDON.

"TRUTH"
CAN BE OBTAINED AT
No. 48, QUAI ST. JEAN BAPTISTE, NICE.

THE ANCIENT WRITING PAPER OF THE PRIESTS.

NOTE PAPER, 5 Quires, 1s.
COURT ENVELOPES, 1s. per 100.
MOURNING ENVELOPES, 1s. 6d. per 100.
THIN, FOR FOREIGN CORRESPONDENCE, 5 Quires, 1s.
MOURNING NOTE, 5 Quires, 1s. 6d

HIERATICA (Regd.)

Every Sheet and Envelope Watermarked HIERATICA. Reject Imitations. Any difficulty in obtaining, send stamps to Hieratica Works, 68, Upper Thames Street, London. Samples Free. Parcels Carriage Paid.

"Sanitas" Eucalyptus Soap

A Delightfully Perfumed Sanitary Soap of the Highest Quality, and made from the very best materials, SUPERFATTED and ANTISEPTIC. 1s. 3d per Box.

OTHER PREPARATIONS:—"SANITAS" EUCALYPTUS OIL, 1/- PER BOTTLE; "SANITAS" EUCALYPTUS DISINFECTORS, 1/- EACH; DITTO "RESERVOIR" PATTERN, 2/6 EACH.

Sole Manufacturers: THE SANITAS CO., LIMITED, BETHNAL GREEN, LONDON, E.

CHATTO & WINDUS'S NEW BOOKS

SIR WALTER BESANT'S NEW NOVEL.

THE CITY OF REFUGE. By SIR WALTER BESANT, Author of "All Sorts and Conditions of Men." 3 vols. at every Library.

"We should be surprised if this new romance from Sir Walter Besant's pen does not prove one of his most popular."—Daily News.

DIARY OF A CITIZEN OF PARIS DURING "THE TERROR." By EDMOND BIRÉ. Translated by John de Villiers. With Photogravure Frontispieces. 2 vols. demy 8vo, cloth, 21s.

"The incidents of 'The Terror' are noted down from day to day as they occurred, and the most scrupulous care appears to have been taken, by consultation of the best authorities and the diligent perusal of the newspapers, bills, posters, and pamphlets of the period, to describe each event with the closest possible approach to accuracy."—Scotsman.

"A work of great research and of much interest."—Daily News.

EIGHTEENTH CENTURY VIGNETTES. THIRD SERIES. By AUSTIN DOBSON. Crown 8vo, buckram, 6s.

"Among the latter-day champions who are fighting a good fight and rapidly driving us all into admiration of the days of Garrick and Reynolds, of Johnson and Goldsmith, of Matt Prior and Addison, stands Mr. Austin Dobson, armed with his 'Eighteenth Century Vignettes,' a Third Series of which has just been published."—Morning Leader.

MIGHT HAVE BEEN: SOME LIFE NOTES. By JOSEPH PARKER, D.D. Crown 8vo, cloth, 6s.

". . . Space fails to tell other good things, but Dr. Parker's book will speak for itself. Many things in it might make even 'Arthur' roar."—Pall Mall Gazette.

"An extremely able and interesting book. There is in it abundance of fun . . . but there is very much also of more serious matter, earnest thought on great subjects, eloquent and forceful writing—a book which will give us many a hearty and healthy laugh, and, on the other hand, furnish abundant food for the highest culture of mind and heart."—Independent.

BRET HARTE'S NEW STORIES.

BARKER'S LUCK, AND OTHER STORIES. By BRET HARTE. With 39 Illustrations. Crown 8vo, cloth, 3s. 6d.

MR. JUSTIN H. MCCARTHY'S NEW NOVEL.

THE ROYAL CHRISTOPHER: AN ADVENTURE STORY. By JUSTIN H. MCCARTHY. Crown 8vo, cloth, 3s. 6d. [November 10.

A MINION OF THE MOON. By T. W. SPEIGHT. (The "Gentleman's Annual" for 1896). Demy 8vo, 1s. [November 10.

REVENGE. By ROBERT BARR, Author of "A Woman Intervenes," &c. With 12 Illustrations. Crown 8vo, cloth, 6s.

"The contents are admirable. . . . . The characters are vividly drawn, and the narratives have scarcely a superfluous word."—Glasgow Herald.

"It is refreshing to turn to something both clear and clever, and in saying this we are paying only a small tribute to Mr. Barr's volume of short stories. . . . . To use a well-worn encomium, there is not a dull page from cover to cover."—Pall Mall Gazette.

IN THE KINGDOM OF KERRY. By B. M. CROKER, Author of "Diana Barrington," &c. Crown 8vo, cloth, 3s. 6d.

"The book is full of entertainment for all sorts of readers, and hasn't a dull page."—Scotsman.

A CAPFUL O' NAILS: a North-Country Story. By DAVID CHRISTIE MURRAY, Author of "Joseph's Coat." Crown 8vo, cloth, 3s. 6d.

"The book is one which merits the attentive reading of all who can appreciate good literature, and equally of all who can enjoy a sterling heart-moving story."—Daily Mail.

"No story of boy and girl love or of married woman's sickly fancies, but of men and women striving to live their lives in the working-day world. Mr. Murray has written yet another good story in 'A Capful o' Nails.'"—Glasgow Herald.

New Three-and-Sixpenny Novels.

THE VOICE OF THE CHARMER. By L. T. MEADE. With 8 Illustrations.
THE REVOLT OF MAN. By Sir WALTER BESANT.
A TRAMP ABROAD. By MARK TWAIN. With 314 Illustrations.
LONG ODDS. By HAWLEY SMART.
A LIFE INTEREST. By MRS. ALEXANDER.
LADY KILPATRICK. By ROBERT BUCHANAN.
YOUNG LOCHINVAR. By J. E. MUDDOCK.
THE WOMAN IN THE DARK. By F. W. ROBINSON.

London: CHATTO & WINDUS, 111, St. Martin's-lane, W.C.

ON THE STŒCHIOLOGICAL CURE OF

CONSUMPTION,

ASTHMA, BRONCHITIS, AND LUNG COMPLAINTS.

By JOHN FRANCIS CHURCHILL, M.D.

One Shilling, Post Free.

T. BURLEIGH, LATE DAVID STOTT, 370, OXFORD STREET.

SAMPSON LOW, MARSTON, & COMPANY'S NEW BOOKS.

AT ALL LIBRARIES AND THE BOOKSELLERS'.

JOSEPH THOMSON, AFRICAN EXPLORER. A Biography. By his Brother, the Rev. J. B. THOMSON, of Greenock. With 6 Maps, Portraits, and numerous Illustrations. Crown 8vo, 7s. 6d.

ROUND ABOUT ARMENIA. The Record of a Journey through Turkey, the Caucasus, and Persia. By E. A. BRAYLEY HODGETTS, Author of "In the Track of the Russian Famine," &c. With Map and Frontispiece. Crown 8vo, cloth, 6s.

WITH THE YACHT AND CAMERA IN EASTERN WATERS. By the Earl of CAVAN, K.P., &c., Author of "With the Yacht, Camera, and Cycle in the Mediterranean." With many full-page Illustrations. Crown 8vo, 12s. 6d.

THE LIFE AND TIMES OF SYDNEY SMITH. Based on Family Documents and the Recollections of Personal Friends. By STUART J. REID, Author of "Lord John Russell" in the "Queen's Prime Ministers" Series, &c. Fourth and Revised Edition, with additional Letters and Anecdotes. Crown 8vo, with Portrait, 6s.

FLOATING ISLAND; Or, the Pearl of the Pacific. By JULES VERNE, Author of "From the Earth to the Moon," "Around the World in Eighty Days," &c. With 80 Illustrations. Crown 8vo, cloth extra, gilt edges, 6s.

HEALTH AND CONDITION IN THE ACTIVE and the SEDENTARY. By N. E. YORKE-DAVIES, Licentiate of the Royal College of Physicians of London, M.R.C.S., Author of "Foods for the Fat." Fourth Edition (Sixth Thousand). Crown 8vo, 3s. 6d.

NEW NOVELS AT ALL LIBRARIES.

AN AUSTRALIAN BUSH TRACK. By J. D. HENNESSEY, Author of "The Dis-Honourable," "Wynnum." Crown 8vo, cloth, 6s.

JACK STAPLETON; Or, the Romance of a Coral Island. By Commander CLAUDE HARDING, R.N., Author of "The Capture of the Estrella." Crown 8vo, cloth, 6s.

THE SORCERESS OF PARIS: being the Chronicle of Jean Louis Charles, Count de Dunois. By P. H. DITCHFIELD, M.A., F.S.A., Author of "Books Fatal to their Authors," &c. Crown 8vo, with Decorative Title-Page, cloth, 5s.

London: SAMPSON LOW, MARSTON & COMPANY, Limited,

A NEW NOVEL AT ALL LIBRARIES.

In 2 vols., crown 8vo.

Anthony Blake's Experiment.

"Replete with realistic character-sketches of remarkable vigour and vivacity All the minor personages, French as well as English, are depicted in masterly fashion, in no degree less vividly and convincingly than the repulsive Anthony Blake and his sweet, sorrow-stricken victim, Armande Duparc."—The Daily Telegraph.

Anthony Blake's Experiment.

"Originality, a true observation of character, and a very moving pathos are among the writer's qualities. Exquisitely pathetic are the pages that tell of Armande's expiation, of her repressed—yet all-absorbing—mother-love."—Morning Post.

Anthony Blake's Experiment.

"A really enjoyable and capable addition to the fiction of the year. Possessing a good, wholesome, untricked style, a keen eye for essentials, and a power of estimating the more subtle motives of men and women, the author should be sure of the welcome that his merits deserve."—Literary World.

Anthony Blake's Experiment.

"A work which contains abundant indications of real ability. From a writer who can create and portray a character so suggestive, so subtle, and yet so intelligent as Anthony Blake, much may yet be expected. The author tells his story with considerable dexterity, but it is in his singularly clever delineations of character that he shows greatest skill."—St. James's Gazette.

Anthony Blake's Experiment.

"The unknown author has written a story of infinite pathos, and the reader is delighted with the fresh presentment of an idyllic love, and stirred to pity by the inevitable suspicion that it is wasted."—Athenæum.

London: RICHARD BENTLEY & SON, New Burlington-street.
Publishers in Ordinary to Her Majesty the Queen.

SMITH, ELDER, & CO.'S LIST.

NEW AND CHEAPER EDITION OF ROBERT BROWNING'S POETICAL WORKS.

"An edition which in every point of excellence will satisfy the most fastidious taste."—The Scotsman.

NOTICE.—The FIRST PRINTING of the NEW EDITION of THE COMPLETE WORKS OF ROBERT BROWNING, in 2 vols. Large crown 8vo, with Portraits, 15s., has been taken up by the Booksellers. A SECOND PRINTING will be ready shortly.

CONAN DOYLE'S NEW NOVEL.

ON NOVEMBER 13TH WILL BE PUBLISHED,
With Eight Full-page Illustrations, crown 8vo, 6s.

RODNEY STONE

By A. CONAN DOYLE,
Author of "Micah Clarke," "The White Company," &c.

MRS. HUMPHRY WARD'S NEW NOVEL.

NOTICE.—The FIRST EDITION of SIR GEORGE TRESSADY by Mrs. Humphry Ward, crown 8vo, 6s., is sold out. A SECOND EDITION will be ready on Monday, November 9th.

NEW ILLUSTRATED AND THOROUGHLY REVISED EDITION OF "JESS."
Now Ready, with 12 Full-page Illustrations by Maurice Greiffenhagen. Crown 8vo, 3s. 6d.

JESS. By H. RIDER HAGGARD.

London: SMITH, ELDER, & CO., 15, Waterloo-place, S.W.

JOHN LANE'S NEW BOOKS.

By JOHN DAVIDSON.

NEW BALLADS. With a Title-Page and Cover Design by Walter West. Fcap. 8vo, buckram, 4s. 6d. net.

"His new volume contains some work as strong as he has yet done. There is a manner in his poetry which is not to be mistaken. It has a certain terror of its own, a wrestling of hard-driven souls with a cruel fate. But it bursts out at times into a power which few poets of our time can equal."—Daily Chronicle.

"His verses thrill with his own passion, will, and desire; every line bears the impress of a masterly personality."—Dundee Advertiser.

NEW & SUCCESSFUL NOVELS.

SOME WHIMS OF FATE. By MENIE MURIEL DOWIE. Post 8vo, coloured edges, 2s. 6d. net.

IN SCARLET AND GREY: Stories of Soldiers and Others. By FLORENCE HENNIKER. With the SPECTRE of the REAL. By FLORENCE HENNIKER and THOMAS HARDY. Crown 8vo, 3s. 6d. net. [Second Edition.

MARIS STELLA. By MARIE CLOTHILDE BALFOUR. Crown 8vo, 3s. 6d. net.

UGLY IDOL. By CLAUD NICHOLSON. Crown 8vo, 3s. 6d. net.

MY BROTHER. By VINCENT BROWN. Square 16mo, 2s. net.

SIMPLICITY. By A. T. G. PRICE. Square 16mo, 2s. net.

THE LITERARY SHOP, and Other Tales. By JAMES L. FORD. Fcap. 8vo, 3s. 6d. net.

DAYBOOKS. By MABEL E. WOTTON. Crown 8vo, 3s. 6d. net.

THE SENTIMENTAL SEX. By GERTRUDE WARDEN. Crown 8vo, 3s. 6d. net.

GOLD. By ANNIE LINDEN. Crown 8vo, 3s. 6d. net

MARCH HARES. By HAROLD FREDERIC. Second Edition. Crown 8vo, 3s. 6d. net.

MRS. ALBERT GRUNDY: Observations in PHILISTIA. Second Edition. With Title-page by PATTEN WILSON. Fcap. 8vo, 3s. 6d. net.

The BODLEY HEAD, Vigo-street, London, W.

Miss Braddon's New Novel.

Just Published in One Volume, 6s.

LONDON PRIDE

World says:—"It is a really astonishing performance."

St. James's Gazette says:—"Altogether the book is a remarkable one, even among the finest triumphs of this popular novelist's art."

London: SIMPKIN & CO., Ltd., and all Booksellers.

THE NINETEENTH CENTURY

No. 237.—NOVEMBER, 1896.

England and the Continental Alliances. By FRANCIS DE PRESSENSÉ (Foreign Editor of "Le Temps").
La Turquie et son Souverain. By DIRAN KÉLÉKIAN.
The Voluntary Schools. By the Right Hon. SIR JOHN GORST, M.P.
The Westralian Mining "Boom." By S. F. VAN OSS.
Commercial Morality in Japan. By ROBERT YOUNG (Editor "Kobe Chronicle," Japan).
Sketches made in Germany. No. 2. By Mrs. BLYTH.
Arbitration in Labour Disputes. By Mr. and Mrs. SYDNEY WEBB.
Noticeable Books. By ALGERNON CHARLES SWINBURNE, OUIDA, W. S. LILLY, Mrs. BIRCHENOUGH, and Sir WEMYSS REID.
Of Women in Assemblies; a Reply. By Mrs. MCILQUHAM.
The Modern Babel. By Professor MAHAFFY.
English and Dutch Dairy Farming. By H. HERBERT SMITH and ERNEST C. TREPPLIN.
Lord Leighton's Drawings. By S. P. COCKERELL.
The Conditions of Life after Death. By Mrs. BESANT.
Land Purchase in Ireland. By GEORGE FOTTRELL.
Turkish Misgovernment:—
(1) By WILFRID SCAWEN BLUNT.
(2) GENERAL GORDON'S Advice. (Communicated by Sir Edmund Du Cane).

London: SAMPSON LOW, MARSTON & CO., Ltd.

Price 6s.

THE STORY OF
MAURICE LESTRANGE.

By G. W. T. OMOND.
Crown 8vo, cloth.

Price 3s. 6d.

MRS. FINCH-BRASSEY.

By Mrs. ANDREW DEAN,
Author of "The Grasshoppers," "A Woman with a Future," &c.
Third Edition, Crown 8vo, cloth.

Price 2s.

A JAPANESE MARRIAGE.

By DOUGLAS SLADEN,
Author of "Brittany for Britons," &c.
Crown 8vo, paper boards; also in cloth, price 2s. 6d.

Price 2s.

A ROMANCE OF DIJON.

By M. BETHAM-EDWARDS,
Author of "The Curb of Honour," "The Dream-Charlotte," &c.
Crown 8vo, paper boards.

Price 2s.

THE LAST TOUCHES.

By Mrs. W. K. CLIFFORD.
Third Edition. Crown 8vo, paper covers.

Price 2s.

MERE STORIES.

By Mrs. W. K. CLIFFORD.
Crown 8vo, paper covers.

LONDON: A. & C. BLACK, SOHO SQUARE.

MR. WM. HEINEMANN'S NEW BOOKS.

UNDERCURRENTS OF THE SECOND EMPIRE. By ALBERT D. VANDAM, [Author of "An Englishman in Paris." 1 vol. 7s. 6d. net.

THE DAILY TELEGRAPH.—"Mr. Vandam displays a thorough mastery of his subject, and writes with exceeding energy and effectiveness."

TIMBUCTOO THE MYSTERIOUS. By FELIX DUBOIS. With 153 Illustrations from Photographs and Drawings made on the spot, and eleven Maps and Plans. 1 vol. 12s. 6d.

THE TIMES.—"One does not often meet with a book of travel so full of interest and novelty as this. M. Dubois' narrative affords an excellent picture of the present condition of things on the Niger."

A BOOK OF SCOUNDRELS. By CHARLES WHIBLEY. With a cover designed by Mr. Whistler. 1 vol. with a frontispiece, 7s. 6d.

THE PALL MALL GAZETTE.—"Mr. Whibley has done his work in admirable fashion. The artists of the road have lost nothing at the hands of their fellow artists of the pen."

IN RUSSETT AND SILVER. By EDMUND GOSSE. A new Edition. 1 vol. 3s. 6d.

THE PLAYS OF W. E. HENLEY AND R. L. STEVENSON. In 4 volumes, cloth 2s. 6d., paper 1s. 6d. each.

I. DEACON BRODIE. [Just ready.

CORREGGIO. His Life, his Friends, and his Time. By Dr. CORRADO RICCI. A new and popular Edition in 14 monthly parts. Each part, price 2s. 6d. net, contains three full page plates and numerous text illustrations. Part I. now ready.

NEW FICTION.

MRS. F. A. STEEL'S NEW NOVEL.

ON THE FACE OF THE WATERS. By F. A. STEEL, Author of "The Potter's Thumb." 1 vol. 6s.

A NEW THREE-VOLUME NOVEL.

LIFE THE ACCUSER. By EMMA BROOKE, Author of "A Superfluous Woman." 3 vols. 15s. net.

THE DAILY CHRONICLE.—"A three-volume novel which has no superfluous page is of itself a wonderment. But Miss Brooke has accomplished much more than this. She has given us a story in which our interest grows and grows, becomes absorbing, and is fast held until the last word upon the last page."

A NEW TWO-VOLUME NOVEL.

THE OTHER HOUSE. By HENRY JAMES. 2 vols. 10s. net.

THE DAILY NEWS.—"We admire the unfailing felicity of the author's phrase, the subtlety of his discriminating touches, the dexterity of his handling."

PERCY WHITE'S NEW NOVEL.

ANDRIA. By PERCY WHITE, Author of "Mr. Bailey-Martin." 1 vol. 6s.

THE DAILY TELEGRAPH.—"Cannot fail to secure the sincerest admiration. The touch of a master-hand is conspicuously and continuously manifest. Sparkles with brilliant metaphor and trenchant epigram."

BY THE AUTHOR OF "GEORGE MANDEVILLE'S HUSBAND."

BELOW THE SALT. By C. E. RAIMOND. 1 vol. 6s.

THE ST. JAMES'S GAZETTE.—"There is a fine sense of humour throughout. C. E. Raimond's writing is always good."

A COURT INTRIGUE. By BASIL THOMSON. 1 vol. 6s.

THE NATIONAL OBSERVER.—"For sheer cleverness would be hard to beat. The final scene could hardly have been better done by Stevenson."

IN ONE VOLUME, THREE SHILLINGS AND SIXPENCE.

THE REDS OF THE MIDI: An Episode of the Revolution. By FELIX GRAS. Fifth Edition.

THE TIMES.—"Never was child of the Revolution depicted in a more attractive manner."

IN ONE VOLUME, TWO SHILLINGS.

MAGGIE: A CHILD OF THE STREETS. By STEPHEN CRANE, Author of "The Red Badge of Courage."

THE PALL MALL GAZETTE.—"'Maggie' is by no means a pleasant story, but it is a strong one and a true one."

An Illustrated List of Mr. Heinemann's Announcements post free.
London: WM. HEINEMANN, 21, Bedford-street, W.C.

IMPORTANT NOTICE.

RUDYARD KIPLING'S new volume of Verse, "THE SEVEN SEAS," will be published on Nov. 5th, cr. 8vo, buckram, 6s.

TWELVE POPULAR NOVELS.

SIX SHILLINGS EACH.

Thelma. MARIE CORELLI.
The Carissima. LUCAS MALET.
A Child of the Jago. ARTHUR MORRISON.
Dartmoor Idylls. S. BARING-GOULD.
Under the Red Robe. STANLEY WEYMAN.
The Daughter of Alouette. M. A. OWEN.
In the Great Deep. J. A. BARRY.
The Spirit of Storm. RONALD ROSS.
Denounced. J. BLOUNDELLE BURTON.
Captain Jacobus. L. COPE CORNFORD.

THREE AND SIXPENCE EACH.

The Sign of the Spider. BERTRAM MITFORD.
The Squire of Wandales. A. SHIELD.

 Messrs. Methuen's Catalogue and "Book Gazette" sent to any address.
METHUEN & CO., 36, Essex-street, W.C.

KEGAN PAUL, TRENCH, TRÜBNER & CO. Ltd.

THE ONLY COMPLETE EDITION.

MOLTKE'S LETTERS TO HIS WIFE.

With an Introduction by SIDNEY WHITMAN. With Portraits of Moltke and his Wife, and a Genealogical Tree, in Facsimile of the Field-Marshal's Handwriting. Two vols. demy 8vo, £1. 10s.

"Straightforward and plain, expressive and concise, and, moreover, brimming over with a delightful fund of quiet humour. The translator has done his work very well."—Spectator.

BY "A SON OF THE MARSHES."

IN THE GREEN LEAF AND THE SERE.

By "A SON OF THE MARSHES." With numerous Illustrations by George C. Haité and Dorothy C. Nicholl. Large post 8vo, 7s. 6d.

ILLUSTRATED BY CECIL ALDIN.

EVERY-DAY CHARACTERS.

By WINTHROP MACKWORTH PRAED. Profusely Illustrated by Cecil Aldin, with a specially designed Cover in Colours. Crown 4to, 6s. [Immediately.

BY THE AUTHOR OF "TWO YEARS IN A JUNGLE."

THE MAN WHO BECAME A SAVAGE:

A STORY OF OUR OWN TIMES. By WILLIAM T. HORNADAY. With numerous Illustrations, and Cover in Colours. Crown 8vo, 6s.

AN ILLUSTRATED EDITION OF

MARCELLA GRACE.

By ROSA MULHOLLAND. An entirely New Edition, with Illustrations Crown 8vo, 6s.

JAPANESE FOLK-TALES.

SUNRISE STORIES.

A Glance at the Literature of Japan. By ROGER RIORDAN and TOZO TAKAYANAGI. Crown 8vo, 6s.

INTERNATIONAL SCIENTIFIC SERIES.

THE AURORA BOREALIS.

By ALFRED ANGOT. With 18 Illustrations. Crown 8vo, 5s.

LONDON.—PATERNOSTER HOUSE, CHARING CROSS ROAD.

TWELVE NOTABLE NOVELS,

Lately Published by

MESSRS. A. D. INNES & CO.

Each One Volume, Cr. 8vo, cloth, price 6s.

LIMITATIONS.	E. F. Benson.
THE THINGS THAT MATTER.	Francis Gribble.
THE LOWER LIFE.	Francis Gribble.
THE LIMB.	X. L.
RAVENSTONE.	Helen Shipton & C. R. Coleridge.
A STOLEN MASK.	Roma White.
THE CHANGELING OF BRANDLESOME.	Roma White.
LOT 13.	Dorothea Gerard.
A SET OF ROGUES.	Frank Barrett.
MY LADY ROTHA.	Stanley Weyman.
MISTRESS DOROTHY MARVIN.	J. C. Snaith.
THE WISDOM OF THE SIMPLE.	Nellie K. Blissett.

London: A. D. INNES & CO., 31 & 32, Bedford-street, Strand.

VERY SHORTLY.

THE KÁFIRS OF THE HINDU-KUSH.

By Sir GEORGE ROBERTSON, K.C.S.I. With numerous Illustrations by A. D. McCORMICK. Royal 8vo, £1. 11s. 6d.

In October, 1889, I found myself, for the second time, the official guest of the Mehtar of Chitrál, at the fort which constitutes the capital of that country. On my previous visit in 1888, I had seen several Káfirs of the Hindu-Kush, and had heard many tales of their strange manners and customs. The people of Káfiristán had first excited my curiosity during the Afghán War of 1879-80, and seeing them now in the flesh, my interest in them became so intensified that the desire to see them in their own homes was irresistible. I had accordingly asked the Government of India to be allowed to make an attempt to enter the Káfir country, and the permission was accorded me while actually on my way to Chitrál for the second time. The only previous European who had attempted to enter Káfiristán was General (then Colonel) Lockhart, when in command of a mission to examine the Hindu-Kush passes in 1885-86. He had penetrated into the upper part of the Bashgul Valley, and remained there for a few days; but jealousies having broken out amongst the Káfir headmen, he had been compelled to leave the country and return to Chitrál.

LAWRENCE & BULLEN, Ltd., 16, Henrietta-street, Covent Garden, W.C.

STERILITY IN WOMEN: Its Causes and Curative Treatment. By J. B. RYLEY, M.D., M.R.C.S., London. An Illustrated Edition of this Work is now ready. Price 3s. 6d.; post free, 3s. 8d. London: HENRY RENSHAW, 356, Strand.

MACMILLAN & CO.'S NEW BOOKS.

The First Edition having been exhausted, a SECOND EDITION will be ready in a few days.

By RUDYARD KIPLING.

Crown 8vo, cloth gilt, 6s.

SOLDIER TALES.

Containing: With the Main Guard—The Drums of the Fore and Aft—The Man Who Was—The Courting of Dinah Shadd—The Incarnation of Krishna Mulvaney—The Taking of Lungtungpen—The Madness of Private Ortheris. With Head and Tailpieces and Twenty-one Page Illustrations by A. S. Hartick.

Daily News.—"The large and beautifully clear print, excellent paper, and binding in blue and gold, make 'Soldiers Three' a most attractive and timely gift book. Mr. Kipling's Stories of Mulvaney & Co. are as captivating at the tenth reading as at the first—as all stories of first-rate genius are."

NEW NOVEL BY F. MARION CRAWFORD.

2 vols. globe 8vo, 12s.

TAQUISARA.

By F. MARION CRAWFORD.

Daily Telegraph.—"Lovers of Mr. Marion Crawford's romances will find much to delight them in his new novel 'Taquisara.' . . . . He has constructed a plot of wonderful skill and mystery."

BY THE AUTHOR OF "ROBBERY UNDER ARMS."

Crown 8vo, 6s.

THE SEALSKIN CLOAK.

By ROLF BOLDREWOOD.

Crown 8vo, 6s.

A BOOK OF OLD ENGLISH BALLADS, with an Accompaniment of Decorative Drawings by GEORGE WHARTON EDWARDS, with an Introduction by Hamilton W. Mabie.

CRANFORD SERIES.—New Volume.

Crown 8vo, cloth elegant, or cloth, paper label, uncut edges, 6s.

The SCHOOL for SCANDAL and The RIVALS. By RICHARD BRINSLEY SHERIDAN. With 50 Illustrations by EDMUND J. SULLIVAN, and an Introduction by AUGUSTINE BIRRELL, Q.C., M.P. Also a LIMITED EDITION on super-royal Hand-made Paper, 30s. net. (250 copies only for England and America.)

ILLUSTRATED STANDARD NOVELS.—New Volume.

Cloth, edges uncut, 3s. 6d.

"PEACOCK" Edition. Cloth elegant, edges gilt, 5s.

The PHANTOM SHIP. By Captain Marryat. With an Introduction by DAVID HANNAY, and Illustrations by H. R. MILLAR.

NEW AND CHEAPER EDITION.

Crown 8vo, 6s.

CASA BRACCIO. By F. Marion Crawford.

NEW BOOK BY MRS. MOLESWORTH.

The ORIEL WINDOW. By Mrs. Molesworth. With Illustrations by Leslie Brooke. Crown 8vo, 4s. 6d.

Cloth elegant, gilt tops, in a cloth box, 21s.

A Handy Volume Edition of Charles Kingsley's NOVELS AND POEMS. In 11 vols.

MACMILLAN & CO., Limited, London.

1/- (BY POST, 1/2.) 1/-

QUEER STORIES

—FROM—

"TRUTH."

"TRUTH" PUBLISHING OFFICE,

MUDIE'S SELECT LIBRARY.

ALL THE BEST BOOKS OF

Travel, Sport, Adventure, &c.

In ENGLISH, FRENCH, GERMAN, ITALIAN, and SPANISH.

Are in CIRCULATION and for SALE (either New or Secondhand).

Prospectuses of the Terms of Subscription in Town or Country and Lists of Books for Sale sent free by post to any address.

Books Exported to all parts of the World.

MUDIE'S SELECT LIBRARY, LIMITED,

30-34. NEW OXFORD STREET, LONDON; 241, Brompton Road, S.W.; and 48, Queen Victoria Street, E.C., and at 10-12, Barton Arcade, Manchester.

Just Published.—Monthly 1s., post free 1s. 3d.

BAILY'S MAGAZINE

OF SPORTS AND PASTIMES.

No. 441.—NOVEMBER, 1896.

CONTENTS.

Sporting Diary for the Month.
Portrait and Biographical Sketch of the Earl of Crewe.
Two Famous War Chargers. By the Hon. F. Lawley. (Illustrated.)
A Hunting Lecture. By "Borderer."
New Newmarket. By Edward Spencer.
Animal Painters.—XX. Francis Barlow. XXI. Peter Tilleman. By Sir Walter Gilbey, Bart. (Illustrated.)
The Berkeley Hunt. By W. C. A. Blew.
Women and Sport.—II. By Florence Baillie-Grohman.
November (Verses). By W. P. Williams.
Memories of an Old Soldier.—V. The Crosses of Fortune.
Will Goodall (Verses) By F. W. Kingston.
Huntsmen Past and Present.—1. The Past. By T. F. D. (Illustrated.)
Improvements in Bicycles. By E. T.
Foot Beagles. By Walter R. Crofton.
A Day's Wolf Hunting. By Bertram Tennyson.
The Hunting Season, 1896-7.
"Our Van."—The Testimonial to Mr. Joseph Osborne—Kempton Park—The Second October—Cub Hunting at Badminton—The Run of the Season with the Devon and Somerset Staghounds—The Commencement of the Coursing Season—Football—Golf.
Correspondence.
Summary of Prominent Results.

Annual Subscription, 14s., post free.

VINTON & CO., Limited, 9, New Bridge-street, London, E.C.

NEW SERIES. PRICE ONE SHILLING.

THE ARGOSY

For NOVEMBER contains:

The Mistress of Brae Farm. By Rosa Nouchette Carey. Chaps. XLVI.-L.—Brightlingsea and its Oysters. By Alexander H. Japp, LL.D.—Love or Money. By Jessie Leete.—The Ruins of Poblet. By Charles W. Wood, F.R.G.S.—"Woe to the Vanquished." By G. E. Mitton.—Anecdotes and Adventures. By Lindon Meadows.—Sleep. By Mary A. M. Marks.—Fosca. By A. Beresford.—"Mine Own Familiar Friend." By Christian Burke.—The Witch Maid. By M. Payne Smith.—Dead Leaves. By A. E. G. &c.,&c.,&c.

Profusely and Beautifully Illustrated.

HOSPITALS & APPEALS.

GREAT NORTHERN CENTRAL HOSPITAL.
VERY POOR, FREE, and UNENDOWED.
The only Hospital available for a population of one million.
An urgent APPEAL is made for FUNDS to support the work of relieving 1,200 In-patients and 30,000 Out-patients annually.
Holloway, N. L. H. GLENTON KERR, Secretary.

THE EARLSWOOD ASYLUM FOR IDIOTS.
About 150 AFFLICTED CASES, from all parts of the United Kingdom, are now seeking admission.
FUNDS URGENTLY NEEDED to maintain the Elected Patients now under care and training in the Institution.
Cases on payments regulated by the Board received as soon as approved.
JAMES DOWNING, Secretary.
Offices—36, King William-street, London Bridge, E.C.

CANCER WARDS of the MIDDLESEX HOSPITAL.—35 beds devoted to Hopeless Incurable Cases.
A FUND of £12,000 is being raised for the purpose of erecting a separate BUILDING for the accommodation of the FEMALE CANCER PATIENTS hitherto located in the hospital, an improvement which is urgently demanded on the ground of the health, comfort, and convenience of the patients. Towards the cost of the new building the sum of £9,000 has been paid or promised, and an URGENT APPEAL is now made for the balance of £3,000 still required. Patients are admitted without letters or any recommendation, save that of necessity, and are permitted to remain until "relieved by art or released by death."—F. CLARE MELHADO, Secretary-Superintendent.

LONDON FEVER HOSPITAL, Liverpool-road, Islington, N.
ADDITIONAL HELP is urgently needed.
Scarlet fever and diphtheria are very prevalent. Subscriptions and donations will be thankfully received by the Secretary at the Hospital.
MAJOR W. CHRISTIE.
Bankers—Prescott & Co., 50, Cornhill, E.C.

SERVANTS. SERVANTS. SERVANTS. SERVANTS.

THE BELGRAVE LADIES' AGENCY,
Entirely worked by Ladies,
SOLE OFFICES,
83, EBURY-STREET.
Have a large selection of first-rate servants (English, French, and German) with good personal characters; also job servants whose references are always taken up by this Agency before recommendation.

THE BELGRAVE LADIES' AGENCY

83, EBURY STREET, Near Victoria Station,

HOUSES HOUSES HOUSES HOUSES

Have a LARGE SELECTION of First-rate HOUSES and FLATS for the Parliamentary and London Seasons. Rents MODERATE. Every care is taken to save clients unnecessary trouble and expense. Also APARTMENTS in London, Country, and Abroad. Continental Agents. Rooms all inspected, and the highest references given. Entirely worked by Ladies.

ESTATES, AUCTIONS, &c.

KING'S, 108, Piccadilly.
In consequence of the above lease having been sold, Messrs. W. and S. FREEMAN (of Aldridge's, St. Martin's-lane) have instructions to SELL, absolutely without reserve, on the PREMISES, 108, Piccadilly, on TUESDAY NEXT, NOVEMBER 10th, 1896, at 11.30, the whole of the valuable stock of 55
High-class HARNESS HORSES, HUNTERS, HACKS, and COBS, all of which will be warranted, also the Carriages, Horses, Clothing, &c., will be included.
All horses are open to veterinary examination, and can be seen on application to JOHN THROUP, 108, Piccadilly, W.
On view FRIDAY and SATURDAY, NOVEMBER 6th and 7th, after which no horse will be allowed out until brought up for sale. Full catalogue forwarded.

The Conduit-street Auction Galleries.
MESSRS. KNIGHT, FRANK, & RUTLEY'S GALLERIES, 9, Conduit-street, and 23a, Maddox-street, W., are OPEN DAILY for the reception of FURNITURE, Pictures, Jewellery, Silver Plate, China, Books, and Artistic and Literary Property intended for Public Auction. Valuations prepared. Sales held at private residences in all parts of the country.

OWING TO THE UNSETTLED TURKISH MARKETS.—An important Shipment, direct from Constantinople, of beautiful ORIENTAL CARPETS and RUGS in many varieties of size, manufacture, design, and splendid colouring, collected from the most famous looms in the East, and comprising specimens from Mousoul, Daghestan, Shirvan, Kurdistan, and other centres in Turkey, Persia, Afghanistan, Beloochistan, &c.
MESSRS. KNIGHT, FRANK, & RUTLEY will SELL by AUCTION, at their Conduit-street Auction Galleries, 9, Conduit-street, and 23a, Maddox-street, London, W., the above ORIENTAL CARPETS and RUGS, on THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 5th, at ONE o'clock precisely. On view two days prior and morning of sale. Catalogues free.

GROSVENOR GARDENS.—A MANSION TO BE LET or SOLD. Unexceptionable position, lately most tastefully re-decorated throughout. The spacious reception rooms, consisting of drawing-room (panelled in silk), boudoir, dining-room and library, large room on ground floor, suitable for billiard or ball-room, eleven bedrooms, two dressing-rooms, two bath-rooms, splendid offices, hot and cold water, speaking tubes and bells fitted throughout. Sanitary arrangement under the latest improvements.—Apply for full particulars and orders to view, THE LADIES' AGENCY for Apartments and Houses, 83, Ebury-street, S.W.

WHITEHALL COURT.
Overlooking the Thames Embankment Gardens, and River, Whitehall, and Horse Guards, and commanding extensive views of the country beyond, as well as the St. James's and Green Parks.
A few SUITES to be LET in this magnificent Building.
Apply, GENERAL MANAGER, on the Premises.

CHESHAM-STREET, TO LET (furnished), for six months from 1st November. Beautifully furnished. 9 bed-rooms, 4 reception rooms, bath-room, excellent kitchen accommodation, hot and cold water all over house. Rent 200 guineas.—Apply, BELGRAVE LADIES' AGENCY, 83 Ebury-street.

TO INVALIDS.—A LIST of MEDICAL MEN, in all parts, willing to RECEIVE RESIDENT PATIENTS, giving full particulars and terms, sent Gratis. The List includes Private Asylums, &c. Schools also recommended—Address, Mr. G. B. STOCKER, 8, Lancaster-place, Strand, W.C.

THE CAPE COLONISATION COMPANY, LIMITED.
HOW TO MAKE AN INCOME-PAYING HOME.
The object of the above Company is to develop the resources of their estate, consisting of about 12,000 acres, situated in the far-famed Tulbagh district in the Western Province of Cape Colony, about 75 miles distant by rail from Cape Town. They are promoting the establishment of a successful colony. The estate has been surveyed and laid out in blocks of about 40 acres each, a number of which have already been sold. The purchase price of this land this year (with all water facilities) is £12 per acre, threequarters of which can remain bearing interest at six per cent. per annum.
In order to provide for the success of every colonist who has sufficient capital at command to be able to enter into this business, but has no practical knowledge of the work, the company have engaged the services of an efficient manager and a skilled horticulturist; and who will, if desired, plant, cultivate, and attend to the development of each client's farm for one year or more.
Thus any settler, provided he gives ordinary attention to the details of the work this company have undertaken for him, can obtain, under the guidance of a skilled specialist, that practical knowledge which is essential in the working to the best advantage of dairy and fruit farms.

THE CAPE COLONISATION COMPANY, LIMITED.
The Company undertake, if desired, to clear, plant, fence, supervise, and generally manage any holding. They guarantee that 90 per cent. of the trees and vines planted under the supervision of their staff grow to maturity, as specified in the agreement, a copy of which can be obtained on application. The company will manage the estate of any absentee at a charge of £1 a year per acre, and will also undertake to erect on the estate any houses for the residence of a settler, which can be chosen in London before sailing, with estimates given. They further undertake to purchase from a settler, at marketable prices, any approved dairy, farm, and orchard produce.
At the company's headquarters, at Seven Fountains, are the orchard and vineyard belonging to the company, and extensive creameries, packing houses, &c., will be erected as soon as necessary.
Steps are already being taken for the erection of a sugar beet factory, &c., and it is the intention of the company to promote milling and other industries.

THE CAPE COLONISATION COMPANY, LIMITED.
The Company solicit enquiries from families who are seeking a fresh start in life.
Young gentlemen who are looking for an opening in which to make their way.
Farmers who for years have been losing money in this country and would like to start afresh.
Retired members of the Military, Naval, and Civil Services, desiring to increase their incomes.
The delicate (those inclined to bronchial and pulmonary troubles) who need an avenue for making an income in a congenial climate.
The General Manager of the Company is going out at the beginning of October, and will be pleased to have the Company of any one who desires to avail himself of this opportunity of a fresh start in life in a new field.
All are requested to be good enough to place themselves in communication with the Secretary of the Company—
3, PANCRAS LANE, QUEEN STREET, LONDON, E.C.,
from whom full particulars and papers on all points can be obtained. Also the illustrated book on the subject, price 2s., together with a Manual of Practical Orchard Work at the Cape. Published by the Department of Agriculture of the Cape of Good Hope.

AMUSEMENTS.

HAYMARKET THEATRE.
Sole Lessee, Mr. Frederick Harrison.
Managers, Mr. Frederick Harrison and Mr. Cyril Maude.
TO-NIGHT and EVERY EVENING, at 8.15,
UNDER THE RED ROBE.
Adapted by Edward Rose from the novel by Stanley Weyman.
Mr. Cyril Maude, Mr. Herbert Waring, and Miss Winifred Emery.
MATINEE EVERY SATURDAY, at 2.30.
Box-office (Mr. Leverton) 10 to 10. HAYMARKET.

ST. JAMES'S HALL.
SARASATE CONCERTS.
Under the direction of Mr. N. Vert.
SECOND CONCERT, MONDAY NEXT, November 9, at 3.
Pianoforte, Dr. Otto Neitzel.
Bechstein Grand Pianoforte.
Tickets, 10s. 6d., 5s., 3s., 2s., and 1s., of the usual Agents; Robert Newman's Box-office, Queen's Hall; Tree, St. James's Hall, and of N. Vert, 6, Cork-street, W.

QUEEN'S HALL.
LAMOUREUX ORCHESTRAL CONCERTS.

Monday	November 16, 8.30	Tuesday	November 17, 3.0
Wednesday	November 18, 8.30	Thursday	November 19, 3.0
Friday	November 20, 8.30	Saturday	November 21, 3.0

Full programmes now ready. Subscription for the Six Concerts £3 3s. Three Afternoon or Evening £1 11s. 6d. Single Tickets 12s. 6d., 10s. 6d., 5s., and 2s. 6d., of the usual Agents, and Robert Newman's Box-office, Queen's Hall.

ST. JAMES'S HALL.
EUGEN D'ALBERT'S ONLY PIANOFORTE RECITAL, SATURDAY AFTERNOON, NEXT at 3. (Under the direction of Mr. Alfred Schulz-Curtius). Tickets, 10s. 6d., 5s., 3s., and 1s., of Mr. Basil Tree, St. James's Hall; Messrs. Chappell & Co.; Mr. Newman, Queen's Hall; usual Agents; or Mr. Alfred Schulz-Curtius, 16, Shaftesbury-avenue, Piccadilly, W.

THE ANNUAL WINTER EXHIBITION of PICTURES and WATER COLOUR DRAWINGS by Artists of the British and Foreign Schools is NOW OPEN, at THOMAS McLEAN'S GALLERY, 7, Haymarket. Admission, 1s., including Catalogue.

PHOTOGRAPHIC SALON, 1896 (Fourth Year), DUDLEY GALLERY, EGYPTIAN HALL, Piccadilly, W. LAST WEEK. LAST WEEK. Closes NOV. 7th. NOV. 7th. Brilliantly lighted in dull weather and on Wednesdays and Saturdays after dusk.

NIAGARA. SKATING.
Morning, 3/- Afternoon 5/- Evening, 3/- Non-skaters—Afternoon. 2/6
SKATING. NIAGARA.

NATIONAL SKATING PALACE
(HENGLER'S), Argyll-street, W.
SPLENDID ICE. Brilliant MUSIC. Largest Skating Area in the Metropolis.
SEASON TICKETS, 1896-7.—Three Months, i.e. Oct. 31st to Jan. 31st, £5. 5s.
Members of one family living in same house—For First Ticket, £5. 5s.; for Second, or more, £3. 3s.; Children under 14 years of age; £2. 12s. 6d.
DAY TICKETS, in Books of Twelve for the price of Ten-
ORDINARY CHARGES FOR ADMISSION.—10.30 a.m. to 1 p.m., 3s.; 3 p.m. to 6 p.m., 5s.; 7.30 p.m. to 10.30 p.m., 3s.
GRAND CARNIVAL, 9th November. £150 in Prizes.

MADAME TUSSAUD'S EXHIBITION, Baker-street Station.—Grand Ecclesiastical Tableau, His Grace the Archbishop of Canterbury (Dr. Temple, D.D.), &c., &c. The celebrated Roumanian Orchestra. Afternoon and Evening. Admission, 1s. Open from 10 a.m. till 10 p.m.

CRYSTAL PALACE.—SATURDAY CONCERT.—Saturday Next, November 7, at 3. Vocalist, Mdlle Landi. Pianist, Mdlle. Chaninade. Grand Orchestra. Conductor, Mr. August Manns. Seats, 1s. to 4s.

JAPAN, CHINA, CANADIAN PACIFIC ROUTE, viâ New York, Montreal, Vancouver. Only line running through trains, Atlantic to Pacific, under one management. Largest, fastest, only twin-screw steamers on Pacific. Leave England thrice weekly; Vancouver, tri-weekly.
ROUND THE WORLD, £115.
CANADA, UNITED STATES.—Cheap through tickets by fast trains. For berths or descriptive pamphlets apply, CANADIAN PACIFIC RAILWAY, 67-8, King William-street, London Bridge, or 30, Cockspur-street, Charing Cross.
N.B.—Allan, American, Anchor, Beaver, Cunard, Dominion, and White Star Agency.

ORIENT COMPANY'S YACHTING CRUISES,
by the Steamships "LUSITANIA," 3,877 tons register, and "GARONNE," 3,876 tons register, from LONDON, as under:—
For TENERIFFE, the WEST INDIA ISLANDS, BERMUDA, &c.
Leaving January 13, returning March 16.
For MOROCCO, SICILY, PALESTINE, and EGYPT.
Leaving February 17, returning April 15.
For SOUTH of SPAIN, GREECE, CONSTANTINOPLE, &c.
Leaving March 31, returning May 17.
For PORTUGAL, MOROCCO, CORSICA, ITALY, and SICILY.
Leaving April 21, returning May 31.
String band, electric light, electric bells, hot and cold baths, high-class cuisine.
Managers, { F. GREEN & CO. / ANDERSON, ANDERSON, & CO. } Head Offices: Fenchurch-avenue.
For passage apply to the latter firm at 5, Fenchurch-avenue, London, E.C.; or to the West End Branch Office, 16, Cockspur-street, S.W.

WINTER IN THE WEST INDIES
SPECIAL TOURS, 65 days for £65.
By magnificent vessels of the
ROYAL MAIL STEAM PACKET COMPANY.
For particulars apply, 18, Moorgate-street, or 29, Cockspur-street (West-end). London.

RIVIERA, Pyrenees, and Italy.—COOK'S SINGLE and RETURN TICKETS by all Routes. Interpreters at the chief stations en route. Conductor leaves London every Tuesday from November 3rd, assisting passengers, free of charge, to Marseilles, Cannes, Nice, Monte Carlo, Mentone, &c. Special arrangements for insuring baggage.—For full particulars apply to THOS. COOK & SON, Ludgate-circus, London; City Office, 99, Gracechurch-street; 33, Piccadilly; 13, Cockspur-street, Pall-mall; 82, Oxford-street; 445 West Strand, &c.

PRINCE LINE.—EGYPT and the HOLY LAND.
CHEAP ROUND TOURS a SPECIALITY.
RIVER PLATE DIRECT (not calling at Brazilian Ports).
MADEIRA and the CANARY ISLANDS.
GIBRALTAR, TUNIS, MALTA.
Superior Services. Fares extremely moderate. High-class Cuisine.
Luxurious saloons and cabins, promenade decks, all amidships.
Head office:—JAMES KNOTT, Newcastle-on-Tyne.

AMUSEMENTS.

DRURY LANE THEATRE.—Lessees, the EXORS. of the late Sir AUGUSTUS HARRIS.—AUTUMN SEASON, under the Management of Mr. JOHN COLEMAN. Every Evening, at 8, THE DUCHESS OF COOLGARDIE. MORNING PERFORMANCE EVERY SATURDAY.

LYCEUM.—CYMBELINE, EVERY NIGHT, at 8.
Iachimo ..... Henry Irving.
Imogen ..... Miss Ellen Terry.
MATINEES, WEDNESDAYS, November 11 and 25, December 2 and 9.
Box-office (Mr. J. Hurst) open 10 to 5, and 7.30 to 10. Seats also booked by letter or telegram. LYCEUM.

GAIETY.—Lessee and Manager, GEORGE EDWARDES.—ANOTHER GAIETY SUCCESS.—EVERY EVENING, at 8.15, a New Musical Play, in Two Acts, entitled MY GIRL, by James T. Tanner, Music by Osmond Carr, Lyrics by Adrian Ross. Box-office open daily from 10 till 6. MATINEE Saturday Next, at 2.30.

ADELPHI THEATRE.—A. & S. GATTI, Sole Proprietors and Managers.—TO-NIGHT, at 8 o'clock, BOYS TOGETHER. William Terriss and Miss Millward; Mr. W. L. Abingdon, Mr. C. W. Somerset, Mr. Luigi Lablache, Mr. Mackintosh, Mr. J. D. Beveridge, Mr. Oscar Adye, and Mr. Harry Nicholls; Miss Nesbitt, Miss Kate Kearney, Miss Alice Kingsley, &c.

SAVOY.—Every Evening, at 8.30, and Every Saturday Afternoon, at 2.30, THE MIKADO, by W. S. Gilbert and Arthur Sullivan. At 7.50, WEATHER OR NO. Box-office 9 a.m. to 11 p.m.—R. D'OYLY CARTE, Proprietor and Manager.

CRITERION THEATRE.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. CHARLES WYNDHAM.—Every Evening, at 8.30, ROSEMARY, by Louis N. Parker and Murray Carson. Mr. CHARLES WYNDHAM, Miss MARY MOORE, and the Criterion Company. MATINEE EVERY WEDNESDAY, at 2.30. SPECIAL WEDNESDAY MATINEE on November 11, at 2.30.

DALY'S THEATRE.—Sole Lessee and Manager, Mr. AUGUSTIN DALY.—EVERY EVENING, and SATURDAY MATINEE. Mr. George Edwardes's Company in THE GEISHA. The book by Owen Hall. Lyrics by Harry Greenbank. Music by Sydney Jones.

VAUDEVILLE.—A. & S. GATTI, Sole Lessees and Managers. EVERY EVENING, at 9, A NIGHT OUT. Preceded, at 8.15, by PAPA'S WIFE. MATINEE EVERY WEDNESDAY, at 3. Doors open 7.45. Box-office open 10 to 10.

COURT THEATRE.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. ARTHUR CHUDLEIGH.—EVERY EVENING, at 9, THE BELLE OF CAIRO, by Messrs. Cecil Raleigh and Kinsey Peile, in which Miss May Yohé will appear. Preceded, at 8.15, by NUMBER ONE ROUND THE CORNER. Doors open at 7.45. Box-office open 10 to 10. Telephone No. 3,031. MATINEE SATURDAY NEXT, at 3. Doors open 2.30.

ST. JAMES'S.—THE PRISONER OF ZENDA.—By Anthony Hope and Edward Rose.
EVERY EVENING, at 8.15. Doors open 7.45. Box-office open daily, 10 to 10. Seats booked one month in advance by letter, wire, or telephone (3,903).
THE PRISONER OF ZENDA.
Mr. George Alexander, Miss Julia Neilson; Messrs. W. H. Vernon, H. H. Vincent, Allan Aynesworth, C. Aubrey Smith, Henry B. Irving, William H. Day, Henry Loraine, George Bancroft, Arthur Royston, Vincent Sternroyd; Miss Hackney, Miss Darvill, Miss Fay Davis.
MATINEE EVERY SATURDAY, and WEDNESDAY NEXT, Nov. 11, at 2.
ST. JAMES'S THEATRE.
Sole Lessee and Manager, Mr. GEORGE ALEXANDER.

COMEDY.—Sole Manager, Mr. CHARLES HAWTREY.
TO-NIGHT and EVERY EVENING, at 8.50, a New Play, entitled
MR. MARTIN, by Charles Hawtrey.
Mr. Charles Hawtrey, Mr. Charles Brookfield, Mr. Henry Kemble, Mr. William F. Hawtrey, Mr. W. T. Lovell, Mr. Frederick Volpe, Mr. A. Matthews, Mr. H. Deane, Mr. Stephenson; Miss Rose Leclercq, Miss Jessie Bateman, Miss Nina Boucicault, Miss Marjorie Griffiths, Miss Elliot Page, and Miss Lottie Venne. At 8, a New Comedy, in One Act, by Edward Ferris and Arthur Stuart, entitled A WHITE STOCKING. Doors open 7.45. Box-office 10 to 10.
MATINEE EVERY SATURDAY, at 3. COMEDY.

ROYALTY THEATRE.—Lessee, Miss Kate Santley.
Mr. GEORGE ALEXANDER'S SEASON.
EVERY EVENING, at 9, a Farce in Three Acts, from the French of George Feydeau and Maurice Hennequin by Justin Huntly McCarthy, entitled
HIS LITTLE DODGE.
Mr. Fred Terry, Mr. Alfred Maltby, Mr. Frank Dyall and Mr. Weedon Grossmith; Miss Repton, and Miss Ellis Jeffreys. Preceded, at 8.30, by THE STORM, in One Act, by Ian Robertson. Mr. H. V. Esmond, Mr. H. B. Irving, and Miss Hammond. Doors open at 8. MATINEES EVERY SATURDAY, at 3.
Box-office (Mr. Horne) 10 to 5. ROYALTY.

ALHAMBRA.—TO-NIGHT, Two New Grand Ballets, RIP VAN WINKLE and DONNYBROOK. Grand VARIETIES. Prices, 6d. to £3. 3s. Open 7.30. ALFRED MOUL, General Manager.

EMPIRE THEATRE.—EVERY EVENING, the New Grand Ballet, MONTE CRISTO. Great success. LUMIERE'S CINEMATOGRAPHE. Grand VARIETY ENTERTAINMENT. Doors open at 7.30.

PALACE, Shaftesbury-avenue.—The HANDSOMEST THEATRE in EUROPE. The finest Variety Entertainment in London, including the NEW SERIES OF TABLEAUX VIVANTS. Full Licence. Prices from 6d. Doors open 7.30.—Manager, Mr. CHARLES MORTON.

LONDON PAVILION.—TREMENDOUS PROGRAMME. Bunth, Rudd, and Barnard, exclusively engaged; Eugene Stratton, Vesta Victoria, Mdlle. La Belle Rose, Herbert Campbell, Maggie Duggan, George Robey, Lily Harold, Will Evans, George Beauchamp, Florrie Robina, Athas and Collins, Laura Lyle, Leo Stormont, Eva Bell, The Avolos, Ray Maskell, Mark Anthony, Marie Tyler, Walter Stockwell, Hilda Scott, W. P. Dempsey, Violet Nelson, Fred Herbert, The Stebbings, and the Great Selbini Troupe of Bicyclists. Prices from 1s. to £3. 3s. Doors open at 7.30. Box-office open from 11 to 5.

TIVOLI, Strand, London.—The Greatest Combination of Talent in London.—Open EVERY EVENING, at 7.45, and SATURDAY MATINEE, at 2.30, with a STAR PROGRAMME, embracing every Artiste of note.—Manager, Mr. VERNON DOWSETT.

"TRUTH" HOTEL LIST.

BATH.—LANSDOWN GROVE HOTEL.—Desirable residence, in beautifully wooded grounds, 400 feet above sea level, facing south, and protected from north and east. Air dry and bracing. Assembly and Pump Rooms within easy distance. Omnibus free to and from Hot Mineral Baths. Billiards, Tennis Lawn.

BONCHURCH HOTEL, Bonchurch, Isle of Wight, one mile from Ventnor Station.
A comfortable, quiet, and most beautifully-situated Hotel. Pretty garden. Good sea view.
H. RIBBANDS, Proprietor.

BOSCOMBE, Bournemouth.—THE CHINE HOTEL. Under new management.
Magnificent sea views. Moderate charges. Book East Station.
Miss BARNETT (late of the Inns of Court Hotel), Manageress.

BOURNEMOUTH.—HOTEL MONT DORE.—South aspect, 150 rooms, electric light throughout, passenger lift, first-class cuisine, winter garden and lounge, covered tennis court. Turkish, sea-water, and medicated Baths. The Hotel is within two minutes' walk of the Golf Links.—For tariff, address W. KNEESE, Manager.

BOURNEMOUTH.—HIGHCLIFFE HOTEL (first-class). Unrivalled position, West Cliff, full south. Splendid sea view. Most comfortable. Electric light. Table d'hôte (separate tables). Supplies from own Alderney Dairy Farm. Telephone 27.
JOHN KILNER, Proprietor.

BRIGHTON.—GRAND HOTEL.
Centre of Sea Front. Electric Light throughout.
NEW LIFT TO ALL FLOORS.
For Illustrated Tariff apply to A. D. HOOK, Manager.

BRIGHTON.—BEDFORD HOTEL.—Old-established. Unequalled in situation; opposite West Pier. Spacious coffee and reading rooms; sea-water service; unequalled cuisine; great variety of excellent wines. Moderate tariff. Electric light in all rooms.
GEO. HECKFORD, Manager.

CARBIS BAY HOTEL, CORNWALL. The very spot to obtain rest and quietude. Overlooking the finest bay in England. Mild yet bracing climate. Within easy distance of London by G.W.R. Splendid Golf Links. "A more beautiful spot for residence could hardly be imagined."—Truth.

INNS OF COURT HOTEL, Holborn.—A first-class Family Hotel, with 200 bedrooms, all modern conveniences. Electric lights, lifts, &c. Banquets arranged. The Central Hall is the finest and the Dining-room the pleasantest in London. Masonic lodge, public meeting rooms, &c. Table d'hôte, 6 to 8, 3s. 6d.—FRANK BLACKLEY, Manager. Inclusive terms from 10s. 6d. per day.

THE WESTMINSTER PALACE HOTEL, facing the Abbey and Houses of Parliament. Every modern comfort and convenience. Reasonable tariff, and no charge for attendance. Telegrams "Hostelry, London."

HANS CRESCENT HOTEL

HANS CRESCENT, BELGRAVIA, LONDON, S.W.
Within three minutes' walk of the Albert Gate Entrance to Hyde Park and Tattersall's.

THIS FAMILY HOTEL is sumptuously Furnished and Appointed, and complete in every detail. There are many self-contained Suites of Apartments, ensuring the utmost privacy (each having a Bathroom), as well as Single Bedrooms.

A HIGH-CLASS RESTAURANT
(À la carte and at fixed prices) is attached to the Hotel for Non-Residents.
RECHERCHE CUISINE.
The splendid COVERED WINTER GARDEN (2,500 square feet in area) forms a charming lounge, an attraction which is not possessed by any other Hotel in London. The entire building is agreeably heated during the winter.
Manager, MONS. C. DIETTE.

ILFRACOMBE.

The WARMEST WINTER SEASIDE RESORT in England

THE ILFRACOMBE HOTEL.

First-class Return Tickets issued from London (Waterloo), L. and S.W.R., from November to March, including seven days' Bed, Board, and Attendance at the Ilfracombe Hotel, £5. 5s. each, available for one month.
Ask for HOTEL TICKETS, available by all trains. Fast trains leave Waterloo at 11 and 3 o'clock. H. R. GROVER, Manager.

BUXTON, DERBYSHIRE.

THE PALACE HOTEL.

Large and high-class Hotel. Upwards of 200 rooms. Finest position in Buxton. Surrounded by own grounds of six acres. Ground-floor sitting-rooms and bed-rooms. Magnificent public rooms. American elevator. Table d'hôte at separate tables. Tariff, with plan of rooms and sketch map of Buxton, on application. A. CROSS, Manager.

HASTINGS. Due South, Facing Sea.

QUEEN'S HOTEL,

LARGEST AND BEST APPOINTED.
Sunny, and most sheltered position in Hastings and St. Leonards.
ELECTRIC LIGHT. PASSENGER ELEVATOR.
Moderate Tariff. Hotel Flys attend the trains.
WILLIAM GLADE, Manager.

HASTINGS.—ALBANY HOTEL (Robertson-terrace).—Inclusive terms from 2½ gns. upwards. Finest position on the whole sea front. Electric Light everywhere. Lift to all floors. Smoking room and all public rooms face the sea. Billiards. Special Notice! No charge for attendance is made. Visitors can bring their own wines; no corkage is charged.—C. A. SCHWABE, Manager.

FOLKESTONE.—WEST CLIFF HOTEL (180 Apartments). Stands in own private grounds of 2½ acres, facing the sea. All latest sanitary improvements. Excellent cuisine and wines. Table d'hôte at 7 p.m., separate tables.—For tariff please address The PROPRIETOR.

FOLKESTONE.—BATES' HOTEL, West Cliff Gardens, and LONGFORD PRIVATE HOTEL, The Lees. Oldest established and most select Family Hotels in Folkestone. Reduced terms during Winter and Spring months. Pension (new Coffee-room) at Bates' Hotel.—G. L. HART, Proprietor. Sanitation Certified.

GRAND CANARY.—THE METROPOLE.
Newest and best Hotel.
Delightful position, fronting the sea.
Terms most moderate.

JERSEY.—The GRAND HOTEL is charmingly situated, facing the sea, with full south aspect, and sheltered from the north and easterly winds. Every home comfort and liberal management.—For terms apply to D. DE LEIDI, Manager.

MALVERN—One of the most charming places for the Holidays.—The IMPERIAL HOTEL occupies the best position, and receives visitors en pension. The golf-links (18 holes) are one of the best in England. Capital stabling for hunters. Droitwich Brine, Turkish and large Swimming Bath in separate buildings. For tariff, apply to the Proprietor and Manager. F. MOERSCHELL.

TORQUAY.—IMPERIAL HOTEL.—Under entirely New Management. New sanitary arrangements throughout. It is the largest and best-situated Hotel in Torquay, and the best winter residence on the South Coast. Visitors received en pension or à la carte. Terms moderate.
F. FISCHER, Manager.

TUNBRIDGE WELLS.—WELLINGTON HOTEL, Mount Ephraim. Under the distinguished patronage of his Grace the late Duke of Wellington, K.G., the leading nobility and gentry, &c. 422 ft. above sea level, south aspect; elegantly furnished; piano in every sitting-room. Cuisine English and French. Electric light throughout.—BRABY, Proprietor.

All applications for spaces in this List should be made to the ADVERTISEMENT MANAGER,
"TRUTH" BUILDINGS, CARTERET STREET,
QUEEN ANNE'S GATE, S.W.

A COMPLETE LIST OF

HOTELS OF THE MIDLAND RAILWAY.

London	MIDLAND GRAND (St. Pancras).	Leeds ...	QUEEN'S.
Liverpool...	ADELPHI.	Derby ...	MIDLAND.
Bradford ...	MIDLAND.	Morecambe	MIDLAND.
		Normanton	STATION.

The Favourite Hotels for Tourists, Cyclists, and Pedestrians.

Specialities—Comfort, Good Cuisine, Moderate Charges.

WILLIAM TOWLE, Manager, Chief Office, St. Pancras, N.W.

LOWESTOFT GRAND HOTEL.

Standing in its own grounds. Open all the year round. Special reduced terms until May. Splendid sea fishing.

LAS PALMAS. Grand Canary.—[illegible] LINA HOTEL.—For all particulars apply at [illegible] Company, Limited, 1, Laurence Pountney-hill, E.C.

WESTON-SUPER-MARE.—"One of the healthiest and most invigorating watering-places in the world."—The GRAND ATLANTIC is the principal and leading Hotel, facing the sea. 130 sumptuously appointed rooms, delightful public rooms, hydraulic lift, every modern comfort. Nearest to Golf Links and Railway Station. "Own model farm."—Apply, Manager. Telegraphic address, "Atlantic." Telephone No. 11.

CONTINENTAL WINTER RESORT, five hours from London.—The magnificent HOTEL DE PUYS, near Dieppe, offers to English families a luxurious home in a mild and sunny climate; English sanitation, sea air, perfect cycling roads; tariff from £2. 10s. a week. Return fare, Friday to Tuesday, first class, 24s.—J. PELLETIER, Manager.

CAP MARTIN HOTEL

(BETWEEN MENTONE AND MONTE CARLO.)
FINEST SITE ON THE RIVIERA.

Re-opens on the 20th Nov. under the same Management.

Since last season the Hotel has been lighted throughout by electricity, re-decorated, and about 30 new rooms have been added.

Perfect Sanitation of Hotel and District. The Hotel has private Dairy and Laundry. Omnibus meets trains at Mentone.

Address—MANAGER, Cap Martin Hotel, Mentone.

SPECIAL SHIPMENTS OF

ORIENTAL CARPETS

TO BE SOLD AT GREATLY REDUCED PRICES.

TRELOAR & SONS,

LUDGATE HILL.

PRICES ARE MUCH REDUCED, as not only is the Raw Material lower, but cheap freights and a low rate of exchange are at present in favour of buyers.

TURKEY AND INDIAN CARPETS

Are delivered to the warehouse two or three times a week in all sizes, both in the old and new colourings.

ANY CARPET WILL BE SENT ON APPROBATION TO APPROVED CUSTOMERS.

A CATALOGUE OF FLOOR COVERINGS POST FREE ON APPLICATION.

TRELOAR & SONS, LUDGATE HILL, LONDON, E.C.

THE NEW PATENT

"Self-Closing"

BRACELETS.

NEVER SLIP in whatever position placed.
Delightfully flexible and comfortable.
Specially suitable for Presents, as they fit any wrist.

Made in plain gold. Also with the pretty and Fashionable Turquoises and Pearls studded all round.

LARGE VARIETY OF PATTERNS.
Sold by all leading Jewellers.
Wholesale only Saunders & Shepherd, London.

LIQUEUR of the GRANDE CHARTREUSE.

This most excellent Liqueur, the great preventive of Indigestion, and almost certain remedy for sea-sickness, can now be had of all Wine Merchants, and at prices much lower than formerly.
Sole Consignee, W. DOYLE, 35, Crutched Friars, London, E.C.

GUARANTEED PERFECTLY HOLLOW GROUND

IVORY, 6/-

BLACK, 4/-

From all Dealers, or write direct to Makers:
T. TURNER & CO., Suffolk Works, SHEFFIELD.
Who will supply through nearest Agent.
ASK FOR "ENCORE" POCKET AND TABLE CUTLERY.

CARTER 6A, NEW CAVENDISH ST. PORTLAND PLACE, LONDON.

ONLY ADDRESS OF ORIGINAL CARTER

LITERARY MACHINE.

For holding book, lamp, meals, &c., in any position over an easy chair, bed, or sofa.
Deliciously luxurious. A most useful gift. Prices from 17/6

INVALID FURNITURE.
ADJUSTABLE COUCHES and BEDS from £1. 10/-

Bed Lift £3. 10/-
Reclining Boards, 25/-
Walking Machines
Portable W.C.'s.
Electric Bells,
Urinals, &c.
Air & Water Beds.

Bed Rests 7/6
Leg Rests 10/-
Crutches 10/6
Bed Baths 12/6
Commodes, £1. 5/-

Carrying Chairs from £1.
Breakfast in Bed Tables from 30/-

Self-Propelling Chairs from £2

BATH CHAIRS FROM £1. 5/-

ILLUSTRATED CATALOGUES POST FREE.

JOHN CARTER, 6a, NEW CAVENDISH ST. Portland-pl. London, W

THOMAS WALLIS & CO. LIM.

HOLBORN CIRCUS, LONDON, E.C.,

Beg to announce that on THURSDAY, November 5, and during the remainder of the week, they will hold their ANNUAL Autumn Sale of Paris Mantles.

An exceptionally rich Assortment of these goods, including OPERA CLOAKS, TRAVELLING, and other long CLOAKS, suitable for evening wear, all in the most fashionable materials, and in the very latest styles, will be shown at prices very much below their value.

THOMAS WALLIS & CO. LIM.

HOLBORN CIRCUS, LONDON, E.C.

THE REFINED SMOKE.

Awarded wherever Exhibited.
CHICAGO, BORDEAUX, SHEFFIELD, HULL.

Best French Briar Root from 3s. 6d.
Ordinary ..... 1s. 6d.

Insist upon having "BILTOR."

THE BILTOR CO. 93, OXFORD ST., LONDON, W.

Ask Your Grocer

FOR

HELM-COCOA.

BABY'S BOON.

Is RIDGE'S FOOD.

SPHAGNOL PEAT.

Smokeless and Sanitary Fuel.

Price—1,000 LOGS FOR 20s.

SPHAGNOL.

Carriage free four miles from Charing Cross, or to any Railway Station within fifteen miles,

Sole Agents—CHAMBERLAIN & CO., 10, HART STREET, BLOOMSBURY, W.C., one minute from Mudie's Library

ALL HEADACHES INSTANTLY CURED OR MONEY REFUNDED.

LEGAL GUARANTEE.

7½D. EMERSON'S BROMO-SELTZER, the most successful American remedy, is an effervescent powder, taken in water. If three doses do not cure any head-ache, no matter how caused, send the bottle to us, saying where obtained, AND WE WILL AT ONCE REFUND THE PRICE.

Trial Bottle, post free, 7½d. Larger Sizes, 1s. 1½d. and 2s. 3d. Sold by many Chemists or obtained to order by almost all.

EMERSON DRUG CO., Ltd.
46, Holborn Viaduct
LONDON, E.C.

INSIST ON FULL NAME—

EMERSON'S BROMO-SELTZER

AMERICAN TOOTH CROWN CO.,

24 OLD BOND ST., W.
50 & 52 LUDGATE HILL, E.C.

FOR FIRST CLASS DENTISTRY.

Decayed and broken-down teeth should not be extracted. They can be saved for many years by skilful crowning and filling at moderate and fixed fees. Experts in all methods of dentistry in attendance daily.

Descriptive book post free on Application to the Secretary at either Address.

NO FEE FOR CONSULTATION.

WARMTH WITHOUT WEIGHT.

Guaranteed Non-Shrinking.

"Australlama"

THE PERFECTION OF

Woollen Under-wear

For Ladies, Gentlemen & Children

SCOTCH { AUSTRALIAN WOOL AND INDIAN CASHMERE } MADE

ILLUSTRATED PRICE LIST & SAMPLES POST FREE FROM THE SOLE MANUFACTURER.

Greensmith Downes, Edinburgh.

Asthma, Bronchitis,

DIFFICULT BREATHING,

Promptly & Effectually Relieved

BY THE USE OF

SAVORY & MOORE'S

DATURA TATULA.

Cigars and Cigarettes—Boxes, 3s., 6s., 8s., and 15s., Tobacco—Tins, 2s. 6d., 5s., 10s., and 18s. For Non-Smokers, Pastilles and Powder for Burning and Inhalation—Tins, each containing a censer for burning, 2s. 6d., 5s., and 10s.

SAVORY & MOORE, London.

And of Chemists everywhere.

THE LATE EARL OF BEACONSFIELD,
SIR MORELL MACKENZIE,
OLIVER WENDELL HOLMES,
MISS EMILY FAITHFUL,
THE LATE GEN. W. T. SHERMAN, and many other persons of distinction, have testified to the remarkable efficacy of Himrod's Cure for Asthma.

Established nearly a Quarter of a Century.

Prescribed by the Medical Faculty throughout the world. It is used as an Inhalation and without any after bad effects. A free Sample and detailed testimonials free by post. In tins, 4s. 3d. British Depôt—46, Holborn Viaduct, London; also of NEWBERY & SONS, BARCLAY & SONS, LYNCH & CO., J. SANGER & SONS, W. EDWARDS & SON, MAY, ROBERTS & CO., JOHN THOMPSON, Liverpool, and all wholesale Houses.

A Bad Complexion

is often due to a bad soap.

BLOTCHES ARE REPULSIVE, AND WILL MAR THE APPEARANCE OF ANY FACE. YOU CAN'T GET RID OF THEM WITH BAD SOAP.

PREMIER VINOLIA SOAP

Is made specially for delicate, sensitive, irritable skins, and is scented with the most charming and innocent Perfumes.

PREMIER VINOLIA SOAP

yields a profuse, cleansing, demulcent lather, and tends to keep the skin soft and velvety, and the complexion beautiful and clear. Its use doesn't cost a farthing a day.

Vinolia is a Complexion Soap.

VINOLIA CREAM.—For Itching, Eczema, Face Spots, &c., 1/1½ and 1/9.
VINOLIA POWDER.—For Roughness, Redness, Toilet, &c., 1/1 and 1/9.

WATCHES FROM THE FACTORY BY POST

DIRECT TO THE WEARER!

57/- THE 'COUNSELLOR'

H. SAMUEL'S KEYLESS ENGLISH LEVER. A splendid Watch, highly finished interchangeable movement, with 15 JEWELS; three-quarter plate, most accurately constructed; CHRONOMETER BALANCE; tempered hairspring; polished wheels and pinions: flat crystal glass front. In highly-finished close-fitting SOLID SILVER cases, hall marked. H. Samuel's price £2. 17s.; in 14-CARAT ROLLED GOLD Case, consisting of two outer plates of 14-carat gold, lined inside with a case of specially prepared metal. Wears for years. H. Samuel's price, £4. 5s. Heavy 18-carat Gold Case, £13, SEVEN YEARS' warranty. A MONTH'S FREE TRIAL. Full amount returned if dissatisfied. LARGE SAVING on London prices. H. Samuel's "ACME" Sterling Silver Watches for Ladies and Gentlemen. Handsome, exact, and durable. Five years' warranty. Worth three guineas. H. Samuel's price 25s. H. Samuel's New Improvements, protected by HER MAJESTY'S ROYAL LETTERS PATENT, are only to be obtained in H. Samuel's Watches. Largest Sale! Highest Quality! Lowest Prices!

FREE. It will please you to read our new book (just published). Only necessary to send your NAME AND ADDRESS, and this handsome volume is despatched by next post. CONSIDERABLE REDUCTIONS effected by sending direct to H. Samuel for all requirements. Please say if we may have the pleasure of posting you this new book.

H. SAMUEL, Lever Watch Factory, MANCHESTER.

EPPS'S COCOAINE.

COCOA-NIB EXTRACT.

(TEA-LIKE.)

The choicest roasted nibs (broken-up beans) of the natural Cocoa on being subjected to powerful hydraulic pressure, give forth their excess of oil, leaving for use a finely-flavoured powder—"Cocoaine," a product which, when prepared with boiling water, has the consistence of tea, of which it is now, with many, beneficially taking the place. Its active principle being a gentle nerve stimulant, supplies the needed energy without unduly exciting the system.

BUY THE

4711 Eau de Cologne

IT IS THE BEST GENUINE, STRONGEST, MOST LASTING, MOST REFRESHING AND INVIGORATING.

CAUTION. — Be sure and insist upon MULHEN'S 4711 Brand, as inferior makes are sometimes offered. Refuse all substitutes. Of most dealers in first-class Perfumes.

Case of 6 Bottles, carriage paid, for 13s. or Sample Bottle, 2s. 6d. post free.

The 4711 Depot, 62, New Bond St. W.

THE ALBEMARLE CYCLE CO.,

291, OXFORD STREET, LONDON, W.,

Are the West End Agents for the

'Necec' CYCLES,

ON WHICH M. DIAKOFF WON THIS YEAR'S CHAMPIONSHIPS.

Highest Grade Machines.

Reasonable Prices.

CALL AND SEE OUR STOCK BEFORE DECIDING ON YOUR MOUNT.

ILLUSTRATED LIST SENT POST FREE ON APPLICATION.

ALSO AGENTS for the "EAGLE," one of America's Best Cycles.

FOR YOUTHFUL APPEARANCE. BEAUTIFUL HAIR.

IMPERIAL HAIR DYES &c

ONE LIQUID.

No. 1.—Black.
No. 2.—Dark Brown.
No. 3.—Light Brown.
No. 4.—Golden Brown or Auburn.
No. 5.—Pure Golden.
No. 6.—IMPERIAL HAIR GROWER.

Harmless, Perfect, Permanent, and Odourless. A Medical Certificate with each bottle.

2/6, 3/6, 5/- & 10/6 (Secretly Packed).

ESTABLISHED 1868. J. BRODIE, 41, Museum-st. London. ONCE TRIED, ALWAYS USED.

THE MEXICAN HAIR RENEWER

Prevents the Hair from falling off.
Restores Grey or White Hair to its ORIGINAL COLOUR.
Being delicately perfumed it leaves no unpleasant odour.
IS NOT a dye, and therefore does not stain the skin or even white linen.
Should be in every house where a HAIR RENEWER is needed.
Ask your Chemist or Hairdresser for

THE MEXICAN HAIR RENEWER.

Price 3s. 6d. per large Bottle.

Prepared only by the

ANGLO-AMERICAN DRUG COMPANY, Ltd.,

33, FARRINGDON ROAD, LONDON, E.C.

FLORILINE

FOR THE TEETH AND BREATH.

IS THE BEST LIQUID DENTIFRICE IN THE WORLD.

Prevents the Decay of Teeth.
Renders the Teeth Pearly White.
Is perfectly Harmless and Delicious to the Taste.

Of all Chemists and Perfumers throughout the World. 2s. 6d. per Bottle.

FLORILINE TOOTH POWDER.

Put up in Glass Jars, price 1s.

MAYPOLE SOAP

Patd.

FOR HOME DYEING.

Won't Wash Out or Fade

For DYEING SILKS, SATINS, COTTONS, FEATHERS, LACE GOODS, &c., &c.,

Such as Blouses, Dresses, Underlinen, Ribbons, Children's Frocks, Pinafores, Lamp Shades, Silk Scarves, Handkerchiefs, Gentlemen's Shirts, Lace Curtains, Silk Gloves, Stockings, Antimacassars, Toilet Mats, Shawls, &c., &c., &c.

MAYPOLE SOAP (PATD.)

4d. per Tablet. All Colours. Black, 6d. Sold Everywhere.

Sole Proprietors: THE MAYPOLE SOAP SYNDICATE, LIMITED,

98, HIGH HOLBORN, LONDON, W.C.

No more Indigestion!
No more Gout!
No more Weakness!

BY USING

VAN STEEN'S

PEPTONISED ABSOLUTE

Delicious and Nutritive . . . SOLUBLE COCOA.

(Patent No. 23,503.)

"The only beverage that can safely be taken at every age of life, at any time of day, and in any state of health."—Dr. BRIDGER.

The nutritive value of this Cocoa in conjunction with the quickness with which it is assimilated renders it of the greatest value to the chronic dyspeptic and the sufferer from the excess of uric acid, thus placing it in the highest rank of foods suited to those with enfeebled digestive organs and kindred ailments.

Sold only by DISPENSING CHEMISTS in pound tins at 4s., halves at 2s. 1d., quarters at 1s. 2d. One pound is quite sufficient for 160 cups.

Wholesale of Messrs. SANGER & CO., London; Messrs. EDWARDS & SON, London; Messrs. W. SUTTON & CO., London; Messrs. BARCLAY & LYNCH, London; Messrs. GOODALL, BACKHOUSE, & CO., Leeds; Messrs. EVANS GADD & CO., Exeter.

PUREST IN ENGLAND.

BOURNE TABLE WATERS

SODA, SELTZER, LITHIA, POTASH, LEMONADE, GINGER ALE, ETC.

Supplied in 6 Dozen Cases Carriage Paid by

Analysis, &c., on Application.

R. M. MILLS & CO., BOURNE, LINCOLNSHIRE

West-End Agents, WHEATLEY & SONS, 24, South Audley-street, W.

City Agents, RAE & CO., 6, Railway-place, E.C.;
And of all CHEMISTS, WINE MERCHANTS, &c.

Time, Trouble, and Expense saved in Households by the use of

Maggi's

CONSOMMÉ. In Gelatine Tubes. Boxes containing 10 Tubes, 1/8; Post Free, 1/10½.

FRENCH SOUPS (33 Varieties). In Packets of 6 Tablets each Packet 1/4; Post Free, 1/7.

THE QUEEN, December 7th, 1895, says:—"The only preserved and condensed Soups that require nothing but a certain proportion of water to produce a bowlful of perfect Consommé."

OF ALL GROCERS AND ITALIAN WAREHOUSEMEN.

AND OF THE SOLE AGENTS—

COSENZA & CO., 95 & 97, Wigmore-st., London, W.,

Where the Consommé and Soups may be tasted daily.

Free Demonstrations in the use of these soups are held frequently, for which cards of invitation will be sent on application to 95, Wigmore-Street.

Toilet "Lanoline" For Delicate and Sensitive Skins. 6D. AND 1S.

"LANOLINE" Toilet Preparations "LANOLINE"

from all Chemists.

Dartring Brand.

Wholesale Depôt:—67 HOLBORN VIADUCT, LONDON.

"Lanoline" Toilet Soap For Health and Beauty of the Skin. 6D. PER TABLET. 3 IN A BOX 1S. 6D.

The Colonial Goldfields, Limited, 70, Cornhill, E.C., invite Subscriptions for the present Issue of Shares.

The Lists are now open, and will close for London, on or before Wednesday, the 4th November, and at 4 p.m., on Thursday, the 5th idem for the Provinces.

THE COLLINGWOOD GOLDFIELDS, LIMITED, NEW ZEALAND.

Incorporated under the Companies Acts, 1862 to 1893.

CAPITAL £150,000,
In 150,000 Shares of £1 each.
Working Capital £50,000,
Of which £25,000 are now offered for subscription.
The Vendors accept Shares only in full payment for the properties.

Issue of 25,000 Shares,

Payable—2s. per Share on Application, 3s. per Share on Allotment, and the balance as may be required in calls of 5s. each, and at intervals of not less than two months.

DIRECTORS.

Lord Douglas of Hawick and Tibbers, Director White Feather Reward, Limited.
Roland G. Hill, Esq., Chairman Taitapu Gold Estates, Limited.
J. Lletget-Sarda, Esq., Director of the Anglo-French Exploration Company of Western Australia, Limited.
Walter Holdsworth, Esq., Director Big Valley Creek Gold Mines, Limited.
*George Beetham, Esq., Director New Zealand Pioneers, Limited.
*Arthur Feli, Esq., Director London and British Columbia Goldfields, Limited.
*Being interested as Directors of the New Zealand Pioneers, Limited (the Vendors), will join the Board after Allotment.

BANKERS.—Union Bank of Scotland, Limited, 62, Cornhill, E.C.; The Bank of New Zealand, Queen Victoria-street, E.C.

SOLICITORS.—Messrs. Maddisons, 1, King's Arms-yard, E.C.; Messrs. Fell & Atkinson, Nelson, New Zealand.

BROKERS.—London, G. H. & A. M. Jay, 17, Old Broad-street, E.C.; Edinburgh, P. Maxton Cunningham, 60, George-street; Cardiff, Godfrey & Laws, 12, Mount Stuart-square.

AUDITORS.—Messrs. Monkhouse, Stoneham, & Co., 28 and 29, St. Swithin's-lane, E.C.

SECRETARY AND OFFICES.—Mr. W. R. Foster, Dashwood House, New Broad-street, E.C.

ABRIDGED PROSPECTUS.

This Company has been formed to purchase leases of 398 acres, 1 rood, 8 perches of auriferous properties situated in Collingwood Golden Bay, New Zealand, and known as Golden Gully, Quartz Ranges, and Appos Flat. And also to acquire all the water rights included in that tract of country embraced by Clark River, Slate River, and the Great Boulder Lake, covering an estimated area of 30,000 acres.

A reference to the map accompanying the Prospectus shews that the property lies to the east of the well-known Taitapu Gold Estates, Limited.

The extreme wealth of the alluvial tracts in this part of the Island of New Zealand has been established beyond question.

It is thus essential to the successful working of the leases to be acquired, that extensive water rights should also be secured. This has been done, and the Company will not only possess unrivalled powers for working its own leases, but will also obtain the practical monopoly of the water power in the entire district, thereby securing a double source of income.

Mr. Geo. Beetham, a Director of this Company, and also of the Taitapu Gold Estates Company, and of the Para Para Sluicing Company, is now on his way out to New Zealand and will at once arrange for the commencement of operations.

The first rush for gold in the Collingwood district was about the year 1860, when Professor Von Hochstetter, the well-known geologist, was specially deputed to thoroughly test and examine the entire area. He made numerous and careful tests which led him to believe "that the surface gravels were auriferous to an average depth of one yard for an area of 30 square miles, and that each cubic yard of gravel contains five shillings worth of gold. The computation on this basis promises a yield of £22,500,000."—(Hoch. New Zealand p. 106. Eng. Trans.)

Professor Hutton, referring to one of the leases to be acquired by this Company, speaks of it as "the wonderfully rich deposits at Golden Gully due to the denudation of the schist on which they rest," and he claims the schist as the source of the heavy deposits of quartz pebbles that form the auriferous wash.—(Geol. Rep. p. 152.)

The rush of gold-seekers that followed is well known. All these men—locally known as "hatters"—worked single-handed, without any capital beyond the possession of a brawney arm, and without any more scientific knowledge than to discern gold when washed. As a consequence, although near £1,000,000 worth of gold has been obtained in the Collingwood district, the Government Director of the Geological Survey of New Zealand, Sir James Hector, K.C.M.G., F.R.S., officially recorded recently that he had "visited these goldfields on many occasions during the last 20 years with a feeling of surprise that such enormously rich finds should have been made in the early days, and that they should not have been followed up. . . Want of concentrated energy and capital, in order to secure sufficient water supply to enable the modern methods of mining to be adopted, has seemed to me the chief difficulty and it was with great interest that I lately took the opportunity of re-examining a property there on behalf of the Para Para Sluicing Company, which seems to be the first effort that has been conceived of the right method of working for the proper development of the district." "It was at Golden Gully that the first important discovery of gold was made, and from the report the richness of the claims was most remarkable. The sinking was only 5 feet deep, and I found the area worked was only about 50,000 square yards. This gives about 100,000 loads. From this area in a few months 40,000 ounces of gold was obtained, or at the rate of nearly ½ oz. to the load. Patches of the ground were, however, so rich that the yield was frequently 1 oz. of gold from a single dish of stuff."—(Geol. Rep. 1891, p. 11 et. seq.)

Special Reports for the Vendor Syndicate were submitted by Mr. A. McKay, Assistant Government Geologist; by Mr. Robert Hay, the very well-known Mining Engineer; and by Messrs. Washbourne & Adams, men who have for years been prospecting and mining in New Zealand.

These may be thus summarised:—

1. That alluvial gold exists beyond question in the leases acquired by this Company, viz., in Golden Gully, Quartz Ranges, and Appos Flat.
2. That the acquisition of water rights for hydraulic sluicing is a sine qua non to success.
3. That these water rights are those embraced by Clark River, the Slate River, and Great Boulder Lake, being those to be purchased by this Company.
4. That with simple storm-water sluicing astonishing results have been and are being attained by men working single-handed, and in the most primitive fashion, the Miner Cooke being an instance, who from less than half-an-acre has, it is stated, over a period of years extracted gold to the estimated value of £5,000.
5. That a working capital of £25,000, employed with reasonable prudence, would suffice to carry the necessary water power to the auriferous deposits.

As an evidence of the belief of the Vendors in the undertaking, the Directors would point out that the price to be paid to the Vendors is solely in fully-paid Shares of the Company. All costs of acquiring the leases and water rights, the numerous important reports from scientific experts, the cost of prospecting and of promotion and flotation of this Company (with the exception of brokerage, registration, and legal charges) is paid for and included in the Share consideration. With the above exception the entire capital now applied for will be devoted to working expenses.

The contract, reports, maps, and specimens of gold from the property, and the Memorandum and Articles of Association may, while the lists are open, be inspected by intended applicants for shares, at the Offices of the Company's Solicitors.

Applications for Shares should be forwarded to the Company's Bankers or by letter direct to the Secretary, together with a remittance for the amount payable on application.

Prospectuses may be had of the Bankers, Brokers, and of the Secretary of the Company.

The LIST of APPLICATIONS will be OPENED on THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 5th, 1896, and CLOSED on FRIDAY, NOVEMBER 6th, 1896.

CHICAGO EDISON COMPANY.

Capital Authorised $6,000,000
Capital Issued $4,973,437.50

FIRST MORTGAGE FIVE PER CENT. 30-YEAR GOLD BONDS, dated July 1st, 1896, due July 1st, 1926, but redeemable at the option of the Company, on six months' notice, on April 1st or October 1st in the year 1911, or any year thereafter. Interest payable April 1st and October 1st; first coupon due April 1st, 1897. Principal and interest payable to bearer in United States gold coin of or equal to the present standard of weight and fineness, free of United States Government, Illinois State, or municipal taxes.

The LONDON SCOTTISH AMERICAN TRUST, Limited, 75, Lombard-street, London, OFFER for SALE $1,200,000 of the above BONDS at the price of £217 per $1,000 Bond, payable as follows:

On Application..... ... £10
On 16th November, 1896 ..£207 = £217.

Payment of the final instalment may be deferred until any date or dates not later than 1st February, 1897, Interest from 16th November, 1896, being charged at the rate of 4½ per cent. per annum.

At this price the Bonds yield over 4½ per cent. per annum interest after allowing for redemption at par in 1911.

THE DIRECTORS OF THE CHICAGO EDISON COMPANY ARE—

Samuel Insull, President.
J. W. Doane, President Merchants Loan and Trust Company.
Byron L. Smith, President Northern Trust Company.
R. C. Clowry, Vice-President Western Union Telegraph Company.
Erskine M. Phelps, of Phelps, Dodge, & Company.
Robert T. Lincoln, formerly United States Minister to England.
Anthony F. Seeberger, Treasurer World's Columbian Exposition, 1893.
A. A. Sprague, of Sprague, Warner, & Company.
E. L. Brewster, of E. L. Brewster & Company, Bankers.
Joseph Leiter.
John J. Mitchell, President Illinois Trust and Savings Bank.
Lambert Tree, formerly United States Minister to Belgium and Russia.
F. S. Gorton, Secretary and Treasurer, Chicago Edison Company.

TRUSTEES FOR FIRST MORTGAGE BONDS.—The Merchants Loan and Trust Company (Chicago).

The above bonds were purchased last July by the London Scottish American Trust, Limited, for themselves and others, subject to inquiry as to the statements made regarding the earnings of the Chicago Edison Company, its title to the subjects mortgaged, and the nature and capacity of the property and plant. This inquiry was conducted on behalf of the purchasers:—

(a) As regards the accounts of the Company and the results of the last two years working by Messrs. Price, Waterhouse, & Co.

(b) As regards the titles and franchises of the Company by Mr. W. H. Swift, counsellor at law, Chicago, the mortgage and bonds being adjusted and approved by him.

(c) As regards the character and capacity of the property and plant by Mr. Horatio A. Foster, member of the American Institute of Electrical Engineers, and member of the American Society of Mechanical Engineers.

These reports being satisfactory the purchase of the bonds was concluded, and they are now offered for sale.

Full prospectuses and forms of application may be obtained from the London Scottish American Trust, Limited, 75, Lombard-street, London, E.C., or their brokers in Scotland, Messrs. Bell, Cowan, & Co., 22, St. Andrew's-square, Edinburgh.

ABRIDGED PROSPECTUS.

The Chicago Edison Company is incorporated under the laws of the State of Illinois to supply electric light and power in Chicago.

Dividends at the rate of 8 per cent. per annum have been paid in cash since the year 1889 upon the capital stock issued. The amount of stock now issued is 4,973,437.50 dols., the market price of which is 117 per cent.

Messrs. Price, Waterhouse, & Co.'s report is appended to the full prospectus. From this it will be seen that the net earnings for the year ending 31st March, 1895, amounted to 531,020.37 dols. The maximum amount of Bonds which can be issued without further extension of the Company's property is 3,500,000 dols., the full interest charge upon which is only 175,000 dols.

The reports of Mr. Swift and Mr. Foster are too lengthy for publication, but copies of them may be seen at the Office of the London Scottish American Trust, or of the Brokers in Edinburgh.

Mr. Foster in his report values the property and plant, exclusive of goodwill, for which a large amount was paid in the case of one Company absorbed, at	$6,204,107
To which must be added the amount available for extensions out of the proceeds of the present issue	640,000
Present Valuation.....	$6,844,107
Present limit of issue.....	$3,500,000

Provision has been made out of the proceeds of the Bonds now offered to repay the only Prior Lien Bonds outstanding, amounting to £205,300.

Applications will be received by the London Scottish American Trust, Limited, or their Bankers, the Royal Bank of Scotland, St. Andrew's-square, Edinburgh, 123, Bishopsgate-street Within, London, and Branches, and Messrs. Melville, Fickus, & Co., Limited, 75, Lombard-street, London.

November 2nd, 1896.

BIRKBECK BANK (Estab. 1851), Southampton-buildings, Chancery-lane, London. Two and a-half per cent. interest allowed on deposits, repayable on demand. Two per cent. on current accounts, on the minimum monthly balances when not below £100.

The BIRKBECK ALMANACK with particulars, post free.

FRANCIS RAVENSCROFT, Manager.

LONDON AND COUNTY ADVANCE AND DISCOUNT COMPANY, Limited.—Cash advanced from £10 to £500, without preliminary fees or deductions for interest, for short or long periods, repayable by easy instalments, at moderate rates, upon approved security. Bills Discounted. Forms free. Offices, 57 and 58, Chancery-lane, W.C.—JOHN STONE, Secretary.

REVERSIONS and LIFE INTERESTS in LANDED or FUNDED PROPERTY or other Securities and Annuities PURCHASED, or Loans or Annuities thereon granted, by the EQUITABLE REVERSIONARY INTEREST SOCIETY, LIMITED, 10, Lancaster-place, Waterloo Bridge, Strand, Established 1835. Capital £500,000. Interest on Loans may be capitalised.

"FOR THE BLOOD IS THE LIFE."

CLARKE'S

WORLD-FAMED

BLOOD MIXTURE

Warranted to cleanse the blood from all impurities from whatever cause arising. For Scrofula, Scurvy, Eczema, Bad Legs, Skin and Blood Diseases, Pimples and Sores of all kinds, its effects are marvellous. It is the only real specific for Gout and Rheumatic Pains, for it removes the cause from the blood and bones. Thousands of Wonderful Cures have been effected by it. In bottles, 2s. 9d. and 11s. each, of Chemists everywhere.

BEWARE OF WORTHLESS IMITATIONS.

LIST of APPLICATIONS will OPEN on WEDNESDAY, the 4th day of NOVEMBER, and CLOSE on WEDNESDAY, the 11th day of NOVEMBER, at 4 p.m.

THE SYDNEY GARDENS HOTEL (BATH), LIMITED.

(Incorporated under the Companies' Acts, 1862 to 1890, whereby the liability of the Shareholders is limited to the amount of their Shares.

CAPITAL £40,000, Divided into:

4,000 Cumulative 5 per cent. Preference Shares of £5 each ranking preferentially to the Ordinary Shares as regards both Capital and Dividend...	£20,000
4,000 Ordinary Shares at £5 each	£20,000
	£40,000

In addition to which will be issued 200 4 per cent. First Mortgage Debentures of £50 each.

The Debentures and Ordinary Shares, and 3,000 of the Preference Shares are now offered for subscription, payable as follows:—

Preference and Ordinary Shares 10s. per Share on Application; £1. 10s. per Share on Allotment, and the balance when required at intervals of not less than Three Months. Debentures £5 each on Application; £5 each on Allotment, and the Balance by equal payments of £10 each on the 25th December, 1896, and 25th March, 24th June, and 29th September, 1897.

DIRECTORS.

Alfred Deedes, Esq., Frenchay Manor, Near Bristol. The Honourable Charles Holmes à Court, The Elms, Stone, Falfield, Glos.
Major C. H. Simpson, 15, Queen-square, Bath. Percy K. Stothert, Esq. (Stothert & Pitt, Limited), Bath.

CONSULTING DIRECTOR:—Mr. H. R. Grover, Manager of the Ilfracombe Hotel, Ilfracombe.

BANKERS:—Stuckeys' Banking Company, Limited, Bath, and all their Branches.
Messrs. Robarts, Lubbock, & Co., Lombard-street, London.

SOLICITOR:—Mr. William Henry Brown, 49, Corn-street, Bristol.

AUDITORS:—Messrs. Ham, Dennehy & Butcher, Chartered Accountants, Bath and Bristol.

SECRETARY:—H. C. Wansbrough, 4, St. Stephen's-chambers, Baldwin-street, Bristol.

REGISTERED OFFICES:—35, Milsom-street, Bath.

ABRIDGED PROSPECTUS.

This Company is formed to acquire the centrally-situated Freehold Property in the City of Bath known as the "Sydney Gardens Estate," comprising extensive tastefully laid out grounds, containing some of the finest trees in the country; the spacious and substantially-erected building known as the Sydney College, with Entrance and Gardeners' Lodges, Tennis Lawns, Paddock, &c., the whole having an area of between NINE and TEN ACRES.

On this site, which faces Great Pulteney-street, and which for the purpose has few superiors in the Kingdom, it is proposed to erect from the designs of Mr. J. S. Whittington, of London, a commodious residential hotel of the highest class, fireproof and replete with every comfort and convenience which modern requirements demand or science can suggest, one of the principal features being private suites of rooms, and a complete system of Medical and other Baths.

The want of additional high-class Hotel accommodation at Bath is severely felt, as that which at present exists is found to be entirely inadequate, and, with one exception—and that some considerable distance from the City—all the Hotels abut on the streets, and have no grounds of any description.

The Licensing Justices of Bath have already agreed to grant a full License on completion of the Hotel in accordance with the Plans deposited with them.

In addition to the above the Company will acquire 14 valuable building sites, each 40 feet by 100 feet, or thereabouts, which, in the event of the land not being required, should command good prices. These building sites, if covered, would in no way interfere with the Hotel or the Gardens.

The Directors have been fortunate in securing the services, as Consulting Director, of Mr. H. R. Grover, for many years past the Manager of, and a considerable shareholder in, the well-known Ilfracombe Hotel. Under Mr. Grover's management this Hotel has maintained its high reputation as a first-class property, paying substantial dividends.

Especial care will be taken in the selection of an experienced Manager.

Space has been reserved at the rear of the Hotel, and communicating with the grounds, for a Winter Garden. Nothing of the kind exists in Bath, although with a Winter season the accommodation is much required.

The Directors invite attention to the very moderate capital and firmly believe that the Sydney Gardens Hotel will, by supplying what is admittedly much required, meet with liberal support, and be the means of attracting those, who, in its absence, go elsewhere. They are advised by a well-known expert that a Dividend of 10 per cent. on the Ordinary Share Capital may be confidently anticipated.

The Property is Freehold, but subject to an Annual Ground-rent of £156. 16s.

Messrs. Alexander, Daniel, Selfe, & Co., of Bristol and London, have valued the property to be purchased at the sum of £9,160. The Vendor pays the whole of the expenses of formation and registration of the Company up to the first Allotment. No promotion money has been or will be paid, nor will any part of the Capital be underwritten.

Provisional Contracts have been entered into and Tenders received, by which the Property can be purchased, and the Hotel built in strict accordance with the deposited plans, furnished and appointed ready for the reception of visitors for a sum not exceeding £40,230, thus leaving a balance of £4,770 for working capital and contingencies, in addition to £5,000 worth of Preference Shares to be called up as and when required.

The valuation of Messrs. Alexander, Daniel, Selfe, & Co., the report of Messrs. Powell & Powell, and particulars of the only known contracts entered into, are fully set forth in the Prospectus. Mr. Titt's estimate of income and expenditure can be seen at the offices of the Secretary.

Full prospectuses, with plans of the property to be acquired, views of the ground, and sketch of the proposed Hotel, with architect's description of same, can be obtained from the Secretary, Mr. H. C. Wansbrough, 4, St. Stephen's-chambers, Baldwin-street, Bristol, Messrs. Ham, Dennehy, & Butcher, Chartered Accountants, Bank-chambers, Bath, or Albion-chambers, Bristol, from Messrs. Stuckeys' Banking Co., Limited, Bath, or either of their branches, or from Messrs. Robarts, Lubbock, & Co., Lombard-street, London.

The Articles of Association, and the contracts referred to above, may be seen at the Offices of the Solicitor to the Company, Mr. W. H. Brown, 49, Corn-street, Bristol.

Dated, November 3rd, 1896.

BARNATO BANK MINING and ESTATE CORPORATION, LIMITED (IN LIQUIDATION).

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN that the Shareholders of above are requested to deposit their old certificates, on or after MONDAY, NOVEMBER 9th, 1896, for exchange into new certificates of the JOHANNESBURG CONSOLIDATED INVESTMENT COMPANY, Limited, or same will be forwarded by post on receipt of the old certificates.

By Order,
J. TUDHOPE, Liquidator.

5, Lothbury, E.C., October 30th, 1896.

W. B. COCHRANE & CO.,

STOCK AND SHARE DEALERS.
13 and 14, CORNHILL, LONDON, E.C.
Telegrams: "Reinvest, London."
Bankers: London and Westminster, Lothbury, E.C.

Accounts opened for the Stock Exchange Fortnightly Settlements, and also upon the usual Cover System. Accounts opened for Three-monthly Settlement without Carrying-over Rates being charged.

Prospectus, Monthly Investment Book, Mining List, and Market Reports, with the latest advices, forwarded gratis upon application.

W. B. COCHRANE & CO., 13 and 14, Cornhill, E.C.

THE SUBSCRIPTION LIST WILL OPEN AND CLOSE ON THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 5th, 1896, FOR BOTH LONDON AND THE COUNTRY.

Mr. REGINALD A. F. MURRAY (Government Geologist to the Colony of Victoria), in concluding his Report (which accompanies this prospectus), says :—"I have therefore no hesitation in strongly recommending the exploitation of the ground referred to as a most soundly legitimate Mining enterprise . . . . . Bearing in view the immense yields from the Berry group of Mines on the same system, and the great length thereon occupied by you, I feel assured that there is in your ground sufficient to afford highly payable results and rich dividends to several large Companies for a great many years.

The whole of the Cash Capital required, including £100,000 Working Capital, has been guaranteed by the Corporations making this issue.

The London and Globe Finance Corporation, Limited, and The West Australian Exploring and Finance Corporation, Limited, offer for Subscription the undermentioned issue.

Victorian Gold Estates, Ltd.

(VICTORIA, AUSTRALIA.)

Incorporated under the Companies Acts, 1862 to 1890.

CAPITAL - £350,000,

In 350,000 Shares at £1 each, of which 125,000 Shares (including 100,000 for Working Capital) are now offered for subscription at par, payable—5s. on application, 5s. on allotment, 5s. January 7th, 1897, and 5s. March 9th, 1897.

DIRECTORS.

The Right Hon. the Earl of Warwick, Warwick Castle, Warwick (Chairman).
Leonard Fawell, Esq., Director London and Lancashire Fire Insurance Company (London Board).
George Leveson-Gower, Esq., 14, South Audley-street, W.
Henry Pelham-Clinton, Esq., representing London and Globe Finance Corporation, Limited.
Tyndale White, Esq., Director Lake View Consols, Limited.

LOCAL ADVISORY BOARD IN VICTORIA.

Sir William A. Zeal, K.C.M.G., President of the Legislative Council, C.E.; Director of The National Bank of Australasia; The Australian Mutual Provident Society; and The Metropolitan Gas Company.
The Hon. Duncan E. McBryde, M.L.C., Chairman Broken Hill Proprietary Company, Limited (N.S.W.)
The Hon. J. A. Wallace, M.L.C.

CONSULTING ENGINEER AND GEOLOGIST.

Reginald A. F. Murray, Esq., F.G.S. (recently Government Geologist for Victoria), Melbourne.

CONSULTING ENGINEER AND MINING SUPERINTENDENT.

Henry Gore, Esq., C.E., M.E., recently President of Mine Owners' Association of Victoria; Chairman of Ballarat Prospecting Board, and late M.L.C. for Wellington Province, Ballarat.

BANKERS.

Prescott, Dimsdale, Cave, Tugwell, & Co., Limited, 50, Cornhill, London, E.C.; The Union Bank of Australia, Limited, 71, Cornhill, London, E.C. (Bankers in the Colony).

SOLICITORS.

Messrs. Williams & Neville, Winchester-house, Old Broad-street, London, E.C.
Messrs. Malleson, England, & Stewart, 46, Queen-street, Melbourne, Victoria.

AUDITORS.—Messrs. Ford, Rhodes, & Ford, 81, Cannon-street, E.C.

SECRETARY & OFFICES.—William B. Mitchell, Esq., 77, Bishopsgate-street, Within, E.C.

PROSPECTUS.

This Company has been formed to acquire and develop, as a parent Company, with a view to resales to subsidiary Companies, an extensive Mining property, comprising about 9,000 acres, situated on the great Basaltic plain, between the Tallaroop, or Deep Creek, on the west, and the Loddon River and Joyce's Creek on the east, in the parishes of Moolert, Rodborough, Barringhup and Tarrangower, County of Talbot, Province of Wellington, in the Colony of Victoria, Australia.

This extensive mining area, which has been reported on by the eminent authority, Mr. Reginald A. F. Murray, F.G.S. London (Government Geologist of the Colony of Victoria, who has agreed to resign his official position and act as the Company's Consulting Engineer and Geologist), and also by Mr. Henry Gore, M.E. and C.E. (who has been actively and officially connected with mining in that district since 1858, was, until recently, Member of the Legislative Council for the District, and who has agreed to act as the Company's Consulting Engineer and Mining Superintendent), is a continuation northwards, extending from 7 to 9 miles in length, by from 1½ to 2½ miles in width, of the well-known auriferous Deep Lead belt known as the Berry Leads, from which gold to the value of over Four Millions sterling is stated by the above experts to have been won by the Berry group and adjacent Mines.

In addition to the Berry Lead, there are several others coming in from both east and west, notably the Hepburn Home Paddock Lead and the Rocky on the east, the Australasian and its tributaries on the west. The whole of these must ultimately junction with the Main Trunk Lead coming from Ballarat, and extending through the Dowling Forest Estate, picking up the Midas Group of tributaries on its way, passing to the east of Clunes, through the parish of Tourello on to Glengower (where the Clunes tributaries join), and junctioning at some point before reaching Bucknall's Estate bores, with the leads previously described.

The course of these gold leads has been conclusively traced and proved by two series of Government borings, and the Bucknall Estate bores, which have proved most unmistakably the course of the deep ground and the most certain evidences as to the existence of a great main lead throughout the entire length of the properties to be acquired by this Company. The greatest depth shown by these bores was from 270 to 300 ft., and the heavy gravel and boulder wash up to 6 ft. in thickness over a breadth of several hundred feet. Mr. Murray, in testifying to this, in his Report states that there can be no other possible outlet for the ancient channels of deep leads than through the area to be acquired by this Company; and proceeds :—

"It is, therefore, no mere conjecture, but a matter of absolute certainty, vouched for by geological conditions and the result of actual experiment, that the main trunk lead system, made up of the combination of the above-mentioned leads, cannot do otherwise than pass through your ground, which, as shown on the plan, must contain a length of at least seven miles on the course of that main lead, besides a considerable length of a large tributary lead corresponding to the Loddon river, which comes in from the eastward, and joins the main trunk lead in your ground." (Vide Report.)

And, speaking of the Berry Leads, he says :—

"There is no doubt in my mind that the unexplored alluvial deposits on the further continuation northward in strike of that auriferous belt throughout the whole length of your area will prove equally rich; . . the auriferous value of the Lead system along its course is shown by the fact that its bed rock throughout is the continuation in strike of the Great Ballarat and Creswick auriferous belt of rocks hidden by the basalt, and consequently the leads during this formation derive their gold supply from local sources or matrices in these rocks all along their courses. . . . Recent developments in the advance mines on the Berry system have so stimulated enterprise, and established confidence in the wealth of the Lead system, that nearly, if not quite, all the available ground on the Deep Creek and Loddon Valley lead system is either taken or is being taken up for deep Alluvial Mining for 20 miles ahead of the most gold-producing mines."

He further states :—"Mining can be carried on in this portion of Victoria under most favourable conditions and most economically, as the Castlemaine to Maryborough Railway Line passes through the property, so that machinery, timber, and other supplies can be readily delivered on the ground at moderate cost."

Mr. Murray concludes his Report as follows :—

"I have, therefore no hesitation in strongly recommending the exploitation of the ground referred to as a most soundly legitimate mining enterprise. . . . Bearing in view the immense yields from the Berry Group of Mines on the same lead system, and the great length thereon occupied by you, I feel assured that there is in your ground sufficient to afford highly payable results and rich dividends to several large Companies for a great many years."

The Special Reporter of the Melbourne Argus, under date October 4th, 1895, refers to this lead in the following terms :—

"An auriferous lead, or the ancient bed of an old river system, which has proved to be the richest deep alluvial goldfield in the world, is one to awaken both curiosity and interest. Such has been the record of the leads that find their source from Spring Hill, situated two miles to the north-east of the township of Creswick."

Victoria has already produced gold to the value of over £240,000,000 sterling, and still holds the premier position in Australasia as a gold producer, the annual returns (which are steadily increasing) continuing to be in excess of any of the other colonies. — Vide Victorian (Government) Year Book, 1894, page 778.

EXTRACTS FROM MR. GORE'S REPORT.

My knowledge of the locality under review, and of the whole of the district, ... extends from the year 1858 up to the present time.

The source of the now famous Berry Lead was discovered in Lewer's Freehold on the northern slope of Spring Hill; . . . . From this source down to the Berry Consols Extended Claim, a distance of over eight miles, there has not been one failure in any of the claims on the lead; . . . . The gold won from this area has realised nearly 4½ millions sterling, and the dividends and royalty to nearly 2¾ millions sterling. Shafts are now being sunk on a continuation of this lead north, the trend having been proved, by a series of bores, to pass . . . . through the entire length of your property. . . . In addition to the Berry lead, there are several others coming in from both east and west, notably the Hepburn Home Paddock Lead and the Rocky on the east, the Australasian and its tributaries on the west. The whole of these must ultimately junction with the Main Trunk Lead coming from Ballarat, and extending through the Dowling Forest Estate, picking up the Midas Group of tributaries on its way, passing to the east of Clunes, through the parish of Tourello on to Glengower (where the Clunes tributaries join), and junctioning at some point before reaching Bucknall's Estate bores, with the leads previously described.

It will be seen that the whole of the lead system . . . . must pass through your property from south to north, a distance in a straight line of about seven miles, but allowing for the usual sinuosities of leads, the actual distance will be about nine miles. As to the auriferous washes proving payable when reached, the past history of the Ballarat Mining District goes to prove that wherever alluvial washes are met with running north and south with the quartz lodes (as this channel does) they are highly payable, and the statistics of Mining in Ballarat District, as far as can be gathered under the conditions stated, show that the profit to be obtained is about 40 per cent. over and above all costs of getting. . . .

Looking at this property from an investor's point of view, it may be noted—

(1) That it contains undoubtedly at least nine miles of the Main Trunk Lead (besides tributaries yet undiscovered).

(2) That the value of the alluvial washes included in your property, taking the Berry and Australasian leads as a basis, must be enormous and run into many millions sterling.

(3) That in addition to the value of the lead system above referred to, the quartz lodes, which undoubtedly traverse the property, must be taken into account, and judging by the results of the Band and Albion Company, Star of the East, Prince of Wales and Bonshaw, Last Chance, Llanberris, and other companies at Ballarat, all of which are now working the quartz lodes (after the leads which proved highly payable had been exhausted) with very satisfactory results; in fact the gold won bids fair to eclipse the alluvial returns. These mines are still producing gold, and will probably continue to do so for many years to come. These claims are on the same zone of country as your property, and the conditions similar. It is therefore difficult to say what length of life can be given to it, but taking the Llanberris noted above, which has been working on the lodes for over 30 years, and is still in its infancy, some estimate may be formed if account be taken of your large area as compared to the Llanberris holding of 30 acres.

VICTORIAN GOLD ESTATES, LIMITED, continued.

In conclusion, I can strongly recommend this Property as a sound mining investment, believing, as I do, that with sufficient capital provided for its development, together with careful and efficient management, it cannot fail to be highly profitable to those who acquire an interest in it.

The property will be held under Leases from the Government of Victoria under the provisions of Part 2 of the Mines Act, 1890, at a nominal rental of 6d. per acre per annum without Royalty, for terms of 15 years renewable.

The Directors are glad to announce that the services of Mr. Reginald A. F. Murray and Mr. Henry Gore as Consulting Engineers and Geologist and Mining Superintendent respectively have been secured for this Company (the former gentleman having agreed to resign his position with the Government), and consequently Mining operations will be conducted under the best supervision.

WORKING CAPITAL.—The Government, in undertaking to issue the Leases, has stipulated that £80,000 shall be available as Working Capital. £100,000 has, however, been guaranteed by the issuing Corporations (including compensation estimated not to exceed £3,000 payable to owners).

PURCHASE CONSIDERATION.—This has been fixed by the Vendor, Mr. Abraham Kozminsky, at £250,000, payable as to £25,000 in cash and the balance in Shares of this Company.

The preliminary expenses of the Company to allotment will be paid by the issuing Corporations.

The following Contracts have been entered into, viz.: two dated the 15th May and 13th July, 1896, respectively, and made between the Vendor of the one part, and Frank Douglas Phair, as Trustee for the Company of the other part; one dated the 23rd June, 1896, and made between the London and Globe Finance Corporation, Limited, and the West Australian Exploring and Finance Corporation, Limited, of the one part, and Reginald Augustus Frederick Murray of the other part; one dated the 21st day of August, 1896, and made between the last-mentioned Corporations of the one part, and this Company of the other part; one dated the 21st day of August, 1896, and made between this Company of the one part, and Henry Gore of the other part; one dated the 15th May, 1896, and made between the Vendor of the one part, and the London and Globe Finance Corporation, Limited, of the other part; one dated the 1st October, 1896, and made between the Vendor of the first part, the last mentioned Corporation of the second part, and the West Australian Exploring and Finance Corporation, Limited, of the third part. These, with the original reports, plans, and copies of the Memorandum and Articles of Association, may be inspected at the offices of the Solicitors of the Company, Messrs. Williams & Neville, Winchester House, Old Broad-street, London, E.C.

The London and Globe Finance Corporation, Limited, and The West Australian Exploring and Finance Corporation, Limited, being interested in the purchase, Mr. Henry Pelham-Clinton will not join the Board until after allotment and completion of the purchase.

Copies of the above-mentioned reports, and of Mr. Murray's report to the Government, accompany the Prospectus, and the original or a duplicate of the latter, together with Government geological plans (showing the course of the lead throughout the whole length of the property), may also be seen at the Offices of the Agent-General for the Colony of Victoria, 15, Victoria-street, Westminster.

Applications for Shares must be made on the form accompanying the Prospectus, and forwarded to the Bankers of the Company together with the amount payable on application.

Where no Allotment is made, the deposit will be returned to the applicant in full, and where the number of Shares allotted is less than the number applied for, the surplus will be credited in reduction of the amount payable on Allotment.

Prospectuses and Forms of Application may be obtained from the Office of the Company, or from the Solicitors and Brokers.

November 2nd, 1896.

Applications for Shares can be made upon the following Form if filled in, cut out, and sent with cheque to the Bankers.

No.....

FORM OF APPLICATION FOR SHARES.

VICTORIAN GOLD ESTATES, LIMITED.

TO THE DIRECTORS OF VICTORIAN GOLD ESTATES, LIMITED.

GENTLEMEN,—

Having paid to your Bankers, Messrs. Prescott, Dimsdale, Cave, Tugwell, & Co., Limited, 50, Cornhill, London, E.C., to the account of VICTORIAN GOLD ESTATES, LIMITED, the sum of £....., being a deposit of Five Shillings per Share on..... Shares of £1 each in the above-named Company, I request you to allot me that number of Shares, and I agree to accept and pay for the same, or any less number, upon the terms of the Prospectus dated the 2nd day of November, 1896, and subject to the Memorandum and Articles of Association of the Company.

Must be written Distinctly.

Ordinary Signature.....

Name (in full).....

Address (in full).....

.....

Profession or Occupation.....

Date.....1896.

PRUDENTIAL ASSURANCE COMPANY, LIMITED.—
Holborn Bars, London.

EVERY DESCRIPTION OF LIFE ASSURANCE AND ANNUITY BUSINESS TRANSACTED.
REVERSIONS PURCHASED.

Invested Funds, £25,000,000.

The last Annual Report can be obtained on application to the Secretary.

THE
JOHANNESBURG BOARD OF EXECUTORS AND TRUST CO., LIMITED.

HEAD OFFICE.
JOHANNESBURG, S.A.R.
DIRECTORS.
S. B. HARSANT (Chairman).
JNO. S. PARKES (Vice-Chairman).
J. WILKS. G. A. JONES. A. FRIEDLANDER.
BANKERS.
THE BANK OF AFRICA, Ltd., 113, Cannon-street, E.C.
CHIEF MANAGER, L. EDWARDS.
LONDON OFFICE.
ST. CLEMENT'S HOUSE, CLEMENT'S-LANE, E.C.
(Telegrams: "ETHIOPIAN," London.)
(Telephone No. 2154, Avenue.)

The above Company beg to advise having opened a London Office at the above address, and invite correspondence. All descriptions of TRUST and AGENCY BUSINESS undertaken either in London or South Africa. Secretaryships of Companies undertaken. Special facilities are obtainable through this Company for the placing of funds in secure and remunerative investments. Advice is given on all classes of South Africa Mining, Real Estate, Mortgage, or other Investments, and proxies are accepted to represent European Shareholders at South African Companies' meetings. This is the oldest and most successful Trust Company in the Transvaal. Reference has been kindly permitted to the Bank of Africa, Ltd., 113, Cannon-street, London, E.C.; and to the Head Office of the London and Lancashire Fire Insurance Company, 45, Dale-street, Liverpool.

THE STOCK EXCHANGE.

NOTICE.

No Member of the Stock Exchange is allowed to advertise for business purposes, or to issue circulars to persons other than his own principals.

Persons who advertise as Brokers or Share Dealers are not Members of the Stock Exchange, or under the control of the Committee.

A List of Members of the Stock Exchange who are Stock and Share Brokers may be seen at the Bartholomew-lane Entrance to the Bank of England, or obtained on application to

FRANCIS LEVIEN
Secretary to the Committee of the Stock Exchange.

Committee Room, The Stock Exchange, London, E.C.

SPECIAL ADVANTAGES TO PRIVATE INSURERS.
THE IMPERIAL INSURANCE COMPANY, LIMITED. FIRE. Est. 1803, 1, Old Broad-st., E.C., & 22, Pall Mall, S.W. Subd Capital, £1,500,000. Paid-up, £300,000. Total funds, over £1,500,000.—E. COZENS SMITH, Gen. Man.

SUN INSURANCE OFFICE
63, Threadneedle-street, London, E.C.
FOUNDED 1710.
THE OLDEST PURELY FIRE OFFICE IN THE WORLD.
SUM INSURED IN 1895,
£390,775,000.

JOHN SHAW, STOCK & SHARE DEALER.

HEAD OFFICE:—
WARDROBE CHAMBERS, DOCTORS' COMMONS, LONDON, E.C.

BANKERS:—
CAPITAL AND COUNTIES, Ludgate-hill, Long Acre, Piccadilly, and Brighton Branches.
LONDON AND MIDLAND, Newgate-street and Tooley-street Branches.

DIRECT PRIVATE TELEGRAPH WIRE between LONDON and BRIGHTON Offices.

FULL PARTICULARS of SPECIAL ARRANGEMENTS for DEALING sent post free on application.

COVER SYSTEM.—The loss is limited, the profits are unlimited, and there is such an independence in acting that the principle must and does recommend itself to business men, and it is the only method on which they deal—for speculative accounts.

£5 COMMANDS £500 STOCK.
£10 COMMANDS £1,000 STOCK.
£50 COMMANDS £5,000 STOCK.
£500 COMMANDS £50,000 STOCK, and so on in proportion.
NO OTHER LIABILITY WHATEVER.

JOHN SHAW, STOCK AND SHARE DEALER,
LONDON, BRIGHTON, MANCHESTER, AND DUBLIN.

Johannesburg Consolidated Investment COMPANY, LIMITED.

REPORT of the DIRECTORS, submitted to the Shareholders at a Meeting held in the Board Room, Colonnade-buildings, Fox-street, Johannesburg, on Monday, September 28, 1896, at 2.30 p.m.

The Directors submit herewith the Balance-sheet and Profit and Loss Account of the Company for the year ended June 30th, 1896, showing a balance of profit, including the amount carried from last account, of £531,186. 3s. 7d. This result has been arrived at after writing down the assets, where necessary, to the market value of the day. Since then the value in many cases has improved. An interim dividend at the rate of 30 per cent. per annum was paid to December 31st, 1895, and the Directors have declared a further dividend at the rate of 20 per cent. per annum, together absorbing £199,500. This leaves a balance of £331,686. 3s. 7d. to be carried forward. The Directors propose to place £250,000 of this amount to a separate reserve account by way of creating a dividend protection and equalisation fund.

Bearing in mind the conditions existing in Johannesburg at the end of last year and during the first six months of the present year, and the consequent stagnation in business and depreciation in values, the Directors consider the net result of the year's working to be very satisfactory. These adverse conditions have now passed away.

Since the close of the year covered by this Report the Founders' Shares in the Company have been extinguished in accordance with arrangements already sanctioned by the Shareholders, and to do so the Capital of the Company has been increased to £850,000, of which 15,236 Shares are held in reserve.

The figures of the accompanying accounts show a marked growth in the business of the Company, which is still capable of great expansion. Some valuable fixed properties have been acquired during the year, and the full development of the real estate assets of the Company is being pushed forward. One large building has been completed and readily let at good rentals, and others are in course of erection, or about to be commenced. The business of receiving deposits and of making advances on first mortgage is also being cultivated within the limits of safety and profit. The administration of the mining department of the Company's business has been strengthened, and the number of Mining Companies for which this Company acts as secretaries has greatly increased.

At the Extraordinary General Meeting convened for this day, following the present meeting, resolutions will be submitted to the Shareholders for the adoption of certain provisional agreements between this Company and (1) the Barnato Bank, Mining, and Estate Corporation, Limited, and (2) the Johannesburg Waterworks, Estate, and Exploration Company, Limited, and for the further increase of the capital of the Company to £2,750,000 by the issue of 1,900,000 Shares of £1 each for the following purposes:—

	Shares.
To acquire the assets of the Barnato Bank, Mining, Estate, and Corporation, Limited, at the ratio of five Shares for eight Bank Shares	1,503,125
To acquire certain freehold and leasehold properties from the Johannesburg Waterworks, Estate, and Exploration Company, Limited, at the ratio of one Share for three Waterworks Shares, but without extinguishing the latter	133,333
To acquire the assets of the Houghton Estate and Gold Mining Company, Limited, at the ratio of one Share for three Houghton Shares	17,429
To acquire the Yeoville Estate from the Johannesburg Building and Estate Syndicate, at the ratio of three Shares for four Syndicate Shares	24,750
To acquire the remaining Shares not already in the hands of this Company of the Johannesburg Market Concessions and Buildings Company, Limited, and the Central Commercial Buildings Company, Limited	21,504
	1,700,141
New issue to be offered to the Shareholders of the Company at 75s. per Share, at which price the issue is guaranteed free of any commission or option by Messrs. Barnato Brothers...	200,000
	£1,900,141

The above figures represent the number of Shares to be issued in exchange for the outstanding Shares of the Companies absorbed after deducting this Company's present holdings in these Companies. The cost of these holdings will in future be treated as a portion of the cost of the properties acquired. The excess of 141 Shares over the 1,900,000 above quoted will be taken from the existing reserve Shares, leaving 15,095 Shares in reserve.

The amalgamation with the Barnato Bank, Mining, and Estate Corporation, Limited, has been decided upon to remove what would have been a formidable competitor in business; and, among its other advantages, it secures to this Company the undivided influence and support of Mr. B. I. Barnato and his firm, and of the large and important interests which he controls. The assets of the Bank include very valuable Mining and landed properties and interests, and large holdings in the De Beers and Jagersfontein Diamond Mines, and in the best Gold Mining and other Companies in the Transvaal.

The purchase of the Yeoville and Houghton Estates has already been effected, and when the above amalgamation is completed this Company's holding of real estate will be the largest and most valuable in Johannesburg, yielding a large present revenue, and, by the judicious expenditure of capital, capable of almost indefinite increase, both in value and yearly returns. The Company will own, in addition to its properties in the best business parts of the town, some thousands of eligible building sites in the most popular residential quarters in Johannesburg, which are at present in great demand, and daily increasing in value. The Directors have the pleasure to report to Shareholders that the present asset of the Company in real estate in Johannesburg has just been valued by Mr. H. J. Morkel, Sworn Appraiser and Valuator, at the sum of £623,400. These properties now stand in the books at £208,381. 13s. 6d. only, showing a profit of £415,018. 6s. 6d. The balance of the amount of £269,941. 15s. 3d., "Investments in Real Estate," appearing in the Balance-sheet is represented by the Company's valuable property in Austinfriars, in the City of London, taken at the cost price of £61,560. 1s. 6d.

The premium of £2 15s. per Share on the 200,000 Shares to be issued to Shareholders, amounting to £550,000, will be carried to the Reserve Fund, increasing that Fund to £950,000, exclusive of the Dividend Protection Fund of £250,000, or £1,200,000 in all; and as a value of £4 per £1 Share has been taken as the basis of the issue of Consolidated Investment Company's Shares in the above purchases, a very large sum should accrue to the Reserve Fund from this source when the assets acquired are taken over and embodied in our accounts. With the Capital and Reserve Fund now contemplated, this Company will stand at the head of Financial Companies in South Africa in the magnitude of its Shareholders' funds.

With practically unlimited capital at its disposal, the Company will be able to take up, or negotiate and float, Government, municipal, and other public loans, or Debenture issues, and to undertake any other important banking or financial business.

In these and the other operations of the Company the Directors in Johannesburg are greatly assisted by the powerful support and co-operation of the influential London Board of the Company, with Sir W. Lawrence Young, Bart., as Managing Director. The Directorate will be further strengthened by the addition of Sir Charles Jessel, Bart., John Stroyan, Esq., and W. Garland Soper, Esq. (the last of whom will represent the Shareholders of the Johannesburg Waterworks, Estate, and Exploration Company, Limited), who will join the Board after the Annual General Meeting.

The Directors regret that they have lost the services in Johannesburg of the General Manager of the Company, the Hon. John Tudhope, who has removed for a time to the London Office. Mr. J. A. Hamilton, lately an inspector of the Standard Bank of South Africa, Limited, and Mr. Harold F. Strange have been appointed Joint Managers, the former in special charge of the Financial Department of the Company's business and the latter of the Mining Department. Mr. G. W. Starr, as Consulting Engineer, continues to give his undivided attention to the business of the Company, and Mr. R. Pizzighelli has been appointed Surveyor to the Company during the past year. Both gentlemen are assisted by an efficient staff.

Messrs. J. P. O'Reilly and John Munro, and Messrs. Chatteris, Nichols, & Co., the Company's Auditors in Johannesburg and London respectively, retire from office, but, being eligible, offer themselves for re-election.

By order of the Board,
H. M. NOBLE, Assistant-Secretary.

BALANCE-SHEET as at June 30, 1896.

CAPITAL AND LIABILITIES.

Capital	£800,000
Less Reserve Shares	2,000
		£798,000	0	0
Reserve Fund		400,000	0	0
Moneys on fixed deposit and on loan		1,000,884	17	8
Bills payable and other liabilities		417,583	9	9
South African Trust and Finance Company, Limited (for balance of purchase price of assets in suspense)		56,239	17	10
Balance Profit and Loss (after payment of interim dividend to December 31 last, amounting to £119,700)		411,486	3	7
		£3,084,194	7	11

ASSETS.

Cash on hand and at Bankers	£90,773	0	5
Loans on Market Securities in London and in Johannesburg ...	359,747	3	5
Loans to Mining Companies	597,139	6	7
Sundry Debtors	118,398	8	1
Investments in Real Estate	269,941	15	3
Investments in Mining Properties	86,734	2	4
Investments in Stocks and Shares, including Municipal Bonds and Shares in Mining, Financial, and other undertakings ...	1,487,536	8	5
Johannesburg Consolidated Investment Company, Limited, 15,000 issued Shares to be delivered to the South African Trust and Finance Company, Limited, as part of balance of purchase price of assets per contra	37,500	0	0
Machinery and Mining requirements in stock and in transit ...	33,350	17	3
Office Furniture, Fittings, and Instruments	3,073	6	2
	£3,084,194	7	11

APPROPRIATION ACCOUNT (last Financial Year).

DR.
To dividend to Shareholders registered July 31st, 1895	£157,600	0	0
Reserve fund	400,000	0	0
Balance to this year's accounts as below	396,429	4	10
	£954,029	4	10
CR.
By balance carried forward June 30th, 1895...	£954,029	4	10
	£954,029	4	10

PROFIT AND LOSS ACCOUNT, July 1st, 1895, to June 30th, 1896.

DR.
To Directors' fees				£3,468	15	0
Salaries, including Auditors' fees				25,566	12	10
Interest and exchange paid				17,271	10	4
Establishment charges, including rent and taxes, insurance, stationery, printing, and advertising				8,737	12	1
Balance	£531,186	3	7	531,186	3	7
Less Interim dividend at the rate of 30 per cent. per annum to December 31st, 1895 ...	119,700	0	0
Leaving as per Balance-sheet	£411,486	3	7
Proposed to be appropriated as follows:—
Income reserve account	250,000	0	0
Dividend at the rate of 20 per cent. per annum to June 30th, 1896	79,800	0	0
Carried forward	81,686	3	7
	£411,486	3	7
				£586,230	13	10
CR.
By balance from last account				£396,429	4	1
Gross profits for the year ended June 30th, 1896, after valuing Securities in hand at Market price				189,801	9	0
				£586,230	13	10

"We have audited the accounts of the London Office of the Johannesburg Consolidated Investment Company, Limited, and found them correct. We have also verified the Share Certificates and other Securities.

"CHATTERIS, NICHOLS, & Co.,
"Chartered Accountants.

"London."

"We have audited the accounts of the Johannesburg Office of the Company and found them correct, and they and the accounts of the London Office are properly incorporated in the above Balance sheet and Profit and Loss Account. We have also verified the Securities at Johannesburg.

"J. P. O'REILLY and J. MUNRO, Auditors.

"Johannesburg, Sept. 23rd, 1896."

The Subscription Lists will open Monday, November 2nd, 1896, and close for both London and Country applications at or before 4 o'clock on the following Thursday, 5th November, 1896.

CAVE, AUSTIN, & CO., Ltd.

Incorporated under the Companies Acts, 1862 to 1890.

CAPITAL - £130,000,

Divided into

80,000 Five per Cent. Cumulative Preference Shares of £1 each	£80,000
50,000 Ordinary Shares of £1 each	50,000
	£130,000

The whole of the Ordinary Shares will be taken by the Vendors on account of purchase consideration.

The Preference Shares will rank in priority to the Ordinary Shares both as to Capital and Dividend. The Articles of Association provide that no Debentures can be issued without the consent of three-fourths of the Preference Shareholders in General Meeting.

Issue of 70,000 Five per Cent. Cumulative Preference Shares, Payable as follows:—2s. 6d. per Share on Application, 7s. 6d. per Share on Allotment, and 10s. per Share on December 15th, 1896.

The balance of 10,000 Preference Shares will be reserved for future issue, to provide additional Working Capital for the extension of the Company's businesses.

DIRECTORS.

ARTHUR J. CAVE, St. Leonards-on-Sea, Chairman.
CHARLES H. CAVE, Eastbourne.
JAMES McCABE, 7, Idol-lane, City.
} Present Proprietors of Businesses to be transferred.
ALFRED AUSTIN, Lewisham.
CHARLES STAMP, Lewisham.
} Directors of J. & A. Austin, Ltd., ditto.
EDWARD JOSEPH MANSFIELD, Amberley House, Norfolk-street, Strand, London.
EDWIN UNDERWOOD, J.P. (E. Underwood & Son, Limited), Brentford, Middlesex.

Bankers.—LLOYDS BANK, LIMITED, 72, Lombard-street, London, E.C., and Branches.

Solicitors. — WILLIAMS & NEVILLE, Winchester House, Old Broad-street, London, E.C.

Auditors.—WOODTHORPE, BEVAN, & CO., Chartered Accountants, Leadenhall Buildings, London, E.C.

Secretary (pro tem.)—S. R. B. BRANSBY.

Registered Offices.—Leadenhall Buildings, London, E.C.

ABRIDGED PROSPECTUS.

The Company has been formed to acquire and continue, under one amalgamation, the following well-known businesses of Wholesale and Retail Grocers, Tea Dealers and Blenders, Provision Dealers, Wine and Spirit and Beer Merchants, and General Purveyors, hitherto carried on by Mr. A. J. Cave, Messrs. A. J. & C. H. Cave, J. & A. Austin, Limited, and Mr. James McCabe, with a view to their profitable extension under combined management:—

ST. LEONARDS-ON-SEA— Cave's Stores. * 15, Grand Parade, *† 41, Marina, *† 11, London-road, and 22, 24, & 26, Norman-road (Cash Supply Stores), *† 64, Eversfield-place (Magasin de Comestibles), 16, Grand Parade (Auctioneers and House Agents), HASTINGS— *† 12 and 13, Castle-street, Bottling Vaults, Priory-street,	A. J. CAVE.
EASTBOURNE— * 112, South-street, * 114, South-street, Warehouses, Cornfield-lane. BRIGHTON— Cave's Oriental Café (late the Mincing-lane Tea & Coffee Co.), 181, Western-road.	A. J. & C. H. CAVE.
SUBURBS OF LONDON— *† Lee Bridge, Lewisham, *† 33, High-road, Lee, 53, High-road, Lee, 55, High-road, Lee, * 266, High-road, Lee, *† Kent House, Lee Green, †† 74, Rushey-green, Catford, 134, Rushey-green, Catford, *† 162, Rushey-green, Catford, †† 9, Montpelier-vale, Blackheath Village, * 98, High-street, Eltham, †† High-street, Sidcup, Warehouse, 1, Lewis-grove, Lewisham, * 80, East Dulwich-grove, Dulwich, * 199, Brockley-road, Brockley,	J. & A. AUSTIN, Limited.
LONDON— The Lindoo Valley Tea Co., 10 & 11, Cross-lane, City, James McCabe & Co., Wholesale Tea Blenders, 7 & 8, Idol-lane, City,	JAMES McCABE.

* Off Licences.
† Gilbey's Agencies.
†† Wholesale Beer and Wine and Spirit Off Licences

The various businesses, most of which are old established, are admirably situated in populous leading thoroughfares in the best districts, where they command a high-class trade which cannot fail to increase under the combined direction of the present proprietors, and the favourable position of Messrs. Cave's establishments in the most popular watering places on the South Coast, may be expected to attract the customers of the London businesses when visiting there, and thus add materially to revenue.

The advantages of such combinations, when placed under the experienced practical control of those having substantial share interests at stake, and possessing the necessary knowledge of the requirements of each business, cannot be overestimated, and in these respects the administration of the Company is regarded as peculiarly adapted to successful trading.

The purchase will comprise the freehold and leasehold premises, goodwills, licences, trade marks, stock-in-trade (taken at cost), plant, fixtures, fittings, horses, vans, book debts, and general effects, as from the 30th June, 1896, and possession will be taken immediately on completion of the purchase. The book debts are guaranteed by the Vendors.

The freehold and leasehold premises, trade fixtures and fittings, plant, horses, vans, &c., have been valued at £30,449. The following is a copy of Messrs. Edwin Fox & Bousfield's report:—

99, Gresham-street,
London, E.C., 27th October, 1896.

To the Directors of CAVE, AUSTIN, & Co., Limited.

GENTLEMEN,—In accordance with your instructions we have inspected the several freehold and leasehold properties situate at Idol-lane, in the City of London, St. Leonards, Hastings, Eastbourne, Brighton, Lewisham, Lee, Blackheath, Eltham, Catford, Dulwich, Sidcup, and Brockley, comprising offices, sample rooms, shops, warehouses, stores, dwelling accommodation for assistants, and stabling, as described in the annexed Schedule.

We are of opinion that the value of the Premises is seventeen thousand six hundred and seventy-nine pounds (£17,679), for the purpose of the Trade as a going concern, based upon the profits, as reported by Messrs. Woodthorpe, Bevan, & Co., and Messrs. Broad & Wiltshire, and that the Freehold Interest in No. 64, Eversfield-place, St. Leonards-on-Sea, is of the market value of four thousand pounds (£4,000).

The trade fixtures and fittings, plant, horses, vans, &c., are estimated by the owners at the value of eight thousand seven hundred and seventy pounds (£8,770), and this sum appears to us to be fair.

We are, Gentlemen, yours faithfully,
(Signed) EDWIN FOX & BOUSFIELD.

The total profits, as certified by Messrs. Woodthorpe, Bevan, & Co., Chartered Accountants, and Messrs. Broad & Wiltshire, the well-known trade valuers, amount to £7,098 0s. 2d., after providing for all trading expenses, bad debts, and depreciation of leases, including the salaries payable to the five Directors, while acting as Managers, leaving an excess of £3,598 after providing interest, viz., £3,500 on the present Preference issue, and which is capable of considerable increase when the present amalgamation has been effected.

The purchase consideration to be paid for the freehold and leasehold premises, licences, trade marks, goodwills, plant, fixtures, and fittings, stock-in-trade (at cost), book debts (guaranteed), and effects, has been fixed by the vendors at £118,315, payable as to £68,315 in cash, and the balance of £50,000 in fully-paid Ordinary Shares.

No promotion money has been or will be paid, nor has any part of the Capital been underwritten, and the Vendors will pay all the preliminary expenses of the Company to the first allotment.

The Assets of the Company will comprise:—

Freehold and Leasehold Premises ...	£21,679	See Messrs. Edwin Fox & Bousfield's report.
Plant, fixtures, fittings, horses, carts, furniture, and trade effects	8,770
Stock-in-trade	21,173	Taken at Cost.
Book Debts	15,442	Guaranteed by Vendors.
Total assets available for the security of Preference Shareholders, in addition to goodwills and cash working capital	£67,064

The Working Capital will comprise the stock-in-trade (taken at cost), guaranteed book debts and cash, representing a total of about £38,300 in addition to which £10,000 Preference Shares have been reserved for future issue.

Messrs. Arthur J. Cave, Charles H. Cave, Alfred Austin, Charles Stamp, and James McCabe have agreed to serve as Directors and Managers for five years, but will not act in the former capacity until after allotment and completion of the purchase.

It is intended to make Application to the Stock Exchange at an early date for a settlement and quotation of the Preference Shares.

Applications for Preference Shares should be made on the form accompanying the Prospectus and sent to the Company's Bankers, together with a remittance for the amount of the deposit.

Where no allotment is made the deposit will be returned in full, and where the number of Shares allotted is less than the number applied for, the balance of the deposit will be applied towards the remaining payments. The failure to pay any future instalment on Shares allotted when due will render previous payments liable to forfeiture.

Prospectuses and forms of application can be obtained at the Companies' offices, or at any of the Stores to be acquired, or from the Bankers, Solicitors, or Auditors.

PLAYER'S NAVY CUT

Beautifully Cool and Sweet Smoking.

The Original

PLAYER'S NAVY CUT TOBACCO is sold only in 1-oz. Packets, and 2, 4, and 8-oz. and 1-lb. Tins, which keep the Tobacco in Fine Smoking Condition. Ask at all Tobacco Sellers, Stores, &c., and take no other. The genuine bears the Trade Mark, "NOTTINGHAM CASTLE," on every Packet and Tin.

PLAYER'S NAVY CUT CIGARETTES are sold in Packets of 12, and Tins containing 24, 50, and 100.

Also supplied in a new size—"MAGNUMS"—packed in Pocket Tins containing 16; and in 50's and 100's.

Direct from the Greenock Mills

WOOLS

There are other good knitting wools, but none are better than those of Greenock Manufacture. These Knitting Wools are suitable for all kinds of knitting, and will be found to be of good quality, combined with low prices. We do not manufacture low-priced goods in order to quote low prices, but our stocks are made up only of standard and reliable makes, which we sell at very moderate prices, because our exceptional position of Spinners and Manufacturers dealing direct with the consumers enables us to do so. A Knitting Instruction Book gratis on application.

WOOLLEN UNDERWEAR

All our goods are made from specially selected wools spun to wear, and we supply UNDERGARMENTS for LADIES, GENTLEMEN, BOYS, and GIRLS, in all thicknesses at most moderate prices, direct from our own factory.

DRESS GOODS

The newest materials for the present and coming season will be found in the "SHAWSWATER" DRESS FABRICS. Our specialities comprise the following materials in NEW CLOTHS and NEW COLOURS of an extensive assortment.

CURL CLOTHS, TWEEDS & HOMESPUNS
CRAPE TWEEDS, COVERT COATINGS,
FANCY BLACKS, CHEVIOTS,
SILK & WOOL MATERIALS, & SERGES.

Samples of all our goods are supplied Post Free on approval to any address.

FLEMING, REID, & CO.,
The Worsted Mills, GREENOCK.

BARNARD, BISHOP, & BARNARDS LIMITED.
ORIGINAL MANUFACTURERS OF THE CELEBRATED
SLOW COMBUSTION, OR, COUNTRY PARSON'S STOVES.
New and Original Designs always being produced.

Latest Novelty—ALL-TILED CANOPY STOVE, as Illustrated, No. 667,
"THE IDEAL." (Design Registered.) Fitted with our well-known Patent Norfolk Fire Basket.
Brass Vases to Bar Frame, Ventilating Ash Pan, &c.
This Stove, when made up in 6 in. × 2 in. brickettes as shown, in whole colour, as Teapot Brown, &c., has an exceedingly quaint and attractive appearance.

PRICES—

34" wide × 36" high, 13" fire...	£4 12 6	39" wide × 36" high, 18" fire...	£4 17 6
36" " × 36" " 15" " ...	4 15 0	42" " × 36" " 21" " ...	5 0 0

Mantel, Hearth, &c., extra.
93, QUEEN VICTORIA ST., LONDON, E.C.,
And NORFOLK IRONWORKS, NORWICH.

CADBURY'S COCOA

Entirely free from added Alkali or any foreign admixture.

Absolutely Pure, therefore Best.

The Leading Doctors and Analysts, and the Medical Press, testify to the purity and superiority of CADBURY'S COCOA. The LANCET describes it as the "standard of highest purity at present attainable."

OUR PUZZLES.

"TRUTH" PUZZLE No. 910.—NAMES FOR TWELVE YEARLINGS.

ANALYST (real name and address will be given in due course) £2 2 0

"TRUTH" PUZZLE, No. 922.

QUOTATIONS FROM THE POETS CONTAINING THE NAMES OF THE SEVEN DAYS OF THE WEEK.

HOPETOUN (real name and address will be given in due course) £2 2 0

SPECIAL NOTICE.—THE "TRUTH" DOLL AND TOY SHOW.

Space is at a premium this week, so I am unable to publish the detailed notice as to the Prizes which it was intended to print in this number. Let me say, however, in answer to numerous inquiries that have been addressed to me, that it is certainly the intention of the Editor of TRUTH to award, as usual, a number of prizes for the best-dressed dolls and most notable Home-made Toys in the Show which is to be held at Christmas. The prizes will probably take the form of various useful articles made of, or mounted with, silver, and varying in value from five pounds to fifteen shillings. TRUTH Brooches, a specially-designed reminiscence of the Show, will also be given to all ladies who dress a certain number of dolls. I would also again remind the friends of TRUTH that the Show will be, as on all former occasions, one of Home-made Toys as well as of Dressed Dolls. Home-made Toys of all kinds are always most acceptable, and a certain proportion of the prizes will be divided amongst those who contribute them. Dolls of both sizes may still be obtained on application.

CONDENSED RULES.

All answers to the current Puzzle must be sent in on or before the morning of the Monday week following the date of that Puzzle's publication, to the PUZZLE EDITOR, TRUTH Buildings, Carteret-street, Queen Anne's-gate, London, S.W. The answers must be signed by a nom de plume of not more than twelve letters, and must not be sent on post-cards, nor by telegraph, nor by hand; whilst in the case of new competitors the real name and address must be forwarded with the first reply sent.

"TRUTH" PUZZLE, No. 923.

The Prize in this competition for the best anagram made out of the thirty-eight letters in the words "Abdul Hamid Khan, Sultan of the Ottoman Empire," has been awarded to TARBOX for the following anagram;—

"Inhuman despot that maketh Armenia bloodful."

It may be added that the word "bloodful" is to be found in Webster's Dictionary.

"TRUTH" PUZZLE, No. 924.

The Prize for this competition has been divided between LANCELOT and BOWZER for the following sentences:—

The person who can least spare it is often most willing to give others a piece of his mind.—Lancelot.

In the Concert of Europe it is a condition that there shall be no solo on the programme.—Bowzer.

"TRUTH" PUZZLE, No. 928.

The usual prize of Two Guineas is offered this week to the competitor who best succeeds in writing

FOUR LINES OF VERSE, TWO OF WHICH MUST END IN THE WORDS "SYRINGE" AND "PICKAXE."

In other words, they are required to find rhymes for the two words mentioned above. The four lines may be written in any metre that is in common use, and in adjudging the prize regard will be had not only to the excellence of the rhymes provided for the given words, "Syringe and Pickaxe," but also to the neatness of the way in which they are introduced. The order of the two words may be altered, and competitors are at liberty to send in more than one attempt, if they please. All answers must reach me by the morning of Monday, November 16, at the latest.

ANSWERS TO CORRESPONDENTS.

 The address of J. McGrigor Allan, Esq., winner of a half of Prize No. 915, is Myrtle Villa, Vernon-road, Sutton, Surrey.

 The real name, with the address, of DORMER, winner of Prize No. 921, is J. D. Pierce, Esq., 14, St. Andrew's-square, Manchester.

F. P. E.—There is certainly point in your suggestion. I may say, however, that the prize-winner anticipated such an objection as you urge by sending an alternative quotation for "Tuesday."

HOLLY.—Many thanks for your suggestion.

V. H. S.—I have noted the correction.

THEOLOGY.—Thanks.

ESPERANZA.—Thanks for your note as to your anagram.

EZACKLY.—I am obliged to you for your note.

STEADY.—Your excellent suggestion shall have my early attention.

ST. MEIAC.—I have read your sympathetic lines with much interest.

IOTA.—Your name was omitted by an oversight, which I regret.

COALHEAVER.—I have made a note of the point.

RABELAIS.—Your "Quotations" arrived quite safely, and should have been acknowledged. The suggestion you so kindly make had not occurred to me. Many thanks for it.

P. M.—The blame was not yours. In your MS. the word printed "kicked" is written "kick'd."

E. J.—I am obliged to you for your letter.

THE PUZZLE EDITOR.

"TRUTH" PUZZLE, No. 925.—ASSORTED SPECIMENS—GOOD AND OTHERWISE.

RHYMED ACROSTICS ON "VICTORIA."

THE TWILIGHT OF A RECORD REIGN.

V anquished every regnal record! Give the record unto her!
I n the realms of far hereafter who shall be her vanquisher?
C an the years that roll before us in their misty depths contain
T ithe of all the power and grandeur of our Ladye's record reign?
O nward! cry the voices, onward! Onward!
Whither? Onward! Where?
R end the curtain of the future! Nay, the Epoch cries, forbear!
I n the West a dying spleudour lingers o'er the sunset skies.
A fter that—the purple twilight and the peace of Paradise. Scrivener.

"AND HE THAT WEARS THE CROWN IMMORTALLY LONG GUARD IT YOURS."

V aried in race—one in our loyalty!
I udeed to thee all honours appertain;
C rowned—wedded—widowed—sacred sympathy
T aught through deep sorrow. Linking the strong chain
O f sixty years ever more lastingly.
R ight firmly knit by this our longest reign
I n England's heart of hearts, thy throne has been
A s queenly woman—and most womanly Queen!
Addie.

V ictoria! Called so early to a crown,
I n girlhood's trembling morning unawares,
C alled to a crown—to wield in childish hand,
T hat sceptre which implies a thousand cares.
O h, how far back, how dim that day must seem!
R oyalty has burdened thee for three score years.
I n sorrow and in joy, in tempest and in gleam,
A nd nobly wearing all that age still nobly wears.
Eavesholm.

V arious the monarchs that have worn the crown,
I n this our land of freedom and renown;
C ruel and base was many a kingly heart,
T o few 'twas given to act a Royal part.
O f our own gracious Queen we all can say,
R evered the world throughout has been her sway;
I n length her reign's more honoured than the rest,
A s she has all surpassed in all that's best.
Idris.

V ivat Regina! Thus her people prayed
I n days long past, when at sweet seventeen
C rowned with time-honour'd pageant and parade,
T he Nation gladly welcomed her as Queen.
O urs in these later days to bless her reign,
R ecord unrivalled in our history's page;
I llustrious Queen and Empress, ours the gain,
A nd thine the Majesty from youth to age.
Prak.

V ictoria, Queen and Empress, hail!
I n graces, noblest of thy line.
C ertain, all British Sovereigns fail
T o show a record grand as thine
O f bounteous years and length of days,
R enowned for progress, life serene
I n all this realm. Our thanks we raise,
A nd ever pray "God save the Queen!"
Holly.

V ery long and very great
I s thy reign, oh Queen;
C rowned with honour's gracious state
T hou hast ever been.
O 'er this realm's remotest parts
R ests thy happy spell;
I n our loyal, loving hearts
A lways shalt thou dwell.
M. F. Walker.

"V ictoria R." the Royal maid by right assumed,
I n this century's youth of thirty-seven;
C rowned Queen when next June's roses bloomed,
T he nation's boon from gracious heaven.
O 'er longest reign—now sixty years—
R ejoice right loyally! For she has been,
I n all that "lovely and of good report" appears
A truly just, kind, sympathising Queen.
Hepatica.

V ain were the task in eight short lines of verse,
I mperial Queen, thy virtues to rehearse;
C hoose we instead to scan in briefest thought,
T he wondrous changes sixty years have wrought.
O ld England's children feel they owe to thee
R iches and honour, peace, prosperity;
I n longest reign the realm has ever seen,
A nd raise the strain, "Long live our gracious Queen!" Nodding Violet.

V ainly, great Queen, should we reiterate
I n varied phrase, how long thy reign, how great,
C ould we not show thou hast a fairer claim
T han length of years to an undying fame;
O f all thy glories this, the brightest far,
R espect for law has been thy guiding star;
I nstinctive loyalty to Freedom's cause
A nd love of right have won the world's applause.
Aquila.

V ested with royal and imperial power,
I llustrious virtue still her noblest dower;
C rowned by her people's love as she hath been,
T hroned in their hearts as Woman and as Queen,
O ur Sovereign's reign stands out beyond the rest,
R ecorded as the longest and the best.
I n England's great historic roll of kings
A round no other name such lustre clings!
Novella.

V ictoria, Queen and Empress, greatest of thy Royal line,
I n peace or war, upholder of thy people's rights
divine;
C rowned with a loyal nation's love, by Heaven
supremely blest,
T hy reign in England's annals ranks the longest and the best!
O f sorrows deep and lasting, good Queen, thou'st had thy share;
R elentless fate on Royalty lays burthens hard to bear.
I n peace may we for years to come enjoy thy rule serene,
A nd in the twentieth century sing, as now,
God save the Queen! Marplot.

V ictoria, by all belOved! most surely not in Vain,
I s thy name writ in current thoUght, more permanent than Ink.
C ould democratic power foRge a stronger, firmer Chain,
T han the love which makes co-cQual all loyal men who Think?
O 'er us to rule long years we trUst, loved, honoured, and Obeyed,
R enowned in this, that,
most revEred, thine is the longest Reign;
I n peace may all thy days
be spEnt, no ills thy realm Invade,
A nd when at length life's journeys eNd, thy soul true bliss Attain!
A. A. G.

V ictoria! Victrix over land and seas,
I s there no empire which thou rul'st, save these?
C onquerors before thy time have won the fame
T hat conquerors crave—yet left an unloved name:
O, thine it is true loyalty to own:
R everence and love alike safeguard thy throne;
I ts record longest that our land hath seen;
A nd still the prayer ascends, "God save the Queen." Litra.

V ictorious kings since Cressy's glorious day,
I n war's renown have made our country great,
C heck'd tyrants' schemes, and brought the proud to bay,
T orn bold oppressors from their kingly state.
O ur honour'd queen, a kindly empire sways,
R etaining still our prestige on the main,
I n sixty years we've learn'd to love and praise
A glorious record and a record reign. Goak.

V ictorious years, most glorious years, have marked her spreading reign,
I n unique majesty she stands 'moug England's royal train;
C ontinuous good her rule has shed, her rule the brightest, best,
T he longest and the strongest in our "island story" blest.
O, spotless is her simple throne, and stands
sublimely sure;
R ight was the might, the ruling light, that made her reign secure;
I ncrease has blest her prudent hand; all nations do her bless;
A nd her people rejoice with deed and voice in her reign of righteousness. Job.

V irtue may grow in cultured soil,
I t sometimes thrives 'midst want and toil;
C are cannot dim its brightness pure,
T hough malice frown, its smile is sure;
O ur own loved Sovereign wears its crown,
R efleeting her long reign's renown;
I n every British home is seen
A ffection for a virtuous Queen.
Dualwor.

V ictorious is Victoria! Lo,
I s it not right it should be so?
G ame hard-faced Mary, dealing death,
T hen came blue-nosed Elizabeth;
O f Anne, of all, what care have I?
R ather I turn me loyally
I nstead to her who stands above
A ll these in wisdom and in love.
Persius.

V irtues luminous enshroud
I n glamour bright our Empress Queen.
C ountless blessings have endowed
T he longest reign our land has seen.
O ver sixty glorious years,
R ecording progress, culture, pow'r,
I n th' expanding Empire, rears
A nation's love! Victoria's dow'r!
Ritas.

V aliant and mighty kings of yore have stood
I n England's throne, and fought their country's weal!
C alled forth, in all her glorious womanhood,
T o rule an Empire, and its discords heal;
O rdained to hold her sway o'er Britain's realm
(R uling with wisdom, purity, and love),
I n length surpassing all who held the helm,
A waits she here the "fuller life" above
Nika.

V irtue and valour shall ever uphold thee,
I ndia's Empress and Queen of our land,—
C rowned in our hearts, with our love we enfold
thee;
T hus round thy throne in a phalanx we stand.
O nly to Una in thought we compare thee,
R uling the lion, thy hand on its mane.
I nto the fold of the Lamb it will bear thee,
A fter the longest and worthiest reign.
L. P. P.

V ain a monarch's praise to sing,
I f length of years were all the theme;
C rown may ill become a king.
T hrone its tenant ill beseem.
O Britons, let Victoria's name
R esound abroad while time shall last!
I n length of years, might, honour, fame,
A ll reigns by hers have been surpassed.
Collis.

V ictoria now all our monarchs surpasses
I n length of her reign, and good name with "the classes;"
C ontent to be Queen, without very much ruling,
'T is thus she has kept our affections from cooling;
O n every occasion she 's played well her part,
R evealing a tact which has won each one's heart;
I n fact, we this truth would most willingly own:
A woman can, more than a man, grace a throne.
Almaviva.

V is the very best queen we have known;
I the improvement the nation has shown;
C is the care of her people she takes;
T is the time that her reign longest makes;
O is for old, but an age that endears;
R is for rule which gives near sixty years;
I ls the infinite worth she displays;
A the Almighty who lengthens her days. Rex.

V ivat Regina! Through nigh sixty years
I mperial stay of Britain's Empire vast,
C rowned ere yet life's early spring had passed;
T ruly by heaven upheld 'mid joy and tears.
O n every ear Victoria's record rings,
R esounding through the realms her rule hath bless'd;
I n British hearts, by every tongue express'd,
A rise "Te Deums" to the King of kings.
Georgina.

V ocal with praise of threescore years near-past.
I mperial, regal excellencies of our Queen
C ommand our homage from the first to last,
T racing the history how her life hath been!
O n throne of majesty the seat hath ta'en,
R alsed on the summit of a people's love,
I mmense her influence, unmatched her reign;
A s all ranks justly in their places move.
Philalethes.

V ictoriously indeed hath our beloved Victoria
reign'd;
I n England none hath sceptre sway'd so long, or so unstained.
C ome, then, ye English people all, in loyal love agree,
T he best hath reigned the longest time, and reigned right royally.
O ur Sov'reign Lady now hath reached her sixtieth crowned year;
R uled hath she for the right alway; in ev'ry word sincere,
I n life, upright and pure is she, in all her dealings true;
A nd unto her, our Queen, is our devoted service
due. Elm.

V ictorious—yes—through three-score chequered years,
I n maiden, married life, in widow's tears;
C ast upon billows that might wreck a throne,
T o helm the State through storms and straits unknown.
O thers have ruled the land, but only thou
R eign'st in men's hearts, and shalt for aye as now.
I n days of strife and wild rebellion's flame,
A word shall quell the storm—Victoria's name.
Fred Cassock.

V ictoria, Queen, a name without a stain,
I count thee happy, not because thy reign
C laims to be longest, but because thy fame
T o ripe old age is cherished still the same
O f all thy subjects as in earlier years;
R eady to share thy people's hopes and fears;
I n all things faithful, mother, wife, and friend,
A nd monarch, may God bless thee to the end.
E. C. D.

Aerostics have been also received from:—Ivy Leaves, Stephanotis, La Plata, Persius, Ivanhoe, Ida, Grasmere, Rick, Gruesome, Notsew, Plumeguerre, Infellx, Pan, W. Fawcett, Luda, Culpepper, E. N. S., Dry Monopole, Lichfield, Hodson, Avon, W. G. B., J. McGrigor Allan, The Bloater, K. W., Crocodile, Grannie, M. F. Walker, Sal, Isinglass, Cras Ding, E. T., Marplot, Irma Lee, Wings, Briton, Aquila, Mushroom, Jap, Oom Paul, Heurteloup, Stadium, Esperanza, Excelsior, Risk, Felsberg, K. W. T., Rugeley, Snibor, Pro Archia, St. Wilfrid's, La Plata, Walfred, Vivia, Ivanhoe, Bowzer, Rowena, Daisy Cohen, Mick, Lierre, Dumnorix, and Qu'Appelle.

TO NOBLEMEN, GENTLEMEN, and OTHERS requiring good Valets, Coachmen, Grooms, Caretakers, Lunatic Asylum Attendants, &c.—Apply to Commandant, Discharge Depôt, Gosport, who can supply Men of excellent character on the shortest notice.

OIL PAINTING.
PORTRAITS, LANDSCAPES, &c., faithfully REPRODUCED
For terms, address K. M. C., Grove House, Helston, Cornwall.

£20 TOBACCONISTS COMMENCING. Illd. guide (259 pages), 8d., "How to open respectably £20 to £2,000." Tobacconists' Outfitting Co., 186, Euston-rd., London. Mngr. H. MYERS, Est. 1866.

A THIN PAPER EDITION OF

TRUTH

is published weekly,

and can be obtained on order of all newsagents.

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION.

PAYABLE IN ADVANCE.

To all countries in the Postal Union:—

THREE MONTHS	£0 7 8
SIX MONTHS	0 15 4
TWELVE MONTHS	1 10 8

And to any Address in the United Kingdom—THREE MONTHS, 7s.; SIX MONTHS, 14s.; TWELVE MONTHS, 28s.

DIASTASED FARINA FOOD

A New and Very Superior Food for Infants, Delicate Children, and Invalids. The great desideratum of a Food for Infants, Delicate Children, and Invalids, is easiness of digestion, simplicity of preparation, and power of restoring strength. For these purposes is superior to any other Food.
DIASTASED FARINA
Sold by all Chemists, 1s. 6d. per Tin.
Manufacturers:
E. BEANES & CO., Falcon Works, Hackney Wick, LONDON, E.
TRADE MARK.

CHIVERS'
DELICIOUS. WHOLESOME. REFRESHING.
Prepared in silver-lined pans. Highly prized by all. Flavoured with Ripe Fruit Juices.
Dr. GORDON STABLES, R.N. says:—'Jellies that really add to our health and luxury.'
GOLD MEDAL
½-PINTS, 2½d PINTS, 4½d. QUARTS, 8d.
S. CHIVERS & SONS, Proprietors of the First English Fruit Farm Jam Factory, Histon, Cambridge.
CHIVERS' PATENT CUSTARDS and BLANC MANGES—2d. and 3d. packets and 6d. boxes — two more delicious and digestible additions to the dinner and supper table. Made by simply adding milk and boiling.
CHIVERS' 1st PRIZE JAMS.
The Royal Commission on Agriculture, in its report (1895), says: "Messrs. Chivers' Factory at Histon . . is now well-known throughout the country for the excellence of its manufactures."
JELLIES.

TORPID LIVER. HEADACHE.

Small Pill.
Small Dose.
Small Price.

Purely Vegetable Sugar Coated.

1s. 1½d.

DR MACKENZIE'S ARSENICAL SOAP 6d. & 1s.
For ECZEMA and all Skin Diseases wash with this Soap.
Produces a lovely complexion, and cures Spots, Pimples, &c.

DR MACKENZIE'S ARSENICAL SOAP 6d. & 1s.
For ECZEMA and all Skin Diseases wash with this Soap.
Produces a lovely complexion, and cures Spots, Pimples, &c.

The most emollient and soothing Toilet Soap in the World for irritable skins. Madame ADELINA PATTI writes from Craig-y-nos Castle:—"I find Dr. Mackenzie's Arsenical Toilet Soap most excellent." Beware of the many imitations. Have Dr. Mackenzie's or none.

The most popular and most appreciative since 20 years.
FRANZ JOSEF Aperient Water is the BEST.
The only Palatable Natural Aperient Water.

FARADAY & SON's

Electric Light Fittings

NEW DESIGNS for SEASON '96

2 & 3 BERNERS ST. LONDON W

The Perfect Food.

Prepared from the Finest Grain.

TRITICINE

Highly Recommended by the Medical Press, and Prescribed by the Medical Profession.

The IDEAL FOOD for INFANTS and INVALIDS.

TRITICINE is recommended by the Medical Faculty, as containing all the elements necessary in the constitution of a perfect Food; it also contains the albuminous or flesh-forming ingredients in an unusually large proportion, as well as all the properties which are necessary to form both bone and muscle. A FOOD FOR THE MOST DELICATELY CONSTITUTED. Guaranteed to remain on the weakest of stomachs. Makes delicious Puddings; and can be used with great advantage in place of Bread Crumbs for Browning, Frying Soles, &c. It is satisfying, and easily digested, and is equally suited to the requirements of the young, the old, the weak, and the strong.

☞ The Sale of TRITICINE has increased 4,000 per cent. during the last three months.

Price 1s. 3d. per Tin; Post free, 1s. 6d. H. GOODALL & SONS, Millers, CASTLEFORD, And of all Chemist and Grocers.

10/6 THE "PELICAN" SELF-FEEDING PEN 10/6
(PATENTED)

WRITES INSTANTLY AND CONTINUOUSLY.

Has Extra Large Reservoir of Ink. Secure against Leakage in any position. Flow of Ink regulated with the Greatest Nicety.

POLISHED VULCANITE, HANDSOMELY ENCHASED, FITTED WITH SPECIAL BARREL PEN in 14-ct. GOLD, IRIDIUM-POINTED. Also

THE "NOTA BENE" STYLOGRAPH OR FLUID PENCIL
(PATENTED)

5/- 5/-

IS READY FOR INSTANT USE, WITHOUT ANY ADJUSTMENT. MAY BE CARRIED IN ANY POSITION, WITHOUT FEAR OF LEAKAGE.

POLISHED VULCANITE, HANDSOMELY ENCHASED, WITH NEEDLE, SPRING, & NOZZLE, MADE OF THE PRECIOUS METALS.

Sold by all Stationers. Wholesale only by the Sole Manufacturers, THOS. DE LA RUE & CO. Ltd., Bunhill Row, London, E.C.

MAPLE & CO

TOTTENHAM COURT ROAD

THE LARGEST AND MOST CONVENIENT

Furnishing Establishment

IN THE WORLD

Heating
Ventilating
Sanitary

Newest Appliances
Newest Designs
Best Selection by all the LEADING MAKERS
Schemes and Estimates Free

Engineers
Engineers
Engineers

NEW MODEL WROUGHT IRON AND COPPER TABLE LAMP
Fitted with large Copper Container, Safety Duplex Burner, plain Globe and Chimney, complete 14/6

VERY PRETTY NEW DESIGN WROUGHT IRON & COPPER TABLE LAMP.
Fitted with Copper Container, Safety Duplex Burner, Etched Globe and Chimney, complete 18/9

NOVELTIES IN LAMP SHADES
Designs Free

NOVELTIES IN TABLE LAMPS
Designs Free

ALL LAMPS FITTED WITH ABSOLUTELY SAFE BURNERS

Catalogues of Lamps Post Free

CUTLERY ELECTRO-PLATE
New Showrooms

MAPLE & CO. have also a most extensive assortment of all the finest and best qualities of TABLE CUTLERY, as well as every description of copper goods, ironmongery, and culinary utensils. They supply and furnish a kitchen with these requisites for £8. 3s. 6d., or with a larger stock for £16. 4s.

ARTISTIC NOVELTIES IN LAMP SHADES
Designs Free

DINNER SETS BREAKFAST SETS
Immense Stock

MAPLE & CO have always an immense assemblage of DINNER, Tea, and Breakfast SERVICES comprising the beautiful productions of Minton, Worcester, Derby, Wedgwood, Coalport, and other potteries, as well as less expensive varieties. A dinner set of artistic design and colourings for 15s. 6d.

SPECIALITIES IN LAMP SHADES
Designs Free

LAMPS CLEANED AND PUT IN WORKING ORDER

Catalogues of Lamps Post Free

A VERY CHASTE DESIGN BRASS TELESCOPIC FLOOR LAMP, WITH MEXICAN ONYX TABLE
Patent extending movement, fitted with Safety Duplex Burner and Chimney complete; 5 ft. high, rising to 6 ft. 3 in., 95/- Shade extra.
A very stylish Shade in Florentine Silk, with figured silk coronet and panels, complete with strong brass support, 36/6.

MASSIVE WROUGHT IRON AND COPPER EXTENDING FLOOR LAMP
4 ft. 9 in. high, rising to 7 ft. fitted with Copper Container, Safety Duplex Burner and Chimney, complete, 22/9. Shade extra.
Decorative Shade in Sateen and Lace, complete with strong brass supports, 12/3.

THE ARCADIAN OIL STOVE

This Stove is constructed on perfect scientific principles, is absolutely safe, entirely free from smell, possesses a heating power equal to that of ordinary stoves consuming twice the quantity of oil.
Costs less than one farthing an hour.
Designs and all particulars post free.

VERY ARTISTIC NEW MODEL WROUGHT IRON AND COPPER FLOOR LAMP
4 ft. 3 in. high, rising to 6 ft. 9 in. fitted with Copper Container, Safety Duplex Burner and Chimney, complete 24/6 Shade extra

The "Halcyon," a very pretty Shade in Florentine Silk, with Lace and good Ribbon bow, complete with stout brass support, 19/6 extra.

Printed for the Proprietor by WYMAN & SONS, Limited, Great Queen-st. W.C. and published at 10, Bolt-ct. Fleet-st. E.C. in the Parish of St. Dunstan-in-the-West, in the City of London. Cheques and Post Office Orders should be made payable to REGINALD E. BOOKER, "Truth" Buildings, Carteret-st. Queen Anne's-gate, S.W

• TRUTH •

"Cultores Veritatis Fraudis Inimici."—Cicero.

No. 1037. Vol. XL. Thursday, November 12, 1896. Price Sixpence.

NOTICE.

In response to various communications which reach me on the subject, I beg to notify that the terms of Subscription to Truth, which are payable in advance, are as follows:—To any address in the United Kingdom, for 3 months, 7s.; 6 months, 14s.; and for 12 months, 28s. The Thin Paper Edition is forwarded to countries within the Postal Union for 3 months for 7s. 8d.; 6 months, 15s. 4d.; and 12 months, 30s. 8d. Cheques and Post Office Orders should be made payable to the Manager, Truth, "Truth Building," Carteret-street, S.W.

A reprint of the Truth report on the Kilburn Sisterhood can be obtained at the Publishing Offices, Bolt-court, Fleet-street, price 2d.; by post, 2½d.

ENTRE NOUS.

I HAVE just had a census taken of the Doll population remaining in this office. The enumerators' returns show that the exact number is 478, made up of thirty-one large dolls and 447 small ones. At present these waxen young ladies are only clad in a frail garment of white tissue paper, and it is absolutely essential that they should be more fully and fashionably attired if they are to take part in the Truth Show at Christmas. Who, then, will help to dress them? If ladies will remember what the date now is, they will, I am sure, lose no time in acquainting me with their willingness to assist in this rather pressing matter.

During the Queen's five weeks' residence at Windsor Castle, Lords Kintore, Lawrence, and Bridport are to be successively the lords-in-waiting, and Captain Drummond Colonel Browne, and Sir Edmund Commerell will be the grooms-in-waiting on her Majesty, and Ladies Ampthill, Downe, and Antrim are to be the ladies-in-waiting.

A romancing weekly journal announces that during the Queen's residence at Balmoral she has taken "the greatest delight" in watching "the merry cycling parties of Princesses which have started daily from the castle." A pure fiction; for there have been no "cycling parties" whatever, and no Princesses have been staying at Balmoral who would be likely to take part in anything of the kind.

The Prince and Princess of Wales, Princess Victoria, and Prince and Princess Charles of Denmark, who are staying at West Dean Park, near Chichester, on a visit to Mr. and Mrs. William James, are expected at Marlborough house on Saturday afternoon. They will spend next week in town, and are to pay a visit to the Queen at Windsor Castle. On the 23rd, the Prince and Princess of Wales and Princess Victoria go to Blenheim on a visit to the Duke and Duchess of Marlborough until Saturday, the 28th, when they are to return to Sandringham, where there will be a large shooting-party during the following week, the guests being invited from Monday, the 30th, until Saturday, December 5.

The Crown Prince and Crown Princess of Roumania and the Hereditary Prince of Saxe-Coburg-Gotha have arrived at Vienna from Bucharest, on their way to Darmstadt and London. The Crown Prince Ferdinand and the Crown Princess Marie are to stay with the Duke and Duchess of Coburg at Clarence House, when they are in London, and they will visit the Queen at Windsor, and the Prince and Princess of Wales at Sandringham, while they are in England. They are to spend Christmas at Coburg with the Duke and Duchess of Saxe-Coburg-Gotha, and will afterwards visit Berlin and Sigmaringen before returning to Bucharest.

The Duke of Coburg, who was staying last week at Sandringham with the Prince and Princess of Wales, and who is now the guest of Lord and Lady Amherst of Hackney, at Didlington Hall, Norfolk, will pay a visit next week to the Queen at Windsor Castle, and he is to have a day's shooting in the Great Park with Prince Christian. The Duke is to arrive at Plymouth on Tuesday, the 24th, for a stay of three days, and he will shoot at Mount Edgecumbe with Lord Mount Edgecumbe, and at Langdon Court with Mr. Cory. The Duchess of Coburg and Princess Beatrice are to arrive at Clarence House on Friday from Germany.

The Duchess of Albany, who returned on Friday to Claremont from visiting the Queen at Balmoral, will go to Cannes in January for three months, accompanied by her children.

An eye-witness of the occurrence tells me that when the Queen of Portugal attended the Pasteur Institute for the first time—her intention of so doing not having been previously signified—she entered the operating-room in company with two French peasants and an English costermonger. Doubtless it will be a proud day in the lives of those peasants and that costermonger. The Queen, however, does not seem to have been so pleased with her company, for on her subsequent visits special arrangements were made for her Majesty's reception in a private room.

▲

Dublin is now filling for the winter season, which, so far as concerns the weather, has come very punctually. The prophets are usually busy at this time with prognostications regarding the coming "season." The experience of last year, however, keeps them discreetly silent at present. Whether or not there is to be social prosperity for Dublin in the coming year has been left to the future to disclose. Lord and Lady Cadogan, who are still paying visits in England, are not expected in Ireland until the end of the month, when they will, as usual before Christmas, reside in the Viceregal Lodge. The vacant ribbon of St. Patrick has not yet been bestowed. For the credit of the Order, it is hoped in Ireland that Lord Roberts will be the new Knight, and not some one among the "Hottentots," who may specially have gained favour in high places.

The Chief Secretary and Lady Betty Balfour, with their family, are residing at the Chief Secretary's Lodge. This official residence is situated in the centre of the Phœnix Park, more than a mile distant from the entrance gates on the Dublin side. It commands an extensive view, in front, of the valley of the Liffey and the range of Dublin mountains, the historic "Fifteen Acres" occupying the immediate foreground. On some of the very occasional flying visits paid by Royalty to Ireland, members of the Royal family have planted trees in the pleasure-ground of the Chief Secretary's Lodge. Lady Betty Balfour gave a children's party on the last day of the month to celebrate the festival known in Ireland as "Holy Eve," and in Scotland as "Hallowe'en." The feast is celebrated in both countries by the consumption of apples and nuts, accompanied in Ireland by the "barm-brack," a large cake of the currant-bun class, which on "Holy Eve" always contains a ring.

Major Somerset Maxwell, who has succeeded his uncle as Lord Farnham, is well known and popular in Irish Society. He is the son of the youngest of seven brothers, several of whom succeeded each other in the title. One of them, when Lord Farnham, together with his wife, was killed in the great accident to the Irish mail, which took place many years ago at Abergele in Anglesea. Lord Farnham is an amateur actor of much merit, and has constantly appeared in public performances in aid of charities. He has also been prominent in the landlord defence organisations. His wife is a daughter of the late Lord Headfort.

The death of the Protestant Bishop of Killaloe was even more sudden than that of the Archbishop of Canterbury. The sad event was rendered tragic by the death of his wife almost at the same time. Dr. Wynne's kindly disposition and liberal mind made him popular with all classes and creeds in his diocese, and the funeral of the Bishop and Mrs. Wynne was attended by a large number of the Catholic clergy of the neighbourhood

For the TRUTH HOTEL LIST, see page 1262 in the present issue.
For HOSPITALS and APPEALS, see page 1261.
For AMUSEMENTS, see page 1263.
For OUR PUZZLES, see page 1273.

Mr. George Anderson, who died last week a tMel. bourne, where he held the office of Master of the Mint for ten years, was for several Parliaments one of the most zealous and prominent Radicals in the House of Commons, where he sat for Glasgow. Mr. Anderson had a keen scent for all kinds of abuses, and he enthusiastically supported Sir George Trevelyan's proposals for military reforms, which ultimately led to the abolition of purchase in the Army. He was one of the very few Liberal members who in those days had the courage to oppose Royal grants.

The late Mr. George Lane-Fox was a good specimen of an antiquated type of country gentleman. He passed the whole of his life in Yorkshire, merely paying an occasional and always brief visit to London, and he never left England. He was a most generous and considerate landlord, and took an active personal interest in the management of his large estate. Mr. Lane-Fox was Master of the Bramham Moor Foxhounds for forty-eight years, and he hunted the country most admirably. While fond of shooting, he was strongly opposed to the excessive preservation of game which is now so common, and he insisted that it was the duty of landed proprietors to cut their coat according to their cloth, and to live as much as possible on their estates. He was a Tory of the type of Vivian Grey's Sir Christopher Mowbray, who "had no idea of 'liberal principles,' or anything else of that school," and who for half a century "supported in the Senate, with equal sedulousness and silence, the Constitution and the Corn Laws."

It may be of interest to note, however, that in one matter even Mr. Lane-Fox was influenced by reforming ideas. This was on the subject of funeral reform. He was a personal friend of the late Lady Georgina Milner, who always strove to influence all around in this direction. At Mr. Lane-Fox's funeral there was no hearse, and no sombre trappings. His body was borne to the grave by old servants, and in spite of the unpropitious weather, the mourners followed the coffin on foot.

The house at Bramham, which was built by Lord Bingley during the reign of Queen Anne, was burnt down many years ago, and it has never been rebuilt, The park, which is one of the finest in England, and grandly wooded, covers 2,000 acres, and the famous gardens and grounds extend over 120 acres. They are the best examples of the old French style in the country, and the avenues, tall hedges, and allées vertes are very beautiful.

A reader in Chelsea tells me that although every householder may have the remedy for the organ-grinding nuisance in his own hands, the same remark does not apply in the case of those who live in flats. He gives a melancholy account of his experiences in endeavouring to "move on" a wandering minstrel who had struck-up outside his own block of flats at the cheerful hour of 11.20 p.m. Of course, a resident in a flat has the same rights as the rest of the community, although he may not feel so sure of his ground as the owner of a house, when he objects to an organ-grinder playing outside his windows. But it ought not to be necessary for any private citizen to expose himself to annoyance by attempting to stop a street organ at 11.20 p.m. The law should absolutely forbid street music at such an hour, and I would suggest to all sufferers that they should unite in agitating for the legal limitation of hours on organ-grinding. Why is there no Anti-Organ-Grinders' League? I could point to a dozen far less useful organisations now in existence.

WATER SUPPLY TO COUNTRY HOUSES.—Read "Water Supply to Mansions." The Times says, "a practical pamphlet." Post free.—MERRYWEATHERS, 63, Long-acre, London, W.C., & Greenwich, S.E.

I used to think that the last place that a sensible man would wish to go to was the North Pole, particularly as no one seems to reach that strange goal, although what he would see there, if he did, beyond snow and ice, I do not know. But I have entirely altered my mind since I have heard what an amount of money may be got by trying to get there. Dr. Nansen received £1,000 for his telegram to the Daily Chronicle, and £4,000 from the enterprising proprietors of that journal for his article. His book in English is sold for £10,000, and he is to receive £5,000 for the Norwegian edition. This totals up to £20,000, and to this may be added the French and German editions, which will probably bring in nearly the same amount.

The Editor of the Leamington Advertiser asks me to state that the humorous "Mace" article from which I gave some extracts last week was inserted by a locum tenens in his absence. From his asking this, I gather that he is not altogether happy about the article; but, speaking for myself, it struck me as a very original and spirited composition, and if I had such a writer on my staff I should do my best to encourage him, though I don't know that I should leave him in absolute control of the office in my absence. Mark Twain describes somewhere how, while serving his literary apprenticeship, he undertook on an emergency to edit an agricultural journal. It is no disparagement of Mark Twain to say that he did not distinguish himself more conspicuously in that position than my Leamington contemporary's understudy.

Mr. Augustus Hare's record of thirty-six years of his own life, in three huge volumes, is really a monument of egotism. The volumes are full of queer family incidents, and one of the very strangest relates to the birth of the author. Mrs. Augustus Hare, who was a widow and childless, offered to adopt her sister-in-law's infant, to which the mother replied, "My dear Maria, how very kind of you! Yes, certainly, the baby shall be sent to you as soon as it is weaned. And if any one else would like one, would you kindly recollect that we have others!"

The Daily Mail, with its enormous sale, must have cut into the circulation of some of the London penny morning papers. But it is not likely that any of them will meet this by reducing their price to a halfpenny. With the amount of paper which they give, this, indeed, would be impossible. Some of them advertise a daily circulation of 250,000. The loss of a halfpenny per copy would consequently amount to above £160,000 per annum. Twenty years ago, the penny hardly covered cost of paper, ink, and machinery. But since then paper has fallen 50 per cent. in price. Still the profit is not anything like one halfpenny per copy. By the way, it is rumoured in the journalistic world—I know not with what truth—that it is intended shortly to convert the Daily Mail into a Limited Liability Company.

Proportionally there is no great town in the civilised world that has so few daily morning papers as London. This is due to the large expenditure involved in starting one, for the yearly expenses of a London paper are more than double those of a paper in any other European capital. A very large portion of these expenses, as well as profit, has to come out of the advertisements, and advertisers are, for reasons best known to themselves, very slow in giving their patronage to a new paper. Any one contemplating starting a London paper must be ready to lose £30,000 or £40,000 per annum for the first two or three years, and then it is a very open question whether he will have turned the corner.

Of weekly papers, new ones are started almost every day, but I believe that it is a statistical fact that only about five per cent. survive. I should put the total copies printed per diem of the London morning papers at about a million. Of these about 10 per cent. would be returns, i.e., copies not sold, which would make the daily circulation 900,000. Of the penny dailies, the Times, Standard, Daily Telegraph, Morning Post, and Morning Advertiser are Conservative; the Daily News, Liberal; and the Chronicle, Radical.

Mr. Poynter's election as President of the Royal Academy was received with more surprise than enthusiasm by the A.R.A.s, waiting for the news like Peris at the gate of the Paradise they hope one day to enter. He is a painter at most of respectable merit, nor was he supposed (erroneously, perhaps) to possess the gifts requisite in a President. The election, it is said, was due to the "old gang," who look with some jealousy on the younger Academicians, by whom they have been somewhat supplanted in public favour. Mr. Poynter is Director of the National Gallery. This is an appointment that is held for five years with a salary of £1,000 per annum. As President of the Royal Academy, he will have a salary of nearly £1,000 per annum in addition.

Next week Mr. Poynter is to be received by the Queen at Windsor Castle, when he will be knighted by her Majesty, who is to invest him with the chain which is the badge of office worn by the President of the Royal

A BEAUTIFUL HOTEL AT BOURNEMOUTH.—The "ROYAL BATH." "Hôtel de Luxe of the South." Sea frontage, 1,000 ft.; grounds, 5 acres. Due south. Only Hotel on East Cliff. Moderate fixed tariff.

Academy. Mr. Poynter's election must be particularly pleasing to Lord Wharncliffe, who possesses a number of the new President's best works, which are at Wortley Hall, near Sheffield.

Professor Ryle's election to the presidency of Queens' College has caused great surprise at Cambridge. It is a very rare, if not an unprecedented, event for the Fellows of a College to elect as their head a man who has no connection of any kind with the society. The real truth is that the income of Queens' College has been so much diminished by agricultural depression that the stipend of the President has been considerably reduced, and it is now barely sufficient to enable him to live in the lodge, and show the hospitality which is expected of him. Professor Ryle's stipend will be increased by the income which he receives from his Chair, which he will continue to hold. Professor Ryle is a very clever man, and popular in the University, and he may be trusted to avoid mistakes in his government of Queens' College.

The Oxford elections to the Hebdomadal Council resulted in a victory for the Academic Liberals. The great and highly-significant feature of this election was the unexpected defeat of Mr. E. T. Turner, who had sat on the Council as a Tory of the old Oxford type for more than thirty-five years. Since his defeat, Mr. Turner has announced his intention of resigning the Registrarship of the University, which he has held for twenty-six years. This has become an important and laborious office, and it may be hoped that Mr. Turner's successor will be an energetic and thoroughly practical man of business.

To complete the farce of the rectorial elections at the Scottish Universities, it only needs that the election of Mr. Chamberlain in preference to Mr. Birrell at St. Andrews, and of Lord Balfour of Burleigh against Mr. Haldane at Edinburgh, should be capped by that of the Marquis of Huntly at Aberdeen in opposition to Professor Murison. On what grounds Lord Huntly should be chosen for such a position it is difficult for an outsider to discover, but from some of the election proceedings I gather that his lordship is being commended to the favour of the electors, on the two-fold ground of his social position and his personal appearance. It is somewhat a set-off to the social position of a peer, however, to find him defendant in an action by the most notorious of living usury-mongers, Isaac Gordon; while against his lordship's personal attractions may be set the fact of his having five years ago promised a contribution of £600 in annual instalments to the University Buildings Extension Fund, no portion of which has yet been paid. Handsome is that handsome does.

One of the papers grumbles at the promotion of Bishop Creighton to the See of London because his career had been "purely academical" until he succeeded the late Archbishop Magee at Peterborough. As a matter of fact, the new Bishop of London held the College living of Embleton, Northumberland, for nine years, and he was widely known as being one of the most hardworking and most successful parish clergymen in the county. Dr. Creighton's labours at Embleton were viewed with marked approval by Bishop Lightfoot, who made him a Rural Dean, and by the present Bishop of Chichester, who appointed him to be one of his examining chaplains.

The vicarage of Kensington, which has become vacant by the promotion of Mr. Carr Glyn to the See of Peterborough, is worth about £1,000 a year, with house, and is in the gift of the Bishop of London, but on the present occasion the presentation passes to the Lord Chancellor, and not to the Crown, as has been stated. It was Lord Cairns who presented Mr. Carr Glyn, in 1878, when the present Archbishop of York became Bishop of Lichfield. Archdeacon Sinclair, the predecessor of Dr. Maclagan at Kensington, was one of the divines nominated by Lord Palmerston for the See of Worcester when Bishop Pepys died in 1861, but the Queen chose Dr. Philpott, who was a great favourite with Prince Albert, and had refused the Deanery of Ely in 1859.

It is gratifying to find that at least one prelate shares the views I expressed last week as to the proposal for the compulsory retirement of parish clergymen at the age of 70. The Bishop of Sodor and Man was the only member of the English Episcopal Bench who declined to join in the appeal to the Premier to make the Benefices Bill of last session a Government measure, and he has now explained that the consideration which above all others weighed with him against the Bill was the one-sided character of the compulsory retirement clause. "If aged and infirm incumbents are to be made to retire by the Bishops, surely," says Dr. Straton, "some one else should be appointed to compel aged and infirm Archbishops, Bishops, Deans, Archdeacons, and Canons to retire likewise." When the Bill comes up again next session, the opinion of the new seventy-six-year-old Primate on this point ought to be peculiarly interesting.

While admitting that the system which heaps several offices on one man should be condemned, the Eastern Morning News wants to know why TRUTH should be "so down upon the Bishop of Hull, as though he were a greater sinner than all the other Canons at York?" This is easily explained. It is not, of course, in ignorance of the fact that there are plenty of other pluralists that I keep pegging away at the case of Dr. Blunt. I do so because, as a clergyman who is at one and the same time Bishop of Hull, Residentiary Canon of York, and Vicar of Scarborough—the latter office in itself sufficient to tax the energies of any man—he happens to be a particularly prominent offender; and in any matter of this kind I prefer to tackle prominent offenders before dealing with the small fry. In short, I use this Bishop-Canon-Vicar as one of the "horrible examples" of a scandalous system.

I see that the Curates' Union has addressed as letter to the Bishop of Rochester protesting against the outrageous job which the Haberdashers' Company lately perpetrated in conferring the living of All Saints', Hatcham Park, upon the Rev. D. A. Townend, a youthful cleric who was only ordained three years ago. With this case the Union couples another equally scandalous appointment in the same locality, the Rev. E. J. Kennedy having been presented by the Church Patronage Trustees to St. James's, Hatcham, though he has actually not yet completed two years in holy orders. Score of similar jobs have been exposed and pilloried in these columns during the past few years, and it is now the fashion to condemn them at all Church Congresses and Diocesan Conferences, but it is not in the least likely that they will ever be stopped by the mere force of public opinion. What is wanted is a change in the law which will make it impossible for a cleric to be beneficed until he has put in some reasonable period of service—say, five or seven years—as a curate.

"HÔTEL BURLINGTON," AT SUNNY BOSCOMBE. (200 rooms.) Every luxury. Delightful grounds. Magnificent golf links. Sea-water baths. Moderate charges.—Bournemouth East Station.

In reply to a remark made in TRUTH a fortnight ago upon the ratio of expenses to receipts in the Liberator Relief Fund, Mr. Stockwell Watts, the honorary secretary, sends me a very long letter, which he can hardly expect me to publish. The sting of my paragraph, Mr. Watts justly remarks, was in the statement at the end of it that 3s. 6d. out of every £1. 1s. subscribed had gone in office and advertising expenses; and Mr. Watts now denies that this statement is accurate, and asserts that only 2s. 10d. out of every £1. 1s. subscribed has gone in working expenses, and that this covers the whole cost of administering the Fund, and not merely "advertising and office expenses." As I said the other day, no one can wish to say anything to the detriment of the Liberator Relief Fund, and for this reason alone I think it very undesirable to enter into any argument with Mr. Watts upon the figures. I am quite ready to let the expenses stand at 2s. 10d. in the guinea instead of 3s. 6d., and I fully admit that a fund of this size can only be raised by a very large expenditure on advertising. Mr. Watts says that the recent paragraph in TRUTH has already caused some subscribers to stay their hands. In that case I can only say that the subscribers must be very timorous and hypercritical people. I need hardly say that I would gladly do anything in my power to increase the flow of subscriptions to the fund, and that the only object of my remarks was to suggest to the executive the advisability of a little more economy in the management. As the only visible result of my efforts up to the present time has been that Mr. Watts has compiled and printed a twelve-page pamphlet entitled "An Open Letter to the Editor of TRUTH," I fear that my efforts are likely to do more harm than good.

I asked in last week's TRUTH whether the "Mr. N. W. A. Edmonds," who figures in the Exeter Diocesan Calendar as one of Dean Boyd's exhibitioners, is a son of Canon Edmonds. It now appears that there is no exhibitioner of this name, and that, by a printer's error, Edmonds has been substituted for Edwards. This disposes of the question at once, and I am sorry that it should have been raised.

The following amounts have reached me towards the TRUTH Toy Fund:—Marie Joshua, £2. 2s.; C. W. L., £1; J. P. M., £2. 2s.

Sir Herbert Kitchener will not meet with a cordial reception at the War Office. The military authorities are simply furious at the preposterously large number of officers who have been "mentioned" in connection with the Dongola expedition. It was formerly the rational practice only to "mention" officers who had really distinguished themselves in some very special manner, but of late years despatches have contained literally dozens of names; and Lord Wolseley himself has been a great offender in this respect. Not one-third of the officers "mentioned" in Sir Herbert Kitchener's despatches can possibly receive the promotion which in the old days would have followed as a matter of course; so the invidious task of selecting a few names from the legion who have been recommended will be thrown upon the military authorities, who are decidedly annoyed at the folly and absurdity of the commander of the expedition in allowing his satisfaction with his subordinates to carry him to such extravagant lengths.

One of the most interesting letters that have reached me in reference to the recent TRUTH articles on the 4th Hussars, deals with the extravagance resulting in cavalry regiments from the presence of the "moneyed snob" element. Nowhere is this so apparent as in the expenditure on polo ponies in India. My correspondent tells me that some years ago, owing to the number of ponies kept by officers of some regiments, and the enormous prices given for them, poorer regiments were unable to compete, and many officers were compelled to give up the game. The extravagance reached such a height that at one time officers in many regiments were giving more for their polo ponies than for their chargers, and it was no uncommon thing to see the sowars better mounted than the officers themselves. This state of things led to the interference of Lord Roberts, at the time he was Commander-in-Chief, but from what I can make out, his interference by no means extinguished the evil.

No one will be surprised to hear that regiments where this sort of spirit prevails among the officers do not always show up well on field service. The correspondent to whom I have referred above writes:—

> I remember during the Afghan campaign of 1878-80, my regiment of Bengal Cavalry was brigaded with a regiment of British Cavalry. We found it to be a case of like master like man. The British regiment lost the whole of its baggage twice through sheer carelessness, the two occasions being in rapid succession. Consequently a large part of my regiment had to be employed practically as a rear-guard for the British regiment, the carelessness of which was so disgusting that our C.O. himself complained to the General that his men were so tired with this particular work as to be unfit for their regular duty.

The writer of the above goes on to suggest that if room must be made in the Service for those scions of the plutocracy desirous of distinguishing themselves by holding the Queen's commission, they should be confined to the Volunteers or the Militia, where officers are wanted, and where money would often be useful. I doubt if they will do much good anywhere, but they are certainly not wanted where there is a chance of their ever being called out on active service.

CARPET BEATING SEASON.—The Queen says: "A good place to send carpets to is the Compressed Air Carpet and Tapestry Cleaning Company, Brook Green, Hammersmith, W. Dust blown out. No beaters used." To prevent deception carpets cleaned by this process bear the Trade Mark on the back.

I would ask, in connection with this subject, whether it is recognised as the proper thing at the War Office that certain cavalry regiments should keep packs of hounds. At the present moment two regimental packs are kept, if not more, one at Norwich and the other at Ballincollig; and, as I understand the existing state of things, any cavalry regiments which are sent to these stations have to take their share of keeping up the packs. There was an article in a sporting paper the other day on the "7th Dragoon Guards Stag Hounds," and it appears from that article that the 7th not only keep a pack of stag hounds, but "from twenty to thirty deer." If the latter information is correct, it seems to show that the thing is done in the most extravagant style possible, and no one can wonder that subalterns joining cavalry regiments have to be put through a cross-examination as to their private means before they are welcomed with open arms by their brother officers. If it is worth while to insert a paragraph in the Queen's Regulations on the subject of regimental entertainments at race meetings, the keeping of regimental packs of hounds certainly seems worthy of notice.

In reference to the article on the 20th Hussars in last week's TRUTH, I regret that, when dealing with the action of Lord Beaumont on the occasion of the riding-school incident, I had forgotten the sad accident which led to Lord Beaumont's death within a few months of his leaving the regiment. Everything, however, that has reached me up to the present time tends to confirm the absolute accuracy of every statement respecting the 20th in last week's TRUTH, and I have little doubt that Lord Beaumont did have the subalterns before him and reprimand them as alleged. That he would have done so, had the facts come to his knowledge, there can be no question, for he was, by general consent, an excellent officer, and a just as well as a good-hearted man.

The War Office have taken a most extraordinary step in allowing Major H. Montgomery Munby to retain his commission in the Leeds Engineers Volunteers after the circumstances attending that officer's bankruptcy. Major Munby was junior partner in a firm of leather merchants who failed some months ago, the creditors having refused all attempts at arrangement in consequence of their opinion of the manner in which the business had been conducted. In the course of the bankruptcy proceedings it has been proved that Messrs. Munby, whose assets showed a deficiency of £6,756 on liabilities to the amount of £10,990, had been insolvent for the last ten years, and it was clear that they must have known the fact. Major Montgomery Munby had had the cash-book and ledgers under his control for the last eight years of this period. Among business men in Leeds—and it may be added among the officers of Major Munby's regiment—there is only one opinion on the facts, and it is an open secret that the Major's retention of his commission has been allowed in opposition to the official representations of the Commanding Officer. The truth appears to be that potent political and religious influences have been brought to bear on Major Munby's behalf, and that to such considerations the War Office has sacrificed the interests of the regiment and the credit of the Volunteer force generally. Scarcely a week seems now to pass without some similar exhibition of partiality and corrupt motives under the present régime at Whitehall.

One of my Army readers asks me to draw attention again to the many instances to be found in the Army List of undue prolongation of Staff appointments. He comments especially on the case of a lieutenant, who got his first commission in 1888, and has held an appointment as A.D.C. in India since 1889—over seven years. In the case of subalterns, such prolongation of Staff appointments is specially objectionable, for it prevents them acquiring any proper knowledge of regimental duty, and ever developing into really efficient officers. The friends of Lord Wolseley were in hopes that when he took the chief command of the Army he would make a clean sweep of abuses of this kind, but, like many others, this hope has not been fulfilled.

The present rule that a Militia candidate for the Army, if over twenty-two years of age, must have completed three annual trainings sometimes works very unfairly. For instance, a candidate twenty-one years of age goes up in September and is ploughed. In the ordinary course of things he could have another shot in March, but he happens to pass his twenty-second birthday in the interval, and, consequently, must go through a third training before he is eligible. He thus loses six months, just at the age when he can least afford it, and, as far as I can see, that must be the result of the rule in nine cases out of ten.

I have received the following letter from an officer to whom I wrote asking for his views on the question of Artillery organisation:—

> The War Office proposal is merely tentative, and I doubt whether Lord Wolseley, in whom, as you know, I have implicit confidence, will consent (when he has considered the question in all its bearings) to make the drastic change which has been urged upon him by a clique of dissatisfied artillery officers. The garrison artillery is doing very well, and is as efficient as it ought to be The danger is lest it should be made too comfortable, and draw away young men (tempted by the bait of high pay and soft billets) from learning their duties as soldiers in the field. We must remember that our real lines of defence are our ships, and the country is spending large sums of money every year to prevent any risk of these lines being broken through. At present artillery officers are taught their duties in the field, and are then sent to the forts for a period of time, but they are required to be ready to go back into the field should war break out. I do not think the Commander-in-Chief will change this system, and forego the advantage of keeping a reserve of officers always ready for reinforcing the field army. The men of the local volunteer artillery are now sufficiently trained to occupy the coast forts in case of war.

I am afraid my friend has greater confidence in Lord Wolseley than I have. I know nothing about his proposal to reorganise the Artillery, but, like all his proposals, I am pretty sure its ultimate result will be to increase the Estimates. Lord Wolseley must not, however, expect any blank cheque in this matter. There is quite enough spent on the Navy, without spending money at both ends —on ships that will have to do the work and on forts and garrisons which only exist to quiet "old women's fears."

---

HISTORY OF FEMININE COSTUME. Tracing its evolution from the earliest times to the present. 38 illustrations. Price 6d. Published by LIBERTY & Co., LTD., London and Paris. (To be obtained from principal Booksellers or Publishers direct.)

A Subaltern, R.A., writes as follows:—

In your last issue you made reference to the "portly warriors of the foot artillery." Let me assure you that this question of undue physical expansion is by no means confined to the rank and file. There are few officers in the garrison artillery, in and above the rank of major, who would not benefit by a course of anti-fat. It is not their fault, but misfortune—the distressing symptoms referred to being an inevitable outcome of the sedentary existence to which they are doomed. But worse even than this is that their minds also run to fat, insomuch, that to refer to them as "scientific officers" is merely to indirectly panegyrize adipose tissue at the expense of truth. Indeed, the only circumstance that prevents them becoming the veritable laughing-stock of both the Army at large and the fishing-smacks which occasionally pass their way is that, under the present organisation, they are periodically removed from their casemates—on trollies, or by means of other mechanical appliances, in the use of which they are popularly but fallaciously supposed to excel—and transferred bodily to the horse and field. There, under more active conditions, they are once again bumped into shape, and the moribund "military spirit" gains a fresh lease of life.

I have received several other letters on this weighty question, as well as on the attitude of Royal Artillery N.C.O.s towards the mooted reorganisation, but I am compelled to hold them over till a future issue.

I hear that the recent references in TRUTH to the practice of allowing corporals in the Army Pay Corps to wear stripes, and enjoy some of the privileges of sergeants, have been followed by a War Office circular directing attention to the Queen's regulations bearing on the point. I have not yet had an opportunity of seeing the text of the circular, but I trust that it will lead to some uniformity of practice, which seems to be the principal thing desired. I need hardly add that the appearance of the Army Pay Corps in the columns of TRUTH has brought down on me another budget of complaints about the slowness of promotion in this Corps, and it would be a good thing from every point of view if the War Office would devote a little attention to this subject also. There has recently been one promotion from the third to the second division, and this is actually the first since the formation of the Corps. There are several ways in which the block of promotion might be relieved, but I have not the space to go into them again now.

By the way, with regard to the question of the A.P.C. corporals, the following suggestion is made to me by one who has been through the mill. At present a corporal, after two years in the A.P.C., has his pay raised from 2s. to 2s. 6d. per diem. It is suggested that when a corporal becomes eligible for this increase of pay, he should be appointed provisionally as an unpaid lance-sergeant. As he cannot get his increase of pay without a special recommendation, it would follow from his getting the increase that he is a deserving man for promotion. As most of the corporals in the Army Pay Corps have previously served for several years in the same rank before they were transferred to the Corps, they seem to have a very good claim to some indulgence of this kind.

I have had to send a special copy of TRUTH to Letterkenny this week in consequence of last week's issue having been placed in the sergeants' mess of the Donegal Artillery with page 1149 removed. Any one may see by reference to page 1149 the probable reason for this mutilation. As I have said on previous occasions, this method of advertising an allusion to any particular military establishment in TRUTH is quite unobjectionable from my point of view; but what anybody else expects to gain by it I am at a loss to understand.

A very anomalous state of things exists at present in regard to the respective rates of promotion in the two branches of the A.S.C. So far as I understand it, there are a certain number of sergeant-majors in the Transport branch who are unqualified for further promotion, and who are allowed to block the promotion of all the men below them in the Transport branch, all vacancies for first-class sergeant-majors and commissions being filled up by men from the Supply branch. At the present time there are men in the Transport branch duly qualified in every respect for promotion, who have held the rank of company sergeant-major for six or seven years, while cases have recently occurred in the Supply branch of men being promoted from sergeants to warrant rank within three months. The average service of warrant officers in each branch at present is about eleven years in the Supply branch and sixteen in the Transport. These figures sufficiently show the reality of the grievance, and it is one which could be very easily remedied.

From all parts of the country complaints reach me about the change that has been introduced among the sapper farriers in the Royal Engineers, who are, I understand, all to become in future mounted men, which only a few of them have been up to the present time. What may be the precise nature of the arrangement proposed to the hitherto dismounted men, I am not sure that I clearly understand; the accounts, for instance, sent to me from Aldershot and the Curragh differing very materially. But one thing is clear, that while the men who are offered the chance of becoming mounted farriers are given something which looks like an increase of pay, the net result is that they will in many cases be worse off than at present. For instance, every unmounted farrier at present receives in pay of rank 2s. 1d., and in engineer pay 1s. 8d. per day, total 3s. 9d., and it is proposed to convert such men into farrier corporals at 2s. 4d. per day all told. Again, as corporals, the men will have increased messing expenses to meet, and one man at the Curragh calculates that whereas he is now drawing, as a sapper farrier, 14s. 1½d. per week, as a corporal under the new arrangement he will only get about 11s. net. As an alternative to accepting this arrangement, the present company farriers have been told that they will have to leave the farriers' shop and return to duty, forfeiting all the chances of promotion which they have gained up to the present time. It seems, therefore, that the new scheme is practically equivalent to an enforced reduction of pay all round. What excuse can be offered for this proceeding?

Intending purchasers of American Organs should inspect the new models which Messrs. METZLER & Co., Great Marlborough-street, have just received from the factory of Mason & Hamlin.

WINTER SEASON, 1896.—How can last year's Sealskin Jacket be made to do duty as a fashionable garment for the present season? Take it to the International Fur Store, either 163 or 198, Regent-street, where special attention is given to remodelling these most useful garments. Perfect fit, great attention, and moderate charges may be relied upon. The only addresses of the International Fur Store (Jay's, Ltd.) are 163 and 198, Regent-street, London, W.

The shifting of the quarters of the Military Knights of Windsor every time the quarters of a Knight on the Upper Foundation fall vacant is an unnecessary and costly proceeding, which might be abandoned with advantage to all parties. At the present moment an officer who was appointed to the Lower Foundation five months ago has not yet come into possession of his quarters, and is not likely to do so until after Christmas, owing to the promoted Knight whom he will replace being kept out of his new quarters by the painters and decorators; while, as soon as this last Knight has removed, the quarters he vacates will have to be overhauled in their turn before the new Knight can enter them. The changing of quarters is an expense to the Knights themselves, and throws on the Office of Works the necessity for doing up the rooms twice where once should be sufficient; and there is nothing gained by it, for the Lower Foundation quarters are in point of accommodation decidedly superior to those of the Upper Foundation.

Here is another little light on the question of officers' servants in the Army. It has reference to the great difficulty which such men find in the way of improving their position. I am told that it is no infrequent thing when an officer's servant has been recommended to the Colonel for promotion to lance-corporal, for the C.O. to consult the master in the first instance, and to be guided by his wishes in the matter. Officers naturally object to part with a good servant, and it consequently follows that the better servant a man is, the less chance he has of rising in rank. My informant states that, in his experience, he has known more than one instance of an officer's servant, who has been thus done out of a chance of promotion, deliberately committing some offence for the purpose of getting returned to duty, and thereby so blackening his own character that his last state is worse than his first. I can hardly believe that the majority of officers would stand in the way of their servants' advancement; but this is a world in which many people consider themselves before their fellow-creatures, and I do not think it ought to be in the power of any officer to virtually veto his servant's promotion from personal motives.

Great inconvenience is, I hear, being caused by the delay in issuing the new Infantry Drill Book. In the case of young officers at the schools of instruction the consequences are something more than inconvenient, for they are practically expected to make bricks without straw; and I believe several cases have occurred in which men have been unable until the last minute to get hold of the text-book in which they were expected to pass, and have failed in their examination in consequence. Some few copies of the book have been in the possession of C.O.'s and others for some time past, and there is no reason why the book should not have been issued long ago. Is it the War Office or the Stationery Office that is to blame?

As I have more than once had occasion to say before, I do not sympathise very deeply with many of the complaints of soldiers against the new route marching regulations. Soldiers have got to learn how to march, whether they like it or not, and the efforts he has made to improve the marching in the Army are among the best things Lord Wolseley has done since he came into office. But here and there it seems to me that the thing is overdone. I have been studying the regulations just issued in the 2nd Battalion of the Buffs for the season 1896. From this it appears that extra marching practice is to be given once a week to all who suffer from sore feet, all who feel tired and fall out, and all who are recommended for extra practice by their company officers. Extra marching is hardly likely to cure sore feet, or to prevent a man from being so done-up that he has to fall out. And allowing a company officer to recommend a man for extra marching every week is practically giving him a very simple and convenient way of inflicting a punishment for any reason which seems good to him.

Again, on the occasion of a route march by the 1st Suffolk last week, the canteen followed the battalion with a load of beer and mineral water for the sergeants, but nothing at all for the men, who had to stand and look on while their betters refreshed themselves. It is a common practice, I believe, for a cart to follow with eatables and drinkables for the whole of the rank and file, and I think few will question that if any one on the march is allowed refreshment, all should be. A distinction of the above kind is not likely to make the men take more kindly to their marching.

I pillory below a few more minor military grievances. The attention of the authorities is specially requested to the question of the clothing of one squadron of the King's Dragoon Guards. This is the old story of men having to bear the cost of special damage to their clothing incurred during the manœuvres. It was suggested in last week's TRUTH that soldiers should be provided with some special dress when engaged on exceptionally dirty fatigue work, and on the same principle it seems at least desirable that, when turning out for manœuvres, they should wear their very oldest clothing. In the present instance, I understand that the King's Dragoon Guards started for Canterbury in their best serges, which were practically ruined in a heavy fall of rain during the second day the regiment was on the road, the men having been allowed to get wet through before they were ordered to put on their cloaks. At any rate, there is no reason why one batch of men should be treated differently from all the others in the regiment:—

SPA WINTER SEASON.—Balmy climate. Only 12 hrs. from London. Cercle des Etrangers, with every Monte Carlo attraction, always open. Hotel tariff from 10fr. per diem. Address, Jules Crehay, Sec.

King's Dragoon Guards, Colchester.—Since their return from the late manœuvres at Canterbury, a large number of men belonging to the A Squadron in this regiment have been put down for new serges, costing 11s. 6d. each, to replace those which they had worn out during the manœuvres. They had gone to the manœuvres in their best serges, and several men had drawn new ones, to which they were entitled, for this purpose. The clothing of the whole regiment seems to be very much in the same condition, but only one officer commanding a squadron has thought it necessary to have his men's clothing renewed.

1st Suffolk Regiment, Aldershot.—In one of the companies in this regiment there is a good deal of growling over the delay on certain recent occasions in paying the men. A week or two back the company had been ten days without pay, although the money had been drawn in good time from the safe in the guard-room. The delay is attributed to the fact that the officer responsible generally has an athletic engagement at the time he ought to be paying the men. Far be it from me to discourage athletics, but duty should come before pleasure.

2nd Duke of Cornwall's Light Infantry.—In order to keep up a string band in this battalion, £2 out of the £5 paid for each performance goes to the band fund, which has benefited in this way to the extent of £104 during the last year. Another pound out of each £5 goes to the bandmaster, and the balance to the men, the result being that each first-class performer has received £3. 8s. 7½d. for fifty-two performances, while the bandmaster gets £52. Whether it is desirable or not that a string band should be maintained, it certainly ought not to be maintained at the expense of the other bandsmen.

Fort Napier, Pietermaritzburg.—Complaints are made about the way some of the patients have recently been treated in hospital at this station by the orderlies, or one particular orderly, of the M.S.C. on night duty. In the early part of September a patient died from dysentery, and it is alleged that he had not been attended to between 2 a.m. and 5.30 a.m., when he was found to be dead. Other allegations are also made respecting the treatment of this particular patient, and it might be well if the authorities were to make full inquiries among the men who were in hospital at the time.

I am compelled to repeat, specially for the benefit of my military correspondents, that it is useless to send anonymous communications to TRUTH Office. A good many letters have reached me during the last fortnight which relate to matters deserving of notice, and which might just as well have been authenticated by the names and addresses of the writers; but unless these are given I absolutely decline to make any inquiries into the matters referred to, or to take any notice of the communications. Let me also take this opportunity of again impressing upon my correspondents, especially those in the Army, the desirability of curtailing the length of their communications. I have dozens of documents on hand now which I fear it will be impossible for me to wade through this side of Christmas. As I have explained before, the shortest letters always receive the first attention.

By one of those accidents which will occur even in the best regulated newspaper offices, it was stated in last week's TRUTH that there had been no meeting of the sergeants' mess of the 2nd Battalion Cheshire Regiment for several months. This was an entire mistake, arising from the misunderstanding of a communication from a military correspondent. The irregularity in question occurred elsewhere—it is not necessary now to say where—and had no reference to the 2nd Cheshire.

The English engineers and crew of a ship which sailed from Greenock a year or two back under the Turkish flag, lately had an experience which should be a warning to Englishmen how they take service with the Unspeakable Turk. The ship sailed in the first instance for Jedda. She coaled at Port Said, where the firemen were all paid off and dismissed, for having insisted on their wages being paid up to date before touching the coal. Having filled up her bunkers, the ship proceeded on her voyage without paying the bill, but she came to grief somewhere in the Red Sea, and had to return to Suez to be docked and repaired. On the completion of the repairs, the ship was served with a writ for the coals taken on board at Port Said, and writs were subsequently issued on behalf of the ship's chandler, the firm who executed the repairs, and the crew. She was then "cried" at the mixed tribunals, and as the owners did not appear, she was eventually sold to a Constantinople firm. The money is now in court, and, considering the extent of the claims, there is very little probability that the humbler claimants will get anything substantial out. Neither engineers nor crew have received any wages since the end of 1894, and the chief engineer, who remained on board till August, 1895, has about £200 due to him. I do not know what the law as to the rights of the officers and crew of a ship may be in foreign countries, but it ought to be a clearly recognised rule that they have the first claim upon a ship, and English engineers and seamen ought to be warned against taking service without some security of this kind.

The return presented by the Admiralty shows that our Navy is superior to those of any two other Great Powers, and that our present rate of building as against theirs will maintain this superiority. This, as I had understood it, was the aim of our naval enthusiasts. Not by any means. They now contend that this superiority ought to be crushing, and consequently demand that we should increase the number of ships to be built. I wonder that they do not realise the self-evident fact that, if we do this, so will other countries, and that, consequently, relative strength will remain the same. What I gather our naval enthusiasts want is that we should have such a naval force that, in the event of our finding ourselves at war with any two Powers, we shall be able to sweep their navies from the ocean, either by sinking them, or by shutting them up in ports, and then that our commerce shall pursue its avocations on the high seas as though there were no war. I question whether the absolute certainty of this would be desirable, for a certain risk in the result of a war has a very calming effect on our "splendid isolation" dolts. But certain I am that, when the whole thing resolves itself into a question of cash, foreign Powers will also spend cash to prevent their commerce, their colonies, and their ports being at our absolute mercy whenever it may seem good to us to go to war. What has always struck me as the culminating absurdity of this scheme, however, is, that it is dependent for its success on our only being at war with two Great Powers. Supposing that success solely depends upon strength of naval armaments, and we were at war with France and Russia, Germany would be the master of our destinies; for by throwing its fleet into the balance on either side it would ensure to that side the victory.

WATER SUPPLY FOR MANSIONS, &c.—Artesian Bored and Driven Tube Wells, Wind Engines for pumping, &c.—State your requirements to ALFRED WILLIAMS & Co., 39, Gt. Eastern-st., London, E.C.

It does not take much to hurt the dignity of our Orientalised Anglo-Indian officials. At a place called Ajmere, in Rajputana, a party of gentlemen, accompanied by a lady, entered the Railway Church, and, coming in late for the service, went up to the front pew before they could find a vacant seat. This turned out to be the seat regarded by the Commissioner, a gallant Colonel, as his own private preserve. His Highness, coming in a little later, had to take another seat. One of the intruders was a local police official. He was subsequently ordered to attend before the Commissioner in uniform, and was rebuked for his presumption in taking the Commissioner's seat, and in addition to this the parson received a hint that he should rebuke the other offenders. The parson's reply put rather a different complexion on the outrage, for it was to the effect that the Commissioner had no absolute right to the seat in question, his predecessor in office having expressly refused to have a seat reserved for him in a free church The parson might appropriately have pointed his answer with a reference to the scriptural condemnation of those who insist on having the chief seats in the synagogues.

The Secretary of State for India has entered into an arrangement with Messrs. Carter, Beal, & Co., the well-known firm of seedsmen, to forward to India about £10,000 worth of root vegetable seeds, in order to avert the coming famine. These seeds are already on their way to India, and they will arrive just in time for sowing. I trust that there will be no hitch in their immediate distribution.

An official, kindly enlightening me as to the reason why only personalty, and not realty, is mentioned in the published statements of the amount at which wills are proved, tells me that it is because the Probate Registries have only to deal with personalty, and that they merely collect the duty on realty for the Commissioners of Inland Revenue. These facts I understood before, but they do not to my mind amount to a reason. Duty is now paid on the whole estate, and if one portion of the amount on which duty is paid is made public, all should be.

At Cardiff Post-office a scheme is on foot for the establishment of a Telegraph Messengers' Institute, where the youths employed as messengers will be provided with means of wholesome recreation. This is in itself a very laudable project, but it will be a pity if it is allowed to absorb all the reforming zeal of the Postmaster. A cursory examination of the room allotted for the use of the postal and sorting clerks as their combined kitchen, retiring, and dining room ought to convince him that something also needs to be done on their behalf. The room in question is a basement cellar, with a window opening on to a walled-in yard containing the sanitary conveniences of the establishment; and improved accommodation would be greatly appreciated by the staff, who have to eat their meals in this den.

What I said last week respecting the circulation of obscene literature among undergraduates at Cambridge applies equally to Oxford, save only that it is a different member of the quack fraternity who is chiefly devoting his attention to the sister University. These two pernicious rascals appear to have divided the two ancient seats of learning between them, and they are both alike in paying their attentions specially to freshmen, being presumably supplied with lists for that purpose. The solicitude of the Universities for the morals of their alumni is well-known, and I would suggest that this is a matter deserving the attention of the Proctors. Were a joint deputation of the Proctors of Oxford and Cambridge to address the Postmaster-General on the subject, I do not see how he could refuse to take the steps necessary for suppressing all such abuses of the Post Office.

The Lord Mayoralty is a survival, and by no means a survival of the fittest. His mission is to give dinners, and he is generally rewarded with a Baronetcy. Why he should go fooling about in the Law Courts on the day of his inauguration few know and none care. But if the procession is to continue, it ought to be a good deal less theatrical, and less devoted to a warlike demonstration, than was the case yesterday. The cars representing past triumphs of our arms over Europe and present triumphs over African savages are entirely out of place in a civic march, besides being in themselves supremely ludicrous. I have seen many of these civic processions in Germany. It never occurred to any one to appeal through them to martial enthusiasts. Each trade had its car; war shone by its absence.

With reference to a recent paragraph concerning the Mayoralty of Warwick, I have received a letter denying that it was with any political motive that Lord Warwick was requested to accept the office for a third year. According to the writer's account, the action taken was "purely personal," and the Liberal member whose claims have been passed over is indebted for the slight rather to a cabal among his own political associates in the Council than to any hostility on the part of his political opponents. If this version of the affair is correct, some of the Liberal members of the Council have treated their colleague in a very shabby and discreditable manner.

The election of Mr. G. H. Long as Mayor of Windsor on Monday was the outcome of a most contemptible piece of party manœuvring among the Tory members of the Corporation. There was, on the face of it, something strange about the appointment of a gentleman who was not a member of the Council, and who only recently resigned the Town Clerkship on the ground of age and infirmity, seeing that in view of the celebrations of the Queen's record reign the Mayor's duties during the ensuing year are likely to be more than usually onerous, and seeing, too, that for something like four centuries the Windsor Corporation have never gone outside their own body for a chief magistrate, the explanation of this departure from established custom is that the Tories were determined by hook or crook to keep out of the chair Mr. J. T. Soundy, the Councillor who was next in order of seniority for the office, and who happens to be an active leader of the Liberal party in the borough. This object has been attained by pressing Mr. Long into the position; but not without causing a strong outburst of indignation, which found expression at a crowded meeting of the burgesses last week.

THE LONDON HOSPITAL, E., APPEALS FOR SUBSCRIPTIONS. This Hospital for Men, Women, and Children, is the great General Hospital for the toiling poor of East London, & help is sorely needed

I trust that the question whether building and other operations are more cheaply done by a Board of Works, representing those who provide the money, or by a contractor, all wages paid being Trade Union wages, will be carefully threshed out by the London County Council, and that all data to elucidate the issue will be forthcoming. No particular principle is involved in it: it is one of figures, and whichever is the cheaper is the better for the ratepayer without being worse for the worker. As I understand it, the complaint of some of the members of the Council against the Works Committee is this. An estimate is made by the Committee in regard to the cost of any public work that is to be executed. Estimates are then obtained from contractors. Thus, what it would respectively cost to execute the work by the Committee or by a contractor can be judged. Now, when a builder tenders for a contract, he naturally sends in a low price, so as to cut out competitors. If the contract is not altered in course of construction, he generally makes nothing by it. His hope, therefore, is that it will be altered. It is asserted, I know not with what truth, that in some of the larger works undertaken by the Committee, alterations were made which reduced their cost, whilst smaller works were not altered. The latter cost more than the estimate, and this loss was made up by the reduction of estimated cost on the larger undertakings, this reduction being the result of reduction of building material, labour, &c., employed in these constructions. Whether this be so or not I do not know, but it certainly is capable of proof one way or the other.

Another complaint is that, on the total expenditure of cost, there is no deduction for depreciation of plant or for general office expenditure. Again, I say that I do not know whether these statements are correct. But if these depreciations and expenditure are not charged they certainly ought to be. As regards the former, any builder who keeps his accounts accurately, enters against himself, in his yearly balance sheet, an item varying from 10 to 15 per cent. on value of plant, and this represents what he considers to be the depreciation during the year.

When the German Emperor visited Aldershot in August, 1893, a sum of £39 was expended by the Local Board on flags and decorations. The item was surcharged by the auditor, who refused to allow such expenditure out of the rates. An active correspondence has since been proceeding on the subject, with the result that at last week's meeting it was announced that the Local Government Board have decided to allow the amount. It would be interesting to learn upon what principle the Whitehall authorities have acted in coming to this decision, which certainly will not meet with the approval of a great majority of the ratepayers.

A growl reaches me from a resident of Eastbourne in reference to the decision of the Town Council to continue the licensing of a slaughterhouse in Bourne-street, which is situated in a crowded neighbourhood, next to some parochial schools, and which has been condemned over and over again by the Medical Officers of Health. There was some proposal at first for the purchase of the land by the Corporation, with a view to closing the slaughterhouse, but the majority of the members seem to have regarded the amount asked for compensation as excessive, and so the licence is to be renewed. Why the Municipal authorities should be called upon to pay compensation for the removal of an undoubted public nuisance I fail to see; and it would be interesting to know what is the exact legal position of the Council in the matter, especially if it be true, as stated, that they have once refused to license the slaughterhouse referred to on account of its unsanitary condition. However this may be, there can be no question that, in a town like Eastbourne, a public abattoir should be established and all private slaughterhouses done away with.

Next Saturday will see the re-introduction of the motor car into this country. Sixty years ago—perhaps on the theory of the survival of the fittest—it failed to commend itself as a necessity to our forefathers; it will be interesting, therefore, to note whether, by the aid of increased scientific knowledge, it will command to-day the success denied to it earlier in the century. In celebration of the new Act, the Motor Car Club has arranged a trip from London to Brighton, at which between fifty and sixty of these horseless vehicles will be paraded. The start is to be from the Hôtel Métropole on Saturday next, at 10.30 a.m., the procession proceeding at a slow pace across Westminster Bridge to Brixton, from which point each will take its own route to the first halting-place, Reigate. After lunch the journey to Brighton will be resumed, and a public dinner is to be given at the Hôtel Métropole there at half-past seven the same evening.

An English resident in Geneva pulls me up for having said that in winter there is no sleeping-car on the Paris-Geneva route, and that passengers are changed about from carriage to carriage en route. "It is true," he says, "that there is no sleeping-car, but there are through first and second class carriages to Geneva by the train leaving the Gare de Lyon at 9.10 p.m." He is right. And I also was right, for I was speaking of the journey to Lausanne, not merely to Geneva.

Apropos of the tipping question, one of my readers informs me that at two large hotels in Berlin tipping is absolutely forbidden. Printed notices to this effect are hung in all rooms, and in place of tips to the servants a charge is made in the bill, varying from 5 to 12 per cent.,

according to the amount. My informant states that the system has given perfect satisfaction to the servants, and I suppose that it may be taken for granted that it gives satisfaction to the guests. The experiment might be worth trying in other hostelries.

I am told by a spectator that the Clerkenwell Sessions Court, when Mr. and Mrs. Castle were being tried, was crowded with wealthy American and Hebrew sympathisers. When the magistrates retired to consider the sentence, a few were for a heavier one than that inflicted, and a few for letting the lady off. Had she been, however, let off on the ground of mental infirmity, she would have been no gainer, for she would have been sent to a criminal lunatic asylum, as this since 1883 is the law. The sentence seems to me to have been a light one, considering the circumstances. Her room was, it was stated, so full of stolen articles that it looked like a museum. Medical specialists were called to show that she was suffering from what they termed "a peculiar disease," sometimes taking the form of kleptomania. I am no believer in this disease, for it only seems to attack rich persons, but, if it really does exist, I am sure that the punishment of every person caught stealing whilst suffering from it will have a very deterring effect upon its spreading. "Thank God," observed some wealthy person, "that we live in a country where there is one law for the rich and another for the poor, notwithstanding the attempts of those accursed Radicals to alter so proper a state of things." I wonder what would be said if we were to read in a newspaper that William Sikes had pleaded guilty to various burglaries accompanied with violence, and that, medical witnesses having stated that he was suffering from a peculiar disease sometimes taking the form of knocking persons on the head in dark corners and rifling their pockets, he had been sentenced to three months' imprisonment without hard labour, the learned Judge observing that, "the consequence of the sentence would be well weighed elsewhere, and that any danger to the life or intellect of the interesting invalid would be immediately attended to."

What is it that leads to a person having very hazy notions between meum and tuum? It is a desire to become possessed of something of value without giving an equivalent for it. An infant stretches out its hand to grasp everything that catches its fancy, and having laid hold of it, howls if it be taken away. The idea of the individuality of property is not innate in human beings. It is acquired, in part by the notion which is inculcated that it is wrong and discreditable to steal, in part because a punishment is affixed to stealing. Sometimes the desire of acquisition outweighs all else; sometimes that desire is subordinated either to respect for the moral law, or to the fear of consequences. But there is no greater mistake than to suppose that rich men do not steal. The records of trials show that often a man, who is so wealthy that he does not know how to spend the money that he has, tricks and cheats and lies, in order to get more. So, also, it is with women. All large retail establishments, such as Stores, lose a considerable percentage by the pilfering habits of the well-dressed women who frequent them. In one sense, all crime is a disease, for it denotes a want of balance in the brain; but to say that any one who allows this want of balance to impel him to lay hands on other people's property ought not to be punished, is to say that all law-breakers ought to be sent to lunatic asylums instead of prisons. Equally absurd is it to insist that, if those who steal because they are in want ought to be sent to prison, those who without being in want steal, ought, if convicted, to get off scot free.

Mrs. Castle has got off cheaply. When we are told that imprisonment for three months, without hard labour, will affect her health, this seems improbable, for I gather that she has been travelling about Europe, and, except in the matter of stealing, her health was that of any one else. Probably regret for what she has done, or from what has come of her doing it, will weigh on her spirits; but this is precisely the state of mind that imprisonment is intended to produce in a prisoner, and if this regret really causes her to be ill, she will be transferred to the prison hospital, where she will be cared for. I believe she is already there.

All connected with this Castle case is remarkable. The Castles, husband and wife, came over to Europe with a son and a letter of credit of—I believe—£800. Many of the objects found in Mr Castle's trunks had been stolen at Vienna. How in the world were the Custom Houses passed on their journey to England? One would have thought that the officers would have been surprised to find a large number of opera glasses and fans. On arriving in England the family, husband, wife, and son, occupied one room at the Hotel Cecil. Here again one would have supposed that the husband would have been surprised at a collection of goods, which are stated in the trial to have converted the place into a museum, appearing in this room, and at the additions which were frequently made to the collection. The child, it would seem, generally accompanied his mother when urged by her "peculiar disease" to betake herself to a shop in order to pilfer. This child saw nothing.

But an even more remarkable case was tried last week. A lady had been at a hotel, and when she was going away the chambermaid missed some plated candlesticks. On lifting a trunk belonging to the lady she heard a curious jingle. Suspecting this to be caused by the candlesticks, she informed the manager, and the trunk was searched. Inside were the candlesticks. The defence was that the lady was the lady of a manor, the patroness of a living, and the tenant of a flat in London which was lighted with electricity; and these facts convinced the jury of her innocence. I make no doubt that the finding of the jury was right. But as candlesticks do not usually betake themselves of their own accord into a trunk, it is interesting to speculate how they got there in this instance. It does not seem to be suggested that any servant at the hotel was suffering from any "peculiar malady" which obliges its victims to hide candlesticks in the trunks of departing guests. I have therefore come to the conclusion that it must have been a ghost or a spook, or whatever the visitants from another world are called, that are so lively at spiritualistic séances and such-like occult gatherings. It is true that I had not until now believed in these visitors. But, like every other person of sense, I am always open to be convinced by evidence, and what other possible hypothesis is there to account for the transference of the candlesticks to the trunk? I feel, however, that society owes a debt of gratitude to this spirit for having rendered it impossible that any living creature should be punished for the freak of a ghost. The spirit might have put the money of the guest into the pocket of the chambermaid. If it had been found there, the unfortunate and innocent girl would have been sent to prison. Instead of this, it put the candlesticks in the trunk of a lady of a manor, the patroness of a living, and the tenant of a flat lighted with electricity. It knew that no jury would suppose it possible that she could have stolen the candlesticks. Therefore there was no risk of an innocent human creature being punished for the foolish joke of a freakish ghost. And things turned out as the ghost anticipated.

HEWETSONS, TOTTENHAM COURT-ROAD, LONDON, send their Illustrated Catalogue POST FREE, and it is acknowledged to be the best Furnishing Guide extant.

On the day following Mrs. Castle's sentence, Alped Parhams, 54, needlewoman, and Henrietta Stewart, a governess, were convicted at the Clerkenwell Sessions of stealing a fur necklet hanging outside a shop. There seems to have been no previous conviction against these poor women. The former was sentenced to nine months' hard labour, the latter to six months'. When the governess heard her sentence she fainted. No medical experts testified to these women being kleptomaniacs; no suggestion was made by eminent counsel that they would suffer in health by being confined in a prison; the wealthy did not sympathetically crowd the Court to testify their regard for them. The needlewoman and the governess probably had been engaged in a long and bitter struggle to keep life within them for many a day. In a fit of desperation they may have laid hold of the wretched fur necklet to exchange it for food. No one pitied them. No one has signed a petition to the Home Secretary to shorten their sentences. Their trial and their conviction were hardly noticed in the newspapers. What matters it how a poor fainting, friendless governess, or a half-starved needlewoman suffers? Give them hard labour, Mr. Judge, and plenty of it. Impudent hussies! not to know that they ought to obey the moral law not to steal, rather than the natural law not to starve. What if their health is injured by prison discipline? Let them die! In so well ordered a country as ours there is no place for them. Let Mrs. Castle out of prison, Sir Mathew White Ridley. She moved in "the best circles;" she had no need to steal. But do not reduce the sentence on the needlewoman and the governess by a single day. The "best circles" know them not. They were poor and helpless, which, in the opinion of all self-respecting persons, are themselves crimes.

The New Silk Waistcoatings for Gentlemen's Evening Dress and Morning Wear can now be seen at Ulster House, Conduit-street, W.

The kleptomania nonsense is on a par with a story told by M. Rochefort in his Memoirs:—

> I was accosted one day in Oxford-street by a venerable, long-bearded compatriot, who confided to me his distress. He had just arrived in London, he said, after having escaped from France, where he had been condemned as an Anarchist, and he was without funds.
>
> "Ah!" I replied, "for some article in a newspaper, or for a speech at a public meeting?"
>
> "No," he answered; "because I had effected a social reclamation on a watch."
>
> He had kept the watch, so that society had not profited by this social reclamation.

In these Memoirs there is much interesting information about that political refugee, Cornelius Herz, who was so long dying of anxiety because he could not be moved from Bournemouth to London to meet a demand for his extradition by the French Government, owing to a complication of diseases which only rendered it a question of days when he would, by a higher Power, be extradited from this planet. According to M. Rochefort, Herz had been the associate of several of the political personages concerned with the Panama swindle; and he had used this position to blackmail them, until one of them, in despair, had committed suicide. When in London, he had managed to make the acquaintance of Rochefort, who was then denouncing the Panamaists, and had told him that a concession for a tunnel under the Channel was about to be granted, which would be worth untold money. He offered to give him a share in this, and to repurchase it at once of him for £12,000, provided that he suspended these attacks. Subsequently, when at Bournemouth "dying," Herz sent his daughter's governess to Rochefort to offer, if he would visit him at Bournemouth to put in his possession two trunks containing all the secret documents connected with the Panama scandal. "All that came," says M. Rochefort, "of these communications was the conviction that Herz was shamming illness, and my diagnosis proved correct, for no sooner did the English tribunals decide that he did not come under the extradition law, than the dying man cheerfully embarked for the United States, having, with all the patience of a Jew, played for a year a comedy of dying."

The clamour that was raised in some of the English newspapers on behalf of Herz is only one more proof that when men have plenty of money, especially if they are Jews—a nationality very fully represented in the Press—a "sympathy boom" is generally worked for them, no matter what they may have done. It is really becoming more difficult for a camel to go through the eye of a needle than for a rich Jew to enter a prison. I am curious to know the present condition of Herz' health in his American retreat. We had many eminent physicians making affidavits that he could not be moved from Bournemouth, and that even the possibility of his having eventually, if cured, to have his case judicially inquired into was so agonising, that this was accelerating his progress to the grave which was yawning for him. What do these eminent experts say now?

The following letter has been sent to me with reference to a question asked in last week's TRUTH, and I think it better to let the learned writer expound his opinions in his own words. I hope that what he says will be a warning to those J.P.s who were reported to me last week as having been regularly in the habit of taking fees for witnessing signatures to documents. On principle I should think there can be no question that the views expressed below are correct. A Justice of the Peace is an honorary official, and has no more right to be paid for one part of his duty than another :—

4, Paper-buildings, Temple.
November 5, 1896.

The Editor TRUTH.

MAGISTRATES AND THEIR FEES.

SIR,—Referring to and commenting on a paragraph in this week's issue of TRUTH, in which (on the authority of a Justice of the Peace of long standing) it is stated to be a not unusual circumstance for justices to demand a fee of one shilling for witnessing signatures to documents, the signing of which, in order to be valid, requires to be certified by them;

After careful research I am of opinion that such a practice is in no instance based upon law, nor has it any implied legal sanction, and must therefore be considered as a system of exaction not only unauthorised by any special enactment, but contrary to the whole spirit of the legislation which treats of the appointment and jurisdiction of Justices of the Peace.

By various Acts of Parliament magistrates are authorised to regulate scales of fees, but these are invariably to be paid to their clerk, and when collected they have no individual interest in them.—Yours faithfully, WYATT PAIN.

County Court Judges have been frequently accused in these columns of abusing their power of committing for debt by making committal orders on insufficient evidence of means, whereby the process of the Court is converted into a means of squeezing the debtor's friends, by leaving them to choose between paying his debts or letting him go to prison. The County Court Judge at Ramsgate has been in times past, I am told, a conspicuous offender in this respect, at any rate where people of humble station and limited means have been concerned. His Honour, however, has now suddenly developed a surprising affection for the strict letter and spirit of the law.

One Captain William Crawshay has just been sued in his Honour's court for a little matter of £35. 18s., owing by him to an unfortunate woman who keeps lodgings at Ramsgate, for the board and lodging of himself and wife and baby, from January to March last, and for the keep of the baby during a further period of two months, during which the child was left with the plaintiff after the parents' departure. The lodging-house keeper had trusted the Captain to this extent on the representations of the gallant officer and his wife that he was one of a family of millionaire coal-owners in South Wales, which, in point of fact, he is. There was no defence to the action, and on Wednesday last Captain Crawshay appeared in answer to a judgment summons. He is described as a fashionably-dressed young man, distinguished by an extremely high shirt-collar, a beautifully-dressed moustache, and an eye-glass. Questioned as to his means, he admitted that he had settled a reversion of £2,700 upon his wife, and that he was the only son of a lady with an income approaching £1,000 a year; but he also stated that he (like his father) had never followed any occupation, and that at the present moment he had no means whatever. Upon this, the judge refused to make any order, and, technically, I suppose he was right. But his decision is quite inconsistent with those he has repeatedly given in the case of humble individuals who are not members of millionaire families, and who are unable to appear in court in fashionably-cut garments and high shirt-collars. Unless, therefore, his Honour is about to alter his general practice, the conclusion will certainly be that the distinction which our law draws between the rich and the poor extends even to insolvent judgment debtors.

By the way, it would be interesting to know where this destitute officer, who has been living for two or three months at the expense of a poor seaside lodging-house keeper, obtained the means of appearing in court in his fashionable clothes and his conspicuous shirt collar. Assuming that some friend, other than a confiding tradesman, has supplied him with these luxuries, I would suggest to this friend that the generosity would have been better exercised in paying the Captain's debt to his landlady. Justice and generosity might thus have been combined. The party who supplies an absolutely impecunious individual with fine clothes, is in a measure responsible for the credit which his imposing appearance enables him to obtain.

All the tricks and abuses that I have heard of in connection with Service examinations are put into the shade by an audacious fraud which was brought to light at Dublin a few days back. An examination was being held for the post of Head Constable in the Royal Irish Constabulary, and a candidate who answered to the name of Sergeant Patrick Lennon aroused the curiosity and envy of the other competitors; first by his extremely youthful appearance for a man in the rank of sergeant, and then by the remarkable facility with which he got through his work. It was not, however, until it was noticed that this individual had toe-caps to his boots that he was really suspected of being an impostor. The rest of his get-up was perfect, his uniform fitting him without a flaw; but toe-caps, it seems, are a form of foot-gear entirely inconsistent with constabulary custom, and when they were spotted inquiries were made, which revealed the fact that the wearer was not the sergeant whom he had for three days represented himself to be. He turned out to be a young man named Conway, and he is said to have admitted that he had several times personated policemen at examinations before, and that he had likewise "performed a similar duty for gentlemen competing for the Customs, Excise, banks, and local breweries." Conway has been fined £5 for personation, and after this exposure the examining authorities for the Customs, Excise, and Constabulary may, I suppose, be trusted to see that he gets no further chance of exercising his abilities in this direction. The strange thing is that they should have hitherto apparently made the way easy for such a deception by requiring no proof of a candidate's identity beyond his own statement when asked his name in the examination room.

SCOTT ADIE, 115, Regent-st., London, for Shooting Suits, Golf Suits, Travelling Coats, Inverness Capes, Carriage Rugs, Shawls, Mauds, hand-knit Hose, Scotch Cheviots, and Harris Homespuns.

In the following instalment of my Legal Pillory the magisterial attitude towards offenders against property and offenders against the person respectively is strikingly exemplified by the Chairman of the Liverpool County Quarter Sessions. "Determined to put down all ruffianism," he passes a sentence of four months' hard labour for a murderous and unprovoked assault. This is apparently considered very exemplary punishment for such a crime; but how far it falls short of what is constantly meted out for trumpery thefts is shown a little later in the same Court, when a woman receives nine months for purloining a pair of boots. Even if the woman had been previously convicted—a point on which the newspaper report is silent—a reversal of the sentences in these two cases would surely have better satisfied the requirements of justice. It is noteworthy, by the way, that while great weight is always attached to previous convictions for larceny, poaching, and vagrancy, those for acts of violence and cruelty are generally ignored, as they seem to have been in the following cases at Harrogate, Thirsk, and Bingley. I would also call special attention to the action of the Oldham Bench, who, after a temporary improvement, appear to have fallen back into their old practice of dealing summarily with cases of outrages on children which ought to be remitted for trial at Quarter Sessions or Assizes. To let off a vile scoundrel who commits such a crime with two months' imprisonment is a gross travesty of justice:—

Liverpool County Quarter Sessions. Before Sir William Forwood. James Carlon and Patrick Carney, convicted of wounding Thomas Cooper. Prisoners committed a savage and unprovoked assault on Cooper, Carney kicking him about the head, while Carlon bit him several times on the ear. He was picked up bleeding profusely, and had to be carried into a neighbouring house for the night. The Bench said they were determined to put down all ruffianism of this kind. Four months each.

Glasgow Central Police-court. Before Bailie Walter Wilson. Robert Lamb, a strongly-built man, charged with assaulting Helen Bryson. He bit her nose, causing it to bleed, and leaving the marks of his teeth, and then knocked her down and jumped on her. Fined £3. 3s.

Bingley Police-court. David Martin, charged with cruelty to a pony. He beat the animal unmercifully with the stock of a whip for a distance of about half a mile. Fourteen previous convictions, including one for cruelty. Fined 20s. and costs.

Harrogate Borough Police-court. Before Mr. I. Pickard and other magistrates. Thomas Wardman, cab proprietor, charged with cruelty to seven horses by starving them. The horses were left for days with scarcely any food, and were found in a stable in an emaciated condition, tearing down the manger and boarding, and gnawing the wood. Defendant had been twice previously convicted of cruelty. Fined £3 and costs.

Liverpool County Quarter Sessions. Before the same Bench. Annie Whittaker pleaded guilty to stealing two boots. Nine months.

Enoch Nyatt pleaded guilty to stealing a jacket and a shirt. Six months.

Glasgow Northern Police-court. Before Bailie Thomson. John Burns, charged with stealing a shirt from a clothes-line. Fourteen days.

Grimsby Police court. Before the Mayor and other magistrates. Christopher Steel, William Henry Jordan, and Arthur Dean, fishing apprentices, charged with neglecting to go to sea. Fourteen days each.

Barnsley Police-court. Before the Mayor (Alderman Woodcock) and other magistrates. Frederick Booth, charged with stealing a beer glass from a public-house. Fourteen days.

Exmouth Police-court. Before Mr. C. A. Langton. William Burns, charged with sleeping out. Seven days.

Thirsk Petty Sessions. Before Messrs. G. E. Lasselles, M. Cadle, E. R. Turton, J. T. Hansell, F. E. Walker, Major Mott, and Major Bell. Henry Nelson, senior, convicted of assaulting Charles Tetley. Without any provocation, defendant hit complainant on the face and brow with his fist, knocking him to the ground, where he kicked him. There were sixteen previous convictions against defendant for assaults and other offences. Fined 20s. and costs.

Derby Borough Police-court. Before Messrs. H. Boam, W. Heathcote, R. Russell, and S. Whitaker, Joseph Cresswell, senior, and Arthur Cresswell, charged with assaulting Leonard Kirkland. They knocked complainant about in a brutal fashion, rendering him unconscious for an hour. Joseph fined 40s., and Arthur 20s. and costs.

Handsworth Police-court. Before Messrs. G. Tangye, J. B. Clarke, and J. E. Clarke. Oliver Morris, convicted of assaulting Harry G. Jackson by striking him on the forehead with a loaded stick, inflicting a severe wound. The Bench characterised the assault as serious in the extreme. Fined £2. 12s., including costs.

Walsall Police-court. Before Messrs. J. Noake and G. Gill. William Hogan, convicted of assaulting Henry Parker. He seized complainant by the throat, which he violently compressed, and threw him down on a heap of bricks, where he was found some time after, unconscious and covered with blood and dirt. Fined 20s. and costs.

Oldham Police-court. Before Mr. A. Crompton and other magistrates. Charles Smith, an elderly man, charged with indecently assaulting a girl aged ten. The Chairman said prisoner's name had been mentioned in connection with similar cases, but the Bench would deal with it as a common assault. Two months.

North Riding Police-court, York. Before Messrs. James Melrose, R. Hill, S. Hornby, and W. A. Wood. John Bean and his sons, William and Arthur, charged under the Poaching Prevention Act with having in their possession a partridge and two nets. Nothing was found in the actual possession of the defendants, but it was alleged that one of them was seen carrying a bag which was afterwards discovered on the ground, and which contained a partridge and nets. John and William fined £3 each and costs; Arthur £2 and costs.

Mansfield Police-court. Before Alderman Blake, Messrs. R. M. Dodsley, W. W. Hall, C. Musters, R. Alcock, and Dr. Nesbitt. Isaac Chandler, charged under the Poaching Prevention Act with being found in possession of a net and a rabbit. Fined £2. 2s.

Hanley Police-court. Before Messrs. M. Huntbach and W. Brown. A. Hancock, charged with stealing an overcoat from a shop door. Six weeks.

Kinross Sheriff-court. Before Sheriff-Substitute Johnstone. Andrew Watt, convicted of trespassing in pursuit of game. Fined £2. 15s., including costs.

Newcastle-under-Lyme Police-court. Before Messrs. T. P. Heath, R. B. Mellard, and J. Hand. Martin Jordan, charged with stealing a pair of boots from a shop. Two months.

Hove Petty Sessions. Before Mr. F Barchard and other magistrates. Alice Bott, a girl of eighteen, charged with embezzling £3. 16s. 7d. belonging to a laundry company in whose employ she had been for two years. The prosecutors asked the Bench to deal as leniently as possible with her. Two months.

The Lord Chancellor is busily packing the borough magistracy in his old familiar style, occasionally throwing in a solitary Liberal with a big batch of Tories for the sake of appearances, but more often than not leaving his jobbery quite naked and unashamed. Worcester has been favoured with one of his more indecent exhibitions of partisanship, every one of the six individuals whose names have just been added to the Commission of the Peace for the City being a Conservative. To remonstrate once more with Lord Halsbury on this flagrant abuse of his authority as magistrate-maker would be a mere waste of words. I would, however, venture to suggest that he should make a few independent inquiries among well-known local members of his party before he adopts any list which may happen to be submitted by some wire-pulling clique. In connection with these appointments at Worcester he appears to have been betrayed into mistakes of omission and commission which a Conservative correspondent tells me have excited considerable wonder and soreness in Conservative circles in that city.

SAVOY HOTEL, Savoy Restaurant, London. Large reception-rooms for fashionable réunions. Orchestra plays daily during dinner and opera supper.

Does a dead pheasant really cease to be game in the view of the law in such circumstances as those related in the following case at the Hundred House Petty Sessions? A boy of fourteen was summoned for taking a cock pheasant without a game certificate. The defendant's father is the freeholder of some land adjoining a game-preservers' estate, and on this land a rabbit-trap was set. A game-keeper noticed a dead pheasant in the trap, and, after an hour's watching, saw the boy take the bird away. The solicitor for the defence contended that in these circumstances the dead bird belonged to the freeholder, that it was not game within the meaning of the section under which the proceedings were instituted, and that the boy could not therefore be convicted. It was asserted that the Judges had over and over again ruled that dead pheasants so taken were not game; but the magistrates were unconvinced by the authorities cited, and imposed a fine. The solicitor asked that a case should be stated, and the opinion of a Divisional Court on the subject would be of interest. It is a decidedly curious point.

The Recorder of Hastings gave an astounding exhibition of his quality as a judge at the last Quarter Sessions. Three boys were indicted for attempting to steal sweetmeats from an automatic machine, and the jury found them guilty, but recommended them to mercy, expressing the opinion that the machines were a great temptation to lads. In spite of this recommendation the Recorder sentenced each of the prisoners to one month's imprisonment, to be followed by five years in a reformatory. The Chief Constable had given one of the boys a bad character, but as to the other two nothing had been said; and, apparently, it was only after he had passed these monstrous sentences, and after the prosecuting Counsel had joined in an appeal to him to make some distinction between the three cases, that the Recorder thought of making inquiries on the subject. The result was that he subsequently revoked the sentences on two of the lads, and dealt with them under the First Offenders Act; while the third is now doing the months' imprisonment, which the Recorder seems to imagine will best prepare him for a reformatory. Such blundering, slipshod, haphazard methods of dispensing justice are to be expected on the part of the Great Unpaid; but one has a right to look for something better from a learned Recorder. One might also suppose that such a functionary would not commit the mistake of giving a youth a term in gaol as a preparation for a reformatory—an absurd and pernicious practice which is now generally discredited, and which is no longer legally necessary.

Thanks to the complaisance of the daily Press, the trade in bogus secondhand plate still goes on as merrily as ever, and an endless variety of dodges is resorted to in order to deceive the purchasers as to the character of those with whom they are dealing. Here is a good example, taken from the Liverpool Courier:

> IMPORTANT.—A valuable Silver-plated Tea and Coffee SERVICE, comprising tea, coffee, sugar, cream, magnificent design, cost £14. 14s.; offered for £2. 7s. 6d.; never been used; approval free. Mrs. Butler, 4, Grand Parade, Brighton.

The imposing address, Grand Parade, Brighton, is an establishment styled "Thurman's Temperance Hotel." Nobody of the name of Mrs. Butler has been there recently, but there was a man named Butler staying in the house last week. A man named Butler, as those who read my exposure of this traffic will remember, is also the founder of and principal operator in the bogus second-hand plate and cutlery line of business. Whether the above advertisement emanates from him, or from one of his agents, is not really of any consequence. The offer of a new tea and coffee service, value £14. 14s., for £2. 7s. 6d. is obviously a fraud, and now that the character of these advertisements is so well known, it is an astonishing thing that respectable newspapers continue to publish them.

From time to time, I continue to receive through readers of TRUTH in the medical profession, a large number of the circulars of Sydney Bassett, of 285, Oxford-street. According to his own account of himself, this worthy has been living for thirty years past by advancing money to medical practitioners upon outstanding bills, for payment of which they do not care to press their patients. Such is my respect for the medical profession that I do not believe this statement. If Bassett does much business with doctors, the probability is that his clients are some of the struggling men who are unable to get a footing in the present overcrowded state of the profession; and on that view of the matter his circulars ought to be an awful warning to young men who contemplate entering themselves as medical students. It would seem that their ambition to practise upon the suffering members of the community is not unlikely to end in their being practised upon themselves by the advertising usurer.

I have been making some inquiries about another of the Miller fraternity, who was lately carrying on a similar game in the name of Walter Lees, from 118, Fleet-street. A confiding countryman, who asked my advice about his case, had been backing horses through this Lees for some weeks last summer, and had always been called upon to pay whenever there was a balance against him. When, however, the amount showed a few pounds in his favour, Lees was taken ill, and became unable to attend to business. He has now disappeared from 118, Fleet-street, and, strange to relate, has omitted to leave his address. I am not an Anti-Gambling Leaguer, and I trust that I am not unduly wanting in sympathy for the misfortunes of my fellow-creatures; but I must say that the victims of the Millers and Leeses do not seem to me to deserve much pity.

One of my readers, who has lately been blessed with an addition to his family, sends me samples of the literature forwarded to him by post on this auspicious occasion, some addressed to him, and some to "the nurse." Prominent among the collection is, of course, the usual money-lender's circular, represented on this occasion by an offer from "Maile & Co." to afford any "temporary accommodation" of which the proud parent may be in need. The indecent haste with which the money-lenders gather round the happy father of a family on these domestic occasions suggests very painful reflections. I suppose that they would not be in such a hurry to offer their services unless they found that they were frequently required. I would suggest to those who take an interest in the thrift question that they should obtain statistics showing the number of parents who are obliged to have recourse to the advertising usurer every time an addition is made to the stock in their quiver.

My opinion has been asked on the following point of club management; but the writer does not give the name of the club:—

For a long time at this club poker has been played for very small stakes—in fact, a limit of 5s. rise only—but it has on one or two occasions interfered with the accommodation of some dozen of whist and piquet players, who frequently play for stakes amounting to some hundreds of pounds, more or less, in a weekly settlement. They reported the poker playing to the Committee, who have felt bound, under the rule forbidding games of hazard, to forbid the game of poker, thus depriving some fifty or sixty members of what is, as played there, a perfectly harmless amusement.

Can you let me know if there are any decisions (legal) as to poker being a game of hazard, also, if there are or are not many clubs where, under a proper limit, so as to prevent any possibility of what is real gambling, the game is permitted.

I think I am right in saying that poker has never come before the law courts in this country. What may have happened in the land of its birth I cannot say. From what I remember, however, of the arguments when the question, what is a game of hazard, last came before the courts, I should not think the Judges would have much difficulty in deciding that poker comes under this heading. Whether there has ever been any decision on piquet I know not, but at a guess I should think that piquet would be classified with whist as a game of skill—especially if the Judge who had to decide the point happened to be a piquet player. As to the other question, I have seen poker played in a club of good repute, but I cannot say in how many clubs it is permitted. Perhaps some of my readers may be able to offer evidence on the point.

In the above case it seems an absurdity that whist and piquet for high stakes should be permitted, and any mere game of chance, kept within suitable limits, forbidden. You may gamble as recklessly on a game of skill as on a game of chance, and if the object is to keep down gambling, it seems to me that a club committee should rather look to the amount of the stakes, whatever the game, than to subtle legal distinctions between games of skill and games of chance. That is the principle, so far as I know, in decently-conducted private houses, and I do not know what more you can require in a club.

Election literature is much the same at all times. At the Election that has just come off at Bradford, the Unionist papers have described Captain Greville as little less than an angel personally, and little less than Cicero oratorically; indeed, starting with the latter opinion of his oratory, it was difficult to go beyond it; but the Unionist papers succeeded in this, for each day their reporters announced that there was an improvement in the quality of his orations. On the other side, Mr. Billson was held up as a combination of Alcibiades in appearance, Solon in wisdom, and Methuselah in political experience, uniting the fire of youth with the caution of age. To see either of them, according to their respective newspapers, was to love him; to talk with either of them was to adore him. And yet, now that the election is over, no one will think of offending the modesty of either of those gentlemen by such extravagant laudation. Mr. Billson I always found a very pleasant and unassuming civilian gentleman, and Captain Greville is, I make no doubt, an unassuming modest military gentleman.

Tennyson's "immortal" lines—

> One life, one flag, one fleet, one throne,
> Britons, hold your own, have had, it is stated, "a prominent place in the mural literature." Tennyson wrote much that is beautiful and much that is silly. I should place the "immortal" lines in the latter category. What they mean, I do not know. Did the late Poet Laureate imagine that we are going about the world in search of a cat's lives, a dozen flags, a dozen fleets, and a dozen thrones, with a reckless disregard of the expense involved in this multiplicity of luxuries?

There may be many lines more poetical than the following, but there are none which contain more solid good sense:—

> Statesmen that are wise
> Take TRUTH herself for model.

On Thursday last there was a significant passage in one of the Times' leaders, being a communiqué, which ought to have excited more attention than it seems to have received:—

On the other hand, the public, always keen to note indications of the opinions held by responsible Ministers, must be warned against what would be the very natural mistake of supposing that they have gained, from communications that have appeared in our columns, authentic information concerning the opinions of the Prime Minister. . . . It would be particularly unfortunate were the Convocation of the two Provinces, who hold their joint meeting to-day, to assume that the opinions expressed by Lord Cranborne and Lord Hugh Cecil are those of their distinguished father. . . . But, as things stand, it may be useful to issue a warning which is of general application, and by no means confined in its scope to the question now under discussion.

The truth is that Lord Salisbury has been obliged to take steps to make it understood that Lord Cranborne and Lord Hugh Cecil are not speaking on his behalf when they express their views on the Education question, as some of their recent utterances have given great offence to certain Cabinet Ministers. At the Church House meeting on Thursday Lord Cranborne confidently told his father's colleagues, Lord Cross and Lord Cranbrook, that they merely represent old-fashioned Conservatism. Lord Cranborne is really a wild bull of Bashan on the subject of rate-aid, for he has become a desperate reactionary, and appears now to sit in the House of Commons merely as the complaisant representative of the Episcopal Bench. At this meeting the warnings of practical men, such as Lord Cranbrook and Lord Cross, and Sir John Kennaway (than whom no more staunch Churchman can be found in the House of Commons) were not only disregarded but derided. Lord Cross was perfectly correct in his view that many people would positively refuse to pay a denominational rate.

Lord Crewe, following in the steps of his brother peer, Lord Tweedmouth, has contributed his views upon the situation. His lordship informs us that we ought not to trouble ourselves about the Leader of the Party, but make ourselves worthy of a Leader. At present, therefore, it would appear that we are unworthy, and that we are to remain in this condition until we amend our ways. Fancy an army being told that it is not to have a General at its head until it is worthy of one! How are we to prove our worthiness? As I understand it, by not venturing to presume to select a Leader, but by professing our willingness, in a humble and servile spirit, to accept the Leader that Lord Crewe and his brother peers will kindly appoint over us, and who will take good care that we do not stray into Radicalism. St. Denis managed, according to the legend, to walk about with his head under his arm; but even this Saint did not wait for some archangels to select a head for him after his own had been severed from his body. Why do the Peers not themselves act on this singular doctrine of fitness, and, having first cut off their own heads, send their bodies to legislate for us? But, when I think of it, there might be some advantage to us in such a House of Lords, for hereditary mummies without heads would be less harmful to the community than peers alive and kicking.

That the Peers who are good enough to call themselves Liberals have not only heads, but heads provided with extremely voracious mouths, the following estimate of the amount of public money which they received for their services under the last Liberal Government pretty clearly proves. The point d'argent, point de Suisses reads so far as our Party is concerned, point d'argent, point de Pairs. On a division in the Lords at most forty Peers voted against Lord Salisbury; this, therefore, is the strength of the Liberal Party in the Lords. Amongst these forty, the following retaining fees were distributed:—One Lord Chancellor, £10,000; one Lord Lieutenant of Ireland, £20,000; three Secretaries of State, £15,000; one Lord of the Admiralty, £5,000; one Under-Secretary, £2,000; one Lord Chamberlain, £2,000; one Lord Steward, £2,000; one Master of the Horse, £2,500; one Master of the Buckhounds, £1,500; one Treasurer, £904; one Captain of Gentlemen at Arms, £1,200; seven Lords in Waiting, £4,914; total, £67,018. One, therefore, in every two Liberal Peers received on an average about £3,000 per annum, or, taking the whole number of Liberal Peers at forty, their valuable accession of strength to the Liberal Party was counted to them for righteousness to the tune of above £1,500 each. Comment is needless.

A correspondent writes:—

Last week's TRUTH contained a statement that immediately after the General Election, Lord Rosebery caused to be conveyed to Sir William Harcourt that his lordship would not in future act with him. If so, what is the meaning of the persistent statements of Lord Rosebery's friends that Sir William did not consult with him? They have not, it is true, been made by Lord Rosebery himself, although his Edinburgh speech certainly conveyed that impression; but they are being made both by the Unionist Press and by certain Liberal newspapers. Let us have the facts. This would be only fair alike to Lord Rosebery and to Sir William Harcourt. If Lord Rosebery did convey this intimation to Sir William, how could the latter consult with him? Here we have an intimation from an ex-Peer Premier, still the official Leader of the Liberal Party, that, although retaining the Leadership, he will not act with the Liberal Leader of the Party in the House of Commons. What did he expect Sir William to do? To resign the Leadership in the Commons, although not one person contested his fitness for it either in that House or in the constituencies? This decree of ostracism privately pronounced by Lord Rosebery against the Party Leader in the Commons, without Commons or electors being consulted, is the most astounding exercise of dictatorial power that ever Leader has claimed. It reduces all belonging to the Party, except himself, to the merest ciphers. In his Edinburgh speech Lord Rosebery said that when a Peer is Premier, the Commons Leader must be to him as one Siamese twin was to his brother! Who, then, was the gentleman with whom he proposed to enter into twinship? Was there to be no Leader in the Commons until this twin was discovered? The whole thing is so extraordinary that it almost transcends belief.

To this my reply is that, extraordinary as the "whole thing" was, it did occur as my last week's correspondent stated. Lord Rosebery did convey to his late colleagues an intimation that he would not in future act with Sir William, and I challenge denial from any one of his late colleagues. After this announcement it is evident that the relations between the Leader of the Party and the Leader of the Party in the Commons were necessarily more like those between the brothers Cain and Abel than those between the joint twins of Siam. But where was the fault?

I never prophesy unless the event is sufficiently far off for the prophecy to be forgotten if it proves erroneous. But I never had the slightest doubt that McKinley would be elected President of the United States, so soon as I read that the odds were four to one on him in the betting. In America, the electoral art is reduced to such a science that it is pretty well known who will win before the contest, and when money is freely bet at high odds on a candidate the result is a foregone conclusion.

If Mr. Bryan had been wise he would have gone for bimetallism, if it so pleased him, but have left indefinite the ratio to be established between the two metals. His ratio simply meant the right of all to repudiate one-half of his obligations without this bettering any one in the future. But the victors would do well to realise that, apart from all questions of bimetallism, there is a strong and growing feeling in America against the huge accumulations of capital in the hands of individuals, obtained by means of trusts which are in reality monopolies, and by gambling in the cogged dice of railroads. All this can only benefit the few at the expense of the many, and in the long run the many will use their power, unless remedy be afforded to this pernicious state of things. A greedy plutocracy, unsupported by an armed force, cannot long hold its own against the rights and the well-being of all.

I am by no means certain that had I been an American I should not have voted for the Democratic ticket, had it not been that I regard all tampering with the coinage of a country as injurious to all, and that it does not strike me that Mr. Bryan is up to Presidential mark. As a rule, whenever the success of a candidate at an election is received with acclamations by the Stock Exchange, this is proof positive that his defeat would have been more desirable. The dollarocracy of America is its worst product. Its members have literally nothing to recommend them. The odds are that either they or their parents have acquired huge fortunes by means most questionable. As a rule, they are ignorant and vulgar, building big houses in order to dazzle by giving in them ostentatious entertainments; buying pictures for which they only care because they have been acquired at high prices; selling their souls to anyone who will enable them to hobnob with royalties, and their daughters to any one who will confer a title on them; despising their own country and its institutions, and regarding themselves as in every respect superior to others on account of their dollars. If the United States is not to become a mere plutocratic oligarchy, the power of these worthies, which has increased, and is increasing, must be very greatly diminished.

A letter has appeared in the Times signed "Will Mashonaland," which territorial appellation denotes personally the Bishop of the Church of England in that country. "Will Mashonaland" points to the fact that 300 lonely graves throughout Rhodesia testify to the indomitable courage of those who took part in the Matebele wars by their silent eloquence, and he suggests that the English public should, as a testimonial to these heroes, subscribe £6,000 to be spent in enlarging a church at Fort Salisbury and another at Bulawayo. In the first Matabele war recruits were obtained by the Chartered Company offering in "black and white" loot if the raid proved successful, and these "loot bonds" were a matter of sale and purchase. Naturally, this tempting offer of loot attracted all the riff-raff of South Africa, and those who were slain in fighting the Matabele—about one to every hundred of the latter—would indeed be surprised at their "heroism" being commemorated by the adornment of churches of the Church of England, rather than by that of pot-houses. If I remember rightly "Will Mashonaland" has been the apologist of the raiders in the Transvaal. We shall next have him asking us to subscribe to erect a church in Johannesburg to the memory of the piratic expedition of the men who, like that "British nobleman" of former days, Orton, alias Sir Roger Tichborne, are "languishing in a British prison." Far better employed would "Will Mashonaland" be in preaching in his church, or his cathedral, or whatever he may call the building in which he officiates, the practice of the precepts of Christianity towards the unfortunate natives of the country over which he exercises episcopal sway. No, I do not contemplate subscribing one farthing to converting churches into monuments to those who engaged in an undertaking which was a disgrace to us as a nation.

I have always regarded with the profoundest contempt the valorous knights of the Middle Ages who, sheathed in armour of proof, careered about a battlefield, clashing their swords against each others' mail-coats, and slaying the infantry with about as much danger to themselves as a wolf incurs when it mangles a flock of sheep. This is very much the same feeling that I have for the "heroes" who, with arms of precision, engage in expeditions against Africans armed with spears or matchlocks. In Africa it is deemed a crime to sell to natives gunpowder, but those who have thus deprived them of the power of resistance are excessively proud of their exploits in killing them. I should as soon admire Jack Ketch for his heroism in tying a rope round a man bound hand and foot and hanging him. I believe that this is the estimate entertained of our warriors in Africa by all soldiers except the few who have joined them in the hope of personal advantage to themselves. What happened when the Jameson raiders encountered men with equal arms? Before one single officer amongst them was even wounded, they ignominiously surrendered.

Mr. Selous has just published a book on the war that has raged in Rhodesia. The action of the natives in rising against their good kind conquerors was, he says, unaccountable. I should have thought that the treacherous conquest of their country, the stealing of their cattle, and the insults and ill-treatment that they suffered from the gold-seekers and Company-promoters in their attempt to convert them into serfs, would furnish motives for the outbreak. Some of these "pioneers" were killed by the natives. This, says Mr. Selous, awoke the most bitter wrath in the hearts of all who looked upon them, Englishmen and Dutchmen alike vowing a pitiless vengeance against the whole Matabele race, and in effecting this vengeance they seem, according to him, to have been more savage than the savages. Thus he describes what followed after an engagement in which the natives were worsted:—

> Væ victis! Woe to the conquered! Woe, indeed! for amongst the men who took part in the pursuit of the Kaffirs on this, to them, most fatal day were many who, maddened by the loss of old chums foully slain in cold blood by the natives, were determined to use their opportunity to the utmost to inflict a heavy punishment for the crimes committed, while all were bent on exacting vengeance for the murders of the European women and children who had been hurried out of existence during the first days of the rebellion. Once broken, the Kaffirs never made any attempt to rally, but ran as hard as they could, accepting death when overtaken without offering the slightest resistance; some, indeed, when too tired to run any farther, walked doggedly forward with arms in their hands which they never attempted to use, and did not even turn their heads to look at the white men who were about to shoot them down.

And further on, without a word of protest, he cites as follows, from the account of a fight furnished to him by an officer stationed at Bulawayo:—

> There is a good deal to be said in favour of fighting when the state of affairs is such as you can go out after morning coffee to a certain find, with every chance of a gallop and a kill, and return to a late breakfast at, say, 2 p.m.

Whenever we do go to war let us hope that, for the sake of our good name, hostilities will be limited on our side to regular soldiers. They do not shoot down unresisting men, nor do they rejoice in being able to commit a few murders after their breakfasts in order to work up an appetite for luncheon. Judging by the account of the deeds of the "avenging crew" of Company-promoters, whose exploits are lauded by Mr. Selous, it is horrible to think of the hideous barbarities that must have been committed on those unfortunate Mashonas and Matabeles, who were risking their lives in order to secure that independence of which they had been most unjustly deprived.

Every requirement for Furnishing tastefully at least expense is amply illustrated in the Galleries and Catalogues of HAMPTON & SONS, Furnishers & Decorators, Pall Mall East, S.W.

Mr. Cecil Rhodes, who appears to be hovering about Rhodesia, seeking in every way to draw attention to himself, whilst his instruments in the Transvaal raid are doing their time in prison, contributes an item of news which ought to make the veriest Jingo blush. Last week he telegraphed that Captain Ferreira, with thirty-five burghers, made an attack on Pampi's kraal. The kraal was captured and burnt, thirty-one of the rebels being killed. The enemy fled to the caves, which were blown up. When the French, after annexing Algiers, were engaged in war with the natives under Abd-el-Kadir, certain Arabs were smoked to death in some caves into which they had fled. Public opinion in every European country, including France, denounced this mode of warfare. The indignation of the English journals I well remember. But what difference is there between smoking out Arabs in a cave in North Africa and blowing up Kaffirs in a cave in South Africa? Talk of the rage of a lioness deprived of her whelps! It is nothing in comparison with the rage of Company-promoters when deprived of the opportunity of adding to their store of promotion-profits by black men impudently imitating that quality which white men honour under the name of patriotism.

How contemptible is the fuss made over Mr. Rhodes's heroism on the occasion of his famous palaver with the Matabele chiefs is further shown by a letter which lately appeared in the Cape Times. The writer of this letter, who signs his name, describes how, in 1879, the present Cape Premier, Sir Gordon Sprigg, advanced unarmed to confer with the chief Morosi, when that rebel was holding a fortified mountain, and defying the force of the whole Colony. The parley took place within point-blank range of the walls of the rebel fortification, and the writer remarks that "had the natives chosen to act a treacherous part, nothing on earth could have saved Sir Gordon Sprigg and his companions." This narrative is confirmed in a letter written to me by an officer who was present at the time of Sir Gordon Sprigg's parley with Morosi. The same officer tells me that in 1878, during the campaign in the Transkei, Colonel Eustace, now Civil Commissioner of the Mosselbay district, advanced many miles into the heart of the enemy's country, accompanied only by a native interpreter, to discuss terms with the rebel chief in the midst of his own followers. These acts, both performed at far more personal risk than Mr. Rhodes's much-puffed indaba, were scarcely put on record at the time, and have certainly not been made the subject of any personal advertisement. Why the difference in the case of Mr. Rhodes? Is it possible that an exhibition of personal bravery on his part is considered such an extraordinary occurrence?

In the account of the late indaba which appeared in the Times of Monday, it is amusing to observe how Earl Grey, who succeeded Mr. Rhodes as the representative of the Chartered Company in Rhodesia, appears to act as a humble clerk to that gentleman; and we are solemnly informed that when Mr. Rhodes promised some of the Indunas horses, they bestowed on him the honorary appellation of "Buffalo." But what I want to know is, what is the position that Buffalo Rhodes occupies in the Government of the country?

Heaven forbid that I should trench on the province of my esteemed friend Mr. Moses Moss, but I cannot help observing that the shareholders of the British South Africa Company are about as silly a body of men as ever mistook bits of glass for diamonds. Their shares are, in my opinion, worth at an extravagant estimate about 1s. per share. In the last year, their intelligent Directors have spent the £500,000 they had in hand, and £1,500,000 which they have raised by debentures. They anticipate a further expenditure of £1,000,000 before next September, and therefore they propose to issue 500,000 shares at a modest premium of 100 per cent. £300,000 of this amount had been underwritten, the consideration being that the underwriters should be entitled to take 150,000 of the shares of the next issue at a premium of 175. This arrangement was voted down by the shareholders. Had I been one of them, I should certainly not have taken a single additional share even at par, and I should have welcomed any body of men willing to underwrite a fresh issue at the premium demanded, on the conditions explained to the meeting last Friday. What I should, however, have moved, would have been (1) that the opinion of counsel be taken whether the Directors are personally liable for all expenditure incurred by the Company in connection with the Jameson raid, and the Matabele outbreak, which was the direct consequence of that raid; (2) that Messrs. Rhodes, Beit, and other promoters of the Company be invited to restore to the Company the one million shares which they presented to themselves after the conquest of Matabeleland; (3) that in the event of any of the said Directors having sold any of their shares, they be called upon to return to the Company the amounts for which they were sold; and (4) that in place of the said one million shares, the promoters be given Deferred shares, only entitled to share in dividends after 10 per cent. had been paid each year on the Ordinary shares of the Company.

I cannot say that I am particularly sorry for the dolts who purchased the shares of the Company at a premium of 700 or 800 per cent. But I should have thought that their losses would have taught them wisdom. There seem to be about 2,000 Europeans in Rhodesia, financially hanging on by their eyelids in hopes of something turning up to their advantage. It is pretty well admitted that there is no paying gold in the country, and its climate seems to preclude all idea of its becoming a home for European agriculturists. It is inhabited by savage races, by no means disposed to accept the Company's rule. Whatever cattle there were appears to have been destroyed by the rinderpest. At the present price of the shares, the capital on which dividend has to be earned is, including the new issue, six millions; and there are debentures out to the amount of £1,500,000. What human being can suppose that, when administration and interest on debentures are provided for, there will remain anything for dividends on the shares?

W. & F. Thorn's Speciality.—Job Carriages.—This is by far the best and cheapest way to keep an establishment, saving all trouble, annoyance, and expense. Carriages kept like new for small annual payments.—19, Gt. Portland-street, W.; Ranelagh House, Lower Grosvenor-place, S.W. London only.

A Russian friend of mine writes:—

Before Russia undertakes to look after the well-being of the Christians in Macedonia and Asia Minor she must have a clear understanding that this mission is undertaken with the full approval of Europe. At present these Christians are placed under the protection of all the Great Powers; England has also a separate Treaty with Turkey guaranteeing the latter the integrity of Armenia; whilst by a clause agreed to at the Paris Congress that met after the Crimean war the Russian vessels of war are not allowed to enter the Mediterranean from the Black Sea. I have no doubt that the English people are just now in accord with Mr. Gladstone as to the English policy towards Turkey, but we Russians cannot forget what the English rulers did when we had sacrificed above 50,000 men to emancipate the Christians in Turkey, and had made a treaty with that Power which would have secured good government to those of them who were, like the Bulgarians, fully emancipated. Will England agree that Russia is to be invested with a Protectorate over the Christians in Macedonia, and over that portion of Asia Minor in which the Armenians mainly reside; and to her Black Sea fleet having the right to free exit and entry into the Mediterranean? As regards this latter point, Russia has no objection to all other Powers having the same right of exit and entry to that sea, and she would agree that no vessel of war of any Power might, without the assent of the Sultan, remain between Gallipoli and the Black Sea, longer than the time required to effect the passage. I have reason to believe that no Continental Power is opposed to the above arrangement. What says England? If she were to agree, you may rest assured that the Armenians and the Macedonian Christians would henceforward be safe in life, limb, and property. So long as she does not assent, you will never persuade the world that your Armenian meetings are anything more than a mere flash in the pan, or that you are not determined, as heretofore, to sacrifice humanity on the altar of your traditional policy.

SCRUTATOR.

CHURCH AND SCHOOLS.

THE advocates of voluntary denominational schools would have the State place them in such a financial position as to be able to compete successfully in efficiency with Board schools. At present both schools equally receive a subvention from the State, but excess of expenditure over this subvention is drawn in the Board schools from the rates, and in the voluntary schools from private subscriptions. As more money is derived from rates than from subscriptions, it follows that the voluntary schools are not as efficient as the Board schools. The former demand, therefore, that either the voluntary schools should receive a contribution from rates, or, if not, that the State subvention should be larger to them than to the Board schools. As regards popular control, they vaguely state that voluntary schools are prepared, as a quid pro quo, to submit to a larger measure of popular control; but when they condescend from generalities to particulars, this additional control vanishes into thin air. Their schools are to retain their present managers, who are to appoint the masters, and the tenure of office of these masters is to depend entirely on the managers. "Let me," said some sage, "make the songs of a country, and I care not who makes its laws." In the same fashion, it may be said, "Let me appoint the masters of schools, and I care not who makes its rules." Those who are, speaking broadly, for denominational schools almost entirely supported by the community are members either of the Church of England, or of the Church of Rome; those who are opposed to this scheme are mostly those who do not belong to either of these Churches. The latter hold that, whilst it is the duty of the community to provide schools for secular education—free and obligatory—all religious instruction of children is the affair of their parents and pastors.

Personally, I am, so far as State aid is concerned, a Secularist. Regarding, as I do, the connection of any Church with the State as an abuse, I am, of course, against the country being called upon to pay for the inculcation of the tenets of any religious sect. I see no more reason why the teaching of arithmetic, &c., should be coupled with that of dogmatic religion than that religion should be deemed a necessary ingredient in a course of gymnastics, or in learning the trade of a shoemaker. But I find myself one of a community where these sound views do not command general assent, and where large numbers—whether they be the majority or minority being doubtful—are of an opposite opinion. As a practical man, consequently, I am prepared to compound with those who disagree with me, provided that they are reasonable, for I prefer that all children should be educated, even though the education may include any religion which is based on morality, to their growing up without any education.

What, then, would I suggest? The population may be roughly divided between urban and rural. The urban has non-denominational schools under Boards, and denominational schools under managers, so that parents in towns can choose to which they shall send their children. The rural has only denominational schools, and these in almost every case are Church of England schools. Therefore, in towns, I would have Board and denominational schools supported by the rates, but the latter under popular control in everything except as to what appertains to religious teaching. This would, as now, be limited to certain fixed hours. The master of a denominational school would be proposed by the popular authority, and, if approved of by the managers, he would be appointed. Where popular authority and managers could not agree, the appointment would lapse to the Education Department. In rural parishes the position is, however, different, and therefore requires to be dealt with in a different fashion. There is no room there for a Board and a denominational school, and the latter occupies the ground already, this denominational school being, as I have already said, almost invariably a Church of England school. To this school all are obliged by law to send their children. Clearly, if we are to consent practically to support these schools, no matter whether this be done by State or rate aid, we must take the greatest care that the money be properly expended, and that any parent objecting to the teaching of the Church of England shall be able to send his children to the school, without their coming directly or indirectly under the influence of that Church. The only way to secure this is to create Boards all over the country, whose business it would be to see to proper expenditure of funds, and also that in denominational schools children of parents who are not members of the Church of England are not only able to benefit by their secular teaching without any admixture of religious teaching, but also that they are protected from any of the indirect modes that now too often prevail, by which a distinction is made between the children who share in the religious teaching and those who do not, to the disadvantage of the latter.

BRIGHTON.—NORFOLK HOTEL.—This old established Country and Family Hotel is in the best situation, and replete with comfort, style, and luxury.—JULES A. CREIGHTON, Manager.

Those in favour of an increase of public money being granted to voluntary schools are divided as to the source from which the money is to arise, some being for rate aid, others for tax aid. If there is to be money granted, I think that I should prefer that it should come from the rates. Rates being levied directly, and taxes indirectly, there is a tendency to applaud all subventions in reduction of the former at the expense of the latter. But as taxes weigh more heavily against the poor man than rates, I have always been against these subventions. Moreover, whilst I am for no stint in the provision for a free education for all, the money for this is more likely to be carefully and economically spent in a locality when it comes out of the pockets of that locality, and the outlay is under local control. Many contend that the area of a village is too small to form a Board district, and they assert that villagers are not sufficiently intelligent to act on a Board I question both these propositions. Another opinion is that it is a mistake to directly elect a School Board, but that it should be a Committee of a Town Council in towns, and the Parish Council in villages. I have no strong objection to this myself, for I am no believer in a multiplicity of separate local authorities. On both sides of the question, there is, however, a good deal to be said. A good many villages are so poor that, left to their own resources, they could not, even with the present fixed State subvention, provide money for an efficient school by means of a rate. This might be met, as it is in several of the American States, by having a general county educational rate and a local parish rate. Subventions would then be made from the county rate to exceptionally poor school districts. We should then have a State subvention, a county subvention in exceptional cases, and a local rate. But my main aim would be to secure popular control over education. Without this, and with almost all the schools belonging to one powerful sect, every sort of abuse would creep in. For this we must fight, if we find ourselves unable to divorce the community from all connection with denominational schools. In towns, I am not afraid of undenominational schools holding their own, and, as a parent can there send his child to one of these schools, he is under no individual grievance, if those who prefer denominational schools send their children to them. But in rural districts there is just now a determined effort on the part of Churchmen to lay hands on the education of the rising generation. This we must resist to the best of our ability. If there is only to be one school, and that a school of the Church of England, in the villages, we must insist that this school shall, except during the hours allowed for religious instruction, be to all intents and purposes a secular school, and that the parson of the village shall have, quoad parson, no more authority there than any other inhabitant. A time will, I hope, come when the Church of England will be disconnected with the State, and when the sound principle will prevail, that the State has no more to do with the religious instruction of children than with the colour of their hair. But it is evident that this time has not yet come. Therefore, until it does, we must make the best of a bad job, and so soon as we have a majority make a good job of it.

The meeting of Convocation last week to formulate its orders to the Temporal Government in regard to the "rights" of Church schools was not of great importance, owing to its being a case of tot homines, tot sententiæ. After squabbling with each other for a couple of days the Convocation could only agree that "voluntary" schools must be supported by the community, but that the community must be allowed only to exercise over them the most illusory control. The whole proceedings carry us back to the days when the Church claimed sway over the souls, the bodies, and the goods of all in the country, and I am only surprised that the presiding Archbishop was not directed to excommunicate all who venture to question the pretensions of the Assembly to have the education of all children placed under the control of the Church, the funds being levied indiscriminately from all who pay either rates or taxes.

THE CASE OF MAJOR BRITTAN.

As though anxious not to be outdone by the War Office, the Admiralty has just accomplished on its own account an exhibition of the spitefulness and tyranny of officialdom, which forms a fitting supplement to the glaring instances of injustice in the sister Service lately brought before readers of TRUTH. I refer to the circumstances under which Major C. J. Brittan, R.M.L.I., has been deprived of his appointment of Staff Officer of the Plymouth Division Royal Marines. At the outset it should be understood that Major Brittan is an officer of eighteen years' service, recognised by those under whom he has served as a man of exceptional smartness, zeal, and ability, and, I believe, universally popular with his brother officers. He held for five years the post of Adjutant at Chatham, and is described to me by one who knew him there as having shown himself "an excellent Adjutant, smart and keen, and an enthusiast at his work." He was appointed Staff Officer of the Plymouth Division some two years ago, and has discharged his duties there without reproach until the events which I am about to relate.

It is the custom at the Royal United Service Institution, as my Service readers are aware, for a gold medal to be offered every year for the best essay on some subject, the subjects being naval and military in alternate years. After the prize has been awarded, a discussion on the best essays is held at the Institution. This year it was the turn of the Navy for a gold medal, and the subject of the prize essays was the following question: "In view of the changes which have taken place in the composition of fleets during the present century, what system of entry, training, and distribution is best calculated to ensure an efficient body of officers and men of all branches for a peace and war establishment?" Three of the essays were set down for discussion at the Royal United Service Institution on May 1 last, the Earl of Hopetoun in the chair. It may here be mentioned that prior to this discussion at the United Service Institution an informal meeting of officers of the Plymouth Division had taken place, with a view to considering the points raised by the prize essays, and the line to be taken in the interests of the Royal Marines in the discussion at the Institution. Major Brittan was present at the informal meeting at Plymouth, and subsequently came up to London to take part in the discussion. The remarks which he made may be found reported in the Journal of the Institution. He addressed himself more particularly to the position of officers of the Royal Marines on board ship, and their relations with their brother officers of the Navy, and with their own men under such circumstances. As many of my readers are aware, these are matters in regard to which some considerable dissatisfaction exists throughout the Royal Marines, and the disadvantages and disabilities to which these officers are subjected when embarked, have been, at different times, discussed in Parliament and elsewhere, including the columns of TRUTH. They are obviously as legitimate matters for discussion at a Service club as any other point in connection with the question set as the subject for the prize essay; and they were dealt with in Major Brittan's speech with conspicuous moderation.

It would seem, however, that some one present—presumably one of that school of naval officers who lose no opportunity of teaching the Marines their proper place—felt aggrieved at the suggestions made by Major Brittan for enlarging the responsibility and authority of Marine officers on board ship, and accordingly brought the Major's remarks under the notice of the Admiralty. I understand that an official was soon afterwards sent round from the Admiralty to the Royal United Service Institution to try and obtain the transcript of the shorthand writer's notes. This he failed to do, and it follows that in the proceedings which they subsequently took the Admiralty must have been acting upon some private report, and presumably a report from memory, of the Major's words. It was alleged against Major Brittan that he had remarked in the course of his speech that in what he said he represented the views of his brother officers, No such expression occurs in the official report as published in the Journal of the United Service Institution. But these alleged words were connected by the Admiralty with the information which they had somehow obtained as to the preliminary gathering of officers at Plymouth, and a Board of Inquiry was ordered to inquire into what was described as insubordinate conduct. The result of this inquiry was that the Colonel Commandant and Major Brittan were reprimanded by order, the former for allowing the meeting of officers of his Division at Plymouth, and the latter for his speech in London.

This is merely the first act of the drama. It is not the habit of officialdom to allow an officer whom it has once accused of hurting its dignity to escape with a mere reprimand. At the inspection by the Board of Admiralty in 1895, Major Brittan had availed himself of the recognised custom of the Service, in order to make certain representations in regard to the grievances of officers of the Marines to Earl Spencer, then First Lord, and, after an interview with the First Lord, he was directed to put down his statements in writing, and forward them to the Admiralty through the regular official channels. This he did, as many have done before him, and with as little result, no answer of any kind being returned. Prior to the 1896 inspection, in view of the fact that a new First Lord was to appear on the scene, Major Brittan sent a letter through the usual official channel, asking whether any reply had been received to his letter of the previous year. This was, I believe, before the incident at the United Service Institution. No answer was given to the Major's second letter, but, after the prize essay discussion, the correspondence was raked up, and seems to have been made the ground for some additional charge of insubordination. At any rate, on this pretext, without being given an opportunity of saying a word on his own behalf, Major Brittan has been deprived of his post of Staff Officer at Plymouth, and sent on foreign service.

The facts of this case speak for themselves, and, as regards the part played in them by the Admiralty, it is the worst case of its kind, so far as my knowledge goes, that has ever been recorded. Instances enough and to spare have occurred in which My Lords have thrown their cloak over officers in a subordinate position who have been guilty of acts of injustice or tyranny towards their juniors. In quite a recent case we have seen the Admiralty shamelessly uphold one of the most iniquitous court-martial decisions ever pronounced, and the iniquity even carried to the length of the First Lord being put up in the House of Commons to bolster up the decision of the court by making statements which had never been proved in evidence, and which could have been refuted in a moment by anything in the shape of a judicial inquiry. But in the present instance the Admiralty themselves have taken the initiative in wrong-doing, and the motives by which they have been inspired are only too clear. The Royal Marines, although the public well know and appreciate the efficiency and value of the corps, are a sort of Cinderella in the Service. The more ill-conditioned of their comrades in the Navy are jealous of them, and affect to despise them; and this feeling is notoriously strongest among the higher ranks of Naval officers, whose views are more directly represented at Whitehall. The real offence of Major Brittan, it is easy to see, is nothing in the nature of insubordination. He has uttered not a word disrespectful to any superior officer or authority; he has done nothing in any way contrary to the letter or the spirit of Service Regulations; neither directly nor indirectly has he been guilty of any act which could tend to relax the bonds of discipline. But he has presumed, being no better than an officer of Marines, to express at a meeting in a Service club the opinion that the present position of officers of Marines when on board her Majesty's ships might be improved with advantage to the Service. The mere utterance of this opinion is treated as a sort of lèse-majesté against the Naval element, to which the Royal Marines are at present subject; and for this high crime and misdemeanour all the resources of official machinery are invoked to exact summary punishment. I have had experience enough of official methods to know how doubtful it is that any exposure of such iniquity in a newspaper, or any comment which a newspaper may make upon it, will induce the individuals responsible for such proceedings to change their attitude. But the supreme head of our naval administration is a civilian, and one of the reasons for having a civilian in such a position is to hold in check such professional jealousies and prejudices as appear to have had full play in this particular instance. For that reason, it is to be expected of Mr. Goschen, who may be presumed to have little or no personal knowledge of the facts of this case, that he will yet inform himself more fully of the circumstances, and take some steps to repair the evil that has been done. The public will, I am confident, agree that for an officer of eighteen years' excellent service, an officer who has always borne the very highest character for zeal and ability in his profession, to be subjected to official reprimand and degradation on such flimsy pretexts as those that have been trumped up against Major Brittan is an intolerable outrage which ought not to be tolerated.

THE MUNCHAUSEN OF MONKEY-LAND.

Those who remember the exposure in TRUTH of the elaborate imposture carried out by the American "Professor" Garner, in connection with his famous expedition to Gorillaland, will find in the book which he has just published the fullest confirmation of everything that has been said or suggested about him in these columns. Although this work does not profess to be devoted exclusively to Garner's experiences in the cage which he erected in the African jungle, they naturally occupy a considerable place in the volume. The reader is told in the preface that "the favourable conditions under which the writer has been placed in the study of these animals in the freedom of their native jungle, have not hitherto been enjoyed by any other student of nature." In Chapter II. a full description of the cage is given, with photographs. Chapter III. contains a detailed description of the hero's life in this marvellous habitation. Later chapters contain casual references to observations on various apes alleged to have been made from the cage; and when, towards the end of the book, we get to the subject of gorillas we are favoured with detailed accounts of certain interviews with these beasts which Garner held from behind the bars. If, therefore, Garner had anything to say in answer to the imputations that have been made on his veracity, or if he could produce a single fact calculated to suggest that he did really live in this cage for upwards of 100 days—as he has asserted, and now asserts over again—it might be looked for in this book as a matter of course.

It will be looked for in vain. In the description he gives of life in the jungle at Fernan Vaz—or Ferran Vaz—there is not a word which might not have been as easily and graphically penned by any one who had resided, as Garner undoubtedly did, in comfortable quarters at a mission station, and passed a few hours in excursions into the forest. It is admitted, however, by all his critics that he really did spend two or three days and nights in the cage (accompanied by a native boy), and, granted this much, there is no difficulty in accounting for the presence of such little local colour as he has contrived to infuse into his account of his experiences. For the rest, the book will be searched in vain from cover to cover for evidence of one single observation or discovery of the slightest interest from a scientific point of view, which the writer himself has made during his pretended sojourn of over three months "in the heart of the primeval forest" (p. 20), under conditions which "have not hitherto been enjoyed by any other student of nature." The primary object of his expedition, the gorilla, is dealt with in three chapters of the book (XIV., XV., and XVI.). The first of these chapters deals generally with the habitat and physiology of the beast, the second with his "habits;" and, so far as I can discover, there is not a fact in the whole of the two chapters which can be recognised as the result of the writer's personal observations, unless it be his very full and interesting account of the screaming of gorillas by night, which, I suppose, there is no doubt that he has really heard. In the third of the gorilla chapters (No. XVI.) he gives some account of a young captive gorilla, which he says he kept for a time in his cage, but which died prematurely. This is followed by brief memoranda of the occasions on which he saw other live gorillas from his cage, and if he had said "at different times twenty-two gorillas came and looked at me and walked away," he would have given the reader just as much information as is conveyed in the six or eight pages devoted to this portion of his experiences. A curious point in this connection is that he takes a page and a half in telling how he succeeded in making a gorilla take his own photograph, describing the picture which he thus obtained; but though the book is freely illustrated with pictures of Garner himself under all circumstances, with pictures of scenery, pictures of natives, and pictures of apes in all attitudes—down to that of a chimpanzee riding a tricycle in the Manchester zoological garden—that supremely interesting picture, the photograph of a gorilla at home, taken by himself, has not been considered by the great exploiter of gorilladom worthy of reproduction.

There is another and still more curious omission under the head of gorillas. Shortly after Garner's return to the United States in March, 1894, an interview with him was published by the New York Recorder. In this occurred the following, among other statements:—

> Professor Garner did not find his cage a complete protection against the attacks of gorillas, but it was strong enough to keep them at bay until he could shoot them. . . . .

Strange to say, not a word about the attacks of the gorillas on the cage, nor the shooting of the beasts by the "Professor" while held at bay, appears in Garner's present volume. On the contrary, he describes the gorillas as decamping almost as soon as they caught sight of him, and he gave a similar account of them in his lecture in London on his return. What is more, in connection with the famous visit of "a huge female gorilla," carrying her infant on her back—which we now learn lasted "about four minutes," though it takes two pages to describe, and has already furnished nearly a column of copy (and a picture) to an American newspaper—Garner tells us that he was sorely tempted to shoot his lady visitor, but restrained himself because he was afraid of frightening away others—for which reason also he "had refrained from firing his gun anywhere within a radius of a mile or so of his cage." All this is obviously inconsistent with the story of his shooting down the gorillas. In one place, the reader is presented with a plate illustrating the skulls of ten gorillas, with an account of the history of each. Six of them belong to the Liverpool Museum; others were picked up by Garner in Africa; but not an allusion is made to the skulls, or any other portions of the anatomy of the ferocious beasts which would have demolished the cage, and the Professor too, had he not shot them down while the bars held them at bay. No one who reads the book can doubt that the story of the attack by the gorillas on the cage is a pure invention. Was the story invented by the New York Recorder or by Garner?

I do not propose to waste my own time, or my readers' with any further discussion of this precious book. What I have said will be sufficient to show that it is in keeping with all that is known about the author, outside his own romancing statements. Let me put side by side with his own account of the cage performance the evidence of others who were on the spot. This is Garner (p. 20):—

> I selected a place in the heart of the primeval forest, erected my little fortress, and gave it the name of "Fort Gorilla."
>
> In the latter part of April, 1893, I took up my abode in this desolate spot, and began my long and solitary vigil.
>
> My sole companion was a young chimpanzee that I named Moses, and, from time to time, a native boy, as a servant. . . .
>
> In this novel hermitage I remained for the greater part of the time for one hundred and twelve days and nights in succession, watching these animals in perfect freedom following the pursuits of their daily life.

Now, what are the facts as testified by other witnesses? Six months after he had landed in Africa, the interval having been spent in enjoying the hospitality of traders in other parts where gorillas are unknown, Garner arrived at Fernan Vaz, and took up his quarters in the French Mission at that place. This was on April 25, 1893. The "desolate spot" which he selected for the erection of "Fort Gorilla" was about fifteen minutes' walk from the Mission, and within sound of the convent bells. He did not "take up his abode" in the "fort," but merely paid occasional visits to it. He spent two or three nights there, never without the boy, and by the testimony of his companion, they thought they heard gorillas while there. He enjoyed at the convent "a good bed and a good table," and paid his attentions freely (as the missionaries state) to the mission claret. He was under agreement to pay to the mission five francs a day for his board and lodging, and when he departed in August he was indebted to his hosts to the amount of 500 francs—representing his bill for 100 days. He was unable to discharge this debt, and gave the missionaries a document binding himself to discharge it "on arrival of remittances from England or America." Up to a year and a half later his promissory note remained unpaid, and to the best of my belief Garner still remains indebted to the missionaries for his keep during the whole period which he professes to have spent in his famous cage.

These facts are established (1) by the evidence of traders and others on the spot, who saw through Garner, and communicated with me before his return to England; (2) by that of the French traveller Dybowski, who went over the same ground immediately afterwards, took the statements of the missionaries, and of the boy who had been with Garner in the cage, and denounced Garner as an impostor at a meeting of the French Geographical Society in Paris; and (3) by the direct evidence of the head of the French Mission in the letter addressed to me, and published in TRUTH of February 27, 1894, together with a copy of Garner's promissory note, of which I have a photograph now in my possession. These facts have been published, and have stood unanswered for years. Garner has been questioned on them by representatives of the American Press, and has only answered by calling M. Dybowski a "second-hand clothes dealer," the missionaries "Jesuits" (which they are not), and by announcing his intention of coming to England to pull my nose—a promise which, like that to pay the missionaries for his 100 days' keep, he has up to the present time made no attempt to carry out.

It may seem almost incredible that there should be any occasion to repeat to-day the story of this humiliating exposure. The publication of Garner's book, however, has revealed the fact that to this moment numerous instructors of the public in the British Press remain absolutely in the dark as to Garner's true character. Journals of light and leading in London and the provinces—conspicuous among them such papers as the Globe, the Daily News, the Spectator, and the Liverpool Post—have seriously reviewed the book, and retailed Garner's fictions to a credulous public, without a hint that the whole story of his adventures among the gorillas has been proved to be a piece of impudent humbug. Such an exhibition is pitiful, and to those journalists who feel any pride in their profession, humiliating as well, but it may have one satisfactory result. Should this ignorant trumpeting lead to any considerable sale of the book, assets will be realised which will at least suffice for the discharge of the debt which Garner left unpaid when he bade adieu to monkey-land. I would recommend the too-confiding missionaries at Fernan Vaz to at once sign judgment in this country on Garner's unpaid bill, and attach the proceeds of his book in the hands of Messrs. Osgood, McIlvaine, & Co. That will not only be an act of justice to themselves, but will set at rest for ever the question where Garner really spent those hundred days and nights.

For Throat Irritation and Cough, "Epps's Glycerine Jujubes" always prove effective. They are now sold only in tins, price 7½d. & 1s. 1½d., labelled James Epps & Co., Ltd., Homœopathic Chemists.

NOTES FROM PARIS.

THE LATEST THING IN ANTI-FAT.

DOCTORS are finding out that fair patients, who have not been some time in training, should not take cycle rides of 200 or 300 miles. One may say of cycling, "Chi va piano, va sano." The very long ride on the "bike" is disastrous to any skin not in the most healthy state. It may even spoil a good skin by overtaxing its power as an organ of elimination. It is no paradox to say that the more we live the more we die daily. Death shadows life, not only around, but in us. In living, we kill ourselves piecemeal; the dead matter turns to virulent poison. It kills as certainly as arsenic when we cannot speedily throw it off. Great exercise, by making the flame of life blaze brighter, deepens the death shadow.

Intensity of life and the perpetual motion of childhood subject the child to the usual "diseases of infancy." They are as the safety-valve. When we are young and strong, the dead matter is not allowed to accumulate. It falls from us like water from a duck's back, but as we advance in years of indiscretion the skin becomes less fit for its work, and the pleasures to be found in long and vigorous spells of exercise too dangerous. I often thought that those long rides by mountain, moss, and moor of the Prince Consort at Balmoral in 1861 were the cause of the low fever that killed him. Sir Richard Wallace was another instance of the mischief of multiplying millionaire enjoyments by great exercise. For fifteen years after Sir Richard came into the great Hertford fortune he kept on yachting and mountain climbing as if for a wager. When he got to the top of a mountain, or when his yacht scudded across blue water, he was as hungry as a hawk. He could eat often and with appetite, though nature kept warning him, by the failure of his teeth, to avoid tough food, and, indeed, any heavy feeding. So the death shadow grew blacker and blacker. He had aches all over, and at last became a martyr to gouty rheumatism. Inflammatory crises became more frequent; he went off in one of them—prematurely, I believe—for he was intended by nature to live to extreme old age.

A special treatment for victims of the "bike" has already sprung up. Of the medicinal part I am ignorant, but I know that the Russian bath, hot drinks, and lying in a heated bed are among its features. Not a few cases of typhus have been traced to long cycle tours. No doctor objects to the use—only to the abuse—of cycling. That darling of lady patients, Dr. Lutaud, prescribes moderate and regular cycling in his anti-fat treatment. Mme. Sarah Bernhardt is alive to the advantages of his regimen. The Lutaud dietary is five spare meals or "snacks" a day. Why so many? To prevent craving for much food at a time. Taking five meals a day, one is never very hungry. One is allowed at the first breakfast, between seven and nine, 1½ oz. to 2 oz. of meat, and the same weight of toast, with no butter, and a cup of unsweetened tea. At lunch, between eleven and one p.m., meat according to appetite. It may be supplemented with an egg, poached or boiled, and cheese. The toast is again kept under 2 oz. For drink a cup of tea without milk. A light afternoon refreshment is taken of biscuits and a small glass of madeira and tea (unsweetened). Dinner between seven and eight, with no soup. Fish, meat, salad, celery, may be eaten heartily, but not ad libitum. From 1½ oz. to 2 oz. of boiled vegetables are allowed. Toast as at lunch, and a dessert of juicy fruit sparingly taken. Drink confined to a small glass of Bordeaux or Burgundy. The fifth meal is served between eleven at night and one in the morning. This is a time-table for society or stage people alone. It consists of cold lean meat or fowl, one biscuit, and a glass of madeira. Should thirst be very great, the patient (is it a patient?) rinses her mouth and moistens her lips. In no case should much drink be taken with or just after a meal. The best way to banish tormenting thirst is by the use of the vapour bath, followed by a douche. The hydro part of this treatment is most important, inasmuch as it stimulates the skin, opens pores, and throws out toxins.

Actresses are invariably prescribed Swedish gymnastics. So are Society ladies—if young enough to practise them with safety. This exercise is alternated with cycling and special massage. Being a mere laic, I do not venture to deal with iodides, extracts, bitters, cream of tartar, and what not, administered to the inner woman who wants to win back a sylph-like figure. Besides, what might not be a strong dose in the heavy, soporific English climate, might be an overdose in France. Temperaments have also to be considered. A lymphatic blond needs more help from the chemist than a lively brunette.

The fear of fat was the standing terror of actresses and models for the nude until the doctors saw the professional advantage of studying its treatment. You can improve a lean figure for stage purposes, but there is no way of hiding superfluous fat. Indeed, the fat woman is at her worst when elaborately dressed, and at her best in a rich, plain, well-cut gown, with a few large and magnificent jewels. The actress threatened with obesity can now follow an anti-fat regimen without resorting to the weakening Marienbad waters, or neglecting her theatrical work. But it is better not to throw any great strain on the brain while a dietary that excludes copious drinks is being followed. Toxins following on brain waste are the worst of all, and are best got rid of by non-alcoholic drinks.

Dr. Lutaud is a Parisian Lawson Tait; the friend in need of the fashionable ladies; has a gentle, soothing way of gaining their confidence, and, indeed, of "confessing" them. Like his British confrère, he has frolicsome spirits and both wit and drollery. The spirits are catching. Of the intrinsic merits of his anti-fat treatment I have no doubt. But could his lady patients undergo it were it not for his power to cheer them up? It is not enough to prescribe a treatment to patients who have been spoiled by fortune, and are in a state of almost Oriental torpor from the load of flesh which, as Falstaff puts it, is a frailty the more. It is here that the Lawson-Tait manner and power to enliven and "suggest" comes in. The Doctor is looked to by the patients to brace up their wills. They are glad to repeat their visits. Of course, poor things, they feel awfully low and depressed in the early days of the "cure." But when the mirror tells the flattering tale that bulk decreases without the skin becoming loosened in consequence, hope rises. The length of the treatment is long enough for the formation of dietetic habits that are helps to the triumph of the angel nature latent in all women.

Fat has sad disadvantages. The fat woman can never get a ready-made garment wide enough to fit her. She is in the way in a brougham, passes with difficulty to a place in the pit or balcony of the theatre, or at the far end of a pew already nearly filled. Cycling is, in her case, doubly dangerous. She hates to walk, she would be absurd on horseback. Her corsets are quickly shapeless and worn out; and what article of dress is more expensive than a well-made corset? But there are compensations. The nerves of the fat woman are muffled up. If good-natured, she becomes a delightful, indolent, hospitable soul, never worrying about trifles, easy to please, domestic, and glad to see happy faces round her. The late Mme. Alboni became an angel of kindness as she increased in flesh. Towards the end of her life a wide arm-chair was too narrow for her use, and a sofa hardly wide enough.

The photos of the new Duchesse d'Orléans are on sale all over the town. She is no chit, no insipid, blank schoolgirl, but looks une femme faite. The Hungarian surroundings in which she spent the eight-and-twenty years of her life have apparently influenced her character. She looks enterprising, shrewd, mettlesome and—must I apply such a word to a born Archduchess?—jolly. The strongest women of the Imperial family belong to her branch. They are the Queen of the Belgians and the Archduchess Elizabeth, mother of Queen Christina. It was rather daring of the Duchesse d'Orléans to don the closed or regalian crown at her wedding, which, be it remarked, took place at the Hofburg in the presence of the Emperor Francis Joseph and of a Court which more than any other attaches great importance to points of ceremonial. The wonder is that the Emperor suffered this outbreak of French royalism under his roof. He possibly was influenced by the Archduchess Elizabeth, the member of his family to whom he is most attached. She is, on account of Cuba, most anxious for an Orleanist restoration in France. The French are after Morocco. The Cuban insurrection, by wasting the strength of Spain, will, by and by, facilitate a French expedition to Tangier. I am not sure that a Bourbon restoration in France would release Queen Christina from any of her anxieties. French kings of the Bourbon lines were utter Jingoes. Louis Philippe was none the less a Jingo for trying to pass for a man of peace. It is not known that he had struck a bargain in 1847 with the Emperor Nicholas. France was to have the south side of the Mediterranean, including Tripoli, and the west bank of the Rhine; Egypt, as an overland route to India, was to be neutralised; and Russia was to do as she pleased with the rest of the Turkish Empire, save in the Holy Land. The Revolution of 1847 upset this arrangement.

The Queen of the Netherlands is under the wing of her judicious mother at Corbière, a quiet place in the hills above Aix and near the rack railway. The waters there are calming and a remedy for atony of the digestive organs. Queen Emma has begged the local authorities to make no fuss about her daughter.

Monsignor d'Hulst, Rector of the Catholic University and member of the Chamber of Deputies, who died on Saturday, was handsome, smooth, polished, and thought to resemble Queen Marie Amélie. He was curiously like her grandfather, Francis of Lorraine, Emperor of Germany, and had her long thin figure. His mother was one of the captivating persons in the Queen's circle whom the late Duc d'Orléans was known to admire. She could not but have returned his admiration, for he was reputed, and I dare say was, irresistibly seductive. However, Maurice d'Hulst, who was almost the same age as the Duc de Chartres, was nursed on the knees of Marie Amàlie, who, after her eldest son's tragical death, became wrapped up in Maurice. He was taken to Clermont, and kept there with the other grandchildren until it was time for him to go to a French school. The day he received the tonsure was spent by the ex-Queen of the French at Clermont in thanksgiving in her oratory. Monsignor d'Hulst was permeated with the Orleanist propensity for hair-splitting and mental reservation. He had an almost Royal air—much more so, indeed, than any of Marie Amélie's sons. But it might have been due to unconscious imitation in childhood. His long priest's gown fell exactly in the same straight lines as her robe. Right-thinking and aristocratic society admired and caressed him. He was, directly he entered the Church, cried up, in opposition to Monsignor Bauer, as a paragon of eloquence and distinction. I heard him at the first grand Joan of Arc service in the Cathedral of Orleans. He was then Canon of St. Denis, and was named by Bishop Dupanloup to eulogise the Maid. How little he understood that glorious wench! She was pared and smoothed down by him into the semblance of an amateur fille du régiment. A lady, meaning to praise him, asked me whether I did not think the Abbé d'Hulst's discourse très comme il faut. I did.

LETTER FROM THE LINKMAN.

SOME years ago, dear Lady Betty, when certain matters connected with an important branch of the Public Service were being severely commented upon in TRUTH, the chief of the Department which was being attacked, wrote to me asking that I should call upon him. I did so, and he immediately handed me all the private papers relating to the business. "Read these," he said: "of course the contents are not to be made public, but as I am in complete accord with the Editor of TRUTH upon this subject, I wish you to be in possession of the real facts of the case, and to communicate them to that gentleman so that he may not weaken his endeavour to remedy a serious evil by publishing erroneous matter." Having read the papers, I promised to perform the mission that had been entrusted to me, but, as my friend saw me out into the passage, he added, "Mind, it may be my duty to contradict officially in Parliament every word which appears in TRUTH. Good-bye."

Last week I began my letter to you with the following words :—

"The Government has decided to abandon Cyprus. The island will not be returned to Turkey, nor will it be transferred to any other Power, but arrangements are being completed to give Cyprus to the Cypriots, the European Powers undertaking to respect its independence. The announcement of this arrangement, together with the details of the agreement, will be officially communicated in due course."

This information has, as it was certain to be, been officially contradicted. Bearing in mind, however, the interview which has been described in the first paragraph, I do not attach the slightest importance to the contradiction, nor do those whose position enables them to know the real facts of the case. An official contradiction is now equivalent to the conventional "Not at home" which servants are instructed to say to unwelcome or inopportune visitors. In the course of the next three or four months, it may be necessary to recall the emphatic denial which has been authoritatively communicated to the Press, and to make clear the difference which exists between the words "accurate" and "authoritative."

* * * * *

That the members of the Royal Academy have elected Mr. Poynter to be their President has given satisfaction to the majority of those who took interest in the matter. Several writers have suggested in the newspapers that Mr. Poynter should now resign his appointment of Director of the National Gallery. Mr. Poynter has no intention whatever of doing this. His colleagues at the Royal Academy, when discussing the merits of those who were considered to be suitable for the post of President, carefully considered the circumstances that Mr. Poynter was not a rich man, and that it might seriously embarrass him if he were obliged to resign the appointment in question. With full knowledge of all the facts, they decided to elect him, and the matter was, therefore, settled before he was called upon to preside over that body. As Director of the National Gallery Mr. Poynter receives £1,000 a year, whilst the salary attached to the post of President of the Royal Academy is some hundreds. In his latter capacity Mr. Poynter will have to spend considerably more than he receives, and under the circumstances it would be suicidal upon his part to resign the better paid post.

* * * * *

Unless unforeseen events occur, Mr. Walter Armstrong, the Director of the National Gallery of Ireland, is almost certain in due course to succeed Mr. Poynter as Director of the National Gallery in Trafalgar-square. In these days, the expert connoisseur of pictures knows so much more about them than the artist does, or can do, that the latter cannot expect to compete with the former in the matter. In this form of knowledge Mr. Armstrong towers head and shoulders above his contemporaries, and it is admitted on all sides that if the office of Director of the National Gallery becomes vacant in the near future, it will be for the good of the collection that he should be appointed to the post.

* * * * *

The Royal Societies' Club, in St. James's-street, which was opened nine months ago, is about to further justify its existence. Dr. Nansen, the celebrated Arctic explorer, is to be entertained at dinner at the Club on Friday, the 5th of February, by the members and committee of that institution, and it is hoped that in his after-dinner speech he will give his first sketchy account of the memorable voyage. The full account will, of course, be reserved to be delivered on the evening of the following Monday, when Dr. Nansen will describe his experiences before the members of the Royal Geographical Society and their guests, which gathering is to take place at the Queen's Hall.

* * * * *

The simultaneous deaths of the Bishop of Killaloe and his wife, which occurred last week, have almost a counterpart in the deaths of Lord and Lady Rivers, who died within a few hours of each other. The Lady Rivers in question was the eldest daughter of the first Lord Granville.

* * * * * *

The "Jerningham Letters," which have recently been published, edited by Mr. Egerton Castle, are composed of extracts from the letters of Lady Jerningham and her daughter, Lady Bedingfeld, who were attached to the Court in the two previous reigns, and from those of other writers connected with these families. To those like the Howards, the Throgmortons, the Peters, the Carys, the Blounts, the Dillons, and the numerous others who are inextricably connected with the two families, the Letters may have interest, but they can scarcely be expected to entertain the general public. A circumstance related in the diary of Lady Bedingfeld concerning the Lady Howe of the day, however, deserves to be reproduced :—

"The Queen thinks Lady Howe odd in manner, saying and doing just what comes into her head. Her Majesty gave me a singular instance, viz. :—Once going with the king (William IV.) and Lord and Lady Howe in the carriage, Lady Howe being tired put her two feet up without ceremony on her husband's knee who sat facing her. The Queen could not help laughing at the oddity of the thing and Lord Howe's extreme embarrassment. This, however, was not all, for she put them out of the window, paying no sort of attention to Lord Howe's signals of distress, but saying: 'What do you mean by shaking your head?'"

A modern King of England driving through the streets with the legs of a Lady-in-Waiting dangling out of the window of his chariot, like a couple of Lord Mayor's maces, is too funny an incident to be left unrecorded.—Believe me to be, very truly yours, MARMADUKE.

SPORTING NOTES.

ST. FRUSQUIN is going to the stud, and his fee will be 200 gs. In my opinion Mr. de Rothschild would have acted far more wisely if he had given this horse a year's rest. St. Frusquin has been worked very hard indeed for two seasons, and it is unfair to rush him off to the stud without giving him time to recover. The same idiotic course was adopted with Common, who had been much more tenderly treated on the turf, for he never ran as a two-year-old, and he started only four times as a three-year-old, but he has been a complete failure as a sire, the winnings of his stock being under £1,000. Common will very likely do better before long, as he comes of a breed which requires time to develop, but his case ought to serve as a warning against the increasing and pernicious practice of sending young horses to the stud directly they have done with racing.

The authorities at Ascot are going to increase the added money by £3,000, but the additional sum to be given might just as well be shovelled into the Thames for all the good it will do the meeting if it is to be squandered in the manner proposed. The Cup, which already has an endowment of £3,000, is to get an additional £1,000. This event certainly does not require more money, nor is

RIVIERA.—Magnificent Building Sites at Beaulieu, facing the sea, to be Sold.—Apply, TERSLING, Mentone; KURZ, Agent, Beaulieu; SHERRY, Raymond-buildings, W.C.

"TRUTH" will be sent weekly to any address in the United Kingdom for 7s. for 3 months; 14s. for 6 months; or 28s. for 12 months. The subscription for all Countries included in the Postal Union is, 3 months, 7s. 8d.; 6 months, 15s. 4d.; 12 months, £1 10s. 8d. All subscriptions are payable in advance, and cheques and P.O.O.'s should be made payable to the MANAGER, "Truth" Buildings, Carteret-street, S.W.

it in the least degree likely that the alteration will increase the entries or bring out a larger field. So exceedingly few of the horses now in training can really stay a Cup course that long distance events are not likely again to become popular until the reckless over-racing of two-year-olds, which is now so scandalously common, has been prohibited. It is absolute nonsense and rubbish to give more money to the Alexandra Plate and Ascot Stakes. By far the best arrangement would have been to convert the Hardwicke Stakes into a £5,000 race. There ought to be a really valuable stake at Ascot for three-year-olds and upwards over a mile and a-half, as the Hardwicke has languished dolefully since the £10,000 race at the Newmarket First July Meeting was started.

Florizel II. cannot be trained again, his race at Ascot having settled him, so he goes to the stud, and his fee will be 100 gs., which is twice too much, when his performances come to be calmly considered. He will stand at Newmarket.

Fifty-one horses have been handicapped for the Derby Cup of £2,000, and on this occasion Winkfield's Pride's merits have been fully recognised, for he has 8 st. 7 lb. to carry, being made the equal of Champaubert, and 4 lb. better than Shaddock. It seems to me that that race will be a good thing for Ghislaine (7 st. 10 lb.) if she runs. Whittier, who was so much fancied in the spring for the Kempton Park Jubilee Handicap with 8 st. 10 lb., now has 8 st. 2 lb. The Duke of Devonshire will very likely win the Chesterfield Nursery of £1,000 (for which race there are forty-nine entries) with the filly by Ayrshire out of Snood.

It must be admitted that the starving policy which the Jockey Club have always followed in respect of the stakes at Newmarket is justified by its success, so far as the principal events are concerned. Ninety-seven yearlings were nominated last week for the Two Thousand of 1898, and there are ninety-two yearling fillies entered for the One Thousand. This year the respective numbers were ninety and ninety-two, and for next year they are seventy-six and eighty-four. The subscription is a wonderfully large one, considering that there is not a farthing of added money, and the sweepstakes is £100 each, £50 forfeit, so that if one of the yearlings engaged dies the day after entry there is a liability of £50. The Prince of Wales has patronised both races, his single entry for the Two Thousand being Ormathwaite, by Orme out of Marguerite, and he has three fillies in the One Thousand, including Azeeza, half-sister, by Surefoot, to Persimmon. The Duke of Westminster and Mr. W. P. Thompson are the largest subscribers to the Two Thousand, each with five entries, and next comes Prince Soltykoff with four, and then the Duke of Portland, Sir Tatton Sykes, Mr. Rucker, Sir J. Miller, Sir Blundell Maple, Mr. Brassey, Mr. McCalmont, and Sir R. Waldie Griffith, with three each. The Duke of Westminster and the Duke of Portland have five each in the fillies' race, and next come Mr. W. P. Thompson and Sir Blundell Maple with four each. The Middle Park Plate has 110 entries, which is a very large number considering that the liability is £25. The £500 nominally added to the race is got back by the entrances, and there will be a surplus of £50. The entries for the other events are quite up to the average of recent years, and the Limekiln Stakes appears to be the only race which has not filled. I do not wonder at its failure, considering the idiotic pecuniary conditions. There is a good entry for the Dullingham Plate, which will be run at next year's Second July Meeting, and among the three-year-olds which have been engaged are Roquebrune, Jolly Boat, Knight of the Thistle, Chit Chat, Balsamo, and South Australian. No fewer than eighty-seven foals have been entered for the Bedford Plate of £800, which is run at the Second Spring Meeting in 1898. This is the race in which Isinglass made his début. Mr. Lorillard has entered seven animals bred in the United States, and he is the largest subscriber, Mr. Botterill coming next with six. Mr. D. Cooper has an own brother to Float, and Mr. McCalmont has a colt by Deemster out of Virgin Queen. Sir Blundell Maple's lot of five includes a filly by Royal Hampton out of Priestess. The Duke of Portland has a filly by Morion out of Semolina, and one of Lady Stamford's is a half sister to Kirkconnel, by Juggler. There is an excellent entry of mares for the Column Produce Stakes, to run at the Craven Meeting, 1900. The Duke of Portland is giving the Australian horse Carbine every chance, both Memoir and Mowerina (dam of Donovan) having been sent to him. Mr. L. de Rothschild's lot includes Isabel (dam of St. Frusquin), who, of course, was again sent to St. Simon. Lord Durham has Primrose Day served by Marcion, and Bellatrix by Orme. Lord Derby has Bridget served by Orme, and Travancore by Sheen. "Mr. Jersey's" Lady Rosebery has been sent to Ravensbury, and Sir J. Miller's Thebais to St. Simon. Mr. Platt's lot of seven includes St. Marguerite, served by Isinglass, and Lonely by St. Simon. Mr. Rose has sent Arcadia to St. Simon, and Lorette to Bonavista.

Sir Blundell Maple has sold Kirkconnel to Count Lehndorff, and the horse is going to join the Prussian Royal Stud at Graditz.

There was no racing last week of any general interest. Sardis, who has repeatedly been fancied for important handicaps, carried off the Great Tom Stakes at Lincoln, defeating two great "pots" in Court Ball and Birch-rod. At Northampton the principal handicap fell to Mr. L. de Rothschild with Rodomont, who had previously been a winner over this course.

The Duke of Portland's colt Chancery did well in a gallop at Newmarket the other day, and he is very likely to win a race at Derby.

At last year's Newmarket Winter Sale the preposterous price of 1,650 gs. was paid by C. Morbey for Solaro. I pointed out at the time that there had never been a better sold horse, and the subsequent course of events has proved the correctness of my opinion. Solaro has never won a race, and Mr. Morbey, finding him a useless possession, has presented the beast to J. Cannon.

Twenty-three horses have accepted for the Liverpool Cup, of which three are in Marsh's stable, and three other trainers are doubly represented, so there is not likely to be a large field, although some fifteen horses have figured in the betting. The early speculation on such a race as this, represents, however, merely the harum-scarum fancies of eager backers, whose impetuosity to get on these supposed good things is only equalled by their ignorance respecting both the condition of the animal to which their money is entrusted and the intentions of its owner. There will no doubt be plenty of betting on the day of the race. Regret must be getting stale by this time, after all the work he has done this season, and if he does succeed in winning a race at Liverpool it will probably be the St. Leger, which is run this afternoon. Royal Corrie is the other Kingsclere candidate, but he needs a man on his back. Ghislaine will probably be reserved for the Derby Cup, Balsamo running for Marsh's stable on Friday. Avilion cannot stay the course, and Count Schomberg, the nominal favourite, is a beast that has proved a veritable quicksand for the money of his infatuated friends. Contract has gone utterly to the bad, but his stable-companion, Stowmarket, is much fancied at Newmarket, and it will be remembered that Mr. Barnato's horse showed good form over this course last March, when he won the Spring Cup. Diakka (the American colt) ran very badly at Lincoln, and, after her performance in the Great Tom Stakes, Birch Rod does not seem to have much chance for Friday's event. Phœbus Apollo has lost his form, at least for the time, through the idiotic blunder of training him for the Cesarewitch, by which his speed has been impaired, while he has not gained in stamina. Gulsalberk, winner of the Irish Derby, is very well in, and so is Dremnakeever, a son of Kendal, who has also shown good form in Ireland. Telescope and Earwig, having several times ran badly when backed, I shall be surprised if the race goes to Stanton. Chit Chat ought to run well if he goes for this race. Paris III. can have no chance after his doleful exhibition at Northampton, and he is not likely to run. I shall throw over all the fancied candidates, and shall plump for Roughside.

CYCLING SUITS are a speciality at Ulster House, Conduit-street, London, W., where Ulsters, Overcoats, and Capes are kept ready for immediate use.

A special meeting of the members of the Jockey Club is to be held at Lord Derby's house in St. James's-square on Monday, December 7, when the Stewards will propose certain very important alterations in their Rules of Racing, which deal with the matter of handicapping. The reforms which have been decided upon are of a practical and drastic character, and I shall discuss them before the meeting takes place. Lord Durham has earned the gratitude of the Turf by drawing attention to the present defective and chaotic system of handicapping.

The result of the Fours at Cambridge can only be described as pre-eminently satisfactory and encouraging. Last year it will be remembered that there was a great improvement in this event, and my University correspondent at once prophesied that the University race would be a hard tussle. In a four good watermanship as well as oarsmanship is essential, and if there are good College fours the President has not to go far to select his material for the University crew. Third Trinity were undoubtedly a good four, although the fact that Guinness could only train for eight days before the race hampered them a lot. At the same time, under the most favourable circumstances, they could hardly have hoped to beat the Hall, who had as good a crew as they had eight or nine years ago when they won the Stewards at Henley. This is saying a great deal, and as there were three old Blues in the crew there is little doubt that the bowman, Campbell Muir, will succeed Hope in that position. The Emmanuel men were very smart with their hands, and Pearson has a good record. The L.M.B.C. crew were fairly fast but steered badly. "First," as usual, were disappointing, and cling pertinaciously to their worst faults, except Adie, who has improved a lot. He now weighs thirteen stone and a half. On his present form he would have been invaluable in the middle of the boat with Guinness. Unfortunately, he is off to India. Bell has a great prospect of pulling off the race, and every one will wish him the best of luck. He has begun well with his College four, and Mr. Trevor Jones may well be proud of his success as coach.

In the Granta this week there is an article on the Cambridge Mission in South London, and the writer argues against the necessity for the appointment of a clerical head of this University Mission, which is to take over Trinity-court in Camberwell, hitherto organised by Trinity men. The conclusion of the article is too good to be lost. The logic is delightful, and the argument unique. Dealing with the population in South London the writer concludes, "They take a vast interest in Cambridge goings-on; in the cricket season they know all the scores, and in the winter they know, or think they know, who is going to get his blue at "Rugger" or "Soccer," and for the last seven years have lost large sums over the boat race. We have a reputation to keep up in South London, and so we ought to send them some one who is somebody, not any one who is anybody." Surely a missionary from the Anti-Gambling League will at once be added to the staff of the Trinity or Cambridge Mission. Most old University men will consider that so far as the boat race is concerned the University reputation in South London cannot be a very popular one, and the sooner it is lost the better. I advise the South Londoners to take odds if any one is prepared to back Oxford with seven old Blues in residence. There will be plenty of time to hedge, and a really good chance of making up for the previous losses.

It is a very good thing that the Croydon and Old Merchant Taylors teams are good friends, otherwise there would have been very little left of either of the teams or the referee at the end of the match at Richmond. The refereeing was at times almost farcical, and the Referees' Association will have to be a little more careful in the officials it sends out. There was a roar of laughter from the supporters of one team to whom an offside was awarded when the opposing team claimed and ought obviously to have had it. In the second half less than twenty minutes was played, the referee first saying time was up, and then explaining that it was too dark to play on. The game itself was chiefly forward, and the halves had a fine outing offside at times.

The absence of their best halves and Bunting at three-quarters weakened Richmond a good deal in their match with Oxford, who have improved a lot forward since they played the Scottish. But they did not last all through; and this was why Richmond scored twice in the second half. At the same time, their outsides are a splendid lot of players. The halves are much better than last year, and Baker keeps the three-quarters together, while Smith is the best back in the United Kingdom. Their admirers say they are the best outsides since the days of Wade's team, and they are not very wrong. But the defeat of Richmond was not the only startling result of Saturday's play. At Blackheath the Scottish were victorious, and the result was due to greatly-improved forward play. Macmillan was playing again, and the history of the match against Oxford was repeated. He made the team as no other man could have done. He was always on the ball, and collared like a terrier. The Heathens were playing Kendall at three-quarter. He has been playing for Rosslyn Park very successfully for several seasons. Why he has changed his allegiance it is not for me to inquire. At the same time, players do not leave Blackheath to play for Rosslyn Park, and most people would prefer to see a leading club like Blackheath supplying vacancies from men who have been born and bred in the club, instead of recruiting from other leading metropolitan clubs. Some good play by Bennett outside was responsible for the win of Kensington over St. Thomas's, while the wet ground and the weakness in attack of the three-quarters prevented Cooper's Hill from doing much against St. Bart's. The play in the match between the Midlands and Surrey was most disappointing. Forward the teams were fairly equal, but the Surrey outsides were outclassed and outpaced in every way. Their attempts at passing were puerile, and their endeavours to tackle childish. It was a miserable display.

The outcome of the agitation about professional cricketers in the summer has certainly borne fruit. Yorkshire is making arrangements to pay the men during the winter, and Warwick is apparently going to do the same thing, and has engaged several promising players. Certainly it is very unwise to expect a player to put by for the winter out of four months' earnings. Very few men are so frugal, and if the pay is a little less during the summer, and regular during the winter, it will be much better for the men. They will be better provided for and less likely to abandon a county in whose employ they are. It would be as well if all the counties could arrange some such system, but, of course, the wishes of the "pros" would have to be ascertained.

The Manchester Touring Association has been started to supplement the work of the Cyclist Touring Club in that district. The subscription is only a shilling a year, and its object is to look after the interests of riders as to railway and other charges, to secure accommodation in villages and other places, to get local authorities to improve roads, and to arrange for boys to clean members' machines. I shall be interested to hear how the association succeeds. Some such body is needed in every district. It can look after local needs, and bring pressure to bear for local improvements and reforms, and in every way supplement and support what is practically the parent organisation, that is, the C.T.C.

One is waiting patiently for the heading in the paper "A Beak and his Bike." A popular metropolitan magistrate, who is an enthusiastic cyclist, has narrowly escaped the honour. His story of how he crept into a provincial town without a light one evening is very amusing; and on another occasion he was wheeling his machine at the edge of the footpath, as the road had been repaired in such a way as to invite punctures. A local Bumble remarked, "Do you know, sir, I could summon you?" "Yes, I know you could," said the magistrate. His graceful submission to local dignity saved him. I should very much like that magistrate to deal with those blackguards who, in Brixton the other Sunday, caused innumerable punctures by putting a plentiful supply of boot-plates with the sharp nail sides upwards in the road. Not only were the bicycles injured, but it was a cruel thing for dogs and horses.

If you want to entirely Furnish your House or select any article of Furniture or Carpet, &c., send for HEWETSONS' Illustrated Priced Catalogue.—HEWETSONS, Tottenham Court-road, London.

Mr. Roston Bourke, who was recently suspended by the Football Association, has taken a peculiar course. He recently published his version of the case, and on his statement, he appeared to have been badly, if not improperly, treated. Since then he has taken counsel's opinion, which he has published. His counsel have advised that he has not been suspended, because the body that suspended him had no power to do so, that the publication of the report of the commission and the decision of the committee is libellous, and that Mr. Bourke may await with confidence any proceedings that may be regularly taken against him, and in the meantime he may act as though no suspension had taken place. I have briefly summarised the opinion, but no one can attach much value to any opinion unless one knows the facts on which it is based. If it is perfectly correct, then he has his action for libel. But for a man to publish his counsels' advice broadcast is a peculiar way of vindicating his character, which is not nearly so effective as a writ. It appears to be fashionable to act in this way. The cabmen did so; but the immediate consequences were not pleasant.

At the Crystal Palace very few spectators came to see the Association match between the Wolves and Small Heath. As nothing depended on the result, the play was of the holiday description. The public expects this, and stays away. The only way appears to be to give the winners a bonus. But this they might agree to divide. Perhaps a good League match might be played there, and such an event would draw. The Cambridge University team still pursues its victorious career. But its victory over a strong Old Carthusian's team will not enhance its reputation for combined play. However, it showed that it could win when combination is at a discount and each man plays for himself. A few years ago Oxford failed because it had not this very useful capacity. In the League matches, Liverpool had their revenge against Sunderland, the winning forwards playing a good combined game. In other club games, Oxford had an easy win against the Old Foresters, and the London Caledonians had a weak team which could not do much against the 3rd Grenadiers, whose combination is very good.

At Cambridge on the first day of the Freshmen's sports the only good performance was the mile, which was won fairly easily by Graham, from Rossall, while Toppin, of Clifton, was second. The winner is comparatively new to the path, and, if he takes care of himself, he should be a useful runner. The South London Harriers race for the Hibbs Challenge Cup produced a good race, and Hibbs was successful. The handicapping in a four mile run, for which a large number of the Tee-to-tum members turned out, was very good. Hammond got home first, and ten out of a field of forty-five finished in the first minute.

There is little doubt that cycling will be even more popular next year than it has been this, and bicycle gymkhana and musical rides are pretty sure to become increasingly fashionable. With this latter prospect in view, Major Walter Wingfield has compiled a book, with diagrams and drawings, for the assistance of those who get up, or take part, in such entertainments, the work giving full instructions for the performance of a number of rides and evolutions, and for the arrangement and carrying out of a bicycle gymkhana. The title is "Bicycle Gymkhana and Musical Rides."

China and Glass. — Messrs. Goode, Artists and Designers, solicit an inspection of their collection in their recently-extended South Audley-street premises, now by far the largest and most important in Europe. Messrs. Goode guarantee the excellence of all their productions, and invite a comparison of their prices with those of any co-operative stores.

MAMMON.

From MOSES MOSS to BENJAMIN BOSS.

Sunday.

MY DEAR BEN,—Last week I wrote to you on the eve of the Presidential elections, and now I am happy to be able to place on record that these resulted in a sweeping victory of McKinley and the sound money party. Thus, with one stroke, the whole financial position is changed, and instead of having to look forward to possible disaster, we are now on the eve of what should prove a period of exceptional prosperity—at all events, as far as finance and trade in connection with the United States are concerned. But the influence of the Republican victory in the States will not stop short there, but should benefit our industries and our stock markets generally. In fact, we have already

A General Upward Movement,

not only in Yankee Rails, but also in Home Railway securities, in Consols and other gilt-edged securities, and in a portion of the Foreign market. How absurd the boast of the Silverites was, that they were certain to carry the election, can now be realised; but Bryan does not take his defeat badly, and his cablegram to McKinley is a dignified one, viz.: "I hasten to extend my congratulations. We submitted the issue to the American people, and their will is law." Precisely! And I am glad to see that the American people have decided in favour of honesty and of the fulfilment of all just obligations as against repudiation. The effect of the elections has been instantaneous, and not only were larger orders for manufactured goods at once telegraphed from all parts of the States to Europe, but mills, factories, and iron-works are being re-opened all over the country, and the hoarded millions are coming out, now that the bogey of free coinage, and of the upheaval of the masses against the classes, has been laid. Upon Home Rails the McKinley triumph has also acted instantaneously, and a general advance is marked, which will doubtless make further progress. Another favourable point is the satisfactory manner in which the Paris end of October settlement has passed off. This has already been felt in a rise in Interbourse Securities, and should react even more strongly upon the South African market, the recent weakness in which was chiefly produced by the indiscriminate selling of French holders. Indications are multiplying that an important recovery in the Kaffir Circus is close at hand. West Australians, which had hitherto resisted the surrounding weakness remarkably well, have shown a good deal of irregularity, and in some cases have given way owing to absurd and ignorant comments on the West Australian Goldfield which have appeared in certain periodicals. Advices from the colony are, however, very satisfactory, and with the receipt of further crushing results from a number of new mines, a recovery will no doubt come about. The industrial department has again displayed much strength, and as we approach the opening of the cycling season a strong rally is looked for in the Cycle section of the Stock Exchange. One of the most curious features, and a favourable one, is the disappearance of all nervousness with regard to the Turkish Question. A year ago Lord Salisbury was listened to with rapt attention and grave misgivings when he explained the position of this country as regards the Sultan at the Guildhall Banquet. This year no one troubled himself much about what he said, for the very good reason that it is known that France and Russia had agreed upon a policy which is practically following the lines marked out by English statesmen. With the fear of financial disaster in the United States removed, with the chances of any disturbance in the monetary markets greatly lessened, with a strong impulse to all our industries, as far as they are drawn upon for American supplies, and with a much clearer political horizon, there should now be excellent prospects for British trade and commerce, and for a general revival in the Stock Markets.

Champagne.—Périnet & Fils' Cuvée Réservée. Vintages 1884, 1887, and 1889, are of unrivalled quality and highly recommended for present consumption. Of all Wine Merchants.

Home Rails Buoyant.

A series of important advances has taken place in Home Railway stocks, chiefly in connection with the Presidential elections in the United States. We have done without American purchases of our manufactures for so long a time, that the receipt of important orders from that quarter has given an unusual impulse in many branches of industry. It is true that the election of McKinley means a return to a Protectionist policy; but at the outset there will be a rush of imports to the States, in order to anticipate the tariff. American houses had allowed their stocks to run down exceptionally low, under the apprehension of a possible Bryan victory. Now that all doubt is removed, these stocks are being replenished. It is, moreover, conjectured that McKinley will probably be satisfied to raise the tariff only so far as to cover the deficit in the National Treasury; and from all accounts he is himself so highly gratified by the enthusiastic support given to his cause in this country, that England at all events may be satisfied that no specially hostile legislation against her will be attempted. Traffics for the past week of Home Rails show an increase of £50,000, and the total receipts of fifty-six Companies for the first fourteen weeks of the half year are now more than £800,000 higher than for the corresponding period of last year. Business with the States may be expected henceforth to add its stimulating influence. The Board of Trade returns for October just issued show an increase of £2,716,000 or 7⅝ per cent. in the imports, and a decrease of £173,869 or ¾ per cent. in the exports. The latter decrease is chiefly due to a decline in the exports of woollen and worsted to the United States, which had been very largely shipped to that destination in October, 1895. The most important improvement has taken place in Brighton "A," which are up at 181¾, and thus fully bear out the favourable view which I have for some time taken of this stock with its large amount of accrued dividend. Dover "A," so far, have not risen beyond 103½; but the South-Eastern is doing remarkably well, and the last working statement for the four weeks ending October 17 shows an increase in net receipts of £2,035. It is true that expenses have risen £1,258, but this is not surprising in view of the execrable weather which prevailed during that period. Dover "A" should certainly for the current year receive from 3¼ to 3½ per cent. dividend, and so favourable are recent developments that a further increase in dividends might, barring accidents, be looked for next year. Chatham stocks have also hardened, the Ordinary now being quoted 17¾. The Heavy division is again from one to three points higher, the latter advance being marked in North-Eastern, which have been in special favour in view of the flourishing condition of the shipbuilding trade. The strongest advance has, however, taken place in the Scotch section. Caledonian Deferred (Coras) and North British Deferred at 61½ and 49¼ respectively show a rise of three points for the week. I have explained for some time that the position of these lines has never been better. The Caledonian has now for the fourteen weeks of the current half year an increase of £23,569, the North British one of £31,662, while trade reports are in every respect satisfactory. There is quite a boom in the iron and steel trade, further larger orders have been placed for ships, and railway material for the Colonies and India is being heavily exported; while the revival in the United States also promises large purchases in the other industries. With increasing dividends in view, therefore, I quite expect a further important upward movement in both the deferred stocks. A correspondent, who has repeatedly written to me with reference to Coras, Vestas, and Ayrshires, and has, upon the whole, proved very correct, sends me a further forecast as follows:—

> For the current half-year, judging by traffics so far published, I estimate that the London and North Western will pay ½ per cent. more than in 1895 (last half-year); Great Western, ½ per cent. more; Berwicks, ¼ per cent. more; Midland, ¼ per cent. more; Glasgow and South Western, ½ per cent. more. The results for the whole year will work out:—L. & N. W., 7⅛ per cent., which at present price of 198 gives £3. 12s. per cent.; G. W., 6⅛ per cent., at the present price of 174 gives £3. 11s. per cent.; Midland, 5¾ per cent., at the present price of 165 gives £3. 10s. per cent.; and Ayrshires, 5¼ per cent., at the present price of 134 gives £3. 19s. per cent. The Glasgow and South Western stock is therefore £10 to £12 too low as compared with the others, and is a sound investment security. Besides, there is always the prospect of this stock being divided, which would further enhance the market value, say, £10.

My correspondent is evidently very much prejudiced in favour of Glasgow and South Western. I have nothing to say against this stock, except that there is no free market for it in London, and that anybody who desires to speculate in Scotch stocks here had very much better back Coras (Caledonian Deferred Ordinary) or North British Deferred, which are in every respect promising. Further attempts have been made by the "Bears" of Districts to throw doubt on the success of the deep-level express scheme. The latest stratagem resorted to was the publication in the Times of an alleged scheme for constructing a new underground electric railway from Cannon-street viâ the Strand and Piccadilly to Hammersmith, which was estimated to cost from £3,000,000 to £3,500,000. In view of the enormous cost of the expropriations which would have to be made in a part of London where house property stands at the highest possible price, six or seven millions would, no doubt, be the minimum at which such a scheme could be carried out. The names of the philanthropists, who are supposed to form the syndicate, are, unfortunately, not given. As the scheme could never pay, I assume that it will be relegated to oblivion after it has done service as a "bogey" to District shareholders. A few small speculators in Districts may have been frightened out, but it is a preposterous device, and the body of big shareholders, who have made up their minds to carry the new express scheme, are not likely to be caught with such chaff. I hear that everything is progressing favourably with the scheme.

Yankee Rails after the Victory.

I cannot help saying a word as to what might have happened, if, unfortunately, Bryan and the Silverites had been victorious. All our stock markets would have received a severe shock, and some big American houses would have had all their work cut out to keep afloat, while, instead of smiling faces in the American market, and a rise of from three to eight dollars, we should have experienced a fall of from five to twenty, and a general panicky feeling all round. No wonder that some of the wealthy men connected with the United States sat up all night on Tuesday until their cables came to hand, bringing the reassuring news. Hardly ever has such excitement been witnessed in the long-neglected Yankee Market as on Wednesday morning. Both brokers and jobbers were at their posts before ten o'clock, and a seething, pushing, and shouting crowd, reinforced from all parts of the "House," was competing for every kind of Yankee stock, from Southern Ordinary

Mortlock's China and Glass Business, Oxford-st., has entered its 150th year, being founded by John Mortlock in 1746. It is carried on by John George Mortlock, the great-great-grandson of the founder, who solicits patronage and recommendation.

Solution of Turkish Problem.—If the authorities at Constantinople would only supply themselves with that eminently soothing and strengthening liqueur, Grant's Morella Cherry Brandy, their difficulties would vanish, placidity of temper and the power of good government would follow as surely as the dawn succeeds the night. Sold everywhere.

to Milwaukee, and from Erie to Louisville. The prices of some of the stocks jumped from five to seven dollars from the previous closing quotations, large orders being received not only from the country but also from all parts of the continent, while American buyers, too, were in the market from the outset. It was not surprising that after this boom a reaction should have set in on profit-taking, more especially as various cablegrams were subsequently received from the United States representing McKinley's victory as less complete. This attempt to belittle the success of sound money did not however prevail for any length of time, as the Republican majority proved very much larger than most people had anticipated; and a majority for sound money is also assured both in the Senate and in the House of Representatives. Under these circumstances, it is most probable that early legislation will take place in the direction of currency reforms, such as are urgently required, and were repeatedly advocated by President Cleveland. The fact that withdrawals of gold for the United States have ceased would lead one to suppose that this movement would not be resumed, more especially as the hoarded gold—which I put in recent comments at a minimum of ten millions sterling—may now be expected to be released. I also explained last week, on the authority of an American banker, that funds to the extent of 200,000,000 dols., which had been kept back unemployed from fear of an adverse result of the elections, will now come out seeking investment; and there have evidently been large purchases by the American public ever since the elections were decided. How exactly the balance of trade will adjust itself in the near future it is difficult to tell. It has to be considered, in the first instance, that grain shipments to Europe continue, and also that Europe is again buying American securities, and the latter movement will doubtless assume large proportions, as many of the millions of European capital, which were withdrawn during recent years, will be reinvested in the States. On the other hand, large shipments of goods will take place from this side, and the rush of such orders will, doubtless, to some extent counteract the above influences. As regards the recent rise in wheat, it may be mentioned that in September and October it extended to twenty cents, apart from a further rise which has since taken place. It is calculated that on a crop of 450,000,000 bushels this advance represents 90,000,000 dols., and as at least 200,000,000 bushels of this wheat are still in the hands of American farmers, the latter have in two months become richer by 40,000,000 dols. By the way, it may be recollected, as an American contemporary points out, that the American "Bull" market of 1879 derived no inconsiderable part of its force from the sales of wheat abroad in that and in the preceding year. The total exports of wheat from the United States in 1877 were about 36,000,000 bushels. In 1878 they increased to 66,288,655 bushels; in 1879, to 116,802,333 bushels, and in 1880 to 144,838,237 bushels. This large increase was due to crop failures abroad. Consequently, the reports of crop shortage this year in Russia, India, and Australia, coupled with the rise in wheat, suggest the possibility of a recurrence of the effects as well as of the conditions of the 1879 period. Exports are already materially in excess of last year, and the engagements of freight room point to a continuance of the movement. The effect of an average advance of even 20 cents a bushel on the large stocks in first hands cannot fail to be important on account of the buying power afforded and its bearing upon railway tonnage of merchandise which may be anticipated. It has been said repeatedly in the last few years that there could be no general "Bull" market in the States with agricultural products, and particularly wheat, at the prices prevailing. If this argument has been sound, the converse would seem to be equally true.

NOTICE TO CONNOISSEURS OF FINE DRY CHAMPAGNE.—PÉRINET & FILS' Cuvée Réservée, Extra Sec, is in magnificent condition, at Hotel Cecil, Hotel Savoy, Midland Grand Hotel, Spiers & Pond's Hotels and Buffets, and most leading Hotels & Restaurants.

The advances which have taken place during the week will be gathered from the following table of quotations:—

—	Price Jan. 2, 1896.	High'st in 1896.	Low'st in 1896.	Oct. 31.	Nov. 9.
Atchison	14½	18 3/16	9	14¾	16⅞
Do. Five per Cent. Pref.	22	23⅞	14⅜	23	27¼
Central Pacific	15½	17½	13	14¾	17⅛
Denver	12⅜	14 11/16	10	12⅛	13⅜
Do. Pref.	42¾	51⅞	37¼	44¼	47½
Erie	14⅛	16⅛	11¼	15⅛	17⅞
Do. First Pref.	23	42	22⅞	33	39¾
Lake Shore	144	155	138	151	156
Louisville	44⅝	56¾	38⅞	47¾	53⅞
Milwaukee	69⅛	81⅝	61¾	75	81⅝
Mis., Kan., and Texas	11¼	13 13/16	8⅞	11¼	14⅝
Norfolk Pref.	8	15⅛	10⅛	16⅛	19⅛
Nor. Pacific Pref.	12½	22⅝	14	22½	26⅛
New York Central	98	101⅞	90¼	96	99¼
Ontario	13¼	16½	11¼	14⅜	16¼
Reading	2	10 11/16	3⅛	13⅝	16¼
Southern Ordy.	8¾	11⅛	6⅝	9	11¼
Do. Pref.	26½	34⅜	18½	26	31½
Union Pacific	4⅛	9¾	3⅛	8½	12¼
Wabash Pref.	15¾	20 3/16	12	16¼	18¾

Notwithstanding the rise which has already taken place in Milwaukee, this stock is likely to lead the market in the near future. It is no secret that a much higher dividend would have been paid last time but for the uncertainty of the Presidential elections. I again remind my readers that for the year ended June 30 last the Milwaukee Company earned very nearly 8 per cent. on its stock, although paying only 4 per cent. for the above-mentioned reason It is anticipated that for the current year the Milwaukee will pay at least 6 per cent., in which case a rise to 100 would be fully justified. The Grangers generally, in fact, in view of the enormous tonnage of grain which is now passing over them, are doing remarkably well, and the grain deliveries in Chicago continue to break records. Railroad freights have, moreover, been advanced since the commencement of the month, so that the outlook for the future earnings of the Granger Roads is particularly bright. Louisville will no doubt also improve, and with regard to the Southern Roads generally it may be said that the rate wars which have prevailed amongst them for so many months have been settled, so that business will now be conducted on a more remunerative basis. Erie Prefs., which I recommended strongly in September, have scored one of the most important advances, being now quoted at 39½, and Southern Prefs., which I also strongly recommended, have improved to 30¼. Southern Ordinary, which I recommended at 8, have also gone ahead to 11½, while Atchison Prefs. are one of the most promising stocks. Union Pacifics have advanced sharply on the statement that there is every prospect of the funding of the debt of the Pacific Roads being authorised by Congress. The measure would be certain to pass in the next Congress, but it is now reported that the present Congress will already take the matter in hand. Under these circumstances, Union Pacifics at 11½ are still a good purchase, and it is not surprising to find that Northern Pacific Prefs. have had a substantial rise to 26. While dealing with this Road I should like to point out specially that Northern Pacific Four per Cent. Prior Lien bonds, which yield at their present price 4¾ per cent. per annum, are, under all the circumstances, one of the cheapest of well-secured bonds, to which I refer further on. Canadian Pacifics and Grand Trunks have advanced in sympathy with the Yankee market. It is but fair to assume that both these Companies will largely benefit by the revival in trade in the United States. Canadian Pacifics have moved up to 61, and Grand Trunks Guaranteed are better at 42½. More especially would it seem that the various Grand Trunk Debenture issues deserve every attention, now that the Road is apparently turning the corner.

AMERICAN RAILROAD BONDS.

Now that the ghost of free silver has been laid, and sound money has triumphed in the United States, it is advisable to look through the list of American Railroad bonds, many of which had fallen considerably on apprehensions that McKinley might be defeated. The fact that honesty has gained the day in the States, and that thus the payment of bonds and of interest is assured on a gold basis, places American Railroad bonds again amongst the safest and best-yielding securities; and in order to guide my readers in the selection of these, I give herewith a little table of gilt-edged bonds, together with some of the more speculative description, from which they could make a very good selection :—

Description of Bonds.	Interest.	Date of Redemption.	Price.	Yield, allowing for accrued interest, and redemption at par at maturity.
	Per cent.			£. s. d.
New York and Putnam, guaranteed by the New York Central	4	1993	108	3 15 9
Mohawk and Malone 1st Mortgage, guaranteed by the N.Y. Central	4	1991	107	3 17 0
Manhattan Consolidated Mortgage	4	1990	98	4 5 3
Erie Railroad Prior Lien	4	1996	95	4 10 0
Northern Pacific Prior Lien	4	1996	88	4 15 0
Cleveland, Cincinnati, Chicago, and St. Louis General Mortgage	4	1993	85	4 18 6
Lynn and Boston First Mortgage	5	1924	104	4 16 6
Louisville and Nashville General Mortgage	6	1930	117½	5 4 2
Philadelphia and Reading Gold	4	1958	84	5 3 4
Atchison, Topeka, and Santa Fé	4	1989	82½	5 4 5
Milwaukee Electric Railway and Light Company, 1st Mortgage	5	1926	102	5 6 6
Lehigh Valley Coal Company 1st Mortgage	5	1935	97	5 10 2
St. Paul's Street Cable Cons. Mortgage	5	1937	97	5 9 6
Southern Railway 1st Cons. Mortgage	5	1994	94	5 12 8
Minneapolis Street 1st Cons. Mortgage	5	1919	96	5 12 6
Alabama Midland 1st Mortgage	5	1928	94½	5 10 6
Chesapeake and Ohio General Mortgage	4½	1992	76½	6 5 0
Pittsburg, Cleveland, and Toledo 1st Mortgage	6	1922	102	6 0 7
Detroit, Grand Haven, and Milwaukee Cons.	6	1918	85	8 7 0

The list is a varied one, from the very best gilt-edged to high-yielding speculative bonds, and my readers will thus be able to make their own selection. I would mention, with reference to the Lynn and Boston First Mortgage Five per Cent. bonds, that the capital of this Company consists of 1,200,000 dols., while the earnings are equal to 15 per cent. on this amount, out of which dividends of 8 per cent. are being paid on the Ordinary stock. The traffics have kept up exceedingly well, notwithstanding the serious period through which the United States has passed, and from January 1 to August 31 the net profits amounted to 423,000 dols., against 411,000 dols. for the same period of last year. As the total authorised issue of Debentures is limited to 5,379,000 dols., it will be seen that this mortgage is amply secured. With reference to the St. Paul's Street Cable Company, it may be mentioned that the 7 per cent. Preference dividend is being regularly paid by the Twin City Company which owns this road, and that the returns from January 1 to August 31 were 734,000 dols., against 714,000 dols. for the same period of last year. The Minneapolis Street First Consolidated Mortgage bonds are in a similar position, so that the yield of £5. 12s. 6d. may be considered satisfactory. Baltimore and Ohio Five per Cent. Sterling bonds at 94 yield an excellent return. It is true that the Company is now in the receiver's hands, but there appears to be no fear that these bonds will be defaulted upon. They are secured by a collateral of the Six per Cent. First Mortgage bonds of the Baltimore and Ohio Chicago Railroad, a line 263 miles in length, which connects the Baltimore and Ohio system with Chicago. It is stated that this 6 per cent. interest is being earned; but in view of the importance of the line to the Baltimore and Ohio system, default need in no case be apprehended. With reference to the Baltimore and Ohio reconstruction, there is no doubt that the altered state of affairs in the United States will greatly help this, and generally benefit the issues, for which I had on former occasions a favourable word to say. The Pittsburg, Cleveland, and Toledo First Mortgage bonds are also guaranteed as to interest by the Baltimore and Ohio Company. They used to stand at 120, and are therefore at present at a very low price. This road forms part of the main connection to Chicago. The total issue is of 2,400,000 dols., and a Second Mortgage debt of 4,000,000 dols. (Consolidated), have been created to re-pay the Baltimore and Ohio for its advances. The amount required to pay the interest on the Six per Cent. First Mortgage bonds is only 144,000 dols.; while the net earnings of the road for the fiscal year ending June 30 last were 301,000 dols. Of the Alabama Midland I need but say that the fall in these bonds has been altogether unjustified. Both principal and interest are guaranteed by the Savannah, Florida and Western, and there is no doubt that they will shortly take a big jump. The Detroit, Grand Haven and Milwaukee Consolidated Six per Cent. Mortgage bonds yield a very high return, and are, of course, somewhat speculative; but they are guaranteed by the Grand Trunk, and it seems hardly likely that they will be defaulted upon now that the Grand Trunk Company is turning the corner. Northern Pacific Prior Lien Four per Cent. bonds call for special notice. With a yield of 4¾ per cent., they must be considered a very safe investment. The Company has been reconstructed, large assessments have been levied upon the prior securities, and the earnings of the road are such as to fully secure the interest on the Prior Lien bonds. Many of the bonds mentioned in the above list are from 5 to 20 points lower than they were before the silver trouble arose; while nothing has really happened to depreciate their value.

Foreigners and South Americans.

At last the Paris Bourse has apparently retrieved its position, and the fact that the end of October settlement has passed off without any catastrophe, and showed upon the whole a greatly reduced speculative account, is calculated to create a more hopeful view as regards the future. Spanish have again been thrown about by speculators, but even these at last mark a recovery on the low quotation of the beginning of the week, being quoted 57½. Turks are also firmer. Not that the financial position of Turkey has at all improved, but the nervousness with regard to a fresh outbreak in Constantinople has worn off. Italians have also hardened, and Ottoman Banks have been put up to 11¼. After declining, Argentine Government stocks have improved, and there has also been a slight advance in some of the Argentine Railway stocks, chiefly on the favourable announcement of the Buenos Ayres and Pacific, which is about to pay a dividend on its Preferred stock. Irresponsible rumours with reference to a revolutionary outbreak in Monte Video caused a temporary relapse in Uruguay, which should, however, be promptly recovered again. Brazilians are slightly better, and Mexican Sixes are firm. A rise of two points has also taken place in Western Railway of Santa Fé bonds, owing to the improved prospects of this Company, the quotation now standing at 47.

Incipient Improvement in the Kaffir Circus.

Mysterious rumours and still more mysterious sales again prevailed at the commencement of the week, but while the latter have not been explained yet, the former are certainly exploded; and it goes without saying that they originated on the "Bear" side. At first the report was set about that the Transvaal Government intended to carry out a political coup, and to denounce the London Convention. This rumour has done service to the "Bears" over and over again, and was as false as the further report that the decision in the cyanide case had been given in favour of the MacArthur-Forrest people. As a matter of fact, it has turned out exactly the opposite. The patents have been declared invalid, so that a great incubus is removed from the Transvaal mining industry, which will benefit the Witwatersrand mines to the extent of upwards of £500,000 per annum, apart from the possible recovery of royalties illegally collected in the past. Favourable news is also conveyed by cablegrams from the Pretoria correspondent of the Daily Telegraph, who states that the Volksraad has authorised the railway from Machado to Pilgrim's Rest, via Lydenburg, and that the Portuguese Government has issued a licence to supply native labourers to the representatives of Mr. J. B. Robinson, and of the Chamber of Mines. What with the reduction in the cost of native labour and the coming reduction in the expense of white labour, together with the ample supply of natives now available, the mining industry of the Transvaal has not been in so promising a position for years; and the only cloud on the horizon is the Sunday labour question, which is, however, expected to be settled in favour of the industry. When all these various "Bear" rumours were shown to be false, there were several important rallies, especially after the news of the success of McKinley in the States came to hand; and had it not been for renewed sales, which could not again be traced to any particular source, there would have been a marked upward movement. As it is, the highly speculative stocks which have all along served as footballs for the market, show an advance, Rand Mines being quoted 23¾, East Rands 5, and Consolidated Goldfields 9½. There are also indications that we shall in the near future see a different state of things, and that the market, after the persistent shake out, will at last take a decided turn upwards. Intrinsic merits must after all prevail against market conditions, which can keep prices back only temporarily, and I therefore anticipate an improvement in all the sound Transvaal Mining and Land Companies. Let me again briefly mention such of these stocks as appear to me more particularly tempting as a purchase, especially in case any of my readers would like to average their holdings, viz.:—Langlaagte Estate, New Primrose, Glencairn, City and Suburban, Robinson, Wolhuter, Randfontein, New Johannesburg Consols, Barnato Consols, Bufflesdoorn, Langlaagte, Royal Henderson's Estates, Lydenburg Estates, Oceana Consols, Mozambique, Modderfontein "B," Waterfall Estates, Woodstock (Transvaal), and Knights. The new battery of the Witwatersrand Company (Knights) was started on October 10, and, according to cablegrams just to hand, 6,042 tons yielded 1,970 oz. of gold from crushing, or 6·52 dwt. per ton, to which 3½ dwt. from tailings will have to be added. For a first crushing this is satisfactory, as the plates of new batteries always absorb a good deal of gold. The Heidelburg Roodepoort Company commenced crushing with sixty stamps on the same day (October 10), and it is also stated that the Ginsberg Mine started twenty stamps of its new battery of thirty stamps on October 10. At the meeting of the Chartered Company the shareholders decided to subscribe for the new issue of shares themselves, and refused to authorise the proposal of the Directors that a syndicate should guarantee the shares against an option on 500,000 shares at 2¾. Whether this will prove a satisfactory arrangement from a market point of view remains to be seen. In the meantime, Chartered shares are pretty firm at 2⅜. The Robinson South African Banking Company has made a profit of £434,636 in the first year of its existence on a capital of £3,000,000, which would appear to be a very satisfactory result considering that the period covered was a very stormy one. The Ordinary shareholders receive 6 per cent., so that a balance of £256,076 is left to be dealt with further. £25,607 of this, or 10 per cent., is placed to reserve, while the Deferred shares receive 20 per cent., or £51,215. The Ordinary shares now receive 4 per cent. more out of the balance of the surplus, which brings up their dividend to 10 per cent. for the year, while a sum of £60,213 is carried forward. The assets, in cash, native gold, short loans, and Consols, of £1,228,967 are most substantial, and the other investments amount to £1,633,131. By the way, I think that the campaign which the Financial News is conducting against mine registrations in Johannesburg is a very sensible one. So many instances have happened in which a promoter registers in a Company in the Transvaal, acquires a number of claims, capitalised at a very heavy figure, and then merely introduces the shares on this side at a heavy premium, taking care to "make a market" for them. When the shares are all marketed at a high price, they in many instances keep on dropping to a low level, when the ingenious promoter comes in again and repeats the operation. Meetings in Johannesburg of Companies owned on this side are equally objectionable. These meetings should be held in London, so as to ensure all necessary questions being answered and full information given to the shareholders, who ought, moreover, to have the control of the undertakings. I hope that the Committee of the Stock Exchange will give its attention to this movement, which could not, of course, be retrospective, but conditions ought to be laid down for future creations of Companies. It should be pointed out, as stated in a second circular issued by the Directors of the Glencairn Company, that the whole hundred stamps of the Glencairn will be added to the sixty stamps of the Glenluce, and that therefore 160 stamps will be at work by March next. The Langlaagte Estate battery is now being brought up from 160 stamps to 200, and the latter number will probably be crushing in another month's time. Diamond shares have been dull with gold shares, but are also bracing up again, De Beers being quoted 29½, New Jagersfontein 9⅜.

Golden West Australia.

The weakness of the South African market has also reacted upon West Australian Mines, with the result that the tone has been somewhat irregular. But while in some instances declines are marked, there have not been wanting improvements, and amongst others Lady Shentons have been very firm on the satisfactory crushing. Quite a dead set is being made against some of the West Australian shares, and a large "Bear" account is being accumulated. Ignorant scribes avail themselves of the opportunity to obtain a short-lived advertisement by hostile comments upon the goldfields of Western Australia; but there is every prospect that the absurd and interested criticisms will be disproved by the course of events. This should especially come about through the increasing number of mining Companies which are coming forward with crushings. The following table contains the particulars of crushings which have come to hand during the week, amongst which are trial crushings of mines which have not hitherto been turning out gold:—

—	Tons of ore crushed.	Oz. of gold.	Assay of tailings per ton.
Hannan's Brownhill	254	686	—
Ivanhoe	230	801	—
Lady Shenton	300	1,264	—
White Feather Reward	150	299	—
North Boulder	133	332	—
Consolidated Gold Mines —Coongarrie Mine	102	165	—
Menzie's Crusoe Gold	520	1,137	7 dwts.
Menzie's Gold Reefs Proprietary	180	314	11 dwts.
Menzie's Golden Age	50	350	—
Maori, Menzie's	45	90	—
Sir John Forrest	28 & 13 cwt.	34	—

The Menzies district is beginning to show very well, as will be seen by the crushings of the Lady Shenton, the Menzies Crusoe, Menzies Golden Age, and Menzies Gold Reefs. As so much has been said about the Lady Shenton and the Menzies Mines, I may as well give particulars of Charles Heidsieck Champagne.—Original Brand.—Extra dry or brut. Vintage 1889. One quality only shipped. To be obtained of all Wine Merchants and Stores.

the crushings of the former mine which have so far taken place :—

	Tons.	Oz.
July 9	55	269
August 11	250	695
August 12	10	138
September 3	237	954
October 1	262	1,095
October 29	300	1,264
	1,114	4,415

As "Bear" operators had set about the report that the reef had pinched out, this will show how false these rumours were. I am inclined to attribute more importance sometimes to the views of an intelligent man, who is not a mining engineer, than to those of the experts, when visiting a new goldfield; and I, therefore, reproduce from a West Australian source the statement which was made by Mr. Faithfull Begg, M.P. (a member of the London Stock Exchange), who recently visited Western Australia, at an entertainment in the parlour of the Mayor of Perth, given on September 29, at which were present the Premier, Sir John Forrest, Sir George Shenton, the Hon. E. H. Wittenoom, Minister of Mines, and Mr. Alexander Forrest. Mr. Faithfull Begg expressed his views in a very favourable sense. In offering an opinion about the country he did not profess to speak from the point of view of a mining expert, as he had had little or no practical experience of mining. His were the opinions of an independent person, endeavouring, from a business standpoint, to determine what the state of the case was. His great trouble since his arrival in the colony had been that he had discovered the absolute impossibility of seeing more than a fraction of what evidently was the auriferous area of Western Australia. From Coolgardie he passed by way of 25-Mile to 42-Mile, thence to Broad Arrow, White Feather, and down to Hannan's. From there he journeyed in a south-easterly direction to Mount Monger, and back by way of Bulong, lastly travelling southward as far as Norseman. He had come absolutely to the conclusion that the richness and extent of the gold-bearing areas of this country were enormous, and that there would be occupation for a large population throughout all parts of the colony for very many years to come. It is also satisfactory to learn that the Premier, Sir John Forrest, has informed the London Chamber of Commerce, through the Agent-General, that the labour question will receive every attention, as the West Australian Government is anxious to give reasonable assistance to the mines in every respect. With reference to the Menzies Crusoe, it should be mentioned that further important developments have taken place, a new lode having been intersected from which two samples assayed 19 oz. per ton. These shares are now quoted about $\frac{7}{8}$. From the Menzies Consolidated advices are to the effect that both on the "Princess Eva" and "Princess May" claims the lode assays 2 oz. per ton, while on the "Royal Group" the average of eight assays was 3 oz. $11\frac{1}{2}$ dwt. per ton. Menzies Mining and Exploration (Menzies O'Driscoll) stand at $\frac{3}{4}$, and in view of the Company's large interests in Menzies properties, a rise in the shares is quite on the cards, now that the district is going ahead. West Australian Goldfields have been quiet at 6, and continued "Bear" attacks have been made on these shares; but there is little doubt that as soon as a general rally comes about these will again lead an important improvement. The Cue No. 1 Mine, which belongs to the West Australian Goldfields group has now also entered the list of producers, as will be seen from the above list of crushings. These shares are worth taking up at their present quotation of $\frac{1}{2}$. The White Feather Reward crushing above referred to was reduced by the circumstance that the stamps could not run full time owing to repairs to the boilers. This mine has now crushed 2,548 tons for 5,332 oz, an average of 2 oz. 1 dwt., and it will be seen that the last crushing again works out to about 2 oz. to the ton. White Feather Reward shares are now quoted $1\frac{15}{16}$, and are likely to go considerably higher. Other promising mines still at a moderate level are Mawson's Reward at $\frac{15}{16}$, Robinson at $\frac{3}{4}$, and East Murchison United at $\frac{7}{8}$. Hampton Plains have again been raided by the "Bears," but after a temporary decline they have experienced a strong rally to $3\frac{1}{2}$, and in view of the very favourable advices from the various properties of the Company, an important advance would be fully justified. Mount Margaret are quoted $1\frac{7}{16}$. General Gordon shares have been dealt in at £2 per 20s. share, fully paid. From the Gladiator Mine advices are to hand stating that the reef in No. 5 shaft is valued for the full width of 3 ft. at 2 oz. of gold per ton. These shares have advanced to $\frac{15}{16}$. Progress is being made at the Armadale, as a cablegram has been received stating that the cyanide plant has been delivered at the railway station at Fremantle. Favourable advices are to hand from the North White Feather Consolidated. According to the mail advices the reef which the manager is at present working shows good gold. In fact, all the different reefs found in the mine seem to carry more or less gold. The Lake View Consols is again to the front with a satisfactory crushing, and the cablegram adds that all developments are opening out splendidly, and the experimental cyanide plant has proved a great success, so that the tailings are now about to be treated. These shares have fluctuated between $7\frac{1}{8}$ and $7\frac{1}{2}$, and, in view of the high opinions which are expressed by all experts who have inspected the mine, there is no doubt that it is one of the richest—if not the richest—on the field. Amongst the same group there has been a setback in West Australian Exploring and Finance and London and Globe Finance; but this is due to "Bear" sales, and there is very little doubt but that the ursine operators will be very badly caught at no distant date. West Australian Joint Stock Trust have given way to 2 premium, but the sales were not apparently of real stock, and a recovery is probable. At Friday's meeting of the shareholders of the West Australian Venture Syndicate the Chairman, Mr. W. P. Orriss, was able to point to a very satisfactory position. The net profit has reached the substantial figure of £104,098, and, in addition to the interim dividend already paid, there will be a further distribution of 5s. per share, making a total dividend of 20s. per share. After paying the dividend on the Founders shares, the balance of £69,364 was carried to reserve. When it is considered that this result has been obtained with a capital of less than £25,000, it is evident that the shareholders have cause for self-congratulation. The famous Bayley's Reward, for which I am glad to say I never had a favourable word to give, has now been reconstructed under the name of Bayley's United Mines. The change of name alone will not, of course, render the concern a prosperous one; it also requires better management, and miner-like development. Burbank's Birthday Gift at one time rose to $1\frac{7}{8}$, but are now easier again at $1\frac{5}{8}$. Burbank's Consols and Burbank's North, both at a slight premium, deserve every attention as possessing the Burbank's lode. I feel inclined to agree with the remark of the Australian Mail that the Directors of the Blackett's Claim, Limited, in sending out the share certificates of the reconstructed Company, might have informed the shareholders as to what is being done on the property. This has been a silent mine quite long enough. Great Boulder Proprietary shares are firm at $6\frac{1}{2}$. It is worthy of mention that with the last 5s. dividend, this Company has now returned 24s. in dividends on each share of 20s. I wonder whether the persons who are touting privately for subscriptions for the Great Northern Boulder Mines, Limited, have succeeded in getting any of the public in. The capital is so excessive, and the property is so little developed, that the concern ought to be severely left alone.

Indian, New Zealand, and Other Mines.

So far there has been no rally in Indian gold mining shares, the surroundings being too depressing. Prices, however, close above the lowest, Ooregum Prefs. being quoted $3\frac{1}{2}$, ditto Ordinary $2\frac{7}{8}$, Champion Reefs $7\frac{1}{2}$, Mysore $7\frac{1}{2}$, Nine Reefs 5s. 9d., Nundydroog $3\frac{7}{16}$. In Australian mines, other than West Australian mines, Aladdin's Lamp have been steady at $2\frac{3}{4}$. British Broken Hill have improved, but Broken Hill Proprietary are lower. In Charters Towers shares, Mill's Day Dawn United and Brilliant and St. George have hardened, and there has also been a rise in Day Dawn Block. Mount Lyell are slightly easier. In Croydon properties, Croydon Consols remain firm at from 10s. to 10s. 6d., and the dividend of 1s. per share is about to be declared. North Croydon Consols are steady at from 3s. 6d. to 3s. 9d. In New Zealand shares a very dull tone has prevailed, and dealings have been on the smallest possible scale. Thames Hauraki are firmer at $1\frac{1}{16}$, and Hauraki and Waitekauri are the turn better, but New Zealand Joint-Stock, Consolidated Goldfields of New Zealand, Waihi, and Taitapu Estates are all lower. In the general foreign section, Rio Tinto have fluctuated widely on rumours which have partly been contradicted again, that the splitting scheme had been abandoned, and that the Spanish Government was going to tax either copper or the Rio Tinto Company. After touching $25\frac{3}{16}$, the shares are now quoted $24\frac{3}{4}$. Burma Ruby are firmer, and there has also been an improvement in Banner Gold and Pestarena, but Dorics are easier, and hardly any business has been transacted in other shares in this department. Grand Central (Mexico) are quoted $2\frac{1}{8}$.

New Enterprises and Issues.

The prospectuses of the following new Companies and issues have been placed before the public during the week :—

The Mikado Gold Mining Company, Limited.—This is promoted by the South African General Development Syndicate, for the purpose of acquiring three locations in the auriferous district of Lake of the Woods, near Rat Portage, Ontario, Canada. The property is about 100 acres in extent, with a title direct from the Government, and free from all royalties and restrictions. The capital is £45,000 in £1 shares.

The New Townend Brothers, Limited.—This Company has been formed to acquire as a going concern the business of Townend Brothers, Limited, cycle manufacturers, carried on at Far Gosford-street and Paynes-lane, Coventry. The capital is £80,000, divided into 20,000 Six per Cent. Cumulative Preference shares and 60,000 Ordinary shares of £1 each.

When will the issue of new cycle Companies cease? The boom in this industry seems to have had the effect of making every cycle manufacturer fancy his own particular goose a swan. The capital in this case is far too high in proportion to the business done.

Howell's Consolidated Gold Mines, Limited.—To acquire three Freehold and Leasehold Properties, of about sixty-nine acres in extent, situated in New South Wales, is the object of this Company. The capital is fixed at £150,000. The vendors take 50,000 shares in part payment of the purchase money.

From the report there appears to have been a quantity of gold taken from these properties by former owners. I think it will be as well to wait and see if there is any payable quantity left before investing in this concern.

The Whangamata Proprietary, Limited.—This Company has been formed to acquire and develop, or otherwise deal with, gold mining and other properties in New Zealand. The capital is £200,000, in £1 shares, of which amount £50,000 are appropriated for working capital.

It is proposed by this Company to acquire and develop mining property in New Zealand, but the only thing the promoters can place before investors is a contract for three mining leases of about 300 acres, in the Hauraki Goldfields, New Zealand. These, of course, have to be developed and worked, or disposed of, and it is too soon to say if this can be done successfully.

The Cornbrook Brewery Company, Ltd.—The National Provincial Bank of England, Limited, London, Manchester, and branches invite applications for £140,000 Four and a Half per Cent. prepetual first Mortgage Debenture stock at the issue price of £105, of the Cornbrook Brewery Company, Manchester.

This may suit those who are enamoured of Brewery Debenture stock, but I do not think the security sufficient for the amount asked.

Starley Brothers and Westwood Manufacturing Company, Limited.—With a capital of £110,000 in £1 shares, and a Debenture issue of £50,000, this Company proposes to acquire two businesses carried on by Starley Brothers, of Coventry and London, cycle manufacturers, and the Westwood Manufacturing Company, Limited, of Birmingham and Coventry, manufacturers of cycles and cycle fittings.

It will be as well for investors to carefully investigate new cycle Companies before investing in them. Many are no doubt floated on account of the successful issues that have lately taken place, but the sum asked for this undertaking is far too large, and the Ordinary shareholders may have to wait a long time for any return.

The Perseverance Rewarded Gold Mine (N.S.W.), Limited.—This Company is formed with a capital of £112,500, in shares of £1 each, to acquire and work the gold mine known as Mount Stuart, but now named the Perseverance, situated about one mile from Stuart Town Station, New South Wales.

One hundred and twelve thousand five hundred pounds for twenty-four acres of mining land, and that but little developed, is to my mind altogether excessive, and I should advise intending investors to think twice before embarking in this venture.

The Australian Cycle and Motor Company, Limited, capital £75,000 in 75,000 shares of £1 each, has been formed to acquire and carry on agencies in the Australasian Colonies for the sale of cycles, cycle components, motors, horseless vehicles, incandescent lights, &c.

The British Electric Traction Company, Limited, with a share capital of £600,000 divided into 30,000 Six per Cent. Cumulative Preference and 30,000 Ordinary shares of £10 each, is formed under the auspices of the Electric and General Investment Company to acquire the business of the British Electric Traction (Pioneer) Company.

My Letter Box.

The following are replies to inquiries from various correspondents :—

Government, &c., Bonds.

N. F.—While I should not advise purchase of Brazilians, I do not think there is any hurry to sell, especially as they leave you a heavy loss.

Banks, Trusts, and Financial.

Miles Olim.—You will find that I have already criticised the Cripple Creek (Bull Hill) Finance and Exploration Company, which is being circularised by the Underwriting Bureau, 11, Queen Victoria-street, of which R. B. Oakley is manager. Have nothing to do with it, or with the "Road and Path Cycling Association," of which Oakley also appears to be the guiding spirit. Adam.—Very little market in these stocks, and I do not advise the investment. Romford-road.—I am sorry it is not possible for me to give you a firm for transacting your business. Once-Bitten.—Have nothing whatever to do with Frank Tarrant & Co. I have repeatedly explained that dealing with such syndicate-touts will only land you in loss. Twice-Shy.—It is not advisable to invest in this concern; such profits cannot be legitimately made. See remarks under "Various Investments."

Home Rails.

Molar.—1. The Scotch stocks are likely to rise considerably in the near future, and I should, therefore, in your case defer the exchange. The Bank shares are promising. 2. Yes, South-Eastern Deferred may be safely held permanently; they are a promising speculation. 3. Yes, prospects are undoubtedly favourable. Canterbury.—Yes; Coras (Caledonian Deferred Ordinary) are a first-class speculative investment. Hold also Dover "A" for an important advance.

American and Foreign Rails.

On a Stick.—Outside dealers; be very careful. Yes, Union Pacifics, Southern Ordinary, and Central Pacifics are a good purchase now that McKinley has triumphed; but I look for the most important advance in Milwaukee. Hornsey Rise.—Certainly hold the Ordinary stock, which ought to have a good chance now. Florence Anna.—Better wait now. Sculptor.—You ought already to have received the transfer, but I suppose you are dealing with a respectable firm, who are members of the "House." The Debentures in question are to be converted into Four and a Half per Cents., and arrears of interest paid at the end of the year. Those not assenting to this arrangement will be paid off in cash. H. E. W.—Although Reading First Incomes are now 7 dols. higher than when you last wrote, I still advise holding. The United States are on the eve of a great outburst of business and the Reading line should be greatly benefited. Bey.—Hold your Atchison Prefs. The same applies to this stock as to Readings. T. S. C.—Grand Trunk Ordinary is a wild cat stock, the purchase of which I have never advised. Yet now that matters are improving in the States the Grand Trunk will also benefit, and you should be able to get out at a much better price. Kinsale.—Hold on to your American Rails for an important further advance. All your stocks are rising. See remarks under "Yankee Rails—After the Victory." R. S. O.—The best American Railroad stocks to buy are Milwaukee, Louisville, Atchison Prefs., Union Pacifics and Southern Ordinary. As regards bonds, I am giving a selection of "Gilt-edged and Speculative American Bonds" in to-day's issue.

Mining Shares.

B. B., Scaforth.—I certainly advise holding Nos. 1, 3, and 4, in which a recovery will no doubt come about. A Reader, Glos.—The mine is considered to be a good one, but it has not commenced to crush yet. There is nothing for it but to wait patiently. Greta.—1. I do not like the Electric Light shares. 2. I understand that the London and Globe Finance dividend will be declared in December. 3. You will doubtless get some news as soon as the war in Rhodesia is quelled finally. 4. I still think well of these. Muskeg.—Keep all your mining shares Nos. 1 to 10 for an improvement; No. 11 is a rotten concern; how could you have gone into it? C. F. P.—The article in question in the Nineteenth Century contains a gross distortion of facts, and these assertions will be absolutely disproved by the course of events in Western Australia. D. O. T.—1. A fair mining risk; you had better take them up. 2. No reason to sell. 3. Hold these also. Royal Navy.—I cannot reply by letter, but should advise you to hold your shares for a recovery. Kendrick.—1. On the 10s. paid. 3. "Bear" pressure. Hannan's Golden Treasure and Golden Group are, I am told, doing very well, but they have not reached the crushing stage yet. 5. I do not advise selling Buffelsdoorn. 6. Not yet. 7. Impossible to tell. 8. Not exactly. This should only apply to future registrations. Senex.—I do not approve of all your investments Nos. 1 to 4; but you should now hold them for a recovery. The publication in question is an outside broker's circular, and absolutely valueless. "Holcomb Prefs."—Hold for a recovery. Bamaro.—No option but to hold all your mining shares; but some are badly selected—notably, Faith, St. Agnes, and St. Augustine. Orphan.—There is every prospect of a recovery; hold. Amongst Nos. 1-5, London and Globe (2), Croydon Consols (4), and Hampton Plains (5) are the most promising. D. K.—The name of a respectable firm of City solicitors is furnished at your request. J. Bull.—The remarks of this bucket-shop keeper are valueless. Do not allow yourself to be frightened out of your shares. G. W. F.—A fair mining risk, but no catch. I do not like the United Gold Reefs. Hesper.—1. Hold for a recovery. 2. No. 3. Randfontein, Wags, West Australian Exploring and Finance, London and Globe, and Glencairn are all promising. Theta.—Yes, a meeting must be held once a year. Write to the secretary. King Lear.—Yes. There is no reason for the decline. Write to the secretary. Porcupine.—No option but to hold all your mining shares Nos. 1-5 for a recovery. This is not the time to sell. Clio.—You should hold all your mining shares Nos. 1-7 for a rise. Certainly hold Hannan's Golden Treasure. Sigil.—Yes, a good Company. A. S., Albemarle-street.—Hold Johnnies for a recovery. P. E. H.—Hold, but do not average yet. Sidney.—No option but to hold your shares for a rise. You should have received the Porges Randfontein bonus on Randfontein by now. Randfontein are very promising. There is nothing against the commission charged on the small transaction. Cymro Bach.—I do not see how you can get out of the call! H. W. B.—Not yet, but certainly hold for a rise. Stoney.—You will have to convert the Barnato Banks into new Johnnies. Dissatisfied.—The matter looks strange. You should insist upon the transfer of the shares. Are your brokers respectable and members of the Stock Exchange? H. S., Hull.—Hold your South African shares Nos. 1 and 2 for a rise and disregard such trash. Novice B.—Hold your shares for a rise, but do not buy more yet. Theta.—I fancy the best thing to be done is to join the reconstruction and sell after. Friable.—A fourth rate publication to which you should attribute no importance. The Company is doing well, hold. R. B. B.—Hold Langlaagte Royal for a recovery. I do not think very favourably of the Telegraph shares. Cestrian.—I cannot explain the discrepancy. No option but to hold your mining shares. J. P.—1. Croydon Consols should be held for a further rise. The actions of vendors are sometimes very strange. 2. No temptation to buy yet. Very Green.—Hold, but do not buy any more. W. J., Belfast.—The future of Oceana Consols is promising. Crewash.—A. No; I advise you to have nothing to do with the Mammoth Collins Gold Mine, of Arizona. B. Yes, I have a good opinion of the Victorian Gold Estates; the capital does not appear to be heavy in view of the large extent of the property acquired by the Company. C. These are only lower in sympathy with the West Australian market, and a recovery may be looked for. Inquirer, Birmingham.—The Company is in its initial stage, but may eventually do well. Martian.—These shares are no catch. Juvenus.—I have an unfavourable opinion of the La Campana Gold Mining Company. Dacca.—No option but to hold all your mining shares, Nos. 1 to 8, for an improvement. You might average Nos. 2, 3, 5, 6, and 8; but only if you can take up and pay for the shares. Liffey.—No option but to join the reconstruction and sell after. Londoner.—1. Yes. 2. Certainly hold. 3 and 4. Yes. Persimmon.—1. A call on the North White Feather Consolidated Gold Mines has now been made, and it is understood that this mine is progressing well. 1. Of course you will have to pay the call. 2. No catch. 3. Gold Lands Corporation at $\frac{1}{8}$ premium are a good purchase. Rejected.—I have an adverse opinion of the London and Coolgardie Explorers. Forfar.—Hold your shares; you will eventually see the price improve again. H. B., Newcastle.—Your list Nos. 1 to 6 is a very mixed one, and you can do better in the shares recommended in my letter. A. O. L.—Have nothing to do with Mr. W. Hunt, of 11, Earlsfield-road, Wandsworth, London, S.W., as far as the Transvaal-Westralian Gold Concessions is concerned, whose shares he is trying to unload upon the public. Enaf.—Hold Explorers' Finance shares. Hard-up.—1. A fair mining risk. 2. I do not think well of these. 3. A good property. 4. At this rubbish price it might, perhaps, be worth your while to buy a few. Hold Barnato Banks, an improvement will no doubt come about in time. Miranda.—I do not take a favourable view of this New Zealand Company. W. H., Edinburgh.—I do not recommend a purchase of Nos. 1 to 5. You can do better in the shares recommended in my letter. Pembury.—I do not see any reason for selling these shares, least of all on this bucket-shop circular. Natal.—No option but to hold the shares. Ibycus.—1. The Glencairn Company has now been amalgamated with the Glenluce Company, and in the commencement of the new year these combined mines should begin yielding a very large output. 2. Buffelsdoorn Estates should also come to the front again. Constant Reader, Constantinople.—1. Write to the secretary. 2. Amongst the shares mentioned by you, I should prefer Randfontein and Glencairn. 3. No reason to sell Sheba. Max, Reading.—I think you can do better by following the recommendations in my letter. Lombard.—No option but to hold no 1. No. 2 are likely to improve, although you must know that I do not like this concern at all. 3. It might be useful to average. 4. No option but to hold. 5. A fair mining risk.

Industrial Shares.

A. Z. X.—Yes, this Debenture stock is a good investment, and of course precedes the Preference and Ordinary stocks. W. W.—Nos. 1 and 2 are somewhat speculative; but promising. No. 3 is a fair industrial investment. Arauco.—I hardly think it advisable to buy these bonds now; you can do better in American Railroad bonds, which you will find referred to under the "Yankee Market," and which may now be considered as quite safe. Mexican Investment.—Yes; the Six per Cent. Debentures of the Mexican Cotton Estates of Tlahualilo are a good investment at about par. Boswell.—1. Very speculative. 2. A fair investment, but no catch. There is no market for the first mentioned Debentures; second ditto stand at 102-4. Markato.—The first-named Preference shares are perhaps a fair investment, but the element of speculation largely enters into it. 2. W. Cory & Sons, Limited, Ordinary shares are no catch. W. B. T.—There appears to be every probability of the Bagot Tyre Company being acquired by the Dunlop Pneumatic Tyre Company; but I cannot, of course, guarantee this. If this arrangement should come about, the shares will doubtless reach a much higher premium. M. B. C., Recluse.—1. Impossible to tell; this is a most speculative industrial concern, about which no information is available. 2. A fair investment. 3. I am afraid that this concern is not likely to prosper. 4. I do not wish to express an opinion. Halifax.—1. I do not care for the Rudge-Whitworth Cycle shares. 2. The Ordinary shares stand at $\frac{13}{16}$. 3. No recent dividend. 4. Impossible to tell. Ajax.—I should prefer the Swift Cycle Company as an investment. H. S. B.—Your experience just shows how necessary it is to discriminate in industrial ventures. Yet I should not advise you to sell out now, as there is many a chance yet of a recovery. Pegasus.—Such publishing Companies are subject to great fluctuations of trade, and the investments would be exceptionally speculative. Tasmania.—A fair investment; hold. Z. Z.—1. Not yet. 2. Write to the secretary. The rumoured issue of the great Biscuit amalgamation has been contradicted. Wexford Oyster.—1. Write to the Secretary of the French Dunlop Company for information. 2. No. 3. I should not advise purchase at this premium at present. Amongst Cycle Companies, Gladiators and Bagots are at present the best purchase. Cycle Tubes, at $\frac{7}{8}$, are also promising, as the extensive new factory will be ready in a month or so. Victoria X.—As far as I can see, you cannot refuse to pay the call, as, if you were to do so, your shares would be forfeited, and you would still be liable for the call. Bap.—I have not a favourable opinion of Premier Cycle shares. Hew.—The market is limited in these shares, and I dare say that the price was the best that could be got for them. There is no official quotation for the shares.

Mixed Investments.

L. F. T.—There is nothing against the investments Nos. 1, 2, and 5; but the others are not desirable, and you will do better by investing in American Railroad bonds, which are now quite safe after the McKinley victory. Patimo.—1. No; deal only through members of the Stock Exchange. 2. One of the more respectable kind of outside dealers; but not above reproach. 3. No. 4. Effingham Wilson, of Royal Exchange. 5. The Financial News. R. B., Limerick.—If you have a good profit on Nos. 2 and 7, you might as well take it; but No. 3 should be held, and there is no reason to sell Nos. 5 and 6 now. I do not like Grapplers (1) or Hall Mines (4). Omega.—Hold the West Australian mines; they should improve again. I do not think much of the Gas stock; but there is no reason to sell the Electric Light or Industrial shares. Nunquam.—Apply to Messrs. Baring Brothers & Co. for the information you require. With regard to the Mining market, I can but confirm the remarks in my letter. Sooner or later, an important recovery is certain to set in. J. H. S.—Amongst the shares mentioned by you, I should only recommend the purchase of No. 7. All the others are very speculative, and you can do better by consulting my letter. R. J.—1. A recovery is expected. 2. Ditto. 3. You must await a decided turn in the South African market. 4. Ditto as regards West Australians. 5. I do not like New Beestons. Paris.—1. A fair mining risk, but I prefer Croydon Consols or North Croydon Consols. 2. One of the best. 3. Yes, as to New Primrose. 4. Impossible to tell. 6. American Railroad bonds should suit you. 6. A fair industrial investment.

Alkelda.—1. Under present circumstances there is no option but to hold all South African Mining and Land shares, and you might safely average; also hold No. 2. I am glad you are doing so well in Croydon Consols on my advice. Cuckoo.—1. A fair West Australian mining venture, but there are other promising mines of the kind and it would be preferable not to put too many eggs into one basket. The industrial shares referred to are likely to improve. LL.D.—I. Enough has been taken up of the capital to assure profitable working. The Debentures are, as you say, well worth picking up. II. I do not think favourably of this. III. A fair investment. Llandudno.—Yes, Mexican Cotton Estates, Six per Cent. Debentures at 100 are a first-rate investment. Rebecca.—1. No reason to sell these Cycle shares which are above the ordinary run. 2. The Nitrate industry should recover again, and the Company in which you are interested is one of the best. 3. Hold; prospects are excellent. Bert.—Amongst the mines mentioned have nothing to do with Nos. 1 and 2. On the other hand Croydon Consols (3) are a good purchase. You will find other suitable mines under "Golden West Australia." I should prefer Jays (5) to No. 4. Ned.—1. A second-class office. 2. Not much prospect of a further rise just now. You got in too high. T. R., Shepherds Bush.—It might be worth while to join the reconstruction, so as to be able to sell on better terms after. The industrial stocks mentioned should be held. I cannot reply by letter. Triston.—I think that your intention to spread the money over the Uruguay Loan, London and Globe Finance, and West Australian Exploring and Finance is a good one. No objection to the Music Hall shares. Mexican Cotton Estates of Tlahualilo Debentures are a safe investment, yielding a high return. Harold.—1. A fair industrial investment, but no catch. Hold Nos. 2 and 3 Baalbec.—1. There may be a possibility of getting better out of this industrial investment by waiting a little longer. 2. Langlaagte Estate shares at $4\frac{3}{4}$ should suit you. 3. Hold. 4. Make your selection from the American Railroad bonds mentioned in my letter. L. K. R. I.—You cannot do better than put best part of your £5,000 into American Railroad bonds, as per table published to-day in my letter. Nos. 1 and 2 are very speculative. Amongst the Mines mentioned I consider Knight's (10), Langlaagte Estate (11), Hampton Plains (13), and Aladdin's Lamp (17) as very promising. Certainly hold Erie for a rise. No reason to sell No. 14, although you have a good profit. The Company (No. 15) will probably not get its concessions renewed, hence the decline. 16. No. Motto.—I think the Great Horseless Carriage Company (1) is exceedingly risky, and this also applies to No. 2. I feel sure the ideal carriage of the future has not been invented yet. I do not like Nos. 3 and 4, and against all these concerns unfavourable comments have appeared in these columns. The same applies to Nos. 5, 6, and 7. No reason to sell French Dunlops (8); but I do not think much of No. 8. I do not think well of the New Zealand Company in question. The papers are returned. Dugdale.—No option but to hold all your mining shares Nos. 1 to 13; they should recover again. No. 14 is no particular catch.

Various Investments.

The victory of McKinley in the States has not yet brought about much change in the Money Market, rates in which have been firm; but the fact that large sums of hoarded gold will be liberated in America rather points to the cessation of gold shipments from this side to the States; and while an early reduction in the Bank rate is not probable, it looks as if the present moderate value of money would be maintained. The favourable issue of the Presidential elections has had a hardening influence upon all gilt-edged securities, Consols advancing as much as $2\frac{1}{2}$ to 111. India Stock is also firmer; and there has been a general advance of from one to two points in Colonial bonds and British Corporation stocks, which bears out the view which I took last week, that it was no use holding back any longer in the hope of lower quotations of gilt-edged securities. Investors should, however, consider whether it would not be more advantageous to them to give the preference to sound American Railroad bonds, which, now that the American people have declared in favour of a gold basis and honesty, again form an excellent investment, quite as safe as many other so-called gilt-edged stocks, while a much higher yield is to be obtained, as will be gathered from the table which I have inserted elsewhere. Silver dropped sharply on the news of the discomfiture of the Silverites, but has since recovered again to $29\frac{15}{16}$d., while Rupee Paper is firm at $62\frac{7}{8}$. Cycle shares have been steady without much change in quotations, and it is probable that this market will become more active as we approach more closely to the opening of the new cycling season. Dunlop Deferred have been steady at $1\frac{3}{8}$, which is also the price of Humber Extensions. Cycle Tubes are firmer at $\frac{7}{8}$, on statements that the large new factory of this Company is almost ready for working. Cycle Components are quiet at $3\frac{7}{8}$; but in Gladiators a considerable business is being transacted at $\frac{1}{4}$ premium, while Bagots are firm at 1 premium. An extraordinary general meeting of the shareholders of the Nitrate Railways has been called for the 19th inst., when the Board will very properly place before their constituents the prospects and position of the Company, which have of late been much discussed. Amongst high-class investments, the Debentures of the Mexican Cotton Estates, of Tlahualilo, may be still recommended as a good investment yielding 6 per cent., and standing at about par I hear that the new Bovril Company will see the light of day at the end of next week, and there is little doubt that the shares will rise to a premium. There has been considerable activity amongst American Brewery shares, prices having favourably responded to the election of Mr. McKinley, and, with the improved conditions of trade which will result from the more settled state of the currency, these industrial undertakings should materially advance, so that a higher range of prices may be looked for in the near future. I hear very good accounts of the St. Louis Breweries, the profits of which for last year are expected to be between £210,000 and £220,000, or, after paying the Debenture and Preference interest, equal to over 8 per cent. on the Ordinary shares for the year. An interim dividend at the rate of 6 per cent. was paid in June last. The Preference shares at $10\frac{5}{8}$, therefore, seem a sound, permanent investment, yielding 8 per cent.; while there is still a considerable margin for improvement in the value of the Ordinary shares, which at their present quotation of $6\frac{5}{16}$ give a handsome return. An Ordinary share which stands in much the same position as the St. Louis Breweries Ordinary shares did eighteen months ago (when attention was drawn to them in these columns, and they could be bought at a little over half the present prices), is that of the Milwaukee and Chicago Breweries, of which I hear favourable accounts. They are to be purchased in the region of $3\frac{1}{2}$, and might easily double in value within the next eighteen months. This Company owns the celebrated Valentine Blatz Brewery of Milwaukee. To those investors who require a high return, and at the same time have the experience of the last six years to guide them, the Ordinary shares of the Springfield Breweries are very tempting. This Company has paid regular dividends of 9 per cent. each year since its inception, besides accumulating considerable reserves, and at $8\frac{1}{2}$ the shares yield nearly $11\frac{1}{2}$ per cent. to the investor. The Eight per Cent. Preference shares at $11\frac{1}{2}$ return nearly 7 per cent. A curious development of syndicate business is contained in circulars issued by the Co-operative Traders' Association, of Albert-buildings, 68, Great Tower-street, London, E.C. This "Association" boasts that its great feature is the utter absence of the gambling interest; yet it states that the "October trading has resulted in a profit of 6 per cent.," which is at the rate of 72 per cent. per annum. Subscriptions of £10 each are now invited in the well-known syndicate-touting style. How exactly the profits of the Traders' Co-operative Association are arrived at is not explained, beyond the statement that they are made in commercial commodities. But I do not think that this concern has made out such a case as to render it at all advisable to invest money in it. The Underwriting Bureau, of which the well-known Richard Banner Oakley is the prime mover, is now to the front with puffs and prospectuses of the Anglo-Continental Motor Carriage Company, Limited. This in itself appears to be a very speculative concern, and I should like to know whether the Earl of Westmorland, the Earl of Limerick, and the other directors are aware of the fervour with which R. B. Oakley is inviting people to underwrite the shares, for which he offers a commission of 10 per cent. in cash and 10 per cent. in shares? This prospectus is being sent out together with circulars of the "Road and Path Cycling Association," which has already been referred to by me in TRUTH, and which is also one of Oakley's bantlings. I say emphatically, have nothing to do with either of these concerns!—Your affectionate Uncle, MOSES.

THE SANITARY ENGINEERING CO. (Carter Bros.), 65, Victoria-st., Westminster, for making Sanitary Surveys in London or country

All Rights Reserved.]

QUEER STORY.

BOGER'S BANQUET.

LATE in the afternoon of November 10, 189—, a merry group of youngsters was gathered round the fire in one of the cosy smoking-rooms of the Mutton Chop Club, engaged in the consumption of much tobacco, and the perpetration of unlimited gossip. The Mutton Chop is a fairly well-known club; and, of its sort, it has an established, albeit a Bohemian, reputation. It is frequented chiefly by those members of the literary and artistic professions, who are not big enough guns to put up for more famous institutions, and also by a considerable sprinkling of the Junior Bar. An insignificant entrance fee and a moderate subscription bring it within the range of most purses. Not that it is a club to which election is a mere matter of nomination; still less, a club which is under the degrading necessity of having to cadge for members. As a club for small guns, the Mutton Chop holds its head high. The lesser artillery of letters and the drama are well satisfied to print "Mutton Chop" upon their visiting-cards; for, according to a certain standard, it stamps a man select; and it is something to be select—even among pop-guns.

The group of men gathered round the fire on this particular afternoon were all unmistakably jolly pop-guns; as was evinced by the good-humoured chaff, the playful banter, the merry jests, that were freely bandied between them. And presently they fell to discussing a subject in which the whole group seemed to take a lively interest.

"Any one seen old Boger?" remarked one.

"No; I don't think he has shown up here to-day," said another. "Beastly shabby of him, too. He must know that we are all spoiling to hear how he fared at the Guildhall feed last night!"

"Why the devil did they invite him?" propounded a third man.

"A compliment, my dear fellow. Boger hasn't set the Thames on fire But he's a good workman—we all know that. And those articles of his in the Weekly Wirepuller, cracking up the Corporation and the City Liveries, attracted a good deal of attention in certain circles. They were able articles, too. Never read a weak case more forcibly presented. You'll see. They'll do something for old Boger!"

"Hope they will. The poor beggar needs it. A man with his talents ought to be raking in the oof; yet somehow he never manages to rise above starvation pay. Utterly deficient in commercial instincts, I suppose!"

"Yes," chimed in another. "He's always in a chronic state of hard-uppishness. Often has to cadge on his Uncle for a dinner, I'm told."

"Wonder so shy and sensitive a man has the face to beard the avuncular dragon! Good old bashful Boger!"

"Expect he enjoyed the fizz last night," added some one else, chuckling. "Boger loves his liquor, eh? Good old bibulous Boger!"

"Eke did enjoy the turtle. Boger hath a capacious waistcoat. I'fecks. He will, in truth, be a liveryman to-morrow. Good old bilious Boger!" said a theatrical gentleman, then just rising into fame as an interpreter of Shakespearian clowns.

"Hem! Corporations to the Corporation, eh?"

"Ha! ha! ha! What a sore point—if, indeed, the word may be used of so obtuse a thing—what a sore point is that self-same corporation to the worthy Boger. He walks leagues every day in his efforts to train it down; and is awfully sick because it obstinately refuses to shrink."

"Yet why should he be sore about it? For my part, I should be proud to present such an imposing front to my fellow men. Still, as you say, it is an awfully tender subject with him. I have learnt that—to my cost. You know what a gentle, inoffensive, good-natured creature he usually is. Well, only yesterday I chaffed him about his tummy. By Jove! you should have seen how he lost his wool. I thought he was going for me, so I prudently decamped."

"I heard a story about him, to the same effect, last week," struck in somebody, "from old Shearman, the tailor. He was measuring Boger for inexpressibles, it seems, and in the course of doing so he punched Boger rather unduly—as our friend thought—about the lumbago regions.

"'What the deuce are you up to?'" says Boger. 'I'm a tryin', sir,' says old Shearman, 'to find the small o' your back.'

"'And by Job, sir,'" old Shearman told me, 'Blowed if Mister Boger didn't fling hisself straight out of my shop in a reg'lar tantrum, saying he'd see me damned before he'd give me another order, and that he'd half a mind to knock my blooming head off. And yet I hadn't meant no offence. Not that it matters to me very much, for Mr. Boger's custom scarcely runs to one soot a year, and he don't always pay for that.'"

"Yes; no one can call Boger a dressy man. Yet I think—poor old chap—he's awfully sensitive about his shabby clothes, and his poverty. Can't bear to think that they are noticed. I wonder what sort of figure he cut at the Guildhall last night."

"Yes; I wonder. I——"

"I say, you fellows," suddenly chimed in another man, who was skimming an evening paper, with his back turned to our group. "I say! Just listen to this. By Jehosophat! Well, I never!"

"What's that?"

"Why, old Boger—well, here is a go. But just listen."

All turned their attention eagerly to the speaker, who, in an excited and impressive voice, began to read aloud as follows:—

SINGULAR CHARGE OF THEFT AGAINST AN AUTHOR.

At the Mansion House Police Court this morning, Walter Boger, described as an author and journalist, was charged before Alderman Sir Benjamin Bucksmith with the theft of a table knife. Mr. Halwood, who appeared to prosecute on behalf of Messrs. Alder & Co., the well-known refreshment contractors, said that the charge was a somewhat singular one The defendant Boger was present, by invitation, at the Lord Mayor's banquet, at the Guildhall, last evening, and was noticed by one of the waiters to take up a table-knife, belonging to the prosecutors, and to secrete it in the tail pocket of his dress-coat. The waiter at once communicated this to the manager, who kept his eye on Boger, stopped him as he was leaving the banqueting-hall, and questioned him on the subject. If he had acknowledged the theft, or given some sort of reasonable explanation, the matter might have gone no further. But his answers, on being interrogated, were so shuffling and unsatisfactory, that the manager thought it his duty to call in a constable and give the defendant in charge On his being searched at the police station, the knife was found in his pocket; and also upon his person was discovered an envelope containing several pawnbrokers' duplicates. They bore the name and address—clearly fictitious—John Smith, Kensington; and—what was particularly significant—one of the duplicates related to a parcel of forks, knives and spoons, pledged a few weeks previously with Messrs. Trepill, in the Borough.

In the light of this discovery, Messrs. Alder & Co. had thought it incumbent on them to press the case—which, in other circumstances, they would have been loth to do.

Witnesses were then called in support of the charge, who bore out counsel's opening statement. The defendant, who appeared much distressed and to feel his position very acutely, called no witnesses, but protested his innocence of any intentional theft; said that he meant to replace the knife, but forgot, after all, to do so. He entreated the Alderman not to convict him.

The Alderman: "But why did you take the knife?"

Defendant made no audible reply.

The Alderman: And how do you account for these pawnbrokers' duplicates being found on your person?

Defendant: I swear they do not belong to me. I never knew that they were in my possession. I was utterly astonished when they were found upon me at the police station. I have no idea how they came there.

In the end, the Alderman, after descanting on the sadness of seeing a man like the defendant in so degrading a position, remanded him for a week, in order that the police might investigate the matter of the pawnbrokers' duplicates. He would accept defendant's recognisances in £100, and two sureties in £50 each, for his reappearance. Sureties not being forthcoming, defendant was removed in custody. We understand, however, that an hour or two later the necessary sureties were found, and that the defendant was liberated on bail.

The reading of the above account evoked loud expressions of amazement from our whole group of listeners.

"Good God!" ejaculated one.

"Who the deuce would have thought it?" cried another.

"Impossible!" exclaimed a third.

"There must be some mistake," said a fourth. "Boger a thief! It is out of the question."

"If he was going to steal at all, he would surely have gone for the spoons or forks," pronounced another.

"Well, I simply don't believe it."

"But here it is—in black and white," rejoined the reader of the paragraph.

"He didn't even deny that he had sneaked the knife."

"Those pawn-tickets look deuced fishy."

"Of course, the fellow is notoriously hard up."

"He often doesn't know where to turn for sixpence."

"I tell you there's some confounded mistake."

"I'll stake my head on Boger's honesty."

"He couldn't have done it."

"He did it, though."

"It's a clear case."

"Hang it all, you fellows! Don't turn on a friend the moment he is accused!"

"Rot! The accusation has been clearly brought home to him."

"I bet you it will all be explained satisfactorily."

"I bet you it won't."

"Take me in a fiver?"

"Yes."

"The committee will have something to say to this."

"They will indeed. We don't want thieves in the Mutton Chop."

And so this discussion raged for an hour or so, until one more urgent and interesting demanded the attention of the disputants. It was by that time close upon eight o'clock. The discussion of our friend's misfortunes is, beyond measure, attractive, but even that pales in attractiveness before the discussion of our daily dinner.

* * * * *

On that day week, when the unfortunate Boger surrendered to his recognisances at the Mansion House, quite a little crowd of his acquaintances was present in court. Boger appeared in the dock, looking thoroughly harassed and miserable. And when, on casting a furtive glance round the court, he caught sight of so many familiar faces, his distress and confusion became quite pitiable to witness. Sensitive and painfully shy under any circumstances, he was now—as could be clearly seen—scarcely able to support his position. His face was as white as a ghost's. He stood trembling in every limb. It seemed to his friends, also, as if a week's anxiety and suspense over this humiliating charge had done for poor Boger what no amount of training and exercise had been able to accomplish, and that the very ample lines of his expansive figure were palpably less full, round, protrusive. Solidity, weight, bulk still remained; vast, indeed, and excessive for the average man; but for Boger, a mere, shrunken relic; lean, shadowy, immaterial.

"By Jove," whispered one of his acquaintances to another, "Old Shearman would not have to punch for the small of Boger's back now."

"No, indeed. He has quite a waist, has he not? But, I say! The poor devil does look ill. I feel awfully sorry for him. I can't believe that he committed such a paltry theft—unless, perhaps, he was drunk."

"Umph. The finding of those pawn-tickets upon him looks jolly rum. Still, I admit it was hardly worth while to sneak a dinner-knife."

"H—sh! They're beginning."

Mr. Halwood, who again appeared for the prosecutors, had now risen to address the Bench.

"I wish to say at once, your Worship," he said, "that, since the last hearing of this case, information has been obtained by the police which throws a somewhat less serious complexion upon it. It will be in your Worship's recollection that, at the last hearing, pawnbrokers' duplicates were produced which had been found on the defendant, one of them relating to a packet of spoons, forks, and knives pledged with Messrs. Trepill, in the Borough, in the name of John Smith. In fact, it was owing to the production of these tickets that your Worship ordered a remand. (The Bench nodded.)

"Well, the police have carefully investigated the matter of these duplicates; and I am bound to tell your worship that, as far as they go, the defendant stands completely exonerated. Not only were the goods not pawned by him at all, but there is every reason to suppose that he was speaking the truth when he asserted, at the last hearing, that he was quite unconscious of having the tickets in his possession. The police have discovered the gentleman who did pledge the goods to which the duplicates relate. And not only that. But this gentleman, when asked how the pawn-tickets could have come into Boger's possession, was able to suggest a possible explanation. Under stress of circumstances, he had, some weeks ago, sold his dress suit to a second-hand dealer. And it might have happened—he said—that Boger had purchased the suit. He referred the police to the dealer in question. The result, your Worship, has been to prove, conclusively, that the defendant Boger did hire that very dress suit from this dealer on the afternoon of November 9 last. I need hardly point out the significance of the date."

A murmur of surprise was heard throughout the court; even the worshipful alderman's eyebrows were raised in well-regulated, magisterial astonishment.

"Under these singular circumstances," continued counsel, "taking into consideration that nothing whatever has transpired against defendant's previous character, and that the theft with which he stands charged is utterly insignificant, my clients have no desire to press the case. I may also add that if the defendant had frankly explained, at first, what the police have since discovered about the dress suit and the pawn-tickets, this prosecution would never have been instituted. I confess I am utterly at a loss to comprehend his inexplicable behaviour in concealing these facts, which he must have seen would tell immensely in his favour. It is even possible, your worship, that, if he can now be induced to speak, he may be able to explain his theft of the knife no less satisfactorily. But, however that may be, my clients feel that defendant has been more than amply punished by this exposure for appropriating the knife; and they are anxious, with your permission, to withdraw from the prosecution."

As counsel resumed his seat, a murmur of applause was heard in the body of the court, where Boger's friends were congregated.

"Silence! silence!" exclaimed the Bench. "This court is not a place of public entertainment. I do not see, Mr. Halwood, how I can, with propriety, accede to your request. The case has gone too far for the prosecutors to withdraw. But I am so far in agreement with you, that I shall be willing to impose a nominal penalty. First, however, I had better hear what the defendant has to say for himself." (To defendant). "Do you wish to offer any explanation?"

It had been observable that, during counsel's speech, Boger had seemed deeply confused and embarrassed; and that the hue of his countenance had changed from an ashy pallor to a blushing and fiery crimson. He clung to the front of the dock for support as he replied to the Alderman, and his words came out in hurried, nervous snatches.

"Your Worship!" he gasped, "I—I—have been a damned—oh! I beg your Worship's pardon—a confounded fool."

A slight titter was head at the back of the court. The Bench did not rebuke it; for the Bench itself had some difficulty to preserve a due gravity of demeanour. Boger's appearance at this juncture was particularly, though unintentionally, comic.

"Your—your—Worship! W-what counsel has said ab-bout the dress-suit and the pawnbrokers' duplicates is perfectly true. I—I—ought to have explained that when I was charged at the police-station. But I was confused and—and frightened, and—and—ashamed to confess" (poor Boger was now blushing to the roots of his hair)

METZLER & Co. have just issued Editions, with English and French words, of Gabriel Fauré's beautiful Songs, including "Les Roses d'Ispahan" (Persian Roses), now being sung by Mlle. Landi.

"that I was too—too—poor to have a dress-suit of my own."

It was to the credit of the public in court that no one laughed now. Although the circumstances were so ridiculous, there was a genuine touch of pathos in Boger's distressed confession that appealed to everybody.

"A false shame! A false shame," murmured the Bench, encouragingly.

"I—I—your Worship—so much has come out, that I may as—as well admit the rest. The truth about the knife was—was this, your Worship. The—the—hired waistcoat was too—too" (Boger was nearly crying) "too tight for me" (Audible titters in court). "Towards the middle of dinner it—it—grew tighter than I could bear" (The tittering increased. Even the Bench was severely masticating the magisterial lip). "I—I—tried to loosen the—the—back strap. I—I—found that the—the buckle had come off, and that the—the straps were tied in a G-G-Gordian knot. I was—was—afraid that the buttons in front would burst, your Worship, and so I—I—stealthily used the k-knife to cut the strap; and—and—seeing a—a—waiter looking at me, and being ashamed of his finding out what I was doing, I just s-slipped the knife into my tail-pocket, your Worship, and——"

Boger never got farther than that. The tittering in court here swelled into a huge guffaw, that could not be repressed. The Bench itself gave up biting its lip, lay back on its judicial throne, and roared till the tears ran down its august cheeks. Counsel, solicitors, warders, officials, police, and public, all joined in. Before it was over, there was not a pair of sides in court that did not ache.

When, at length, silence—the silence of complete exhaustion—was restored, the Alderman spoke. His voice was weak and feeble, his red cheeks still wet and streaky.

"You are discharged. But I would caution you for the future to be more careful; and, next time you are dining out, to regulate your waistcoat-buckle before you start. Next case."

MUSIC.

HOW COTTELL'S CONSERVATOIRE IS WORKED.

I HAVE already printed a great deal of correspondence connected with Mr. George Cottle (or, to give him his higher sounding and more up-to-date professional name, Mr. Lansdowne Cottell) and his London Conservatoire of Music, while a mass of other evidence, much of it a mere repetition of the sort of thing which has already appeared, has also reached me from various sources. Now, therefore, would seem to be the time to sum up the case—to show exactly what the London Conservatoire of Music is, and how the whole thing is worked. I have been particularly assisted in this by some correspondence which has been placed in my hands, and in which Mr. Cottle, or Cottell, very frankly discloses the whole game.

Mr. H. C. Hamman, who is a Master of Arts of Oxford, seems last July to have seen one of Mr. Cottell's precious advertisements for a secretary. Mr. Hamman, of course knowing nothing about the Conservatoire, wrote for particulars, and Mr. Cottell replied on July 8 as follows:—

DEAR SIR,—I require a young gentleman to train in my own way, so as to be able in a short time to undertake my duties here, also at Manchester, Birmingham, &c. (must not object to travel). To suitable candidate I offer the most delightful home with board and unusual advantages. I shall require a small premium for the period arranged, as I should have to pay my masters to teach the system adopted. There is also the whole routine of the business department to learn. The position open is very unique. Good conversational powers are imperative, my receptions require good management. There is every opportunity of working up to a very good salary. I am here Thursday and Friday till 9 p.m., Saturday till 3.—Yours truly,

LANSDOWNE COTTELL.

Mr. Hamman, M.A., seems to have been under the impression that a tutor or professor was required. But Mr. Cottell undeceived him in the following letter, the italics, of course, being his, not mine:—

DEAR SIR,—My advertisement was not for a professor, but for a youth to be trained to my own original system. I have fifty professors now at work, but I have not one who can do my work at the branches of the Conservatoire. I am sorry to find so many clever men content to sniggle for such poor pay as the profession offers generally. Here it is quite different. A few minutes chat would soon prove my ideas are right. Come to the concert and ball here on Saturday and judge for yourself.—Yours truly,

LANSDOWNE COTTELL.

Mr. Hamman, who, by the way, resides at Andover, still did not bite, whereupon Mr. Cottell wrote, much to Mr. Hamman's disgust:—

July 20, 1896.

DEAR SIR,—I shall be pleased to appoint you music examiner to the Conservatoire at Andover, giving you the power to award scholarships.—Yours truly,

LANSDOWNE COTTELL.

This ended the correspondence so far as Mr. Hamman was concerned, for a man of honour and a member of the University clearly could have nothing to do with so miserable a business. Indeed, Mr. Hamman's honest contempt for Mr. Cottell and his Conservatoire was great, for as he rightly points out, "As I sent no references and had no interview he had no means of knowing whether I could discriminate between a sharp and a flat." Mr. Cottell's terms—and these are very important as showing exactly what the Director of the London Conservatoire of Music means by "Free" scholarships—are in Mr. Cottell's handwriting as follows:—

"According to your judgment and ability, scholarships are awarded by paying one, two, or three terms' fees, as per prospectus, free after for two years. If very talented free at once, subject to rules. Resident scholarships for ladies, value fifteen to twenty guineas, deducted from yearly fees. Gentlemen, value twenty to fifty guineas yearly off. Erase director from form and insert your own name. Liberal commission to you 10 to 20 per cent.

The "terms" were characteristically written on half a sheet of note paper and inclosed were a number of Mr. Cottell's precious circulars announcing "free" scholarships, though it will be perfectly obvious that, with the exception to the "very talented, free tuition, subject to rules" (rules which as we have seen imply "library" and other fees), there was not the slightest intention of issuing really "free" scholarships at all.

Here I may mention that Mr. Cottell has been for very many years a teacher of music, so that he is old enough to know better. The process of evolution from schoolboy to "gentleman holding high prominent position" appears to have been as follows:—In 1853-4 I find "George Cottle" among the list of "Present students" at the Royal Academy of Music. He then started for himself, and in the "Musical Directory" as far back as 1857, when, by the way, his name was still spelt "G. Cottle," he was announced as "Principal of the College of Music, 2, Liverpool-street, N." The germs of the "Conservatoire" idea thus appear early. In the Directory of 1861 the name is spelt "G. Cottell," and the address is 2, Keppel-street, Russell-square, W.C., while in the following year "G. Cottell" holds forth at "37, Torrington-square and Ramsgate." In 1864 the address is Monmouth Lodge, Monmouth-road South, Westbourne-grove, and there is no mention of the "College of Music." In the Directory of 1867—and I have taken these at random—there are two initials, and the name is "G. L. Cottell," Norfolk House, Norfolk-road, Bayswater, while in the following year I find the gentleman a teacher of the pianoforte at the "Bayswater Academy of Music, 11, Chepstow Villas." In 1875, we are down again to "G. Cottell," and the address is Lyndenhurst, Abbey-road, N.W., and here in 1876 for the first time the professional name seems to have blossomed forth as "Lansdowne Cottell." In 1886 the address was 12, Westbourne-park, but for the first time in the "Musical Directory" of the year 1888 (though I dare say the concern was really started at an earlier date)

The ONLY PALATABLE NATURAL APERIENT to take is "Franz Josef" Water, generally admitted to be the best. Ten gold medals at World's Exhibitions. No household should be without it.

we have the address, "Lansdowne Cottell, Director London Conservatoire of Music, 66, Porchester-road, Hyde Park, W.," where the business is still carried on.

An old-established Professor of this sort should, it might be thought, be able to conduct his business on other and straighter lines. At present, however, and if I may rightly gather from the mass of correspondence, a good deal of which I have published, the revenue of the Conservatoire may be divided under four heads—the first, that gained from "Gentlemen just from school," who want to become "private secretaries;" secondly, the takings from members of learned and other societies, who are pestered by the "private secretaries" aforesaid to become "annual subscribers" at the trifling discount of 90 per cent.; thirdly, the residential "free" scholarship holders, who, of course, to an individual pay their footing; and, fourthly, the "free" scholarship holders without residence, but who, nevertheless, as we have seen, have to pay their way in some form or other. In short, although little fishes doubtless are sweet, when big fish avoid the net; yet without money, and despite subscriptions and "free" scholarships, you stand no more chance of gratuitous training at Porchester-road than of free board at a West End hotel.

First I must deal with the subject of the secretaries. An enticing advertisement is issued, the Standard and Daily Telegraph being apparently the journals most frequently read by such gudgeon. The advertisement runs more or less as follows:—

Gentleman's son required, just from school, of good address and accomplished, to be trained to assist in private office and otherwise, a gentleman holding high prominent position. Board, progressive salary, moderate premium. Letters, &c.

As numerous letters to TRUTH have shown, those who answer are, as a rule, informed that they need musical training and must pay for it. Or, as Mr. Hamman was told, they must pay to be taught to take the director's place while he is away and also on tour, for Mr. Lansdowne Cottell has also "branches" in Birmingham, Manchester, and elsewhere. The Birmingham "branch," as we all now know on the word of that respected but deeply deceived gentleman, Mr. Percy Harrison, merely consisted in the hiring of a room for teaching purposes at so much an hour or day. In this connection I may mention a good story, for which, however, I cannot personally vouch. Mr. Harrison, it is told me, has decorated his teaching room with pictures of Madame Patti and other eminent artists, and Mr. Cottell, in order to encourage a new candidate, would proudly wave his hand towards the portraits with the off-hand remark, "These people are all earning a very good living." The provincial "branches" used chiefly for the examination of new "free" students, are, I learn, an important feeding-ground for the Conservatoire.

The "small premium" asked from the "youth just from school" is supposed to pay for the musical tuition without which no private secretary to this "gentleman, holding high prominent position," could possibly be considered completely equipped. Many parents, I dare say, like the French gallant in "The Gay Parisienne," are sceptical, and, "scenting a little mices," refuse to have anything to do with the affair. But every accepted secretary has to pay down a certain sum. Mr. Leo C. Glyn, of Aldeboro', writes me that he was asked for £60, and on his refusing such a position by letter, he received a postcard from Mr. Cottell generously offering to halve the premium. Indeed, as little as £30 a year has been accepted. The "secretaries" certainly have some sort of musical tuition, either by Mr. Cottell himself or by some other teacher, but their principal duty is to write letters to members of various learned societies and others, begging these confiding prople to subscribe for season tickets at the trifling discount of 90 per cent., with the right of nomination for free scholarships. The following is the "common form" of letter, and unless the "Committee" consist of Mrs. Lansdowne Cottell, who is admitted by everybody to possess a will strong enough for half a dozen committees, the thing is a self-evident sham:—

DEAR SIR,—I am directed by the Committee to solicit the use of your valuable name as Patron of the Conservatoire. There is no liability attending same. Upon receiving your consent, I shall have much pleasure in forwarding you a ten-guinea season-ticket, or a life member's, the only charge being the stall-keeper's, as per enclosed form. An early reply will be much esteemed.—Yours obediently.

CHARLES LONG, Secretary.

If Mr. Cottell thinks this sort of thing the proper work at which to put a young fellow fresh from school, and whose character is left to be formed by this "gentleman holding high prominent position," I do not believe any decent parent or guardian will agree with him. The begging letter dodge is, I should imagine, the very last thing in the world to which any right feeling man, responsible for the care of youth, would set these lads to work at. They are required to sign the name, "Charles Long, secretary." Whether there ever was such an individual as "Charles Long" at the Conservatoire, I have not the remotest idea. But there is certainly no "Charles Long" now, and the name is a pure myth. The circulars, which are widely distributed, and are marked "Special Private Notice," state that—

It was decided at the last meeting of the committee that in order to make the advantages of the Conservatoire still more widely known, a limited number of 10 guinea season-tickets should be presented to members of the Society of Arts, the Royal Geographical Society, and others to whom this form may be addressed. To defray the stall-keeper's fees for numbering and reserving seats, postage, &c., one guinea will be the only charge for one year or 10 guineas for a Life Governor's ticket.

Another slip states:—

The committee dinners will in future be held in the King's Hall, Holborn Restaurant. Free invitations and dates of same will be duly forwarded to season-ticket holders.

Whether the free dinner has been a profitable bait or not, I am, of course, unaware. But Mr. Cottell clearly has missed a chance in not addressing his invitations for these gratuitous banquets to the members of the Corporation of London, who are the best people in the world to appreciate and the best qualified to criticise them. The following is another circular, which is sent to professional and other people who advertise in the daily papers:—

The above advertisement will be inserted one year in the London Conservatoire of Music prospectus, and in every concert and opera programme given by the Conservatoire during the period, for half a guinea inclusive. Three years' insertion for the price of two. Advertisers are entitled to two admissions for every concert and operatic performance. Cheques or postal orders should be crossed Union Bank of London, and sent to Charles Long, Secretary, London Conservatoire of Music.

It will thus be seen that Mr. Cottell does not neglect many methods of raising the wind. And he expects and instructs all these circulars to be addressed and sent out by those "gentlemen's sons just from school" who have paid a premium "to be trained to assist in private office or otherwise a gentleman holding high, prominent position." Whether, if he knew the real facts, any parent or guardian would be willing to pay Mr. Cottell a premium for his ward to graduate in this extremely shady class of business my readers can judge for themselves.

The next source of Mr. Cottell's revenue is the residential students. These, I am afraid, must have fallen off a little of late, for at present the London Conservatoire of Music boasts of only ten all told, and for some, the time is up a few weeks hence. Seven of them are ladies, some of them from the provinces, Manchester, apparently, being a particularly favoured spot in this respect, though if I may judge from the "free tuition" advertisement issued from the London Conservatoire and inserted in the Leeds Evening Post last Wednesday, the hard-headed Yorkshiremen are to furnish the next fishery. There is, of course, no need to go into further details in regard to this branch of the subject, for the letters I have published show pretty plainly the system adopted. Advertisements are issued offering "free" scholarships. Here, for example, is one of them from the Daily Telegraph as recently as Saturday last:—

Musical Vacancies, for rising talent.—The London Conservatoire of Music, Porchester-road, Hyde Park, affords free tuition, resident scholarships, concert, and other introductions.—Forms for London, Manchester, Birmingham, branches, prospectus, opinions of the principal London papers recording the concerts and successes during the last twenty years, post free, Sec. Single artistes or complete programme provided for concerts, operas, &c., at the shortest notice.

I have not yet been able to discover any one fortunate enough, or perhaps sufficiently talented, to secure this "Free tuition resident scholarship." In each case the formula appears to be the same:—You are certainly very talented, or you have a remarkably good voice, but you are not sufficiently advanced for the "free" scholarship, and you must therefore pay one, two, or three terms, as the case may be. Indeed, Mr. Lansdowne Cottell's own letter to Mr. Hamman, which I have quoted above, shows pretty well the whole scheme. In other cases Mr. Cottell declares that the musical tuition shall be free, but you must pay for board and residence the reduced fee of so-and-so, or vice versâ. As to the system of tuition adopted at the London Conservatoire of Music, I do not think it advisable or necessary to enter into the matter at all. Upon such a point there is, of course, always much to be said on both sides. It should, however, be stated that the majority of the imposing list—some sixty professors—given in the prospectus seem to be quite unknown to the students. Mr. Cottell himself teaches singing, and his son, Mr. Louis Cottell, comes on Thursdays for a busy day. Mrs. Cottell, senior, is a sort of general manager, and Mrs. Louis Cottell is down as a teacher of French. Mr. J. Barrett is a painstaking teacher of singing, and Messrs. Marchbank and Hornsby of piano and harmony. As to Mr. Blumenthal, Mr. Plowitz, Signor Tito Mattei, Mr. Jewson, Mr. T. Harper, and others whose names are printed in the list, I have not yet been able to discover that they have a class.

The last source of revenue is the ordinary outdoor student. Of these there are beyond doubt a considerable number, Thursdays being the busiest days, while, although despite all that has been printed and said upon the subject, Mr. Cottell's examination Wednesdays are, I learn, still largely attended. Here, again, the correspondence which I have already published will show what, as a rule, is the plan adopted. Sometimes the pupil will have to pay one term, after which tuition is free, sometimes a short lesson is given gratuitously, but there are library music fees, &c., to pay, "in accordance with the rules of the Conservatoire." "Free" tuition, in the sense that an ordinary person will understand the term, i.e., gratuitous instruction without charge for rising talent is, I believe, quite unknown, or at any rate, I have not been favoured with a single example of the sort.

Beyond much doubt, and, in fact, I have heard it from more than one source, the school is largely recruited, particularly so far as secretaries and residential students are concerned, thanks to the imposing list of eminent names given under the title of "Committee, Patrons, and Subscribers to the Concerts." This is a very omnibus sort of description, but as the character of the Conservatoire and its system of business should now be perfectly obvious, I will venture to ask the following ladies and gentlemen whether they countenance the use of their names in this connection. Among them are Lord Carrington, Lord Battersea, Sir N. de Rothschild, the Lord Provost of Aberdeen, Sir W. T. Marriott, the Hon. Dudley Leigh, Sir Albert Altman, Canon Harford, Prebendary Moore, the Duchess of Wellington, the Countess of Strafford, Lady Carrington, and Mrs. Ronalds. Unless they are prepared to countenance Mr. Cottell's proceedings, these ladies and gentlemen should withdraw their names without delay.

The De Reszkes have now arrived in New York, and M. Jean de Reszke has officially intimated to the management that he finds the preparation and rehearsal of two new Wagnerian operas too much for one season. Accordingly "Die Walküre" will be postponed, and he and his brother Edouard will appear as Siegfried and Wotan in "Siegfried," to the Brünnhilde of Mme. Melba, that lady being replaced in London by Mme. Nordica. For the London season in place of Mme. Melba in such parts as Juliette, Mr. Grau has engaged Mme. Frances Saville, the Australian soprano who a year or two ago sang with the Carl Rosa Company in the provinces, and has since successfully appeared in Paris and elsewhere.

The concerts of the week have been a good deal too numerous to be dealt with in detail. Rarely have we had so busy an autumn season, and I am bound to add that the public seem to have come well up to the scratch, and that most enterprises which deserved it have paid remarkably well. Dr. Richter has now left us, but Señor Sarasate has resumed his violin chamber concerts, and on Monday the season of Popular Concerts commenced, Joachim's pupil, Mme. Soldat, who has already played here being temporarily leader of the quartet. Mr. Eugene D'Albert will appear next Saturday. He occupied St. James's Hall last Saturday with his "Only pianoforte recital in London" this year; but it was so largely attended that another concert devoted to the works of Beethoven will be given on Tuesday week. The Ballad Concerts have commenced at both Queen's Hall and St. James's Hall. The wealthy firms of Boosey and Chappell are here in rivalry, to the immense delight, of course, of the artists. Mr. Boosey relies largely upon ballads old and new, while Messrs. Chappell go in heavily for instrumental solos and recitations, Miss Lily Hanbury being the reciter last week. Amongst the most successful débutantes of the week was Miss Katie Goodson, a young lady who studied for many years at the Royal Academy of Music under Mr Oscar Beringer and the late Mr. Walter Bache, but who since has been at Vienna under Leschetitsky. She is a most promising young pianist. At the Crystal Palace on Saturday Mlle. Chaminade was the star, and besides her exquisitely pretty orchestral suite "Callirhoë" she played her Concertstück, which she introduced at the Philharmonic eighteen months ago. Mr. Robert Newman's Promenade Concerts are doing remarkably well, and here next Saturday for the first time will be given one of Dvorak's new symphonic poems.

The veteran Mr. Sims Reeves, who has just returned from his first visit to the Cape, will within a week or so be off to the United States for a tour which may possibly extend to Australia. I imagine the occasion to be unique in which a famous English tenor has made his first appearance in America in his seventy-ninth year.

A testimonial is about to be presented to Mr. George Riseley, conductor of the recent Bristol Festival. Mr. Riseley, who is a native of Bristol, has spent practically all his life there, for as a child he was a choir boy in the Cathedral of which he is now organist.

I regret to hear of the serious illness of Mlle. Sofia Ravogli. She was announced to appear at a provincial concert last week, but Mlle. Giulia telegraphed that her sister was seriously ill with peritonitis, and that she herself was quite prostrated with anxiety.

GIRLS' GOSSIP.

DEAREST AMY.—Does the first touch of frost make you shrivel and feel small? I feel certain that my fine brain and large heart are no bigger than petits pois when it is as cold as it is to-day. I tried to converse with a Frenchman, whom I met this morning, and found that all I had once known of his language had completely congealed. It is disagreeable to find oneself without words and standing mute with heaps to say and no means of saying it.

The fact is, I am not happy when I'm cold, but there are compensations in the brightness of the sunshine, the cheery look of the blue sky and the beauty of the Turner sunsets that we so often see in London.

And the Christmas shows are actually beginning already. We have had invitations to inspect the Christmas stock of more than one enterprising and extremely previous tradesman who has evidently determined that panting Time shall toil after him in vain.

I wish Christmas would keep in its proper place. There is a sense of dislocation conveyed in the way it hangs out over not only its own entire month but over November as well. It is unsymmetrical. It is a wen-like protuberance. It is like a scaffolding on a church. It resembles several disagreeable things, and I sincerely wish that some one would disperse its over-development, trim it neatly back to its due proportions, and deftly knock it into position with the mallet of common-sense.

BUSVINE'S New Styles of Ladies' Fur-trimmed Cloth Jackets are separately designed and specially modelled to suit each particular figure. Sketches by post.—4, Brook-street, W. "It is no exaggeration to affirm that he really occupies a very similar position to a sculptor, who moulds out of clay what Mr. Busvine does out of cloth—a perfect figure."—Court Journal.

For it is not Christmas the festival that is in this way unduly enlarged and prolonged, but Christmas the commercial opportunity. The apotheosis belongs to the "milch cow," not the "goddess."

Have you seen the descriptions of the new Duchesse d'Orléans' diamond crown? It is high, and is entirely made of magnificent brilliants. In the centre rises the Bourbon lily, three of the leaves bent down and one erect, this last consisting of an immense diamond. Smaller lilies form the rest of the regal crown.

Her bridal dress must have been superb. It was cloth of silver, with the Bourbon lily glittering all over it in raised gold. She is tall, dark, and handsome, and, I believe, just twenty-nine.

I have seen some most delightful evening gowns at Nicolle's, in their new premises over Lewis's, the jeweller, at 192, New Bond-street. I wish I knew where to buy poetic ink, for I should like to dip my pen in a fount of poesy in order to do justice to such sweet creations.

Try to imagine a beautifully-fitting dress of pure white satin lined with bright rose-pink silk which shines through the satin, and makes it look like a seashell in the sun. Does not Tennyson somewhere describe this luminous effect of pink seen through white?

> A lily that the sun looks through
> And a rosebud leans upon.

Well, dear, the skirt, fitting tightly above, has a very deep flounce, also in white satin, lined with rose-pink and hemmed with narrow black velvet, a little of the pink showing above it, and looking like a fringe of stray petals. This deep flounce was bordered with a narrow frill of the white, lined with pink and bordered with black. The bodice had perpendicular lines of the black velvet both in front and at the back, and the sleeves shared in the apt arrangement which had at once the result of making the figure look slender and heightening the effect of the white and pink. A frill of the pink-lined satin, edged with its line of velvety black, crossed the shoulders bretelle fashion, but, instead of going to the waist at the back, the frill formed a kind of hood along the top of the bodice, a new and very graceful idea. A band of black velvet finished the bodice at the waist, ending in a bow with one pointed end standing up, the other down.

Now have you seized all these points and conjured up the lovely dress before your mind's eye? Then promptly add an all-enveloping circular cloak, made of similar satin and also lined with deep rose pink throughout. Border it with a frill like that on the dress, and add a dark fur boa round the neck.

And here is another chef d'œuvre for your inspection: It is an evening dress of pale blue satin, the skirt made perfectly plain but bordered with a band of rich, dark-brown fur. One side of the bodice, back and front, is in the blue satin veiled with tinsel net, embroidered with silver flowers. The other side, crossing on the blue in a diagonal line, is in amethyst silk enriched with an embroidery of point lace, pale blue and gold, and edged with the brown fur. The sleeves are full frills of the tinsel net over a close undersleeve bordered with a band of fur.

A cape-cloak of mauve mirror velvet, brocaded in gold and silver and lined with quilted blue silk, was bordered with dark brown fur and, above it, with a trimming of real Maltese lace. There were also a collar and yoke of the fur. Do you find these covetable at all?

INVALID CORSETS.—Ladies in search of that gentle support so essential for ease and comfort should have a Surgical Corset Belt shaped by the experts, Mesdames SYKES, JOSEPHINE, & Co., Anatomical Corsetières, 280, Regent-st., Oxford-circus, London, W.

And what is your opinion of a turquoise velvet Russian jacket for theatre wear? It is half length, the deep basque being full only in the centre of the back. It is edged with dark mink, like the jacket itself, which has for front a wide and slightly-full piece of ivory satin, all being high to the throat, and held in here and there with bands of pearl and gold embroidery, one of which formed the belt, visible at the back over the turquoise velvet, and in front over the ivory satin, but passing beneath the fur-trimmed edges of the jacket. The collar was simply a band of the pearl and gold embroidery.

The sleeves were sweet. The long ones underneath were white satin, and over them hung round velvet half-sleeves almost to the elbow, plain and not very full, a border of fur finishing them off.

Do you remember my telling you that some courageous ladies had started an agency at 83, Ebury-street? You will be glad to hear that their enterprise has been rewarded by a considerable share of success. They are particularly fortunate in letting people's furnished houses and flats for them when the owners wish to leave town. The consequence of this is that they have always a long list of available houses and rooms sent in to them; and ladies writing up from the country can have their choice of flats and houses ready for occupation at rentals from three guineas to twenty per week.

It is so convenient, too, to be able to engage servants at the Ladies' Agency. Should you know of any one who wants to live in town for a few weeks, don't forget the number—83.

Many of the Christmas and New Year greeting cards are extremely dainty and refined, both in design and colouring. We sent for a box of Parkins & Gotto's, and have made our choice in good time, before all the world rushes in and makes everybody wildly busy. We have developed a little social conscience among us, and we pet and foster the tender plant in every way, seeing how many people go through the world, leaving a trail of inconvenience wherever they pass. Women who order gowns at the last moment are among the worst exponents of evil wrought by want of thought, but even in the matter of greeting cards it is well to allow plenty of time to every one concerned. So we have chosen our little pink card with its golden merry-thought and spray of mistletoe and some simple words of goodwill. You would delight in a sweet pale grey-green card, with a small satin panel in the centre, on which two tiny fluffy birds are portrayed perched on a sprig of almond blossom, and nestling close up to each other for warmth. I divine the east wind in that picture! You would also like a white card with embossed edges, with a few primroses painted on it in relief, in their natural soft yellow. There is a racing card, with horses and jockeys; and a skating card, with a good study of old-world costume, both masculine and feminine; while hunting people are well catered for. Among the more fanciful devices are gold bees, a lovely spray of blackberries in high relief, a strikingly attractive fancy sketch with life-like eyes, much better on tinted paper than on white, and a truly Scottish design of purple thistles and "Auld Lang Syne."

Mrs. A. B. Marshall's fourth annual Cookery Exhibition, with wedding breakfast and ball supper display, is fixed for December 17 and 18, at Queen's Hall, Langham-place. It is in connection with her special grand ball supper and wedding breakfast lesson to be given in the class-rooms of the School of Cookery, Mortimer-street, on December 15 and 16. There are several prizes offered, both money and medals, and I must manage to go, and tell you all about it. Mrs. Marshall's own pupils take a prominent part in the exhibition.

Christabel writes from Paris:—

DEAR MADGE,—I saw some lovely dresses just before they were packed and sent off, made by the Maison Vignon, 182, Rue de Rivoli, for the Duchesse de Chartres, to wear at the various ceremonies in honour of the marriage of the Archduchess

It has been remarked over and over again that, for Autumn and Winter wear, a lady never looks better and more suitably clad than in a Redfern Gown. Messrs. REDFERN'S New Models are now ready. Inspection invited.—26, Conduit-street, W.

Marie Dorothée and the Duke of Orleans. The dress worn at the dîner intime (all these toilettes are regulated by court etiquette) was silver grey satin, the long trained skirt quite plain, the bodice high, and the sleeves long, but over the front of the bodice and skirt fell a wonderful drapery of tulle, spangled with diamonds. Pearls were worn as ornaments with this dress.

The dress worn at the gala was in a beautiful shade of yellow, the tint called jonquille here. Like the preceding, the skirt was trained but quite plain, and all the ornament was placed on the bodice, which was extremely rich, the low front being closely embroidered with turquoises, and slightly pointed, the back rather higher, and all round the neck and shoulders was a stole (like a flat boa) of blue fox, which in front formed a border to the turquoise embroidery, slightly drawn to the right side. The ends fell on the skirt nearly to the ground. The sleeves, which ended at the elbow, had two large puffs of the satin, finished with a band about an inch and a half wide, worked with turquoises like the front, and below this fell a deep ruffle of lace. Diamond ornaments were worn with this handsome gown.

The dress worn by the Duchesse de Chartres at the marriage was extremely handsome. It was vieux rose velvet, the skirt trained like the others, and the low bodice closely covered with silk embroidery of lilac and mauve tinted flowers and green leaves, united by a narrow ribbon of silver embroidery about a third of an inch wide with Louis XIV. knots here and there; the short sleeves were embroidered to match. A most splendid piece of lace like a veil began at the back of the low bodice and fell over the long skirt like an upper train, and almost entirely veiled the back. It was of point d'Angleterre, and excessively handsome, but the effect was rather heavy on the vieux rose to my idea; a continuation of this lace came round the shoulders and draped them and the front, and was caught up with diamond ornaments. On the skirt also the lace was draped with a velvet chou with a diamond centre. With this a diadem of diamonds was worn, and a superb necklet of the same jewels sewn on velvet.

The Queen of Portugal wore at the gala or theatrical performance a dress of blue and white damas, with large Pompadour bouquets. Round the trained skirt was a border or wreath of variegated roses. The bodice, cut low in the Louis XIV. style, had a deep falling collar of guipure embroidered with pearls and diamonds over rose-coloured velvet, with bouquets of roses and feathers on shoulders and in front. With this was worn a most lovely opera cloak of pale pink miroir velvet, lined throughout with sable, and sables (whole) forming the pelerine, with rich lace below.

The Archduchess Marie Dorothée (la fiancée) wore pink moire brocade at the gala, the bodice embroidered with pearls, and quantities of lace falling about the bodice. It is singular, this custom of young fiancées to wear pink for the ceremonies preceding their marriage whether it suits them or not. Blonde or brune, it does not matter; pink is orthodox, and pink it must be.

Ever, dear, your loving cousin, MADGE.

CIGARES DE JOY cure ASTHMA.

CIGARES DE JOY (Joy's Cigarettes) afford immediate relief in cases of ASTHMA, WHEEZING, and CHRONIC BRONCHITIS. Appreciated by Physicians and sufferers all over the world. Easy to use, certain in effect, and harmless in action, they are recommended for use by young and old. May be had of all Chemists and Stores in Boxes of 35 at 2/6, or post free from WILCOX & Co., 83, Mortimer St., London, W.

WHY DRINK INFERIOR TEA?
UNITED KINGDOM TEA COMPANY'S TEAS
DIRECT FROM THE GROWERS.
1/-, 1/3, 1/4, 1/6, 1/7, 1/9, & 2/- per lb., DELIVERED CARRIAGE PAID.
Write for Samples sent free, taste them, and judge for yourselves. Amazing superiority in Quality! Great Economy in prices.
Offices: 21, MINCING LANE, LONDON, E.C.

THE NEW CROWN VIOLET.

AN EXQUISITE PERFUME.
In Crown Stoppered Bottles only.
"The Delicious Essence of the Violet itself, distilled from the fragrant Violet Gardens of the sunny Riviera."
SOLD EVERYWHERE.
The Crown Perfumery Co.,
177, NEW BOND STREET, W.

ACCIDENTS OF TRAVEL.
ACCIDENTS RIDING, DRIVING, SHOOTING, CYCLING, FISHING, SKATING, &c.
ACCIDENTS OF ALL KINDS.
INSURED AGAINST BY THE
RAILWAY PASSENGERS' ASSURANCE CO.
64, CORNHILL, LONDON. A. VIAN, Secretary.

"TRUTH"
THE GALIGNANI LIBRARY,
224, RUE DE RIVOLI, PARIS.

The Sinclair Galleries,
55, 57, 59, SHAFTESBURY AVENUE, LONDON, W.
FINE OLD MARBLE CHIMNEY PIECES
From £10 to £500, including some which have been removed from Historic Mansions.
RENAISSANCE. LOUIS XIV., XV., XVI. EMPIRE. GEORGIAN. ADAMS. PERGOLESI.
Skilful Masons sent to any part of the Kingdom to Repair, Alter, Clean, or Restore Statuary.
ESTABLISHED 1838. ESTIMATES FREE. FREDERICK LITCHFIELD, Proprietor.

GAIETY RESTAURANT, STRAND.
LUNCHEONS (HOT and COLD)—At Popular Prices, in BUFFET and RESTAURANT (on 1st floor). Also Chops, Steaks, Joints, Entrées, etc., in the GRILL ROOM.
AFTERNOON TEA—Consisting of Tea or Coffee, Cut Bread and Butter, Jam, Cake, Pastry, ad lib., at 1/- per head; served from 4 till 6 in RESTAURANT (1st floor).
DINNERS IN RESTAURANT—From 5.30 till 9 at Fixed Prices (3/6 and 5/-) and à la Carte. In this room the Viennese Band performs from 6 till 8. Smoking after 7.45. Private Dining Room for Large and Small Parties.
American Bar. The GRILL ROOM is open till 12.30. SPIERS & POND, Ltd, Proprietors.

Price 6s.

THE LIFEGUARDSMAN:

A NOVEL.

Adapted from Schimmel's "De Kaptein van de Lijfgarde."
Crown 8vo, cloth.

Price 6s.

THE STORY OF

MAURICE LESTRANGE.

By G. W. T. OMOND.
Crown 8vo, cloth.

Price 3s. 6d.

MRS. FINCH-BRASSEY.

By Mrs. ANDREW DEAN,
Author of "The Grasshoppers," "A Woman with a Future," &c.
Third Edition. Crown 8vo, cloth.

A JAPANESE MARRIAGE.

By DOUGLAS SLADEN,
Author of "Brittany for Britons," &c.
Crown 8vo, paper boards; also in cloth, price s. 6d.

Price 2s.

THE LAST TOUCHES.

By Mrs. W. K. CLIFFORD.
Third Edition. Crown 8vo, paper covers.

Price 2s.

MERE STORIES.

By Mrs. W. K. CLIFFORD.
Crown 8vo, paper covers.

LONDON: A. & C. BLACK, SOHO SQUARE.

MELLIN'S FOOD

For INFANTS and INVALIDS.

MELLIN'S FOOD

is similar to Breast Milk chemically and as beneficial physiologically.

Samples post free from

Mellin's Food Works, Peckham, S.E.

Established 1670.

GOLDSMITHS.
DIAMOND MOUNTERS

Streeter & Co. Limited.

18, NEW BOND STREET, LONDON, W.

Established 1670.

JEWELLERS.
LAPIDARIES.

Hunting Brooch in Diamonds, £12.

White and Black Pearl and Diamond Trefoil Brooch, £40.

Diamond Star, £30.

Turquoise and Diamond Heart and Tie Brooch, £17.

Stag Brooch in Diamonds, £15.

Opal and Diamond Trefoil Brooch, £12

Opal and Diamond Brooch, £8.

Pomeranian Brooch in Diamonds, £17.

Pug Brooch, £18.

Horse and Jockey Brooch in Diamonds, £25.
(Owner's Colours Enamelled to order.)

Hackney Brooch in Diamonds, £25

Donkey Brooch in Diamonds, £18.

Pearl and Diamond Fly Pin Brooch, £5.

CHRISTMAS GIFTS

Gem Links or Waistcoat Buttons.

Catseye and Diamond Cluster Bracelet, £52. 10s.

Snipe Brooch, £15.

Woodcock in Diamonds, £30.

Turquoise and Diamond Heart & Tie Bracelet, £33.

CHATTO & WINDUS'S NEW BOOKS

To be ready on November 17th. Crown 8vo, cloth elegant, gilt edges, 6s.

THE CHARM, and other Drawing-room Plays. By WALTER BESANT and WALTER POLLOCK. With 50 Illustrations by Chris Hammond and A. Jule Goodman.

SIR WALTER BESANT'S NEW NOVEL.

THE CITY OF REFUGE. By SIR WALTER BESANT, Author of "All Sorts and Conditions of Men." 3 vols. at every Library.

"We should be surprised if this new romance from Sir Walter Besant's pen does not prove one of his most popular."—Daily News.

JUSTIN H. McCARTHY'S NEW ROMANCE.
Now Ready. Crown 8vo, cloth decorated, 3s. 6d.

THE ROYAL CHRISTOPHER. By JUSTIN HUNTLY McCARTHY, Author of "A London Legend," &c.

Now Ready. Demy 8vo, Picture Cover, 1s.

A MINION OF THE MOON. By T. W. SPEIGHT, Author of "The Mysteries of Heron Dyke."
This Story forms the "GENTLEMAN'S ANNUAL" for 1896.

BRET HARTE'S NEW STORIES.

BARKER'S LUCK, AND OTHER STORIES. By BRET HARTE. With 39 Illustrations. Crown 8vo, cloth, 3s. 6d.

REVENGE! By ROBERT BARR, Author of "A Woman Intervenes," &c. With 12 Illustrations. Crown 8vo, cloth, 6s.

"There is enough so-called sensation here to make the fortunes of a whole generation of purely melodramatic authors. . . . Mr. Barr seems to have studied the art of the thrilling story until he can tell it without a superfluous word."—Daily Chronicle.

"The contents are admirable. . . . The characters are vividly drawn, and the narratives have scarcely a superfluous word."—Glasgow Herald.

"It is refreshing to turn to something both clean and clever, and in saying this we are paying only a small tribute to Mr. Barr's volume of short stories. . . . To use a well-worn encomium, there is not a dull page from cover to cover."—Pall Mall Gazette.

IN THE KINGDOM OF KERRY.

By B. M. CROKER, Author of "Diana Barrington," &c. Crown 8vo, cloth, 3s. 6d.

"Mrs. Croker can never fail of a welcome while she keeps her hand unchanged and her wit sharpened. She has never been better and more easily pleasing than in this volume."—World.

"The book is full of entertainment for all sorts of readers, and hasn't a dull page."—Scotsman.

A CAPFUL O' NAILS: a North-Country Story. By DAVID CHRISTIE MURRAY, Author of "Joseph's Coat." Crown 8vo, cloth, 3s. 6d.

"The story of the agitation is told here with all Mr. Christie Murray's fidelity to life and vivacity of description. He has produced a wonderfully realistic and pathetic romance of English life."—Morning Leader.

"The book is one which merits the attentive reading of all who can appreciate good literature, and equally of all who can enjoy a sterling heart-moving story."—Daily Mail.

"Mr. Murray has written yet another good story in 'A Capful o' Nails.'"—Glasgow Herald.

Dr. Rumsey's Patient. By L. T. MEADE and CLIFFORD HALIFAX, M.D.

Crown 8vo, cloth, 6s.

"An eminently readable story. . . . Those who like an exciting story of incident and mystery will find one in this volume."—Speaker.

New Three-and-Sixpenny Novels.

A LIFE INTEREST. By Mrs. ALEXANDER.
THE PROFESSOR'S EXPERIMENT. By Mrs. HUNGERFORD.
NORA CREINA. By Mrs. HUNGERFORD.
SONS OF BELIAL. By WILLIAM WESTALL.
HEART OF OAK. By W. CLARK RUSSELL.
LONG ODDS. By HAWLEY SMART.
THE WOMAN IN THE DARK. By F. W. ROBINSON.
THE VOICE OF THE CHARMER. By L. T. MEADE. With 8 Illustrations.
LADY KILPATRICK. By ROBERT BUCHANAN.
THE REVOLT OF MAN. By Sir WALTER BESANT.
A TRAMP ABROAD. By MARK TWAIN. With 314 Illustrations.
JERRY THE DREAMER. By WILL PAYNE.
MARRIED OR SINGLE? By B. M. CROKER. [Nov. 26.

DIARY OF A CITIZEN OF PARIS DURING "THE TERROR." By EDMOND BIRÉ. Translated by John de Villiers.

With Photogravure Frontispieces. 2 vols. demy 8vo. cloth, 21s.

"A work of great research and of much interest."—Daily News.

"The incidents of 'The Terror' are noted down from day to day as they occurred, and the most scrupulous care appears to have been taken, by consultation of the best authorities and the diligent perusal of the newspapers, bills, posters, and pamphlets of the period, to describe each event with the closest possible approach to accuracy."—Scotsman.

EIGHTEENTH CENTURY VIGNETTES. THIRD SERIES. By AUSTIN DOBSON. Crown 8vo buckram, 6s.

"As good as ever. . . . all mixed plentifully with quiet humour. Arduous work was never given so delightfully frivolous an air. Mr. Dobson hides the pains of his learning and offers us the sweets."—Sketch.

MIGHT HAVE BEEN: SOME LIFE NOTES. By Dr. JOSEPH PARKER. Crown 8vo, cloth gilt, 6s.

"Space fails to tell other good things, but Dr. Parker's book will speak for itself. Many things in it might make even 'Arthur' roar."—Pall Mall Gazette.

"An extremely able and interesting book. There is in it abundance of fun . . . . a book which will give us many a hearty and healthy laugh, and, on the other hand, furnish abundant food for the highest culture of mind and heart."—Independent.

London: CHATTO & WINDUS, 111, St. Martin's-lane, W.C.

MR. WM. HEINEMANN'S PUBLICATIONS

Gold Medal, London, 1896.

A MAGNIFICENT PRESENT.

THE CASTLES of ENGLAND. Their Story and Structure. By Sir JAMES D. MACKENZIE, Bart. Dedicated by permission to Her Majesty the Queen. With 40 Full-page Plates, 160 text Illustrations, and many Plans.

In 2 vols. Imperial 8vo. Price to Subscribers, £3. 3s. net.

 This magnificent work affords a record of no fewer than 660 Castles, many of which would be forgotten but for the zeal and enthusiasm of the historian. The plates are executed in the finest style, and the work is indispensable to the library of every country house.

THE FINEST SERIAL OF THE DAY.

CORREGGIO: His Life, His Friends, and His Time. By Dr. CORRADO RICCI, Director of the Royal Gallery, Parma. A New and Popular Edition, in 14 Monthly Parts, each containing 3 Full-page Plates, and numerous text Illustrations.

Part I. is now ready, price 2s. 6d. net.

 Mr. Heinemann has decided to reissue this magnificent work in monthly parts at such a price as will put it within the reach of all.

THE TRUE STORY OF THE THIRD NAPOLEON.

UNDERCURRENTS OF THE SECOND EMPIRE. By ALBERT D. VANDAM, Author of "An Englishman in Paris."

In 1 vol. Price 7s. 6d. net.

THE DAILY CHRONICLE:—"Mr. Vandam is very tender towards Louis Napoleon, but he is very truthful."

THE DAILY TELEGRAPH:—"We doubt whether a truer picture of the man, apart from his trappings of state, has ever been delineated."

THE HEART OF AFRICA.

TIMBUCTOO THE MYSTERIOUS. By FELIX DUBOIS. With 153 Illustrations from Photographs and Drawings made on the spot, and 11 Maps and Plans.

In 1 vol. Price 12s. 6d.

TIMES:—"One does not often meet with a book of travel so full of interest and novelty as this. An excellent picture of the present condition of things on the Niger."

RELIGION AND BELLES LETTRES.

LETTERS OF A COUNTRY VICAR. By YVES LE QUERDEC. [Nov. 13.

In 1 vol. Price 5s.

This work will be welcomed for its vivid pictures of country life in France, and of the relations between clergy and laity.

"CRIME AS A FINE ART."

A BOOK OF SCOUNDRELS. By CHARLES WHIBLEY. With a Cover designed by Mr. Whistler.

In 1 vol. Price 7s. 6d.

PALL MALL GAZETTE:—"Mr. Whibley has done his work in admirable fashion. The artists of the road have lost nothing at the hands of their fellow artists of the pen."

THE NOVEL OF THE INDIAN MUTINY.

ON THE FACE OF THE WATERS. By FLORA ANNIE STEEL, Author of "The Potter's Thumb."

In 1 vol. Price 6s.

W. L. COURTNEY in THE DAILY TELEGRAPH:—"Mrs. Steel's literary skill is nowhere more apparent than in the manner in which she unfolds the events that culminated in the massacres of Cawnpore. There is no arrest in the march of her narrative, there is no needless display of historical knowledge. No one, not even Mr. Rudyard Kipling, knows India better than Mrs. Steel."

THREE VOLUMES OF LEGIBLE TYPE.

LIFE THE ACCUSER. By EMMA BROOKE, Author of "A Superfluous Woman."

In 3 vols. 15s. net.

THE DAILY CHRONICLE:—"A story in which our interest grows and grows, becomes absorbing, and is fast held until the last word upon the last page."

A MOST DRAMATIC STORY.

THE OTHER HOUSE. By HENRY JAMES.

In 2 vols. 10s. net.

THE ATHENÆUM:—"A very notable and distinguished piece of work. A story of human interest and passion."

BY A TWENTY YEARS' RESIDENT IN CHINA.

CHUN-TI-KUNG. HIS LIFE & ADVENTURES. By CLAUDE REES.

In 1 vol. Price 6s.

A novel of Chinese Life and Customs.

BY THE AUTHOR OF "MR. BAILEY-MARTIN."

ANDRIA. By PERCY WHITE.

In 1 vol. Price 6s.

THE DAILY TELEGRAPH:—"Cannot fail to secure the sincerest admiration. Sparkles with brilliant metaphor and trenchant epigram."

BY THE AUTHOR OF "GEORGE MANDEVILLE'S HUSBAND."

BELOW THE SALT. By C. E. RAIMOND. With Cover designed by Mr. Whistler.

In 1 vol. Price 6s.

THE ST. JAMES'S GAZETTE:—"There is a fine sense of humour throughout. C. E. Raimond's writing is always good."

A STORY OF THE REVOLUTION

THE REDS OF THE MIDI. By FELIX GRAS.

Sixth Edition in the Press. Price 3s. 6d.

THE TIMES:—"Never was child of the Revolution depicted in a more attractive manner."

A CHILD OF THE STREETS.

MAGGIE. By STEPHEN CRANE.

In 1 vol. Price 2s.

THE PALL MALL GAZETTE:—"'Maggie' is by no means a pleasant story, but it is a strong one and a true one."

An Illustrated List of Messrs. Heinemann's Announcements post free.

London: WM. HEINEMANN, 21, Bedford-street, W.C.

Year by Year 1847 to 1896 Increasing Demand.

Year by Year 1847 to 1896 Increasing Demand.

Ward, Lock, & Co.'s Publications.

Complete Catalogue, post free, on application.

NEW WORK BY MRS. CHANDLER MOULTON.
Just ready, crown 8vo, cloth gilt, 6s.

LAZY TOURS. By Mrs. CHANDLER MOULTON, Author of "Bedtime Stories," "Swallow's Flight," &c.

"Compels us to read her book from cover to cover. . . . A fresh enchantment is also given as we wander with Mrs. Moulton by wharves and quays, antique thoroughfares, gorgeous palaces, cathedrals, and art galleries."—Daily Chronicle.

MRS. CHANDLER MOULTON'S NEW BOOK.
Crown 8vo, cloth, 6s.

LAZY TOURS.

"The most interesting book of travel that has been written for some time."—Boston Advertiser.

"Mrs. Moulton is an enthusiastic sightseer. With her as guide we wander through foreign lands finding something of interest everywhere."—Boston Gazette.

BY L. F. AUSTIN.
Just ready, full crown 8vo, buckram, 5s.

AT RANDOM: A COLLECTION OF ESSAYS AND STORIES. By L. F. AUSTIN. With Photogravure Portrait of the Author.

The news that, after a long period of distinguished success in periodical literature, Mr. Austin's best essays will now appear in volume form, has been received with exceptional interest in the literary circles in which he holds a distinguished place.

AT RANDOM. By L. F. AUSTIN. Now ready, crown 8vo, 5s.

"Will assuredly be one of the most widely discussed volumes of the season.",

ETHEL TURNER'S NEW STORY.
Just Ready. Crown 8vo, cloth gilt, 3s. 6d.

The Little Larrikin. By ETHEL TURNER, Author of "Seven Little Australians," "The Family of Misrule," &c. Profusely Illustrated.

"Miss Ethel Turner is fast becoming to the world at large what the authoress of 'Little Men,' &c., was for generations past to America, and to children and grown-up people alike all the world over."—Westminster Gazette.

"This clever young Australian's work is always good and her brisk and incisive way of treating even the commonplace carries the reader's sympathies."—Literary World.

GUY BOOTHBY'S NEW NOVEL.
20,000 COPIES called for before Publication.
Just ready. Crown 8vo, cloth, 5s.

DR. NIKOLA. By GUY BOOTHBY. With 40 Illustrations by STANLEY L. WOOD.

"Dr. Nikola" has enchanted hundreds of thousands of readers during its serial course in the Windsor Magazine. Moreover, the vividly pictorial records of advertisement hoardings have rendered the name a household word to millions who have not followed its thrilling adventures. The publishers believe the book to be worthy of the advertisement it has received and will receive; and as it will, moreover, be strikingly attractive in its outward appearance, an enormous sale is anticipated.

DR. NIKOLA. By GUY BOOTHBY. Crown 8vo, 5s.

The Glasgow Herald says:—"A most thrilling story throughout, manly and brave, and Sherlock Holmes has at last found a successor."

The Manchester Courier says:—"Few authors can depict action as brilliantly and resourcefully as the creator of 'Dr. Nikola.'"

Guy Boothby's DR. NIKOLA.

Scotsman.—"One hair-breadth escape exceeds another with rapidity that scarce leaves the reader breathing space. . . . The interest of their experiences is sufficient to stay criticism, and carry him through a story ingeniously invented and skilfully told."

"A tale of moving adventure which will hold the reader from start to finish."—The Manchester Chronicle.

BY THE SAME AUTHOR.

THE BEAUTIFUL WHITE DEVIL. 5s.
A BID FOR FORTUNE. 5s.
IN STRANGE COMPANY. 5s.
THE MARRIAGE OF ESTHER. 5s.

WILLIAM LE QUEUX'S STORY OF NIHILISM.
Crown 8vo, cloth gilt, 3s. 6d.

A Secret Service. By WILLIAM LE QUEUX, Author of "The Great War," "Zoraida," &c. Frontispiece by H. Piffard.

"Striking and vivid revelations of the official corruption and political oppression under which the subjects of the Czar continually writhe. . . . Will be read and appreciated for the brightly-written stories of mystery and sensation and romance."—Daily Mail.

WARD, LOCK, & CO., LIMITED, LONDON.

SMITH, ELDER, & CO.'S LIST.

NEW AND CHEAPER EDITION OF ROBERT BROWNING'S POETICAL WORKS.

"An edition which in every point of excellence will satisfy the most fastidious taste."—The Scotsman.

NOTICE.—The FIRST PRINTING of the NEW EDITION of THE COMPLETE WORKS OF ROBERT BROWNING, in 2 vols. large crown 8vo, with Portraits, 15s., has been taken up by the Booksellers. A SECOND PRINTING will be ready shortly.

CONAN DOYLE'S NEW NOVEL

Ready To-morrow, with Eight Full-page Illustrations, crown 8vo, 6s.

RODNEY STONE

By A. CONAN DOYLE,

Author of "MICAH CLARKE," "THE WHITE COMPANY," &c.

MRS. HUMPHRY WARD'S NEW NOVEL.

NOTICE.—The SECOND EDITION of SIR GEORGE TRESSADY by Mrs. Humphry Ward, crown 8vo, 6s., is now ready.

JESS. By H. RIDER HAGGARD. New Illustrated and thoroughly Revised Edition, with 12 Full-page Illustrations by Maurice Greiffenhagen. Crown 8vo, 3s. 6d.

London: SMITH, ELDER, & CO., 15, Waterloo-place, S.W.

BICYCLE GYMKHANA and MUSICAL RIDES, by Major WALTER WINGFIELD, the Inventor of Lawn Tennis, with Diagrams and Instructions how to Arrange and Practice them.—To be obtained from the Author, 100, Buckingham Palace-road, London, and all Booksellers, price 5s. net.

MESSRS. HURST & BLACKETT

Will publish on Wednesday, November 11,

A NEW ILLUSTRATED EDITION OF

John Halifax, GENTLEMAN.

By MRS. CRAIK.

Fully Illustrated by HUGH RIVIERE. In 1 vol. large crown 8vo. Handsomely bound. Gilt top.

PRICE SIX SHILLINGS.

NEW WORK BY WALTER WOOD.

On Friday next, November 13, in 1 vol. large crown 8vo. Gilt top, 6s.

BARRACK AND BATTLEFIELD. TALES OF THE SERVICE AT HOME AND ABROAD. By WALTER WOOD, Author of "A Captain in the Fusiliers," &c.

NEW NOVEL BY MRS. TOM KELLY.

On Friday next, November 13, in 1 vol. crown 8vo, with frontispiece, 6s.

A LEDDY IN HER AIN RIGHT. By Mrs. TOM KELLY, Author of "Time and Chance," &c.

NEW NOVEL BY VERE CLAVERING.

Now ready in 1 vol. crown 8vo, 6s.

SIN FOR A SEASON. By VERE CLAVERING, Author of "Barcaldine," &c.

NEW AND REVISED EDITION.

Now ready in 1 vol. crown 8vo, 3s. 6d.

IN TIME TO COME. By ELEANOR HOLMES, Author of "A Painter's Romance," "The Price of a Pearl," &c.

EDNA LYALL'S NOVELS.

Each in 1 vol. crown 8vo, 6s.

DONOVAN.	WE TWO.
IN THE GOLDEN DAYS.	KNIGHT ERRANT.
TO RIGHT THE WRONG.	WON BY WAITING.
	A HARDY NORSEMAN.

London: HURST & BLACKETT, LTD., Great Marlborough-st., W.

THREE SUCCESSFUL NOVELS

JUST PUBLISHED BY

A. D. INNES & CO.

Each one volume, crown 8vo, cloth, 6s.

BY THE AUTHOR OF "DODO."

LIMITATIONS.

The Daily Telegraph says:—

"Mr. Benson has written an interesting and truly human book. His range is much wider than it was, his character-drawing has gained in depth, delicacy, and precision, while the sparkling dialogue which we enjoyed in 'Dodo' has lost none of its old brilliancy."

LIMITATIONS.

The Glasgow Herald says:—

"It is so splendidly told, 'Limitations' will stand a good chance of being the novel of the year."

The Westminster Gazette says:—

"The best that Mr. Benson has given us yet."

LIMITATIONS. By E. F. BENSON. Crown 8vo, cloth, 6s.

BY FRANCIS GRIBBLE.

THE LOWER LIFE.

The Daily Mail says:—

"One cannot doubt that the work will find many thousands of appreciative readers among men of business, and that it will open the eyes of many wives of City men."

THE LOWER LIFE. A Novel of the Stock Exchange. By FRANCIS GRIBBLE. Crown 8vo, cloth, 6s.

By NELLIE K. BLISSETT.

THE WISDOM OF THE SIMPLE.

FIRST REVIEWS.

The British Review says:—

"Whether Blissett is merely a nom-de-guerre is unknown to us, but it is the name of one who has very pretty wit and a remarkably good story to tell."

The Pall Mall Gazette says:—

"There can be no doubt as to the ability and charm of Miss Blissett's book."

THE WISDOM OF THE SIMPLE.

By NELLIE K. BLISSETT. Crown 8vo, cloth, 6s.

London: A. D. INNES & CO., 31 and 32, Bedford-street, Strand.

LAWRENCE & BULLEN, LTD.

THE KÁFIRS OF THE HINDU-KUSH. By Sir GEORGE ROBERTSON, K.C.S.I. With numerous Illustrations by A. D. McCormick. Royal 8vo, £1 11s. 6d. [In a few days.

SHAKSPERE'S HOLINSHED: The Chronicle and the Historical Plays combined. By W. G. BOSWELL-STONE. Crown 4to, 15s. net. [Ready.

THE ADVENTURES OF HAJJI BABA OF ISPAHAN. By JAMES MORIER. Edited by Dr. C. J. Wills, with an Introduction by Sir Frederic Goldsmid, C.B., K.C.S.I. Illustrated from original sketches made by James Morier, and from drawings by Persian artists. Royal 8vo, £1 1s. net. [Shortly.

NEW VOLUMES OF THE MUSES' LIBRARY.

The POEMS of HENRY VAUGHAN, THE SILURIST. Edited by E. K. CHAMBERS. With an Introduction by H. C. Beeching, Rector of Yattendon. 2 vols. 12mo, 10s. net. [Ready.

This Edition contains all the poems, sacred and secular, of Henry Vaughan. Some copies are printed on large paper.

A Prospectus of the Muses' Library will be sent on application.

TURKISH FAIRY TALES AND FOLK TALES. Collected by Dr. IGNACZ KUNOS. Translated from the Hungarian Version by R. Nisbet Bain. Illustrated by Celia Levetus. Demy 8vo, 6s. [Ready.

Uniform with Mr. Bain's collections of "Russian Fairy Tales and Cossack Fairy Tales."

NEW NOVELS.

AN ERRING PILGRIMAGE. By NOEL AINSLIE. Crown 8vo, 6s. [Ready.

MARGOT. By SIDNEY PICKERING. Crown 8vo, 6s. [In a few days.

MANY CARGOES. By W. W. JACOBS. Crown 8vo, 3s. 6d. [Ready.

This book should secure Mr. Jacobs a prominent place among the humourists of the time.

UNDINE: A Romance. By FRIEDRICH DE-LA MOTTE FOUQUE. Translated by EDMUND GOSSE. Illustrated by FLORENCE M. RUDLAND. Crown 8vo, 3s. 6d. [Ready.

An Edition is also kept in crown 4to. with Photogravure Illustrations by Mr. W. E. F. Britten, price 12s. 6d. net.

LAWRENCE & BULLEN, LTD., 16, Henrietta-street, Covent-garden, London, W.C.

RICHARD BENTLEY & SON'S LIST

NEW WORKS NOW READY.

JUST PUBLISHED.

ON SOUTHERN ENGLISH ROADS. By JAMES JOHN HISSEY, Author of "A Drive Through England," "A Tour in a Phaeton," &c. With a Plan of the Route taken, with Sixteen Full-page Illustrations from Sketches by Mr. Hissey. In 1 vol. demy 8vo, 16s.

EDITED BY CAPTAIN CASTLE.

THE JERNINGHAM LETTERS (1780-1843). Being Excerpts from the Correspondence and Diaries of the Honourable Lady Jerningham and of her daughter, Lady Bedingfeld. Edited, with Notes, by EGERTON CASTLE, M.A., F.S.A. With Portraits and other Illustrations. In 2 vols. crown 8vo, 24s.

BY SIR F. MONTEFIORE, BART.

THE PRINCESS DE LAMBALLE. By Sir FRANCIS MONTEFIORE. In 1 vol. crown 4to, with numerous Portraits and other Illustrations, 12s. 6d.

BY MISS CROMMELIN.

OVER THE ANDES FROM THE ARGENTINE to CHILI and PERU. By MAY CROMMELIN. In 1 vol. demy 8vo, with numerous Illustrations, 12s. 6d.

BY AN OLD COLLEGER.

ETON IN THE FORTIES. By ARTHUR DUKE COLERIDGE. In 1 vol. crown 8vo. With Portraits and other Illustrations, 6s.

A NEW NOVEL BY THE AUTHOR OF "NELLIE'S MEMORIES," &c.

THE MISTRESS OF BRAE FARM. By ROSA N. CAREY, Author of "Not Like other Girls," &c. In 1 vol. crown 8vo, 6s. Forming the latest Addition to the Series of BENTLEY'S FAVOURITE NOVELS.

RICHARD BENTLEY & SON, NEW BURLINGTON STREET, Publishers in Ordinary to Her Majesty the Queen.

KEGAN PAUL, TRENCH, TRÜBNER & CO. Ltd.

THE ONLY COMPLETE EDITION.

MOLTKE'S LETTERS TO HIS WIFE. With an Introduction by SIDNEY WHITMAN. With Portraits of Moltke and his Wife, and a Genealogical Tree, in Facsimile of the Field-Marshal's Handwriting. Two vols. demy 8vo, £1. 10s.

"Straightforward and plain, expressive and concise, and, moreover, brimming over with a delightful fund of quiet humour. The translator has done his hard work very well."—Spectator.

BY "A SON OF THE MARSHES."

IN THE GREEN LEAF AND THE SERE. By "A SON OF THE MARSHES." With numerous Illustrations by George C. Haité and Dorothy C. Nicholl. Large post 8vo, 7s. 6d.

AN ILLUSTRATED EDITION OF

MARCELLA GRACE. By ROSA MULHOLLAND. An entirely New Edition, with Illustrations. Crown 8vo, 6s.

JAPANESE FOLK-TALES.

SUNRISE STORIES. A Glance at the Literature of Japan. By ROGER RIORDAN and TOZO TAKAYANAGI. Crown 8vo, 6s.

PATERNOSTER HOUSE, Charing Cross-road, London.

STERILITY IN WOMEN: Its Causes and Curative Treatment. By J. B. RYLEY, M.D., M.R.C.S., London. An Illustrated Edition of this Work is now ready. Price 3s. 6d.; post free, 3s. 8d. London: HENRY RENSHAW, 356, Strand.

MISS BRADDON'S NEW NOVEL,

LONDON PRIDE,

In One Volume, handsome cloth, gilt top, crown 8vo, 6s.,

NOW READY AT ALL BOOKSELLERS.

MISS BRADDON'S LAST NOVEL.

SONS OF FIRE.

Cheap Edition. Cloth gilt, 2s. 6d. Picture boards, 2s.

NOW READY AT ALL BOOKSELLERS.

London: SIMPKIN & CO., Ltd.

BLACKIE AND SON'S

NEW ILLUSTRATED STORY BOOKS.

By HARRY COLLINGWOOD.

THE LOG OF A PRIVATEERSMAN. With 12 Page Illustrations by W. RAINEY, R.I. Crown 8vo, cloth elegant, olivine edges, 6s.

By KIRK MUNROE.

THROUGH SWAMP AND GLADE: a Tale of the Seminole War. With 8 Page Illustrations by VICTOR PERARD. Crown 8vo, cloth elegant, olivine edges, 5s.

By FRANCES ARMSTRONG.

A GIRL'S LOYALTY. With 8 Page Illustrations by JOHN H. BACON. Crown 8vo, cloth elegant, 5s.

FINELY ILLUSTRATED CHILDREN'S BOOK.

TO TELL THE KING THE SKY IS FALLING. By SHEILA E. BRAINE. With over 80 quaint and clever Illustrations by ALICE B. WOODWARD. 8vo, cloth, decorated boards, gilt edges, 5s.

BLACKIE & SON'S NEW ILLUSTRATED LIST of Books for Young Readers, with synopsis of their contents, sent post free on application.

London: BLACKIE & SON, Limited, Old Bailey.

6 NEW VOLUMES IN UNWIN'S 6/- FICTION.

JOHN OLIVER HOBBES.	THE HERB-MOON.	6/-
BENJAMIN SWIFT.	NANCY NOON.	6/-
S. R. CROCKETT.	THE GREY MAN.	6/-
J. T. BEALBY.	A DAUGHTER OF THE FEN.	6/-
JOHN REAY WATSON.	IN A MAN'S MIND.	6/-
MAY CROMMELIN.	HALF ROUND THE WORLD FOR A HUSBAND.	6/-

London: T. Fisher Unwin.

MUDIE'S SELECT LIBRARY.

ALL THE BEST BOOKS OF

Travel, Sport, Adventure, &c.

In ENGLISH, FRENCH, GERMAN, ITALIAN, and SPANISH.

Are in CIRCULATION and for SALE (either New or Secondhand).

Prospectuses of the Terms of Subscription in Town or Country and Lists of Books for Sale sent free by post to any address.

Books Exported to all parts of the World.

MUDIE'S SELECT LIBRARY, LIMITED,

30-34, NEW OXFORD STREET, LONDON; 241, Brompton Road, S.W.; and 48, Queen Victoria Street, E.C., and at 10-12, Barton Arcade, Manchester.

MESSRS. HUTCHINSON & CO.'S NEW BOOKS.

A BEAUTIFULLY ILLUSTRATED BOOK OF TRAVEL BY G. VUILLIER. With 167 Illustrations by the Author.

THE FORGOTTEN ISLES. Travels in Corsica, Sardinia, Majorca, and Minorca. By G. VUILLIER. Translated by Frederic Breton, Author of "The Trespasses of Two," "God Forsaken," &c. In crown 4to, handsomely bound in cloth, richly gilt and gilt top, 16s.

A NEW VOLUME BY MRS. MOLESWORTH.

UNCANNY TALES. By the Author of "My Cuckoo Clock," &c. In crown 8vo, handsome cloth gilt, 3s. 6d. With designed Title-page by Fred Hyland.

NEW HUMOROUS STORY BY THE AUTHOR OF "THE WALLYPUG OF WHY."

THE MISSING PRINCE. In crown 4to, handsome cloth gilt and gilt edges, 5s. Fully Illustrated by Harry Furniss and Dorothy Furniss.

THREE NEW VOLUMES OF THE "52" LIBRARY. EDITED BY ALFRED H. MILES.

Each in large crown 8vo, handsomely bound in richly gilt cloth, bevelled boards and gilt edges, 400-500 pp. With Illustrations, 5s.

52 STORIES OF PLUCK AND PERIL FOR BOYS. Containing Stories by G. A. HENTY, G. MANVILLE FENN, ROBERT OVERTON, Lieut.-Colonel MACPHERSON, and other well-known writers.

52 STORIES OF PLUCK, PERIL, AND ROMANCE FOR GIRLS. Containing Stories by L. T. MEADE, SARAH DOUDLEY, DAVID KER, HALL BYRNE, LUCY HARDY, and other well-known writers.

52 STORIES OF THE BRITISH NAVY AND OUR OLD WOODEN WALLS. Containing Stories of Battles and Adventures at Sea, and the Lives of the Great Admirals.

 Over 100,000 Volumes of this Library have been sold.

A NEW STORY OF CORSICAN LIFE AND ADVENTURE BY EDGAR PICKERING.

KING FOR A SUMMER. By the Author of "After Sedgemoor," "An Old Time Yarn," &c. In large crown 8vo, cloth, bevelled boards, richly gilt and gilt edges. With 8 Full-page Illustrations by Warwick Goble, 5s.

A NEW STORY OF ADVENTURE BY FRED WHISHAW.

THE EMPEROR'S ENGLISHMAN. By the Author of "Boris, the Bearhunter," "Out of Doors in Tzarland," "A Boyar of Terrible," &c. In large crown 8vo, cloth, richly gilt, bevelled boards and gilt edges. With 8 original Full-page Illustrations by Warwick Goble, 5s.

A SPECIAL ILLUSTRATED EDITION.

NATURAL HISTORY IN ANECDOTE. Illustrating the Nature, Habits, Manners, and Customs of Birds, Beasts, Fishes, Insects, &c. Edited by ALFRED H. MILES. In an entirely new binding, specially designed as a Gift or Prize Book. In crown 8vo, cloth gilt, bevelled boards and gilt edges. With Illustrations, 3s. 6d.

HUTCHINSON'S NEW NOVELS.

Six Shillings Each.

THE DEVIL-TREE OF EL DORADO. By FRANK AUBREY.
A QUAKER GRANDMOTHER. By IOTA.
THE ROMANCE OF MRS. WODEHOUSE. By Mrs. HARCOURT ROE.
THE BETRAYAL OF JOHN FORDHAM. By B. L. FARJEON.
A WELL-MEANING WOMAN. By CLO GRAVES.
THE DREAM THAT STAYED. By FLORENCE MARRYAT.
FORTUNE'S FINGERS. By A. E. WICKHAM.
A TANGLED GARDEN. By Mrs. FRED REYNOLDS.
JO OF AUCHENDORASS. By Mrs. J. A. CRAWFORD.
KITTY THE RAG. By "RITA."

London: HUTCHINSON & CO., Paternoster-row.

1/- BY POST, 1s. 2d. 1/-
Reprint of 6th Series (Violet).
QUEER STORIES FROM "TRUTH."
PUBLISHING OFFICE, 10, BOLT COURT, FLEET STREET, LONDON, E.C.

THE STAMPS OF EUROPE.—A beautifully illustrated series of articles on the above subject, from the pen of that well-known expert, Mr. W. A. S. Westoby, will commence in The Bazaar of Wednesday, November 4th, and will be continued on subsequent Wednesdays till completion. Every stamp collector should read these invaluable papers. Order through any newsagent or bookstall, or direct from the office. Three months' subscription, 2s. 2d.; post free from the office, 3s. 6d. Office, 170, Strand, London, W.C.

ON THE STŒCHIOLOGICAL CURE OF

CONSUMPTION,

ASTHMA, BRONCHITIS, AND LUNG COMPLAINTS.
By JOHN FRANCIS CHURCHILL, M.D.
One Shilling, Post Free.

T. BURLEIGH, LATE DAVID STOTT, 370, OXFORD STREET.

IMPORTANT NOTICE.

Messrs. METHUEN will publish in a few days "THE LIFE OF NAPOLEON BONAPARTE," by S. BARING-GOULD, with 480 illustrations in the text and 12 photogravure plates, large quarto, buckram, gilt top, 36s.

Messrs. METHUEN'S NEW BOOKS.

RUDYARD KIPLING'S NEW POEMS.

The Seven Seas. By RUDYARD KIPLING. Crown 8vo, 6s. net. 150 copies on hand-made paper. Demy 8vo, 21s. net. 30 copies on Japanese paper. Demy 8vo, 42s. net.

A first edition of 22,000 has been exhausted, and a second edition of 10,000 is ready.

Uniform with "The Seven Seas." "Q.'s" New Poems.

Poems and Ballads. By "Q." Crown 8vo. Buckram, 3s. 6d. [Nearly ready.

AUTHORISED EDITION.

The Letters of Victor Hugo. Translated from the French by F. CLARKE, B.A. In Two Volumes, demy 8vo, 10s. 6d. each. Vol. I.—1815-35.

"A remarkable volume."—Morning Post. "Full of interest."—Daily News.
"Sure to be read with eagerness."—Standard.

Naval Policy: With a description of English and Foreign Navies. By G. W. STEEVENS. Demy 8vo, 6s.

"A most opportune and invaluable work; just the book that was wanted. Mr. Steevens has rendered a truly national service."—Daily Telegraph.
"An extremely able and interesting book."—Daily Chronicle.

Industry in England. HISTORICAL OUTLINES. By H. DE B. GIBBINS, M.A. With five Maps. Demy 8vo, 10s. 6d.

An Introduction to the History of Religion. By F. B. JEVONS, M.A., Litt.D., Tutor at the University of Durham. Demy 8vo, 10s. 6d.

St. Anselm of Canterbury: A Chapter in the History of Religion. By J. M. RIGG, of Lincoln's Inn, Barrister-at-Law. Demy 8vo, 7s. 6d.

VOLUME II.

The Decline and Fall of the Roman Empire. By EDWARD GIBBON. A New Edition. Edited with Notes, Appendices, and Maps, by J. B. Bury, M.A., Fellow of Trinity College Dublin. In Seven Volumes. Demy 8vo, gilt top, 8s. 6d. each. Crown 8vo, 6s. each. Vol. II.

A Short History of Rome. By J. WELLS, M.A., Fellow and Tutor of Wadham College, Oxford. With Four Maps, and Copious Tables. Crown 8vo, 3s. 6d. 350 pp.

METHUEN'S POPULAR NOVELS.

SIX SHILLINGS EACH.

Thelma. MARIE CORELLI.
The Carissima. LUCAS MALET.
A Child of the Jago. ARTHUR MORRISON.
Dartmoor Idylls. S. BARING-GOULD.
Under the Red Robe. STANLEY WEYMAN.
The Daughter of Alouette. M. A. OWEN.
In the Great Deep. J. A. BARRY.
The Spirit of Storm. RONALD ROSS.
Denounced. J. BLOUNDELLE BURTON.
Captain Jacobus. L. COPE CORNFORD.

THREE AND SIXPENCE EACH.

The Sign of the Spider. BERTRAM MITFORD.
The Squire of Wandales. A. SHIELD.
The Sin of Angels. Author of "A Vicar's Wife."

 Messrs. Methuen's new Catalogue and "Book Gazette" sent to any address.

METHUEN & CO., 36, Essex-street, W.C.

SIGNOR ARDITI'S REMINISCENCES.

Just out, 8vo, Illustrated, 12s.

The Daily Telegraph says:—"To music lovers, old and young, these delightful reminiscences may be heartily commended. They are from one who has enjoyed the artistic companionship of Patti from her childhood, Grisi, Titiens, Alboni, Trebelli, Mario, Giuglini, Mongini, and a host of other stars."

The Manchester Guardian says:—"A specially attractive autobiography. Every chapter abounds with lively anecdotes and bright personal sketches."

The Court Journal says:—"This lavishly-illustrated volume literally teems with countless good stories and authentic recollections of a truly wonderful list of brilliant names. There is not a dull moment in the book."

The Leeds Mercury says:—"Full of stories, racy, stagey, and humorous. A book of vivid and living interest."

The World says:—"A perfect mine of interesting and diverting anecdote about almost every distinguished musician and vocalist of the Victorian era."

Vanity Fair says:—"We take this book up with delight, and relinquish it with regret. . . . Clever, brilliant, delightful."

MARIE CORELLI'S NEW BOOK.

"THE MURDER OF DELICIA."

Just out, Price 5s.

SKEFFINGTONS', Piccadilly, and Libraries.

F. V. WHITE & CO.'S NEW BOOKS.

The Strange Story of my Life. By JOHN STRANGE WINTER. Second Edition. 1 vol. 6s.

Devil's Dice. By WILLIAM LE QUEUX. 1 vol. 6s.

"A most exciting romance."—Sunday Times.

"The story is of the most stirring sort.—Whitehall Review.

A Splendid Sin. By GRANT ALLEN. Second Edition. 1 vol. 6s.

A Son of Ishmael. By Mrs. L. T. MEADE 1 vol. 6s.

"Will add to the reputation of its author."—Scotsman.

A Marriage in China. By Mrs. ARCHIBALD LITTLE. 1 vol. 6s.

F. V. WHITE & CO., 14, Bedford-street, Strand.

Seventh Edition, Revised, Cloth, 1s. 6d.; Paper, 1s.

THE DIETETIC CURE OF OBESITY (FOODS FOR THE FAT). By N. E. YORKE-DAVIES, L.R.Coll.Phys.Lond., &c.

CONTENTS:—Part I.—What Constitutes Robust Health? Evils of Corpulency; The Cause of Weak Heart; Diet—A safe and permanent cure; Quack Medicines or Drugs, permanently injurious or fatal in; Food Required, Amount of; Food, Its Use and Ultimate Elimination; Fat, Its Use in the Body; Overeating, Evils of; Food in its relation to Work; Exercise; Stimulants in Corpulency; Water, Aërated Drinks, &c. Part II.—Dietetics of Obesity.

OPINIONS OF THE PRESS.

"This work deserves careful study."—Queen.

"The only safe and permanent cure of obesity."—Western Gazette.

"The best work on corpulency that has ever been written."—Evening News.

LONDON: CHATTO & WINDUS, 214, PICCADILLY.

WEDDINGS AND POUDRE WIGS AND TRANSFORMATIONS. LATEST STYLE IN HEAD-DRESSES.

DRAWING-ROOM COIFFURES, FRINGES, COILS, TORTOISESHELLS, &c. &c.

Telegraphic Address:—"RAOUL, LONDON."

THE CAPE COLONISATION COMPANY, LIMITED.

HOW TO MAKE AN INCOME-PAYING HOME.

The object of the above Company is to develop the resources of their estate, consisting of about 12,000 acres, situated in the far-famed Tulbagh district in the Western Province of Cape Colony, about 75 miles distant by rail from Cape Town. They are promoting the establishment of a successful colony. The estate has been surveyed and laid out in blocks of about 40 acres each, a number of which have already been sold. The purchase price of this land this year (with all water facilities) is £12 per acre, threequarters of which can remain bearing interest at six per cent. per annum.

In order to provide for the success of every colonist who has sufficient capital at command to be able to enter into this business, but has no practical knowledge of the work, the company have engaged the services of an efficient manager and a skilled horticulturist; and who will, if desired, plant, cultivate, and attend to the development of each client's farm for one year or more.

Thus any settler, provided he gives ordinary attention to the details of the work this company have undertaken for him, can obtain, under the guidance of a skilled specialist, that practical knowledge which is essential in the working to the best advantage of dairy and fruit farms.

THE CAPE COLONISATION COMPANY, LIMITED.

The Company undertake, if desired, to clear, plant, fence, supervise, and generally manage any holding. They guarantee that 90 per cent. of the trees and vines planted under the supervision of their staff grow to maturity, as specified in the agreement, a copy of which can be obtained on application. The company will manage the estate of any absentee at a charge of £1 a year per acre, and will also undertake to erect on the estate any houses for the residence of a settler, which can be chosen in London before sailing, with estimates given. They further undertake to purchase from a settler, at marketable prices, any approved dairy, farm, and orchard produce.

At the company's headquarters, at Seven Fountains, are the orchard and vineyard belonging to the company, and extensive creameries, packing houses, &c., will be erected as soon as necessary.

Steps are already being taken for the erection of a sugar beet factory, &c., and it is the intention of the company to promote milling and other industries.

THE CAPE COLONISATION COMPANY, LIMITED.

The Company solicit enquiries from families who are seeking a fresh start in life.

Young gentlemen who are looking for an opening in which to make their way.

Farmers who for years have been losing money in this country and would like to start afresh.

Retired members of the Military, Naval, and Civil Services, desiring to increase their incomes.

The delicate (those inclined to bronchial and pulmonary troubles) who need an avenue for making an income in a congenial climate.

The General Manager of the Company is going out at the beginning of October, and will be pleased to have the Company of any one who desires to avail himself of this opportunity of a fresh start in life in a new field.

All are requested to be good enough to place themselves in communication with the Secretary of the Company—from whom full particulars and papers on all points can be obtained. Also the illustrated book on the subject, price 2s., together with a Manual of Practical Orchard Work at the Cape. Published by the Department of Agriculture of the Cape of Good Hope.

3, PANCRAS LANE, QUEEN STREET, LONDON, E.C.,

TO INVALIDS.—A LIST of MEDICAL MEN, in all parts, willing to RECEIVE RESIDENT PATIENTS, giving full particulars and terms, sent Gratis. The List includes Private Asylums, &c. Schools also recommended—Address, Mr. G. B. STOCKER, 8, Lancaster-place, Strand, W.C.

WANTED, for the WINTER MONTHS, a FURNISHED HOUSE, south or west aspect, seven bedrooms, three reception. Five guineas a week.—Apply, THE BELGRAVE LADIES' AGENCY, 83, Ebury-street, S.W.

THE BELGRAVE LADIES' AGENCY, 83, Ebury-street, S.W., have now a number of handsomely furnished HOUSES and FLATS TO LET, for the Winter Months, in Seymour-street, Emperor's-gate, Chesham-street, Ovington-square, Gaton-place, Prince of Wales-terrace, Manson-place, Victoria-street; also FURNISHED APARTMENTS which have been personally inspected.

GROSVENOR GARDENS.—A MANSION TO BE LET or SOLD. Unexceptionable position, lately most tastefully re-decorated throughout. The spacious reception rooms, consisting of drawing-room (panelled in silk), boudoir, dining-room and library, large room on ground floor, suitable for billiard or ball-room, eleven bedrooms, two dressing-rooms, two bath-rooms, splendid offices, hot and cold water, speaking tubes and bells fitted throughout. Sanitary arrangement under the latest improvements.—Apply for full particulars and orders to view, THE LADIES' AGENCY for Apartments and Houses, 83, Ebury-street, S.W.

OIL PAINTING.

PORTRAITS, LANDSCAPES, &c., faithfully REPRODUCED. For terms, address K. M. C., Grove House, Helston, Cornwall.

HOSPITALS & APPEALS.

GREAT NORTHERN CENTRAL HOSPITAL.

VERY POOR, FREE, and UNENDOWED.

The only Hospital available for a population of one million.

An urgent APPEAL is made for FUNDS to support the work of relieving 1,200 In-patients and 30,000 Out-patients annually.

Holloway, N. L. H. GLENTON KERR, Secretary.

CANCER WARDS of the MIDDLESEX HOSPITAL.—35 beds devoted to Hopeless Incurable Cases.

A FUND of £12,000 is being raised for the purpose of erecting a separate BUILDING for the accommodation of the FEMALE CANCER PATIENTS hitherto located in the hospital, an improvement which is urgently demanded on the ground of the health, comfort, and convenience of the patients. Towards the cost of the new building the sum of £9,000 has been paid or promised, and an URGENT APPEAL is now made for the balance of £3,000 still required. Patients are admitted without letters or any recommendation, save that of necessity, and are permitted to remain until "relieved by art or released by death."—F. CLARE MELHADO, Secretary-Superintendent.

LONDON FEVER HOSPITAL, Liverpool-road, Islington, N. ADDITIONAL HELP is urgently needed.

Scarlet fever and diphtheria are very prevalent. Subscriptions and donations will be thankfully received by the Secretary at the Hospital.

MAJOR W. CHRISTIE.

Bankers—Prescott & Co., 50, Cornhill, E.C.

THE EARLSWOOD ASYLUM FOR IDIOTS.

About 150 AFFLICTED CASES, from all parts of the United Kingdom, are now seeking admission.

FUNDS URGENTLY NEEDED to maintain the Elected Patients now under care and training in the Institution.

Cases on payments regulated by the Board received as soon as approved.

JAMES DOWNING, Secretary.

Offices—36, King William-street, London Bridge, E.C.

"TRUTH" HOTEL LIST.

BONCHURCH HOTEL, Bonchurch, Isle of Wight, one mile from Ventnor Station.
A comfortable, quiet, and most beautifully-situated Hotel. Pretty garden. Good sea view.
H. RIBBANDS, Proprietor.

BOSCOMBE, Bournemouth.—THE CHINE HOTEL. Under new management.
Magnificent sea views. Moderate charges. Book East Station.
Miss BARNETT (late of the Inns of Court Hotel), Manageress.

BOURNEMOUTH.—HIGHCLIFFE HOTEL (first-class). Unrivalled position, West Cliff, full south. Splendid sea view. Most comfortable. Electric light. Table d'hôte (separate tables). Supplies from own Alderney Dairy Farm. Telephone 27.
JOHN KILNER, Proprietor.

BOURNEMOUTH.—HOTEL MONT DORE.—South aspect, 150 rooms, electric light throughout, passenger lift, first-class cuisine, winter garden and lounge, covered tennis court. Turkish, sea-water, and medicated Baths. The Hotel is within two minutes' walk of the Golf Links.—For tariff, address W. KNEESE, Manager.

BRIGHTON.—BEDFORD HOTEL.—Old-established. Unequalled in situation; opposite West Pier. Spacious coffee and reading rooms; sea-water service; unequalled cuisine; great variety of excellent wines. Moderate tariff. Electric light in all rooms.
GEO. HECKFORD, Manager.

BRIGHTON.—GRAND HOTEL.
Centre of Sea Front. Electric Light throughout.
NEW LIFT TO ALL FLOORS.
For Illustrated Tariff apply to A. D. HOOK, Manager.

CARBIS BAY HOTEL, CORNWALL. The very spot to obtain rest and quietude. Overlooking the finest bay in England. Mild yet bracing climate. Within easy distance of London by G.W.R. Splendid Golf Links. "A more beautiful spot for residence could hardly be imagined."—Truth.

FOLKESTONE.—BATES' HOTEL, West Cliff Gardens, and LONGFORD PRIVATE HOTEL, The Lees. Oldest established and most select Family Hotels in Folkestone. Reduced terms during Winter and Spring months. Pension (new Coffee-room) at Bates' Hotel.—G. L. HART, Proprietor. Sanitation Certified.

FOLKESTONE.—WEST CLIFF HOTEL (180 Apartments). Stands in own private grounds of 2½ acres, facing the sea. All latest sanitary improvements. Excellent cuisine and wines. Table d'hôte at 7 p.m., separate tables.—For tariff please address The PROPRIETOR.

GRAND CANARY.—THE METROPOLE.
Newest and best Hotel.
Delightful position, fronting the sea.
Terms most moderate.

JERSEY.—The GRAND HOTEL is charmingly situated, facing the sea, with full south aspect, and sheltered from the north and easterly winds. Every home comfort and liberal management.—For terms apply to D. DE LEIDI, Manager.

MADEIRA.—REID'S HOTELS.
3½ days from England. Splendid situation. Large Gardens. Tennis Courts.
Billiards. Sea Bathing. Modern Sanitation. All Steamers met.
Pamphlet free, of F. PASSMORE, 124, Cheapside, E.C.

MALVERN—One of the most charming places for the Holidays.—The IMPERIAL HOTEL occupies the best position, and receives visitors en pension. The golf-links (18 holes) are one of the best in England. Capital stabling for hunters. Droitwich Brine, Turkish and large Swimming Bath in separate buildings. For tariff, apply to the Proprietor and Manager.
F. MOERSCHELL.

TORQUAY.—IMPERIAL HOTEL.—Under entirely New Management. New sanitary arrangements throughout. It is the largest and best-situated Hotel in Torquay, and the best winter residence on the South Coast. Visitors received en pension or à la carte. Terms moderate.
F. FISCHER, Manager.

TUNBRIDGE WELLS.—WELLINGTON HOTEL, Mount Ephraim. Under the distinguished patronage of his Grace the late Duke of Wellington, K.G., the leading nobility and gentry, &c. 422 ft. above sea level, south aspect; elegantly furnished; piano in every sitting-room. Cuisine. English and French. Electric light throughout.—BRABY, Proprietor.

All applications for spaces in this List should be made to the ADVERTISEMENT MANAGER,
"TRUTH" BUILDINGS, CARTERET STREET,
QUEEN ANNE'S GATE, S.W.

HANS CRESCENT HOTEL

HANS CRESCENT, BELGRAVIA, LONDON, S.W.
Within three minutes' walk of the Albert Gate Entrance to Hyde Park and Tattersall's.

THIS FAMILY HOTEL is sumptuously Furnished and Appointed, and complete in every detail. There are many self-contained Suites of Apartments, ensuring the utmost privacy (each having a Bathroom), as well as Single Bedrooms.

A HIGH-CLASS RESTAURANT
(à la carte and at fixed prices) is attached to the Hotel for Non-Residents.

RECHERCHE CUISINE.

The splendid COVERED WINTER GARDEN (2,500 square feet in area) forms a charming lounge, an attraction which is not possessed by any other Hotel in London. The entire building is agreeably heated during the winter.
Manager, MONS. C. DIETTE.

POSITION UNRIVALLED.
THE LANGHAM HOTEL,
PORTLAND-PLACE, LONDON, W.

Situated in the most fashionable, convenient, and healthy locality. Artesian Well Water. Electric Light throughout. Moderate Tariff.
Table d'Hote 6.30 until 8.15. WALTER GOSDEN, Manager.

INNS OF COURT HOTEL, Holborn.—A first-class Family Hotel, with 200 bedrooms, all modern conveniences. Electric lights, lifts, &c. Banquets arranged. The Central Hall is the finest and the Dining-room the pleasantest in London. Masonic lodge, public meeting rooms, &c. Table d'hôte, 6 to 8, 3s. 6d.—FRANK BLACKLEY, Manager. Inclusive terms from 10s. 6d. per day.

LONDON.—AVONDALE RESTAURANT, Piccadilly (entrance in Dover-street).
The BEST, 3s. 6d. LUNCHEON and 6s. or 7s. 6d. DINNER in London, at Separate Tables.
High-class Service. Unrivalled Cuisine and Cellar. Private Dining Rooms for Luncheons, Dinners, and Meetings.
In the Reception Room there are TEN ELECTROPHONES, by which Visitors can hear, Free of Charge, the Performances at all the Theatres.
Tables and Rooms can be booked by Telegram or Telephone No. 35,322.

ILFRACOMBE.

The WARMEST WINTER SEASIDE RESORT in England
THE ILFRACOMBE HOTEL.

First-class Return Tickets issued from London (Waterloo), L. and S.W.R., from November to March, including seven days' Bed, Board, and Attendance at the Ilfracombe Hotel, £5. 5s. each, available for one month.
Ask for HOTEL TICKETS, available by all trains. Fast trains leave Waterloo at 11 and 3 o'clock. H. R. GROVER, Manager.

HASTINGS. Due South, Facing Sea.
QUEEN'S HOTEL,

LARGEST AND BEST APPOINTED.
Sunny, and most sheltered position in Hastings and St. Leonards.
ELECTRIC LIGHT. PASSENGER ELEVATOR.
Moderate Tariff. Hotel Flys attend the trains.
WILLIAM GLADE, Manager.

A COMPLETE LIST OF
HOTELS OF THE MIDLAND RAILWAY.

London	MIDLAND GRAND (St. Pancras).	Leeds ...	QUEEN'S.
Liverpool...	ADELPHI.	Derby ...	MIDLAND.
Bradford ...	MIDLAND.	Morecambe	MIDLAND.
		Normanton	STATION.

The Favourite Hotels for Tourists, Cyclists, and Pedestrians.

Specialities—Comfort, Good Cuisine, Moderate Charges.

WILLIAM TOWLE, Manager, Chief Office, St. Pancras, N.W.

LOWESTOFT GRAND HOTEL.

Standing in its own grounds. Open all the year round. Special reduced terms until May. Splendid sea fishing.

LAS PALMAS, Grand Canary.—SANTA CATALINA HOTEL.—For all particulars apply at London Office, the Canary Islands Company, Limited, 1, Laurence Pountney-hill, E.C. Golf links.

WESTON-SUPER-MARE.—"One of the healthiest and most invigorating watering-places in the world."—The GRAND ATLANTIC is the principal and leading Hotel, facing the sea. 130 sumptuously appointed rooms, delightful public rooms, hydraulic lift, every modern comfort. Nearest to Golf Links and Railway Station. "Own model farm."—Apply, Manager. Telegraphic address, "Atlantic." Telephone No. 11.

CONTINENTAL WINTER RESORT, five hours from London.—The magnificent HOTEL DE PUYS, near Dieppe, offers to English families a luxurious home in a mild and sunny climate; English sanitation, sea air, perfect cycling roads; tariff from £2. 10s. a week. Return fare, Friday to Tuesday, first class, 24s.—J. PELLETIER, Manager.

HASTINGS.—ALBANY HOTEL (Robertson-terrace).—Inclusive terms from 2½ gns. upwards. Finest position on the whole sea front. Electric Light everywhere. Lift to all floors. Smoking room and all public rooms face the sea. Billiards. Special Notice! No charge for attendance is made. Visitors can bring their own wines; no corkage is charged.—C. A. SCHWABE, Manager.

KNOWLE HOTEL,
SIDMOUTH, S. DEVON.

Quite unsurpassed as a Winter Resort. Delightful grounds of 20 acres.
Sunshine record highest on the South Coast.
Every luxury. Cuisine excellent. Tariff moderate. Medical baths now open.

GOLD MEDAL
Health Exhibition, London.

"Retained when all other Foods are rejected. It is invaluable."
—London Medical Record.

BENGER'S
FOOD FOR INFANTS, INVALIDS, AND THE AGED.

BENGER'S FOOD
is sold in Tins by Chemists, &c., everywhere.

AMUSEMENTS.

HAYMARKET THEATRE.
Sole Lessee, Mr. Frederick Harrison.
Managers, Mr. Frederick Harrison and Mr. Cyril Maude.
TO-NIGHT and EVERY EVENING, at 8.15,
UNDER THE RED ROBE.
Adapted by Edward Rose from the novel by Stanley Weyman.
Mr. Cyril Maude, Mr. Herbert Waring, and Miss Winifred Emery.
MATINEES EVERY WEDNESDAY and SATURDAY, at 2.30.
Box-office (Mr. Leverton) 10 to 10. HAYMARKET.

QUEEN'S HALL.
LAMOUREUX ORCHESTRAL CONCERTS.

Monday	November 16, 8.30	Tuesday	November 17, 3.0
Wednesday	November 18, 8.30	Thursday	November 19, 3.0
Friday	November 20, 8.30	Saturday	November 21, 3.0

Full programmes now ready. Subscription for the Six Concerts £3 3s. Three Afternoon or Evening £1 11s. 6d. Single Tickets 12s. 6d., 10s. 6d., 5s., and 2s. 6d., of the usual Agents, and Robert Newman's Box-office, Queen's Hall.

THE ANNUAL WINTER EXHIBITION of PICTURES and WATER COLOUR DRAWINGS by Artists of the British and Foreign Schools is NOW OPEN, at THOMAS McLEAN'S GALLERY, 7, Haymarket. Admission, 1s., including Catalogue.

NIAGARA. SKATING.
The First GRAND CARNIVAL will take place on FRIDAY, December 11.
RESTAURANT NOW OPEN for LUNCHEON and DINNERS.

NATIONAL SKATING PALACE
(HENGLER'S), Argyll-street, W.
SPLENDID ICE. Brilliant MUSIC. Largest Skating Area in the Metropolis.
SEASON TICKETS, 1896-7.—Three Months, i.e. Oct. 31st to Jan. 31st, £5. 5s. Members of one family living in same house—For First Ticket, £5. 5s.; for Second, or more, £3. 3s.; Children under 14 years of age, £2. 12s. 6d.
DAY TICKETS, in Books of Twelve for the price of Ten.
ORDINARY CHARGES FOR ADMISSION.—10.30 a.m. to 1 p.m., 3s.; 3 p.m. to 6 p.m., 5s.; 7.30 p.m. to 10.30 p.m., 3s.

MADAME TUSSAUD'S EXHIBITION, Baker-street Station.—Grand Ecclesiastical Tableau, His Grace the Archbishop of Canterbury (Dr. Temple, D.D.), &c., &c. The celebrated Roumanian Orchestra. Afternoon and Evening. Admission, 1s. Open from 10 a.m. till 10 p.m.

CRYSTAL PALACE.—SATURDAY CONCERTS.
Saturday Next, November 14, at 3 o'clock.
Vocalist.....Mr. Andrew Black.
Violinist.....Mons. Tivadar Nachez.
The Grand Orchestral Band of the Saturday Concerts.
Conductor, Mr. August Manns.
Seats, 1s. to 4s.
At 8 p.m. GRAND PROMENADE CONCERT.
Vocalists, Miss Ghita Corri, Miss Meredith Eliott, Mr. Edwin Wareham.

Ask Your Grocer
FOR
HELM-COCOA.

JAPAN, CHINA, CANADIAN PACIFIC ROUTE, viâ New York, Montreal, Vancouver. Only line running through trains, Atlantic to Pacific, under one management. Largest, fastest, only twin-screw steamers on Pacific. Leave England thrice weekly; Vancouver, tri-weekly.
ROUND THE WORLD, £115.
CANADA, UNITED STATES.—Cheap through tickets by fast trains. For berths or descriptive pamphlets apply, CANADIAN PACIFIC RAILWAY, 67-8, King William-street, London Bridge, or 30, Cockspur-street, Charing Cross.
N.B.—Allan, American, Anchor, Beaver, Cunard, Dominion, and White Star Agency.

ORIENT COMPANY'S YACHTING CRUISES,
by the Steamships "LUSITANIA," 3,877 tons register, and "GARONNE," 3,876 tons register, from LONDON, as under:—
For TENERIFFE, the WEST INDIA ISLANDS, BERMUDA, &c.
Leaving January 13, returning March 16.
For MOROCCO, SICILY, PALESTINE, and EGYPT.
Leaving February 17, returning April 15.
For SOUTH of SPAIN, GREECE, CONSTANTINOPLE, &c.
Leaving March 31, returning May 17.
For PORTUGAL, MOROCCO, CORSICA, ITALY, and SICILY.
Leaving April 21, returning May 21.
String band, electric light, electric bells, hot and cold baths, high-class cuisine.
Managers, { F. GREEN & CO. / ANDERSON, ANDERSON, & CO. } Head Offices: Fenchurch-avenue.
For passage apply to the latter firm at 5, Fenchurch-avenue, London, E.C.; or to the West End Branch Office, 16, Cockspur-street, S.W.

WINTER IN THE WEST INDIES
SPECIAL TOURS, 65 days for £65.
By magnificent vessels of the
ROYAL MAIL STEAM PACKET COMPANY.
For particulars apply, 18, Moorgate-street, or 29, Cockspur-street (West-end), London.

PRINCE LINE.—EGYPT and the HOLY LAND.
CHEAP ROUND TOURS a SPECIALITY.
RIVER PLATE DIRECT (not calling at Brazilian Ports).
MADEIRA and the CANARY ISLANDS.
GIBRALTAR, TUNIS, MALTA.
Superior Services. Fares extremely moderate. High-class Cuisine.
Luxurious saloons and cabins, promenade decks, all amidships.
Head office:—JAMES KNOTT, Newcastle-on-Tyne.

AMUSEMENTS.

LYCEUM.—CYMBELINE, EVERY NIGHT, at 8.
Iachimo..... Henry Irving.
Imogen..... Miss Ellen Terry.
MATINEES, WEDNESDAYS, November 25, December 2 and 9.
Box-office (Mr. J. Hurst) open 10 to 5, and 7.30 to 10. Seats also booked by letter or telegram. LYCEUM.

GAIETY.—Lessee and Manager, GEORGE EDWARDES.—ANOTHER GAIETY SUCCESS.—EVERY EVENING, at 8.15, a New Musical Play, in Two Acts, entitled MY GIRL, by James T. Tanner, Music by Osmond Carr, Lyrics by Adrian Ross. Box-office open daily from 10 till 6. MATINEE Saturday Next, at 2.30.

ADELPHI THEATRE.—A. & S. GATTI, Sole Proprietors and Managers.—TO-NIGHT, at 8 o'clock, BOYS TOGETHER. William Terriss and Miss Millward; Mr. W. L. Abingdon, Mr. C. W. Somerset, Mr. Luigi Lablache, Mr. Mackintosh, Mr. J. D. Beveridge, Mr. Oscar Adye, and Mr. Harry Nicholls; Miss Nesbitt, Miss Kate Kearney, Miss Alice Kingsley, &c.

SAVOY.—Every Evening, at 8.30, and Every Saturday Afternoon, at 2.30, THE MIKADO, by W. S. Gilbert and Arthur Sullivan. At 7.50, WEATHER OR NO. Box-office 9 a.m. to 11 p.m.—R. D'OYLY CARTE, Proprietor and Manager.

DALY'S THEATRE.—Sole Lessee and Manager, Mr. AUGUSTIN DALY.—EVERY EVENING, and SATURDAY MATINEE. Mr. George Edwardes's Company in THE GEISHA. The book by Owen Hall. Lyrics by Harry Greenbank. Music by Sydney Jones.

CRITERION THEATRE.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. CHARLES WYNDHAM.—Every Evening, at 8.30, ROSEMARY, by Louis N. Parker and Murray Carson. Mr. CHARLES WYNDHAM, Miss MARY MOORE, and the Criterion Company. MATINEE EVERY SATURDAY, at 2.30. SPECIAL WEDNESDAY MATINEE on November 11.

VAUDEVILLE.—A. & S. GATTI, Sole Lessees and Managers. EVERY EVENING, at 9, A NIGHT OUT. Preceded, at 8.15, by PAPA'S WIFE. MATINEE EVERY WEDNESDAY, at 3. Doors open 7.45. Box-office open 10 to 10.

COURT THEATRE.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. ARTHUR CHUDLEIGH.—At 9, THE BELLE OF CAIRO, by Messrs. Cecil Raleigh and Kinsey Peile, in which Miss May Yohé will appear. At 8.15, NUMBER ONE ROUND THE CORNER. Doors open 7.45. Box-office 10 to 10. Telephone No. 3,031. MATINEE SATURDAY NEXT, at 3. Doors open 2.30.

ST. JAMES'S.—THE PRISONER OF ZENDA.—By Anthony Hope and Edward Rose.
EVERY EVENING, at 8.15. Doors open 7.45. Box-office open daily, 10 to 10.
Seats booked one month in advance by letter, wire, or telephone (3,903).
THE PRISONER OF ZENDA.
Mr. George Alexander, Miss Julia Neilson; Messrs. W. H. Vernon, H. H. Vincent, Allan Aynesworth, C. Aubrey Smith, Henry B. Irving, William H. Day, Henry Loraine, George Bancroft, Arthur Royston, Vincent Sternroyd; Miss Hackney, Miss Darvill, Miss Fay Davis.
MATINEE EVERY SATURDAY, at 2.
ST. JAMES'S THEATRE.
Sole Lessee and Manager, Mr. GEORGE ALEXANDER

ROYALTY THEATRE.—Lessee, Miss Kate Santley.
Mr. GEORGE ALEXANDER'S SEASON.
EVERY EVENING, at 9, a Farce in Three Acts, from the French of George Feydeau and Maurice Hennequin, by Justin Huntly McCarthy, entitled
HIS LITTLE DODGE.
Mr. Fred Terry, Mr. Alfred Maltby, Mr. Frank Dyall, and Mr. Weedon Grossmith; Miss Repton, and Miss Ellis Jeffreys. Preceded, at 8.30, by THE STORM, in One Act, by Ian Robertson. Mr. H. V. Esmond, Mr. H. B. Irving, and Miss Hammond. Doors open at 8.
MATINEES EVERY SATURDAY, at 3.
Box-office (Mr. Horne) 10 to 5. ROYALTY.

COMEDY.—Sole Manager, Mr. CHARLES HAWTREY.
TO-NIGHT and EVERY EVENING, at 8.50, a New Play, entitled
MR. MARTIN, by Charles Hawtrey.
Mr. Charles Hawtrey, Miss Rose Leclercq, and Miss Lottie Venne, &c. At 8, a New Comedy, in One Act, by Edward Ferris and Arthur Stuart, entitled A WHITE STOCKING. Doors open 7.45. Box-office 10 to 10.
MATINEE EVERY SATURDAY, at 3. COMEDY.

ALHAMBRA.—TO-NIGHT, Two New Grand Ballets, RIP VAN WINKLE and DONNYBROOK. Grand VARIETIES. Prices, 6d. to £3. 3s. Open 7.30. ALFRED MOUL, General Manager.

EMPIRE THEATRE.—EVERY EVENING, the New Grand Ballet, MONTE CRISTO. Great success. LUMIERE'S CINEMATOGRAPHE. Grand VARIETY ENTERTAINMENT. Doors open at 7.30.

PALACE, Shaftesbury-avenue.—The HANDSOMEST THEATRE in EUROPE. The finest Variety Entertainment in London, including the NEW SERIES OF TABLEAUX VIVANTS. Full Licence. Prices from 6d. Doors open 7.30.—Manager, Mr. CHARLES MORTON.

LONDON PAVILION.—TREMENDOUS PROGRAMME. Bunth, Rudd, and Barnard, exclusively engaged; Eugene Stratton, Vesta Victoria, Mdlle. La Belle Rose, Herbert Campbell, Walter Munroe, Maggie Duggan, George Robey, Lilian Alexander, Will Evans, George Beauchamp, Lady Mansel, Athas and Collins, Laura Lyle, Leo Stormont, Eva Bell, The Avolos, Jessie Lindsay, Mark Anthony, Marie Tyler, Walter Stockwell, Hilda Scott, W. P. Dempsey, Sisters Erneste, Violet Nelson, Mdlle. Lucretia, O'Brien and Redding, and the Great Selbini Troupe of Bicyclists. Prices from 1s. to £3. 3s. Doors open at 7.30. Box-office open from 11 to 5.

TIVOLI, Strand, London.—The Greatest Combination of Talent in London.—Open EVERY EVENING, at 7.45, and SATURDAY MATINEE, at 2.30, with a STAR PROGRAMME, embracing every Artiste of note.—Manager, Mr. VERNON DOWSETT.

FLORILINE

FOR THE TEETH AND BREATH

Is the BEST LIQUID DENTIFRICE in the WORLD.

PREVENTS THE DECAY OF THE TEETH.

Renders the Teeth Pearly White.

IS PERFECTLY HARMLESS AND DELICIOUS TO THE TASTE.

Is Partly Composed of Honey, and Extracts from Sweet Herbs and Plants.

Of all Chemists and Perfumers throughout the World.

2s. 6d. per Bottle.

FLORILINE TOOTH POWDER,

Only put in Glass Jars, Price 1s.

THE MEXICAN HAIR RENEWER

Prevents the Hair from Falling off.

Restores Grey or White Hair to its ORIGINAL COLOUR.

Being delicately perfumed, it leaves no Unpleasant Odour.

IS NOT A DYE.

Should be in every House where a HAIR RENEWER is needed.

ASK YOUR CHEMIST OR HAIRDRESSER FOR

THE MEXICAN HAIR RENEWER.

Price 3s. 6d. per bottle.

Dunlop Pneumatic Tyres for Carriages.

Absence of Noise. . . . .

Driving on Air Cushions.

Comfort Increased.

Draught Decreased.

In a closed carriage conversation can be carried on in a whisper.

The DUNLOP PNEUMATIC TYRE Co., Ltd.

(Patentees and sole makers of the celebrated Dunlop tyres for cycles).

Telegrams: "AIRINESS." Telephone No. 6,754. 166, Clerkenwell Road, London, E.C.

SHOW ROOMS: 14, REGENT STREET, LONDON, S.W.;
WORKS: ALMA STREET, COVENTRY;
BRANCHES: Dublin, Manchester, Birmingham, Nottingham, Glasgow, and Abroad.

CARTER 6A, NEW CAVENDISH ST. PORTLAND PLACE, LONDON.

ONLY ADDRESS OF ORIGINAL CARTER

LITERARY MACHINE.

For holding book, lamp, meals, &c., in any position over an easychair, bed, or sofa. Deliciously luxurious. A most useful gift. Prices from 17/6

INVALID FURNITURE.

ADJUSTABLE COUCHES and BEDS from £1. 10/-

Bed Lift £3. 10/-
Reclining Boards, 25/-
Walking Machines
Portable W.C.'s.
Electric Bells,
Urinals, &c.
Air & Water Beds.

Bed Rests 7/6
Leg Rests 10/-
Crutches 10/6
Bed Baths 12/6
Commodes, £1. 5/-

Carrying Chairs from £1.

Breakfast in Bed Tables from 30/-

Self-Propelling Chairs from £2

BATH CHAIRS FROM £1. 5/-

ILLUSTRATED CATALOGUES POST FREE.

JOHN CARTER, 6a, NEW CAVENDISH ST. Portland-pl. London, W.

BEST & SAFEST DENTIFRICE

SOLD BY ALL CHEMISTS AND PERFUMERS IN ELEGANT CRYSTAL TOILET CASKET PRICE 2/6.

ALSO IN PATENT METALLIC BOX PRICE 1/-

PRESERVE YOUR TEETH BY USING THE

OS TOOTH BLOCK

Established 20 years

OVER 3000 TESTIMONIALS

Clarke's "Pyramid" Night-Lights.

Single Wicks. In Boxes containing 8 Lights, to burn 9 hours; or 12 Lights, to burn 6 hours.

THE "BURGLAR'S HORROR."

Far, Far and Away the Best.

Should be lighted in a front and back room in every house as soon as it is dark.

N.B.—No paraffin or other dangerous material used in the manufacture. No water required.

"PYRAMID" AND "FAIRY" LIGHTS ARE THE ONLY LIGHTS THAT CAN SAFELY BE BURNED IN LAMPS.

Sold by all respectable Dealers everywhere. Manufactured by CLARKE'S PYRAMID and FAIRY LIGHT CO., Ltd., Cricklewood, London, N.W., where all letters should be addressed.

Double Wicks. In Boxes containing 6 Lights and Glass, to burn 10 hours; or 10 Lights and Glass, to burn 6 hours.

The Simple and Common-Sense Treatment of Constipation.

EVERY Medical Man is well aware that one of the greatest difficulties he has to overcome is the recurrence of troublesome constipation among his patients. Widespread and obstinate constipation is the certain result of the modern habit of vegetable pill taking. Aloes, podophyllin, rhubarb, colycynth, &c., &c., one or many of which bulk largely in all advertised pills, do, perhaps, temporarily relieve the constipation but are almost always succeeded by constipation still more severe, and so a tendency to chronic constipation is set up, which, in course of time, becomes so obstinate and distressing as to temporarily yield only to the most violent, and consequently most injurious, purgatives. Of all purgatives, aloes is the worst offender, because it injures the membraneous and mucous coats of the stomach and intestines, setting up irritation, ulceration, and inflammation, and at the same time perpetuating the constipation itself, whilst injuring the digestion and deranging the liver.

To chronic constipation induced by vegetable purgatives the name of "succeeding constipation" has been given, and it has been found to follow after almost every form of the vegetable pill purgative so commonly taken and administered.

This most objectionable and injurious torpor of the intestines does not follow the use of a properly prepared saline purgative such as Kutnow's Improved Effervescent Carlsbad Powder, in which the natural salts of famous Continental mineral springs are desiccated and effervescents added thereto, to reproduce in natural effect—with the added advantages of palatability and absence of griping or nausea—the efficacious and valuable properties of the mineral springs themselves. A course of two or three weeks of Kutnow's Improved Effervescent Carlsbad Powder will be found, in most cases, requisite to so regulate the excretory functions that they re-acquire the natural habit of acting without artificial stimulation. Thus is constipation relieved without any injurious action of any kind, because both the stomachic and liver functions are at the same time lubricated, as it were, and greatly benefited. Patients whose diet is injudiciously chosen, who are fond of rich or indigestible foods, who, in fact, live not sufficiently abstemiously, or those who live sedentarily, and, therefore, to some extent unnaturally, or in the extreme of either poverty or richness of diet, will find it desirable to keep Kutnow's Powder by them, that an occasional dose may correct the errors of drink and diet to which reference has been made above.

It is not claimed that any new system is inaugurated because Kutnow's Improved Effervescent Carlsbad Powder is offered to the public, but that the experience of medical men and patients warrants us in stating that it is a natural, healthful remedy in constipation, acting promptly and practically as Nature herself does. Where a deeply-rooted habit of constipation has been acquired by a patient, to the certain injury of the health and enjoyment, it will be speedily discovered that the advantages of the use of Kutnow's Improved Effervescent Carlsbad Powder, as compared with the advertised and other pill purgatives, far outweighs any extra trouble, if any, in mixing, &c., the small dose and the simple method of administration being the only advantages the pill purgatives can offer.

From Dr. BRACHET, Physician at the Baths of Aix-les-Bains.

"I have prescribed your Powder for about a year in my hospital practice here, as well as frequently to my private patients. I have obtained the best results in patients suffering from rheumatism and gout, as well as in those who are constipated and bilious from the effects of the 'cure,' or from the change of food and climate. I consider Kutnow's Improved Effervescent Carlsbad Powder a preparation indispensable to persons travelling."

The BRITISH MEDICAL JOURNAL.

"Messrs. Kutnow & Co. show an improved Effervescent Carlsbad Powder, decidedly more palatable than the ordinary Carlsbad Powder evaporated at the springs, of which it reproduces the therapeutic effects while effectually covering the nauseous taste and objectionable bitter flavour of sulphate of soda. It is gentle, effervescent, and is a very efficient and agreeable aperient."

"I have used S. Kutnow & Co.'s Improved Effervescent Carlsbad Powder, and consider it a most efficient purgative, especially in the case of children, where its agreeable taste overcame the usual difficulty experienced in administering a saline purge. Its use produces a free bilious motion without discomfort or griping.

"STANLEY RENDALL, M.D.

"Aix-les-Bains,
"71, Rue de Genève (and Mentone)."

A FREE TRIAL.

A FREE TRIAL.—For Seven Days from the date of this paper, Messrs. S. Kutnow, Limited, 66, Holborn-viaduct, London, E.C., will send a SAMPLE OF KUTNOW'S POWDER, FREE and POST PAID, to every adult applicant who names "Truth" when writing.

KUTNOW'S Improved Effervescent Carlsbad POWDER may be obtained in capsuled bottles of all Chemists and Medicine Vendors, price 2s. 9d.; or post free (in the United Kingdom) for 3s. from the London Office. See that the Registered Trade Mark, "Hirschensprung (or Deer Leap)," and the autograph fac-simile signature, "S. KUTNOW & CO.," are on the label and carton. These ensure genuineness.

AMERICAN

TOOTH CROWN CO.,

24 OLD BOND ST., W.

50 & 52 LUDGATE HILL, E.C.

FOR FIRST CLASS DENTISTRY.

Decayed and broken-down teeth should not be extracted. They can be saved for many years by skilful crowning and filling at moderate and fixed fees. Experts in all methods of dentistry in attendance daily.

Descriptive book post free on Application to the Secretary at either Address.

NO FEE FOR CONSULTATION.

THE

MUNSON

TYPEWRITER.

A WONDERFUL PIECE OF MECHANISM.

Its Chief Points are:

1. Interchangeable Type.
2. Perfect Alignment.
3. Visible Writing.
4. Uniform Impression.
5. Portability (Weight, with Oak Case, 17 lbs.)
6. Noiselessness.
7. Erasing Plate.
8. Universal Keyboard.
9. Interchangeable Parts.
10. Powerful Manifolder.
11. Ribbon Reverses Automatically.
12. Can be Operated in any Position.
13. LOW PRICE.

£18 net complete.

HIGHEST AWARD, CHICAGO, 1893.

Sole Agents for the United Kingdom—

THE NORTH EUROPEAN CYCLE EXPORT COMPANY,

30, Snow Hill, London, E.C.

For ECZEMA and all Skin Diseases wash with this Soap.

DR MACKENZIE'S ARSENICAL SOAP

Produces a lovely complexion, and cures Spots, Pimples, &c. 6d. & 1s.

For ECZEMA and all Skin Diseases wash with this Soap.

DR MACKENZIE'S ARSENICAL SOAP

Produces a lovely complexion, and cures Spots, Pimples, &c. 6d. & 1s

The most emollient and soothing Toilet Soap in the World for irritable skins. Madame ADELINA PATTI writes from Craig-y-nos Castle:—"I find Dr. Mackenzie's Arsenical Toilet Soap most excellent." Beware of the many imitations. Have Dr. Mackenzie's or none.

LIQUEUR of the GRANDE CHARTREUSE.

This most excellent Liqueur, the great preventive of Indigestion, and almost certain remedy for sea-sickness, can now be had of all Wine Merchants, and at prices much lower than formerly.
Sole Consignee, W. DOYLE, 35, Crutched Friars, London, E.C.

BERKEFELD FILTER

FOR THE PRIVATE HOUSE OFFICE, FACTORY, HOTELS RESTAURANTS, CLUBS, &c. &c.

Can be Easily and Cheaply Fixed to the Service-Pipe of any HOUSE having ordinary pressure.

No Country House Should Be Without One.

In use in all the Principal Hotels. Simple in Construction. Most easily cleaned.

PRICE FOR FILTER AS ABOVE, 42s.
SMALLER SIZE, 25s.
For other prices see price-lists.

Offices and Show-Rooms:
The BERKEFELD FILTER Co. Ltd.
121, Oxford St., London, W.

NOTE.—Write for Copy of the Special Report to the "BRITISH MEDICAL JOURNAL," Nov. 10, 1894, in which the BERKEFELD FILTER is specially demonstrated as affording COMPLETE PROTECTION against the communication of WATERBORNE DISEASES.

Supplied to H.R.H. the PRINCE OF WALES, DUKE OF WESTMINSTER, K.G., and others too numerous to mention; THE HOUSE OF LORDS, and THE HOUSE OF COMMONS.

THE NEW PATENT

"Self-Closing"

BRACELETS.

NEVER SLIP in whatever position placed.
Delightfully flexible and comfortable.
Specially suitable for Presents, as they fit any wrist.

CLOSED

OPEN

Made in plain gold. Also with the pretty and Fashionable Turquoises and Pearls studded all round.

LARGE VARIETY OF PATTERNS.
Sold by all leading Jewellers.
Wholesale only Saunders & Shepherd, London.

THE

FINEST BREAD

In the World.

AS USED IN THE QUEEN'S HOUSEHOLD.

DR. ANDREW WILSON says:—"This Bread should be eaten by all who are in any way affected by digestive ailments."

"WINDSOR CASTLE, 7th December, 1886.
"DEAR SIR,—Her Royal Highness, Princess Christian, desires me to express to you her very great satisfaction with the MALT BREAD, BISCUITS, and RUSKS provided for her. Her Royal Highness considers them all most excellent.—Yours truly,
"RICHARD TAHOURDIN."

ASK YOUR BAKER FOR

BERMALINE BREAD.

Agents Wanted where not represented.

Mülhens' "Rhine Violets"

TRADE MARK.

DISTILLED FROM FRESHLY GATHERED RHINE VIOLETS.

A SCENT OF RARE FRAGRANCE.

A VERY ECHO OF NATURE.

CAUTION.

Owing to the phenomenal success of this popular Scent, some perfumers are offering essences of their own manufacture under the name of "RHINE VIOLETS." The public must not be deceived, but insist upon "MULHENS'" brand, which is distilled from the flower itself. Don't accept any bottle not bearing Ferd. Mülhens' name. This alone ensures genuineness. Ferd. Mülhens, of Cologne, is the originator of this exquisite perfume, and was the first to introduce it into England.

The Fashionable Press of London are unanimous in praise of it.

3/-, 5/6, 9/-, 20/- per bottle.

"Rhine Violet" Sachets, 2/6 each.
"Rhine Violet" Soap, 2/6 per tablet, or 7/- per box of 3 tablets.

Of most dealers in first-class Perfumes, or from 4711 Depot, 62, NEW BOND STREET, W.

FARADAY & SON's

Electric Light Fittings

Dining Room Coronæ
Drawing Room Sconces
Counterpoise Pendants
Adjustable Standards
Porch & Loggia Lanterns
Tortoise-shell Shades

ORIGINAL DESIGNS
HIGH-CLASS FINISH

BERNERS ST. LONDON W.

HOW MR. HALL CAINE WROTE THE 'MANXMAN.'

"Yes, if the fact is of any consequence, you are very welcome to say that I wrote the 'MANXMAN,' with the SWAN FOUNTAIN PEN It has become quite indispensable to me. I can use it with ease and certainty anywhere and at any time, even in the dark, in bed, and on horseback."

We only require your steel pen to select a pen to suit you.

Complete Illustrated Catalogue sent post free on application to

MABIE, TODD, & BARD,

93, CHEAPSIDE, E.C., or 95a, REGENT-STREET, LONDON, W.

NEW BRANCH, 21, High-street, Kensington, W.

MAPLE & CO

THE LARGEST & MOST CONVENIENT

Furnishing Establishment IN THE World

EASY CHAIRS EASY CHAIRS

500

TO CHOOSE FROM.

THE FAMOUS "CHANCELLOR" CHAIR

Large, roomy, well proportioned, exceedingly comfortable upholstered in Dormouse cloth of any shade

50/-

TOTTENHAM COURT ROAD LONDON

The complete Furniture of a comfortable Bedroom: Wardrobe, Dressing Chest, Washstand, 2 Cane-seat Arm Chairs, Chamber Service Bed, Bedding, &c., folds into one small case measuring 6 ft. by 2 ft. 6 in. by 2 ft. Rigidity and appearance of glued-up Furniture. Patented all over the World. Invaluable to Colonists, Hotels, Officers' Quarters, Spare Bedrooms, Shooting Boxes, &c., &c. Suites at all prices, separate parts can be had. Obtainable at all Dealers' or direct from

THE
V.P. FOLDING BEDROOM SUITE & FURNITURE CO., LIM.
330, OLD STREET, LONDON, E.C.

Exquisite Models. Perfect Fit. Guaranteed Wear.

THE Y & N PATENT DIAGONAL SEAM CORSET

Will not split in the Seams nor tear in the Fabric. Made in White, Black, and all the fashionable colours and Shades in Italian Cloth, Satin, and Coutil, 4/11, 5/11, 6/11, 7/11 per pair and upwards.

CAUTION.—Every genuine Y & N Corset is stamped.

Sold by Drapers and Ladies' Outfitters in the United Kingdom and Colonies.

THREE GOLD MEDALS.

FOR COMPLAINTS of the STOMACH, LIVER, etc., DRINK

VICHY CELESTINS Spring

Sold by all Chemists, Druggists, and Grocers throughout the Kingdom.

Sole Importers: INGRAM & ROYLE, Ltd., 52, Farringdon Street, LONDON, E.C.

Hunyadi János

BEST AND SAFEST NATURAL APERIENT.

25 Years Success in the United Kingdom.

Recommended and Prescribed by Medical Men Everywhere.

"HUNYADI JÁNOS has established itself in favour with leading physicians and therapeutists of every country, whose testimonies bear witness to its action as a speedy, sure, and gentle Aperient for ordinary use; it is remarkably and exceptionally uniform in its composition, and free from defects incidental to many other Hungarian Bitter Waters." —British Medical Journal, Aug 30th, 1884.

PROFESSOR VIRCHOW, the celebrated Berlin Physician, says that "HUNYADI JÁNOS" has always given him prompt and satisfactory results, and he considers it to be "one of the most valuable of the Curative Agents at our disposal."

CAUTION.—Every Bottle bears the Signature of the Proprietor, ANDREAS SAXLEHNER.

THE STOCK EXCHANGE.

NOTICE.

No Member of the Stock Exchange is allowed to advertise for business purposes, or to issue circulars to persons other than his own principals.

Persons who advertise as Brokers or Share Dealers are not Members of the Stock Exchange, or under the control of the Committee.

A List of Members of the Stock Exchange who are Stock and Share Brokers may be seen at the Bartholomew-lane Entrance to the Bank of England, or obtained on application to

FRANCIS LEVIEN,
Secretary to the Committee of the Stock Exchange.

Committee Room, The Stock Exchange, London, E.C.

SPECIAL ADVANTAGES TO PRIVATE INSURERS.

THE IMPERIAL INSURANCE COMPANY, LIMITED. FIRE. Est. 1803, 1, Old Broad-st., E.C., & 22, Pall Mall, S.W. Subd Capital, £1,200,000. Paid-up, £300,000. Total funds, over £1,500,000.—E. COZENS SMITH, Gen. Man.

PRUDENTIAL ASSURANCE COMPANY, LIMITED.—Holborn Bars, London.

EVERY DESCRIPTION OF LIFE ASSURANCE AND ANNUITY BUSINESS TRANSACTED.
REVERSIONS PURCHASED.

Invested Funds, £25,000,000.

The last Annual Report can be obtained on application to the Secretary.

BIRKBECK BANK (Estab. 1851), Southampton-buildings, Chancery-lane, London. Two and a-half per cent. interest allowed on deposits, repayable on demand. Two per cent. on current accounts, on the minimum monthly balances when not below £100.
The BIRKBECK ALMANACK with particulars, post free.
FRANCIS RAVENSCROFT, Manager.

THE
JOHANNESBURG BOARD OF EXECUTORS AND TRUST CO., LIMITED.

HEAD OFFICE.
JOHANNESBURG, S.A.R.
DIRECTORS.
S. B. HARSANT (Chairman).
JNO. S. PARKES (Vice-Chairman).
S. J. WILKS. G. A. JONES. A. FRIEDLANDER.
BANKERS.
THE BANK OF AFRICA, Ltd., 113, Cannon-street, E.C.
CHIEF MANAGER, L. EDWARDS.
LONDON OFFICE.
ST. CLEMENT'S HOUSE, CLEMENT'S-LANE, E.C.
(Telegrams: "ETHIOPIAN," London.)
(Telephone No. 2154, Avenue.)

The above Company beg to advise having opened a London Office at the above address, and invite correspondence. All descriptions of TRUST and AGENCY BUSINESS undertaken either in London or South Africa. Secretaryships of Companies undertaken. Special facilities are obtainable through this Company for the placing of funds in secure and remunerative investments. Advice is given on all classes of South Africa Mining, Real Estate, Mortgage, or other Investments, and proxies are accepted to represent European Shareholders at South African Companies' meetings. This is the oldest and most successful Trust Company in the Transvaal. Reference has been kindly permitted to the Bank of Africa, Ltd., 113, Cannon-street, London, E.C.; and to the Head Office of the London and Lancashire Fire Insurance Company, 45, Dale-street, Liverpool.

LONDON AND COUNTY ADVANCE AND DISCOUNT COMPANY, Limited.—Cash advanced from £10 to £500, without preliminary fees or deductions for interest, for short or long periods, repayable by easy instalments, at moderate rates, upon approved security. Bills Discounted. Forms free. Offices, 57 and 58, Chancery-lane, W.C.—JOHN STONE, Secretary.

JOHN SHAW, STOCK & SHARE DEALER.

HEAD OFFICE:—
WARDROBE CHAMBERS, DOCTORS' COMMONS, LONDON, E.C.

BANKERS:—
CAPITAL AND COUNTIES, Ludgate-hill, Long Acre, Piccadilly, and Brighton Branches.
LONDON AND MIDLAND, Newgate-street and Tooley-street Branches.

DIRECT PRIVATE TELEGRAPH WIRE between LONDON and BRIGHTON Offices.

FULL PARTICULARS of SPECIAL ARRANGEMENTS for DEALING sent post free on application.

COVER SYSTEM.—The loss is limited, the profits are unlimited, and there is such an independence in acting that the principle must and does recommend itself to business men—indeed, it is the only method on which they deal—for speculative accounts.

£5 COMMANDS £500 STOCK.
£10 COMMANDS £1,000 STOCK.
£50 COMMANDS £5,000 STOCK.
£500 COMMANDS £50,000 STOCK, and so on in proportion.

NO OTHER LIABILITY WHATEVER.

JOHN SHAW, STOCK AND SHARE DEALER, LONDON, BRIGHTON, MANCHESTER, AND DUBLIN.

W. B. COCHRANE & CO.,
STOCK AND SHARE DEALERS.
13 and 14, CORNHILL, LONDON, E.C.
Telegrams: "Reinvest, London."
Bankers: London and Westminster, Lothbury, E.C.
Accounts opened for the Stock Exchange Fortnightly Settlements, and also upon the usual Cover System. Accounts opened for Three-monthly Settlement without Carrying-over Rates being charged.
Prospectus, Monthly Investment Book, Mining List, and Market Reports, with the latest advices, forwarded gratis upon application.
W. B. COCHRANE & CO., 13 and 14, Cornhill, E.C.

£20 TOBACCONISTS COMMENCING. Illd. guide (259 pages), 3d., "How to open respectably £20 to £2,000." Tobacconists' Outfitting Co., 186, Euston-rd., London. Mngr. H. MYERS, Est. 1866.

The List will open on Thursday, the 12th inst., and close on Saturday, the 14th inst., at 12 noon, for both Town and Country.

Subscriptions are invited by the following Companies:—

The Crown Exploration Company, Ltd., The West Australian Goldfields, Ltd., The London and Western Australian Exploration Company, Ltd., The West Australian Share Corporation, Ltd., The Scottish Colonial Goldfields, Ltd., The Colonial Goldfields, Ltd.

The Company will commence business upon existent orders for 2,500 Cycles.

THE AUSTRALIAN CYCLE & MOTOR CO., LIM.

Incorporated under the Companies Acts, 1862 to 1890.

CAPITAL - - - - £75,000,

In 75,000 Shares of £1 each.

ISSUE OF 75,000 SHARES AT PAR, payable 5s. on application, 5s. on Allotment and the balance as required in Calls not exceeding 5s. per Share, with intervals of not less than two months between each Call.

50,000 Shares will be appropriated for providing Working Capital.

DIRECTORS.

William Calcott, Chairman (Managing Director, Calcott Bros. Limited, Coventry).
John Boyd Dunlop (Inventor of The Pneumatic Tyre, Chairman of Todd, Burns, Ltd., Dublin).
Thomas Bayliss (Managing Director of Bayliss, Thomas, & Co., Ltd., Coventry).
Charles Heyland Fox, Assoc. M.Inst.C.E. (Director of W. Pope & Sons, Engineers, Slough).
William J. Stoneham (Legal Manager in Western Australia of Colonial Goldfields, Limited, and Blocks 40, 45, 50, Hampton Plains Estate, Limited).
Edward Whitten Rudd, Managing Director, Melbourne, Australia.

BANKERS.

London: London and South-Western Bank, Limited, 170, Fenchurch-st., E.C.
Australasia: The Bank of Australasia, Melbourne and Branches.

BROKERS.

London: Faithfull, Begg, & Co., Bartholomew House, E.C.
Edinburgh: Hardie & Turnbull, 42, George-street.

SOLICITORS.—Burn & Berridge, 11, Old Broad-street, E.C.

AUDITORS.—Monkhouse, Stoneham, & Co., Chartered Accountants, 28/29, St. Swithin's-lane, E.C.

SECRETARY (pro tem.)—Percy H. Sainsbury.

OFFICES—Worcester House, Walbrook, E.C.

PROSPECTUS.

This Company has been formed to acquire and carry on Agencies in the Australasian Colonies for the sale of Cycles, Cycle Components, Motors, Horseless Vehicles, and Incandescent Lights, &c.

A business of this description has been successfully managed for the past five years by Mr. E. W. Rudd, and, he having now secured the Sole Agencies of the Manufacturers set out below, it is proposed to further develop the business with all the benefits of his connection.

The Company proposes to acquire the Sole Agencies for Australasia of the following well-known Manufacturers of Cycles and Cycle Accessories:—

The New Premier Cycle Co., Ltd., Coventry. Makers of Premier Cycles.
Calcott Bros., Ltd., Coventry. Makers of Calcott and XL Cycles.
Bayliss, Thomas & Co., Ltd., Coventry. Makers of Excelsior Cycles.
The Sparkbrook Manufacturing Co., Coventry. Makers of Sparkbrook Cycles.
Miller & Co., Ltd., Birmingham. Makers of Lamps and Components.
Joseph Appleby, Ltd., Birmingham. Makers of Albert Humber Chains.
The Universal Cycle Fittings Co., Ltd., Birmingham. Makers of Cycle Sets and Parts.
Robert Bunting & Sons, Sheffield. Makers of Rims, Spokes, Files, Nipples, &c.
The Simpson Lever Chain, Ltd., London. Makers of Patent Chains and Cycles.

In addition to the Agency of The Simpson Lever Chain, Ltd., which is considered a valuable one, this Company is also making arrangements for the control of two further important inventions by Mr. W. S. Simpson, who will shortly be introducing them to the Cycling Public.

A provisional Contract has been entered into relating to the Agency for Chainless Bicycles, known as the "Acatène," already well-known in France, for their sole representation in Australasia.

WHOLESALE TRADE.—Mr. Rudd's lengthy business experience in Australasia has been the means of his securing a large and healthy trade connection, and, at the present time, he has in hand orders for 2,500 cycles in addition to extensive orders for component parts.

RETAIL TRADE.—The retail trade will be conducted in the same manner as it has been carried on by him during the past three years.

It is proposed to open immediately Distributing Centres in Melbourne, Sydney, Brisbane, and Perth, thus enabling the Company to secure a fair proportion of this season's trade, which is just about opening, and also to establish Sub-Agencies from each centre to work the respective Colonies.

CYCLE POST AND EXPRESS.—In Australia the advantages obtained through the use of the Cycle have rendered it almost a necessity, and for the last two years the "West Australian Gold Fields, Limited," has relied, to a large extent, on Cycles for the carrying of their Mails to and from outlying districts. A Cycle Express Service has been in operation in Western Australia for a long time past, and the demand for the service has been very great, and will no doubt increase to all outlying districts untouched by the railway, such as Kurnalpi, Yerilla, Mount Margaret, Mount Malcolm, Menzies, Lake Way, Lawlers, &c.

The Company's Managing Director has obtained from the men who are riding in the Post and Express Service the fullest information relative to machines suitable to their requirements. This information, together with the reports and experience he has received from the miners—who do most of their exploring on the Cycle—has induced him to have a machine designed especially for this purpose, which it is believed will supersede most of those in use on the Gold Fields, and a further increase of trade therefrom is anticipated.

COMPONENT PARTS.—It is intended to open a Cycle Components Agency (wholesale) for the sale of all parts of Cycles, including complete sets of Fittings, Lamps, Bells, Saddles, Bags, Tubes, Tyres, Spokes, Gear Cases, Pedals, Novelties, &c. In addition to which a large assortment of Messrs. J. B. Brooks & Co.'s Saddles will be stocked. The Company will be in a position to carry a complete stock, and to quote such prices to the Cycle Trade, that Manufacturers, Repairers, and Retailers will find it distinctly to their advantage to purchase from the Company rather than experience the four to six months' delay now incurred by purchasing from England direct.

MOTORS.—The Company proposes to acquire the complete patents for Victoria, New South Wales, Queensland, South Australia, New Zealand, and Tasmania, for THE KANE-PENNINGTON OIL MOTOR, and to secure the Agency of one of the Motor Carriages, which has stood the test of actual work in Europe, viz.:—"The Anglo-French Oil Motor."

In a little time this trade, embracing as it does the Mining Districts of Western Australia, Victoria, New South Wales, New Zealand, and Tasmania, should be most remunerative, more particularly from the fact of the Company being the first to introduce Motors in the Colony. Specially designed Motors are to be constructed to suit the requirements of the Gold Fields, and the issuing Companies are prepared to place orders when such machines are ready.

To work in conjunction with the Motor branch of the Business, the Sole Agency has been secured for THE COIL CLUTCH & PULLEY COMPANY, Ltd., Makers of Lindsay's Improved Self-Adjusting Coil Friction Clutches, which range from 2 to 2,000 horse power, and are in active use.

INCANDESCENT LAMPS.—Incandescent burners have recently been introduced into Australia, and most satisfactory sales have already been effected in Melbourne and Sydney, but the great bulk of gas consumers are still unacquainted with the virtues of the Incandescent Light. This business can be satisfactorily carried on in conjunction with the Cycle business at the various Depots and Sub-Agencies.

The Agency of "The New Incandescent (Sunlight Patent) Gas Lighting Company, Limited," has been secured.

The Company has already a number of applications for Sub-Agencies from various parts of the Colonies.

Mr Rudd, whose services the Directors have been fortunate to secure as Managing Director, has been the most successful business man in the Cycle Trade in the Australasian Colonies, and, having regard to this fact and to the fact of the splendid combination of Agencies which has been arranged, and from careful estimates which have been made, the Directors, who are almost all closely identified with the various branches of trade which the Company has been formed to carry on, believe that large profits will result. The profits made for the last twelve months by the Company of which Mr. Rudd was the Manager were, it is believed, such as would pay 14 per cent. on the Capital of this Company. An additional 3,000 Cycles could have been sold during the year, if the manufacturers had been in a position to deliver.

The following Contracts have been entered into by Mr. Rudd, and are to be transferred by him to the Company, viz.:—

Between	The New Premier Cycle Company, Limited, Dated the 16th day of October, 1896.	and Edward Whitten Rudd.
"	Messrs. Calcott Brothers, Limited, Dated the 20th day of October, 1896.	and Edward Whitten Rudd.
"	Messrs. Bayliss, Thomas, & Company, Limited. Dated the 5th day of November, 1896.	and Edward Whitten Rudd.
"	The Sparkbrook Manufacturing Company, Limited, Dated the 26th day of October, 1896.	and Edward Whitten Rudd.
"	Messrs. Miller & Company, Limited, Dated the 2nd day of November, 1896.	and Edward Whitten Rudd.
"	Messrs. Joseph Appleby, Limited, Dated the 5th day of November, 1896.	and Edward Whitten Rudd.
"	The Universal Cycle Fittings Company, Limited, Dated the 20th day of October, 1896.	and Edward Whitten Rudd.
"	Messrs. Robt. Bunting & Sons, Dated the 20th day of October, 1896.	and Edward Whitten Rudd.
"	Percy Tilt Letchford (as Trustee for the Company therein mentioned), Dated the 3rd day of November, 1896.	and Edward Whitten Rudd.
"	The New Sunlight Incandescent (Sunlight Patent) Gas Lighting Company, Limited, Dated the 5th day of November, 1896.	and Edward Whitten Rudd.
"	The Coil Clutch and Pulley Company, Limited, Dated the 5th day of November, 1896.	and Edward Whitten Rudd.
"	The Simpson Lever Chain, Limited, Dated the 5th day of November, 1896.	and Edward Whitten Rudd.

The price to be paid by the Company has been fixed by the Vendor, Edward Whitten Rudd, at £25,000, which is to be satisfied at the option of the Vendor in Cash or Fully-paid Shares, or partly in Cash and partly in such Fully-paid Shares.

The Vendor will pay all expenses of and incidental to the promotion and formation of the Company up to and including the first allotment.

A Contract has also been entered into, dated 6th November, 1896, and made between Edward Whitten Rudd of the one part, and Percy Hamilton Sainsbury as Trustee for the Company of the other part.

The above-mentioned Contracts or copies thereof, together with the Memorandum and Articles of Association, can be inspected at the Offices of the Solicitors.

The Vendor has entered, or may enter, into agreements and arrangements with third parties, with respect to the issue of the Company and the guaranteeing of the subscription of a portion of the Capital of the Company, to none of which the Company is a party. Applicants for Shares will be deemed to have had notice of their nature and contents, and to have waived their right (if any) to any particulars of these agreements and arrangements, whether under Section 38 of the Companies Act, 1867, or otherwise.

Applications for Shares should be made on the form accompanying prospectus and forwarded to the Company's London Bankers, together with a remittance for the amount payable on application. In cases where no allotment is made, the amount deposited on application will be returned, without deduction. If the number of Shares allotted be less than that applied for, the surplus will be credited in reduction of the payment on allotment so far as necessary, and any balance will be returned.

Prospectuses and Forms of Application can be obtained from the Bankers, Brokers, Solicitors, and at the Offices of the Company.

November 10th, 1896.

The List of Subscriptions opens on Wednesday, the 11th, and will close on Friday, the 13th November, 1896, for both Town and Country.

THE

BRITISH ELECTRIC TRACTION COMPANY, LIMITED.

Incorporated under the Companies Acts, 1862 to 1893.

SHARE CAPITAL = = = £600,000,

Divided into 30,000 Six Per Cent. Cumulative Preference and 30,000 Ordinary Shares of £10 each.

The Directors have power to raise on Debentures any amount not exceeding half the subscribed Capital for the time being. It is intended that in all future Issues of Capital the then existing Shareholders will be preferentially considered.

Issue of £300,000, in 30,000 Ordinary Shares of £10 each at par,

WHICH ARE OFFERED FOR SUBSCRIPTION ON BEHALF OF

THE BRITISH ELECTRIC TRACTION (PIONEER) COMPANY, LIMITED,

BY

THE ELECTRIC AND GENERAL INVESTMENT COMPANY, LIMITED,

1 & 2, GREAT WINCHESTER STREET, LONDON, E.C.

Payable— 10s. on Application,
£2 0s. ,, Allotment,
£2 10s. ,, 15th December, 1896.
£2 10s. ,, 15th February, 1897.
£2 10s. ,, 15th April, 1897.

BOARD OF DIRECTORS.

Sir Chas. Rivers Wilson, G.C.M.G., C.B., Chairman.
The Rt. Hon. The Earl of Suffolk and Berkshire, Director of the City of London Electric Lighting Company, Limited.
The Hon. Sir Charles Wm. Fremantle, K.C.B.
J. S. Raworth, M.Inst.C.E., Chief Engineer and Joint Manager of the Brush Electrical Engineering Company, Limited.
Emile Garcke, M.Inst.E.E., Director of the Electric and General Investment Company, Limited, Managing Director.

} Directors of the British Electric Traction (Pioneer) Co., Limited.

SOLICITOR.
Sydney Morse, Assoc. Inst. E.E., 4, Fenchurch-avenue, London, E.C.
BANKERS.
Parr's Bank, Limited, Bartholomew-lane, London, E.C.
BROKERS.
Foster & Braithwaite, 27, Austin Friars, London, E.C.
AUDITOR.
Fred. W. Smith, F.C.A., 20, Basinghall-street, E.C.
SECRETARY.—J. Vincent Kitchener.
REGISTERED OFFICES.—1 and 2, Great Winchester-street, London, E.C.

PROSPECTUS.

FORMATION OF COMPANY.—This Company is formed under the auspices of the Electric and General Investment Company (on lines similar to those of the City of London Electric Lighting Company), to acquire the business of the British Electric Traction (Pioneer) Company, which has a subscribed Share Capital of £50,000, and was established to develop Electric Traction in the United Kingdom and elsewhere, with a view to the formation in due course of the present Company.

PROGRESS OF ELECTRIC TRACTION.—The advantages of electric traction have been demonstrated on the Continent of Europe as well as in America, and are now recognised in this country, as is evidenced by the installations at Bristol, Coventry, Douglas, Dublin, Hartlepool, Leeds, Liverpool, Staffordshire, and other places. In the United Kingdom the total length of tramways of all kinds at date of last Board of Trade returns was 982 miles, of which only about 60 miles are electrical, whilst in the United States there are at least 9,000 miles of electrical tramways in operation, and in the State of Massachusetts having an area and a population only about one-fifteenth of the United Kingdom there are over 1,000 miles of electrical tramways.

VIEWS OF MUNICIPALITIES.—Various Municipalities and Tramway Companies are giving the adoption of electricity for the working of Tramways their consideration, and the extracts from Official Reports accompanying this Prospectus show the favour with which Electric Traction is regarded, and bear testimony to the superiority and greater economy of electricity as compared with horse power.

LIGHT RAILWAYS ACT.—The Light Railways Act, which received the Royal Assent in August last will greatly facilitate the operations of this Company.

TERMS OF PURCHASE.—By Contract dated 5th November, 1896, made between the Pioneer Company and this Company, the latter agrees to purchase the entire undertaking and assets (other than uncalled capital) of the Pioneer Company, at the price of £25,000, being equivalent to a return to the Pioneer Shareholders of their paid-up Capital of £4 per Share on 5,000 £10 Shares with a bonus of £1 per Share. This Company also undertakes to discharge the contracts and engagements of the Pioneer Company, which include a liability of £10,000 to the Electric and General Investment Company for benefits acquired from that Company by the Pioneer Company on its formation. The Agreement also provides that each Pioneer Shareholder shall be entitled to an allotment of Ordinary Shares in this Company equal to the number of shares held by him in the Pioneer Company.

ASSETS AND INTERESTS ACQUIRED.—Among the assets so acquired by this Company are the interests of the Pioneer Company in the following:—

A Provisional Order confirmed by Act of Parliament, authorising the construction of Electric Tramways from Oldham through Ashton-under-Lyne, Audenshaw, and Denton to Hyde, a distance of about eight miles.

A Provisional Order, also confirmed by Parliament, authorising the construction of 12½ miles of Electric Tramways at Stoke-on-Trent, Hanley, Burslem, and Tunstall, in the Potteries.

A contract with the North Staffordshire Tramways Company for the electrical equipment and subsequent working of that Company's tramways at present worked by steam, and a contract with the Brush Electrical Engineering Company for the supply and erection of the necessary plant.

An Agreement with the Corporation of Longton for the use of the existing Tramways in the Borough of Longton, and for making extensions.

An Act of Parliament for the construction of Electrical Tramways from Kidderminster to Stourport.

A Provisional Order confirmed by Parliament for extensions of Electrical Tramways at Hartlepool.

Parliamentary and other cash deposits made under the before-mentioned Acts of Parliament amounting to £6,433.

An Agreement for a licence for the United Kingdom for the use of a surface contact system of Electric Traction under the patents of F. C. Esmond, and improvements thereon patented by the Pioneer Company and its Engineer.

SOURCES OF PROFITS.—The operations of this Company will comprise the formation of subsidiary Companies to construct and work tramways in various localities; the building and operating of new lines and extensions of existing lines under provisional orders and other powers (some of which have already been secured and others are in course of negotiation), and also contracts to work lines by electric power at a fixed rate per car mile. From these and other sources the Directors believe that large profits will be realised.

MANAGEMENT.—The services of Mr. E. Garcke, Managing Director of the Pioneer Company, have been secured by this Company for a period of three years, under a contract between him and this Company, dated 5th November, 1896.

CONTRACTS.—Copies of the two above-mentioned Contracts, which are the only ones entered into by this Company, and of the Memorandum and Articles of Association of the Company can be seen at the Offices of the Company.

PIONEER COMPANY'S CONTRACTS.—The Pioneer Company has, in the course of its business, entered into various contracts, the benefits and obligations of which pass to this Company, and as these contracts may technically be contracts within the meaning of Section 38 of the Companies Act, 1867, applicants for shares shall accept this notice of such contracts as sufficient, and shall be deemed to have agreed with the Company, as Trustee for the Directors and other persons liable, to waive any further compliance with such Section with reference thereto.

APPLICATIONS FOR SHARES.—Applications for Shares must be made on the Form accompanying the Prospectus, and forwarded to the Bankers of the Company with the full amount of the deposit. If no allotment is made, the deposit will be returned in full; and where the number of Shares allotted is less than that applied for, the available balance will be applied towards the payment due on allotment, and any excess returned to the applicant.

An official quotation for the shares will be applied for.

Prospectuses and Forms of Application can be obtained from the Bankers, the Brokers, the Electric and General Investment Company, and at the Offices of the Company.

9th November, 1896.

THE MIKADO

GOLD MINING COMPANY, LIM.

LAKE OF THE WOODS, ONTARIO, CANADA.

Incorporated under the Companies Acts, 1862 to 1890.

CAPITAL - - £45,000,

In 45,000 Shares of £1 each,

Of which 15,000 Shares are for Working Capital.

DIRECTORS.

Colonel ENGLEDUE, Chairman, South African General Development Syndicate, Limited.
ARTHUR J. WEBER, Director King of the West Gold Mining Company, Limited.
L. H. MATHER, of Mather & Crowther, Limited.
JAMES REID, Chairman International Trust and Finance Corporation, Limited.

SOLICITORS.

MAYO & CO., 10, Drapers'-gardens, E.C.

BANKERS.

THE AFRICAN BANKING CORPORATION, LIMITED.

SECRETARY AND OFFICES.

C. F. McNICOL, 79, Gracechurch-street, E.C.

The South African General Development Syndicate, Limited, were the promoters and Vendors to the Company, and took the whole of the purchase price in fully paid shares, and subscribed the necessary cash working capital. Therefore, this notice is not issued for the purpose of soliciting subscriptions for Shares, but SIMPLY FOR PUBLIC INFORMATION.

The property is situated in the auriferous district of the Lake of the Woods, near Rat Portage, Ontario, Canada, now becoming known as one of the richest and most promising mining centres in the world.

It consists of three locations—D 147, D 148, and D 149, in all about 100 acres. The title is perfect, and direct from the Government, free from all royalties and restrictions.

The following are a few extracts taken from the Report made upon the property by Mr. Robert H. Ahn, Manager of the Dominion Gold Mining and Reduction Company, who is reputed to be one of the most reliable mining experts in the district :—

"The ore deposit occurs in a quartz vein varying in width, but which in the parts already stripped shows to be about six feet wide. This vein can be traced across the three locations."

"The vein has been stripped for a distance of 150 feet, and shows a considerable amount of free gold in places. A number of assays have been made, which have given astonishing results, and taking an average of the whole we have near $500 (or £100) per ton."

"There are small seams running through the veins which are possibly decomposed pyrrhotite and some galena. This material, when assayed separately, gave results of over $2,000 (or £400) per ton, though it showed no perceptible traces of free gold."

"From the amount of work done on the vein it is a little difficult to fully determine its true position and character, but that there exists a large and rich body of ore there can be no two opinions."

"There is abundance of wood now standing on the property, which will supply all that may be needed for buildings and fuel for many years to come, and the water supply is inexhaustible; and the property is reached by steamer (a distance of 30 miles) from Rat Portage, a station on the Canadian Pacific Railway."

The South African General Development Syndicate, Ltd., before purchasing the property, deputed its Chairman, Colonel Engledue, to visit and report upon it, who, after a thorough examination, sent the following cable from Toronto, dated 6th July, 1896 :—

"Mikado—Reef formation now exposed 350 feet—five samples of ten hundredweights each taken from the outcrop of the lode have yielded per ton of 2,000 lbs.—1 oz. 17 dwts., 10 oz. 15 dwts., 5 oz. 13 dwts., 2 oz. 16 dwts., 2 oz. 10 dwts. gold—Large ore body, 30 feet wide, the deposit can be worked as an open quarry. Believe it to be exceedingly valuable. Purchase should be completed.—Engledue."

Samples taken from the mine were subsequently assayed by Messrs. Johnson, Matthey, & Co., on the 21st July, 1896, and resulted as follows :—

Sample No. 1.—	2 oz.	3 dwt.	12 grs.	gold,	5 oz.	5 dwts.	silver.
2.—	16 ,,	16 ,,	—	,,	4 ,,	10 ,,	,,
3.—	7 ,,	1 ,,	12 ,,	,,	1 ,,	12 ,,	,,
4.—	5 ,,	16 ,,	6 ,,	,,	1 ,,	15 ,,	,,

Per ton of 2,240 lbs.

The purchase was completed on the 26th July, 1986, a Manager was engaged and despatched forthwith, and on the 12th September the first crushing was made at the public mill, Rat Portage, of 102 tons of 2,240 lb., which yielded 417 oz. smelted gold. A second crushing of nineteen tons resulted in a yield of 110 oz., and the tailings were estimated to carry 2 oz. 14 dwt. per ton.

LATEST NEWS ABOUT THE PROPERTY.

Mr. Ahn, writing on the 9th Oct., 1896, says :—

"The holders of stock in the Mikado will do well to hold on for some time yet, as I feel safe in stating that you have a richer property than you anticipated, and there are, I understand, several other veins on the property equally as rich as the one now being worked; and I have no doubt that when the property has been thoroughly prospected still further finds will be made, as I know that in some of the adjoining properties there are some good veins, which, if they continue their present strike, will pass through the property held by yourselves."

Colonel Engledue, who has paid a second visit to the mine, cabled on the 13th October, 1896 :—

"Mikado making good progress. Number of tons of ore on the dump 400. Estimate value, $20,000 (£4,000). Struck new vein; believe it to be exceedingly valuable. Contains visible gold; present width 4 feet, running parallel with Mikado vein."

And in a letter dated 14th October, 1896, he says :—"The mine is looking first-rate and is a phenomenal property."

Sir James Grant, K.C.M.G., thus speaks of the Mikado and district. See Pall Mall Gazette of the 14th October :—

"The most attractive points to day as regards mineral development are Ontario, Rainey River, Lake of the Woods, Manitoba, and British Columbia. All these districts are attracting the attention not only of Canadian and British, but of other European capital. Many mines during the past 12 months have been put into operation. Amongst the most celebrated is the Sultana, Lake of the Woods district, which produces an average output of from $2,500 to $3,000 in gold bricks a week, and that from a depth of only 300 feet, the returns having so far improved as the mine has been opened up. The Mikado, from 120 tons passed through the reduction works at Rat Portage during the last few weeks, has given a return of $7,000 in gold, without taking into consideration the concentrates, which will increase the general average.

"These are only two mines, and there are many others now in operation, and it is estimated by Mr. Ahn, M.E., who operates the reduction works at Rat Portage, that, whereas the general percentage of gold is about $12 per ton,

"In this region it runs as high as nearly double that value."

Sir James Grant goes on to say :—

"The veins in this (Lake of the Woods) district are quartz of a continuous character, well defined, and averaging in width from 3 to 15, 20, and 30 feet, and mining can be carried on with the utmost facility.

"The future of this section of the country will doubtless be a great one, inasmuch as it is easily approached by railway. There is an ample supply of wood and water, differing in this respect from Australia and South Africa.

"The mines can be operated summer and winter, food supplies are cheap, and labour can be obtained at a very moderate rate. Altogether these various favourable circumstances conduce very materially to the present bright outlook, and the mines are paying splendidly, every one that has been tried."

There is now a full staff of men on the Mikado. Work is proceeding vigorously, buildings have been erected, the main shaft is being rapidly sunk, and preparations are in progress for the erection of a crushing plant.

HITCHING'S BABY STORES.

The Premier Manufacturers of HIGH-GRADE BABY CARRIAGES in the World, have extensive Showrooms at 23, 21, & 19, LUDGATE HILL, LONDON, E.C.

(WORKS: LUDGATE SQUARE.)

198, OXFORD STREET, LONDON, W. (NEAR PETER ROBINSON'S.)

28, KNIGHTSBRIDGE, S.W. (ST. GEORGE'S PLACE, NEAR HYDE PARK CORNER.)

Messrs. HITCHING & WYNN have recently had the honour of building the Baby Carriage for the Baby Prince Edward of York, having previously executed orders for H.M. the Queen, H.R.H. the Duke of Edinburgh, H.R.H. the Duke of Connaught, H.R.H. Princess Henry of Battenberg, H.R.H. the Duchess of Fife, H.R.H. Princess Henry of Prussia, &c. Also the Royal and Imperial families of Russia, Germany, Denmark, Portugal, and Sweden.

Hitching's Baby Carriages from 2 to 25 Guineas, and Baby Cars from 15/6 to 10 Guineas, are not only the Best, but also 25 per cent. cheaper than those sold by dealers and stores. A carriage should always be purchased from the actual manufacturer. Enquiries receive prompt and courteous attention. Illustrations free. Correspondence solicited. 800 varieties in stock.

Bankers: CAPITAL & COUNTIES BANK AND CITY BANK. Telegram Address: "HITCHING, LONDON."
Liverpool Agency: 74, BOLD STREET. Boston (U.S.A.) Agency: 92, WASHINGTON STREET.

HITCHING'S "PRINCESS MAY" BABY CARRIAGE IS MOST SUITABLE FOR A CHRISTENING PRESENT, BEING RECHERCHE & UNPROCURABLE ELSEWHERE.

Before going elsewhere send for Hitching's Pictorial Price Book free on mentioning "TRUTH."

THE "TROUVILLE" BABY-CAR.

Is equally adapted for use as a Sleeping Car for a young baby, or a Mail Car for an older child.

1. New registered design.
2. Runs on four silent wheels.
3. Small light front wheels.
4. Very safe, centre of gravity being very low.
5. Hitching's Patent Cee Springs. Very easy.
6. Occupies small space.
7. Has deep well for legs and feet. No cramping.
8. Hitching's Patent "Any Position Hood."
9. Half the weight of a wood body. Fine wicker and grass.
10. Cool in summer.
11. Artistically painted.
12. Beautifully upholstered in pale blue or art green.

Price as drawn £4. 4s. nett.

Used on the Tooth-Brush

In the Morning a few drops of

SOZODONT,

THE PLEASANTEST DENTIFRICE in the WORLD,

WILL SWEETEN THE BREATH ALL DAY.

SOZODONT

KEEPS THE TEETH, LIPS, AND GUMS HEALTHY, AND OF A GOOD COLOUR.

It Cleanses the Teeth, and the spaces between the Teeth, as NOTHING else will do.

THERE IS NO SUBSTITUTE.

In Toilet Case, complete, 2s. 6d.

BE SURE OF HAVING SOZODONT.

Drugs Won't Do.

Free Trial of Something That Will Do. DR. TIBBLES' VI-COCOA, prepared from Kola, Cocoa, Malt, and Hops, has the refreshing properties of fine teas, the nourishment of the best cocoas, and a tonic and recuperative force possessed by neither. Not a medicine, but a wonderful food beverage. Sold everywhere in 6d. packets and 9d. and 1s. 6d. tins; or on mentioning this paper (a postcard will do) a dainty sample tin will be sent post free.

DR. TIBBLES' VI-COCOA

Address: DR. TIBBLES' VI-COCOA, LTD., Suffolk House, Cannon St., London, E.C.

CORALLINE TOOTH PASTE.

Keeps the Teeth WHITE and SOUND.

A Delicious DENTIFRICE.

ROBERTS & CO.,

Foreign and English Chemists,

LONDON— 76, NEW BOND STREET, W. Post Free, 2/6 PARIS— RUE DE LA PAIX, 5.

Sample Box sent free on receipt of post card.

BREAKFAST—SUPPER

EPPS'S

GRATEFUL—COMFORTING.

COCOA

BOILING WATER OR MILK.

The most popular and most appreciative since 20 years.

FRANZ JOSEF Aperient Water is the BEST.

The only Palatable Natural Aperient Water.

SPHAGNOL PEAT.

Price—1,000 LOGS FOR 20s.

SMOKELESS AND SANITARY FUEL.

TRUTH says:—"I have burnt the blocks on the top of a coal fire, and I find that the peat seems to act as a smoke consumer."

Send order, or write for leaflet.

Sole Agents—CHAMBERLAIN & CO., 10, HART STREET, BLOOMSBURY, W.C.

(One minute from Mudie's Library).

10/6 THE "PELICAN" SELF-FEEDING PEN 10/6

(PATENTED)

WRITES INSTANTLY AND CONTINUOUSLY.

Has Extra Large Reservoir of Ink. Secure against Leakage in any position. Flow of Ink regulated with the Greatest Nicety.

POLISHED VULCANITE, HANDSOMELY ENCHASED, FITTED WITH SPECIAL BARREL PEN in 14-ct. GOLD, IRIDIUM-POINTED. Also

THE "NOTA BENE" STYLOGRAPH OR FLUID PENCIL

(PATENTED)

5/- 5/-

IS READY FOR INSTANT USE, WITHOUT ANY ADJUSTMENT. MAY BE CARRIED IN ANY POSITION, WITHOUT FEAR OF LEAKAGE.

POLISHED VULCANITE, HANDSOMELY ENCHASED, WITH NEEDLE, SPRING, & NOZZLE, MADE OF THE PRECIOUS METALS.

Sold by all Stationers. Wholesale only by the Sole Manufacturers, THOS. DE LA RUE & CO. Ltd., Bunhill Row, London, E.C.

OUR PUZZLES.

"TRUTH" PUZZLE No. 923.—ORIGINAL ANAGRAM ON THE LETTERS IN "ABDUL HAMID KHAN, SULTAN OF THE OTTOMAN EMPIRE."

TARBOX (real name and address will be given in due course) £2 2 0

"TRUTH" PUZZLE, No. 924.—PROVERBS, &c., FORMED FROM WORDS IN "TRUTH" FOR OCTOBER 18.

LANCELOT (real name and address will be given in due course) £1 1 0
BOWZER (" " " ") 1 1 0

"TRUTH" DOLL AND TOY SHOW.—SPECIAL NOTICE.

IN accordance with a previous announcement, and for the special information of those who may be taking part in the Doll-dressing Competition for the first time, full details are appended of the system on which the numerous Prizes are given in connection with the Show. Many readers will remember that a new method of awarding them was adopted several years ago. It had previously been the practice to give one series of Prizes only, and this plan had naturally led to some difficulty in classification, and, in order to prevent any recurrence of this, it was decided to divide the Dolls, for the purpose of judging their relative merits, into three distinct classes. This plan has worked so satisfactorily that it is proposed to again adopt it this year. There will therefore, in connection with the next Show, be three series of Prizes—the first for single Dolls, dressed with exceptional taste and skill and novelty of design; the second for the more striking groups of Dolls; and the third for those larger collections of Dolls, containing fifty and upwards, in the dressing of which any special qualities, such as neatness, variety, durability, &c., may have been exhibited. Thus there will be three First Prizes awarded, probably of equal value, one for the best exhibit in each class, together with numerous other Prizes of smaller value, the exact number and worth of which must necessarily depend on the size to which the Show attains. It is still a little too early to state specifically what these Prizes will be, but they will, speaking generally, consist of useful articles made of, or mounted with, silver, of values varying from five pounds to fifteen shillings. It may also be said that the TRUTH brooches, of which upwards of 100 were distributed last year, proved very popular, and similar mementoes will be again presented at Christmas to all ladies who have dressed a certain number of dolls.

THE HOME-MADE TOYS.

It will not be forgotten, it is hoped, that the Annual TRUTH Show consists of Home-made Toys, as well as of Home-dressed Dolls. The former have always been a most prominent and interesting feature at successive Exhibitions; and it is trusted that there will be no falling-off in that respect this year. The space for exhibiting them is ample. The Home-made Toys may be of any kind—dolls' houses, model toys, movable and mechanical toys, &c., &c. Scrap-books are also in great request at the Children's Hospitals. Prizes will be given, as usual, for the best of the Home-made Toys. It may be well to repeat that there is an urgent demand existing for Home-made Toys of a simple but strongly-made description. Such Toys as will survive the wear and tear necessarily associated with their constant use by a number of children are particularly wanted; and it is hoped that the supply will be found not inadequate to the widespread demand which has been referred to.

And last, though by no means least, there is the all-important question of the TRUTH Toy Fund. The Dolls which are dressed for the Christmas Show, and the Home-made Toys which are sent in amount in all to about 5,000; but when it is remembered that the children to whom the Christmas distribution is made number upwards of 25,000, it may well be asked, What are these among so many? It is, therefore, absolutely necessary, if the usual distribution is to take place this year, that at least 20,000 new Toys shall be purchased. And for this purpose a very large sum of money is needed. Will, then, the readers of TRUTH make the special effort which is required to raise this amount? Upon their answer depends, it need scarcely be added, not only the success of the coming Toy Show, but the happiness of the many thousands of poor children who have learned to associate Christmas with the generosity, which has not hitherto failed them, of the readers of TRUTH and their friends. It may be added that a small stock of dolls, both large and small, still remains on hand, and these, it is hoped, will be applied for at once by ladies willing to dress them.

"TRUTH" PUZZLE, No. 925.

The Prize for the best Rhymed Acrostic on "Victoria," having special relation to her Majesty's long reign, has been awarded to SCRIVENER for the following lines:—

THE TWILIGHT OF A RECORD REIGN.

V anquished every regnal record! Give the record unto her!
I n the realms of far hereafter who shall be her vanquisher?
C an the years that roll before us in their misty depths contain
T ithe of all the power and grandeur of our Ladye's record reign?
O nward! cry the voices, onward! Onward! Whither? Onward! Where?
R end the curtain of the future! Nay, the Epoch cries, forbear!
I n the West a dying splendour lingers o'er the sunset skies.
A fter that—the purple twilight and the peace of Paradise.

"TRUTH" PUZZLE, No. 929.

The usual Prize of Two Guineas is offered this week to the competitor who is most successful

IN ANSWERING CORRECTLY THE FIRST THIRTY OF THE ORIGINAL TOPICAL CONUNDRUMS PRINTED BELOW.

Marks will be awarded for any replies that, in the opinion of the Puzzle Editor, fairly answer the given riddles, even though the said replies are not identical with those provided by the authors of the conundrums It may be added that in case any of the authors of the first thirty riddles enter for this competition, no marks will be given them for the answers to their own conundrums. All lists of answers must reach this Office by the morning of Monday, November 23 at the latest.

CONDENSED RULES.

All answers to the current Puzzle must be sent in on or before the morning of the Monday week following the date of that Puzzle's publication, to the PUZZLE EDITOR, TRUTH Buildings, Carteret-street, Queen Anne's-gate, London, S.W. The answers must be signed by a nom de plume of not more than twelve letters, and must not be sent on post-cards, nor by telegraph, nor by hand; whilst in the case of new competitors the real name and address must be forwarded with the first reply sent.

ANSWERS TO CORRESPONDENTS.

 The real name, with the address, of PERSIMMON, winner of a half of Prize No. 915, is Edward Burke, Esq., Greyfort, Clonmel.

 The real name, with the address, of BIROTA, winner of Prize No. 919, is the Rev. Chas. C. Elcum, St. Agnes Vicarage, Liverpool.

 The real name, with the address, of IVY LEAVES, winner of a half of Prize No. 920, is Mrs. Edgar Browne, 29, Rodney-street, Liverpool.

 The real name, with the address, of HOPETOWN, winner of Prize No. 922, is Miss Emily G. Hart, Craigmillar, Scalby, near Scarborough.

GREYFORT.—Many thanks for your letter. I have written to ANALYST on the subject of it.

MRS. BUCHANAN.—Your Acrostic arrived too late for publication with the others.

BIDDY.—I had discovered the misprint before you wrote.

E. F. C. M.—No, such a contribution as you describe would not be eligible for this competition.

APOSTROPHE.—I am much obliged to you for your letter, and have inserted the conundrum.

CUMBRIAN AND MAKMAX.—Many thanks for your letters.

THE PUZZLE EDITOR.

"TRUTH" PUZZLE, No. 926.—ASSORTED SPECIMENS—GOOD AND OTHERWISE.

ORIGINAL TOPICAL CONUNDRUMS.

 Answers to the Conundrums printed below will be published in due course.—THE PUZZLE EDITOR.

1. If Lady Godiva lived in these days, how would she ride through Coventry?—A See-man.
2. What remark would an excited Anti-Episcopalian be likely to make to the new Primate?—Rabelais.
3. What is the difference between the Millennium and a lawsuit about a horseless carriage?—Claymore.
4. Why is Armenia ever likely to be a land of discord?—Malignant.
5. Why, in a revolution, would Edison be neutral?—Malignant.
6. Why does the English Embassy at Paris consist of clever men at the present time?—V. H. S.
7. Why does the Sultan of Turkey drink sour milk?—Wild Thyme.
8. Why can't a member of the Navy League be awfully wicked?—La Plata.
9. How does the cab strike in London benefit pedestrians?—La Plata.
10. Why is England, in her dealings with Armenia, like a person afflicted with gout?—Clarion.
11. Why was it likely that Röntgen should discover the X rays?—Apostrophe.
12. What is the difference between the Sultan's Government and the British Parliament?—Apostrophe.
13. Why is the Soudan to be envied by every housewife?—Nedals.
14. Why has our campaign against the Mahdi been of a purely friendly character?—Merle.
15. When were the other Great Powers convinced that England's attitude was a purely selfish one?—Merle.
16. Why is Sir H. Macartney a bad navigator?—Merle.
17. Why is Sir William Harcourt like the Channel of Constantinople?—Eboracum.
18. Why is John Bull doomed to have a poor Christmas dinner?—Eboracum.
19. Why is the Bishop of London like a homeward-bound traveller in the Suez Canal?—Eboracum.
20. Why did the late Church Congress in Shrewsbury go off so well?—Cæsar's Corner.
21. How do loyal Britons prove that they prefer wet weather to dry?—Mrs. Buchanan.

22. What reason would you give that the Czar is a Mahommedan?—Hibernian.
23. What game should Li Hung Chang play, and why?—Hibernian.
24. Why will Sir John Gorst never be a learned Minister?—Hibernian.
25. What is the difference between the Nelson statue and the Times on Lord Rosebery?—Co.
26. Why is the Chinese Legation like a Cockney on the spree?—Fathead.
27. Why can the Princess Helène never be a great traveller?—Almaviva.
28. What racial mistake was made by the Chinese Embassy?—Cortex.
29 Why is what a poor workhouse child may get at Christmas like old brown windsor soap?—Cortex.
30. Why does the Chinese Legation in London resemble the North Pole?—V. H. S.
31. What do readers of TRUTH know of Mr. Labouchere's floral tastes?—L'Amour.
32. Why is it like carrying coals to Newcastle to send the present Bishop of London to Canterbury?—L'Amour.
33. How were the gardeners informed of the Archbishop's death?—Echo.
34. At what time during his expedition to the North Pole did Nansen most resemble a saucepan?—Echo.
35. How did the Chinese Legation resemble an eclipse?—J. McGrigor Allan.
36. Why is the Ottoman Empire like a neglected dairy?—Felixicus.
37. When are shareholders in public Companies most interested in the latest scientific discovery?—Pelican.
38. What is the best trade for an Armenian?—Pelican.
39. Why was it impossible for the Czar to come to a private understanding with the President of the French Republic?—Bowzer.
40. Why has the German Emperor latterly combined the characteristics of a roué and of an old woman?—Bouzer.
41. Why must Canterbury be conceded the foremost position in constructive architecture?—Per Ardua.
42. Why does a frown on the brow resemble a well-known play now being acted?—Bootle's Baby.
43. In what five letters of the alphabet would you remonstrate with a cabman violently on strike?—Bootle's Baby.
44. What better instance is there of Lord Nelson's courage even than those given by his biographers? Isinglass.
45. Why is the new Archbishop of Canterbury like a popular work?—Mick.
46. Why might the Shah of Persia be annoyed if he came to London?—Risk.
47. Why is the Liberal Party like a port of call for steamers, &c., which has been damaged?—Shamrock.
48. Why is the new Her Majesty's Theatre now a building, with scaffolding round, like a certain French mot?—Arch. Gibbs.
49. What is the Sultan's favourite drink?—Londoner.
50. When do men most object to women?—Apostrophe.
51. Why is Europe to-day like a gourmand at Christmas?—Immortal Will.
52. What slight differences do you find between the Irish poet, Tom Moore, and the British politician who lately resigned a leadership?—Stephanotis.
53. Why do the Liberal Party at present resemble the rose tree and gooseberry-bush at this time of the year.—Cumbrian.
54. Why is the Dongola expedition like the mouth of a kitchen chimney?—Nitram.
55. Why would Russia be justified in making war against the Turks?—Hamlet.
56. Why has Queen Victoria been the cause of a general bad year?—Chance.
57. Why should Mons. Eiffel be compared with the Czar and Li Hung Chang?—Ubique.
58. What is the difference between the Derby Stakes and Lord Rosebery?—East Anglia.
59. Why did Lord Rosebery resign the Leadership?—Truth.
60. If the palace of the Sultan is bombarded, what will be the result?—Serpent.
61. Why is the present century like 2348 B.C.?—Viva.
62. On what city of the ancient world are the eyes of the present generation universally directed?—Felsberg.
63. What is a timely dish to set before Dame Europa?—Owlet.
64. How does this delay in settling the Venezuelan dispute accord with the subject of the controversy?—Esperanza.
65. What river in Scotland reminds one irresistibly of a horse-trough, and why?—Aquila.
66. Why did Lord Rosebery resign?—In Dubiis.
67. Why is the dockers' agitation such a bitter pill?—Sol.
68. Why should the Sultan try to improve himself in French?—Irma Lee.
69. Why was Tynan like one in England who, expecting a change of food—from beef to poultry, was deprived of the same by France's shortcoming?—Felixicus.
70. Why are the electric rays of the new photography like two people agreed?—Echo.
71. What is the difference between the action of the present Government with regard to the Turkish crisis and the convict Jabez Balfour?—Snibor.
72. Why do sporting men as a rule prefer Rosebery to Sir William?—Glenugie.

Other Conundrums have been received from Torchlight, L'Amour, Per Ardua, Glenugie, Bootle's Baby, Mick, Shamrock, Londoner, Nedals, In Dubiis, Jeff, Aquila, Isinglass, Felsberg, Jap, East Anglia, Chance, Nitram, Cumbrian, Hycus, Examen, Excelsior, Apostrophe, V. H. S., Rabelais, and others.

"TRUTH"
CAN BE OBTAINED AT
No. 48, QUAI ST. JEAN BAPTISTE, NICE.

The "QUEEN" says:—"Few Silks can equal 'FAILLE INVICTA, which is really a magnificent texture."

THE BEST WEARING FASHIONABLE BLACK SILK

FAILLE INVICTA

THOROUGHLY TRIED AND RELIABLE.

REGISTERED No. 93,095.

AT ALL SILK HOUSES.

"VANITY FAIR" says:—"I think nothing could be better than 'FAILLE INVICTA.'"

"MYRA'S JOURNAL" says:—"The 'FAILLE INVICTA' is fully recognised as the perfection of Black Silk."

ASK FOR
DR. RIDGE'S
The Perfect Food for Children and Invalids.
Patent Cooked
FOOD.

CAUTION. All the Genuine Packets and Canisters are enclosed in White Wrappers, the words DR. RIDGES' PATENT COOKED FOOD are printed boldly thereon, so that none need be deceived or mistaken.

PREPARED AT THE ROYAL FOOD MILLS, LONDON, AND SOLD RETAIL BY ALL LEADING CHEMISTS AND GROCERS THROUGHOUT THE KINGDOM.

REVERSIONS and LIFE INTERESTS in LANDED or FUNDED PROPERTY or other Securities and Annuities PURCHASED, or Loans or Annuities thereon granted, by the EQUITABLE REVERSIONARY INTEREST SOCIETY, LIMITED, 10, Lancaster-place, Waterloo Bridge, Strand, Established 1835. Capital £500,000. Interest on Loans may be capitalised.

WATCHES FROM THE FACTORY BY POST
DIRECT TO THE WEARER!
57/- THE 'COUNSELLOR'

H. SAMUEL'S KEYLESS ENGLISH LEVER. A splendid Watch, highly finished interchangeable movement, with 15 JEWELS; three-quarter plate, most accurately constructed; CHRONOMETER BALANCE; tempered hairspring; polished wheels and pinions: flat crystal glass front. In highly-finished close-fitting SOLID SILVER cases hall marked. H. Samuel's price £2. 17s.; in 14-CARAT ROLLED GOLD Case, consisting of two outer plates of 14-carat gold, lined inside with a case of specially prepared metal. Wears for years. H. Samuel's price, £4. 5s. Heavy 18-carat Gold Case, £13, SEVEN YEARS' warranty. A MONTH'S FREE TRIAL. Full amount returned if dissatisfied. LARGE SAVING on London prices. H. Samuel's "ACME" Sterling Silver Watches for Ladies and Gentlemen. Handsome, exact, and durable. Five years' warranty. Worth three guineas, H. Samuel's price 25s. H. Samuel's New Improvements, protected by HER MAJESTY'S ROYAL LETTERS PATENT, are only to be obtained in H. Samuel's Watches. Largest Sale! Highest Quality! Lowest Prices!

FREE. It will please you to read our new book (just published). Only necessary to send your NAME AND ADDRESS, and this handsome volume is despatched by next post. CONSIDERABLE REDUCTIONS effected by sending direct to H. Samuel for all requirements. Please say if we may have the pleasure of posting you this new book.

H. SAMUEL, Lever Watch Factory, MANCHESTER.

WARMTH WITHOUT WEIGHT.
Guaranteed Non-Shrinking.
"Australlama"
THE PERFECTION OF
Woollen Under-wear
For Ladies, Gentlemen & Children
SOFT, LIGHT & WARM — TRADE MARK.
SCOTCH {AUSTRALIAN WOOL AND INDIAN CASHMERE} MADE
ILLUSTRATED PRICE LIST & SAMPLES POST FREE FROM THE SOLE MANUFACTURER.
Greensmith Downes, Edinburgh.

A Bad Complexion

4d

is often due to a bad soap.

BLOTCHES ARE REPULSIVE, AND WILL MAR THE APPEARANCE OF ANY FACE. YOU CAN'T GET RID OF THEM WITH BAD SOAP.

VINOLIA

IS A

COMPLEXION

4d

SOAP.

VINOLIA CREAM.—For Itching, Eczema, Face Spots, &c., 1/1½ and 1/9.
VINOLIA POWDER.—For Roughness, Redness, Toilet, &c., 1/1 and 1/9.

The Mutual Life Insurance Co. Of New York

Assets . . . exceed . . . 45 Millions Sterling.

INSURES AN INCOME

During Lifetime of Insured.

Life Policies - - - - - - - at 3½ per cent.
Life Option Endowments - at 4 „
Consols - - - - - - - - at 6 „

After Death of Insured.

Continuous Instalment - -
Debenture - - - - - - -
20 Year Bond - - - - -
} at 5 per cent.

Apply for Particulars to any of the Branch Offices, or to Head Office for the United Kingdom—

D. C. HALDEMAN,
GENERAL MANAGER,
17 & 18, CORNHILL, LONDON, E.C.

STRAINED VISION.

DISTRESSING HEADACHES, indigestion, simulated neuralgia, and nervous depression, are frequently caused by some peculiarity of the Vision, which can at once be overcome by the use of proper glasses. See "OUR EYES" (Now in its Sixteenth Edition), price 1s.; by JOHN BROWNING, F.R.A.S., F.R.M.S., President of the British Optical Association, &c.
Or consult, free of charge—
MR. JOHN BROWNING,
OPHTHALMIC OPTICIAN,
63, STRAND, LONDON, W.C.

ROYAL EXCHANGE
ASSURANCE.

SETTLEMENT POLICIES
Guaranteeing FIVE PER CENT. on the sum assured. No Trustees Required.

DEATH DUTIES
Provided for by a small annual payment through life.

ANNUITIES
Special Terms for Impaired Lives.

For Rates, apply to the Secretary,
Chief Office—ROYAL EXCHANGE, LONDON.

RUBINAT. Source Dr. Llorach.—SPANISH APERIENT MINERAL WATER. Dr. WEX, Official Chemist to the town of Hamburg, places Rubinat before the most vaunted of the German purgative waters. Is invaluable in all gout and intestinal complaints.

BEST

RUBINAT.—Has none of the drastic and ofttimes irritating effects of other waters, which chiefly depend for their action upon magnesian salts of which they are largely composed.

APERIENT.

E. GALLAIS & CO.,
90, Piccadilly, London, W.

BOVRIL

IS THE VITAL PRINCIPLE OF PRIME OX BEEF

OBTAINED FROM SELECTED CATTLE REARED ONLY IN AUSTRALIA AND SOUTH AMERICA.
IT GREATLY IMPROVES AND ADDS PIQUANCY TO HASHED BEEF OR MUTTON, RAGOUT OF GAME OR POULTRY, MEAT PIES OR PUDDINGS, CROQUETTES OR RISSOLES; AND

IN THE

PREPARATION OF STRENGTHENING SOUPS, SAVOURY SAUCES, AND RICH GRAVIES, IT IS OF SUCH SPECIAL VALUE THAT ALL WHO DESIRE APPETISING, NOURISHING VIANDS USE BOVRIL IN THE

KITCHEN.

BOVRIL LIMITED, Food Specialists, LONDON, E.C.

Directors { THE RIGHT HON. LORD PLAYFAIR, G.C.B., LL.D. / DR. FARQUHARSON, M.P., AND OTHERS.

Printed for the Proprietor by WYMAN & SONS, Limited, Great Queen-st. W.C. and published at 10, Bolt-ct. Fleet-st. E.C. in the Parish of St. Dunstan's-in-the-West, in the City of London. Cheques and Post Office Orders should be made payable to REGINALD E. BOOKER, "Truth" Buildings, Carteret-st. Queen Anne's-gate, S.W.

TRUTH

"Cultores Veritatis Fraudis Inimici."—Cicero.

No. 1038. Vol. XL. Thursday, November 19, 1896. Price Sixpence.

NOTICE.

In response to various communications which reach me on the subject, I beg to notify that the terms of Subscription to Truth, which are payable in advance, are as follows:—To any address in the United Kingdom, for 3 months, 7s.; 6 months, 14s.; and for 12 months, 28s. The Thin Paper Edition is forwarded to countries within the Postal Union for 3 months for 7s. 8d.; 6 months, 15s. 4d.; and 12 months, 30s. 8d. Cheques and Post Office Orders should be made payable to the Manager, Truth, "Truth Building," Carteret-street, S.W.

A reprint of the Truth report on the Kilburn Sisterhood can be obtained at the Publishing Offices, Bolt-court, Fleet-street, price 2d.; by post, 2½d.

ENTRE NOUS.

I HAVE a very pleasing announcement to make. The Royal Albert Hall has again, in the most generous manner, been placed at my disposal for the Truth Toy and Doll Show, by the executive. Their kindness is no trivial matter, for it implies the handing over of the Albert Hall to Truth for a whole week. The preparations for the Show, and the packing up and distribution at the close, will occupy four days; and the public exhibition of the Dolls and Toys will, as usual, occupy two, viz., Wednesday and Thursday, December 16 and 17. I would particularly ask ladies who are working for the Truth Show to note the above date, as it makes it absolutely necessary that all Dolls, Home-made Toys, &c., intended for exhibition, should be received at this Office not later than noon on Saturday, December 12.

During the past week I have received additional returns from certain Metropolitan Hospitals and Workhouses, which make it certain that the number of dolls and toys required for distribution at Christmas will be considerably larger than last year. This increase has been chiefly caused, I regret to say, by the continued prevalence of fever in London. The Children's Wards in the Fever Hospitals are crowded with little patients as they have rarely been crowded before, and the appeals I have received in consequence are pathetic in their earnestness. Dolls, it seems, are in special request amongst the girl patients during the tediously protracted period of their convalescence. In the exceptional circumstances, I have thought it right to obtain an additional supply of dolls, both large and small, feeling sure that there will be volunteers ready to dress them for the special purpose I have mentioned, even at this comparatively late date. I should very much like to be assured during the ensuing week that my faith has not been without justification.

I need scarcely point out that the state of affairs I have mentioned will involve a corresponding increase in the total amount required for this year's Truth Toy Fund. So far, subscriptions have been coming in but very slowly.

A Primrose lady has made the following suggestion to me. Brooches and medals are given each year to the members of the League, and the old ones become consequently out of date. Why not send these old ones to Truth in order to distribute them with toys amongst the workhouse and hospital children? Why not? I am not myself a member of the League. If, however, any of those who are, like to send their old brooches and medals to me, they shall be distributed; nor shall any of the children be asked what are their politics, for, as I hope I need hardly say, there is nothing political in the Truth Christmas Toy Fund. It may be, however, that children receiving Primrose brooches or medals will receive a bias in favour of the political Party to which they owe them, and thus be led in later years to become Conservatives. Well: I am ready to run this risk. The brooch would be in the hand, the Conservative in the bush.

The Queen is to leave Windsor Castle for Osborne on Friday, December 18, and her Majesty will reside in the Isle of Wight until about Tuesday, February 16, when she is to return to Windsor, and stay there until her departure for the Riviera, which will take place during the second week of March.

The Princess of Wales and Princess Victoria returned on Saturday evening to Sandringham from visiting Mr. and Mrs. William James at West Dean Park, near Chichester, and Prince and Princess Charles of Denmark came back with them and proceeded to Appleton House. The Prince, who came to town with the Princess, stayed at Marlborough House over Sunday, and he is now the guest of Sir Horace and Lady Farquhar at Castle Rising, near Lynn, and goes to Sandringham on Friday. The Prince and Princess of Wales and Princess Victoria are to pass through town on Monday on their way from Sandringham to Blenheim, where they will be the guests of the Duke and Duchess of Marlborough until Saturday, the 28th, when they are going to Windsor Castle on a visit to the Queen until Monday, the 30th.

The Duke and Duchess of York, who are to reside at Sandringham until the end of January, when they will come up to St. James's Palace for the season, are to pay visits during the winter to the Queen (at Windsor Castle next month, and at Osborne in January); to the Duke and Duchess of Portland, at Welbeck Abbey; to Lord and Lady Howe, at Penn House, Bucks; and to Lord and Lady Alington, at Crichel Hall, Dorsetshire.

After an absence of six weeks, the Duke and Duchess of Connaught have returned from Germany, and they will now reside at Bagshot Park for several months, except for occasional visits to the Queen at Windsor and at Osborne. The Duchess has been much benefited by a three weeks' course of massage treatment at Dresden. The Duke of Connaught and Prince Christian will have several shooting parties in Windsor Great Park during the next few weeks.

The Duke and Duchess of Teck are to leave Richmond to-day on a visit to the Duke and Duchess of Westminster at Eaton Hall, Cheshire. Princess Mary returned to the White Lodge on Friday from visiting the Duke and Duchess of Beaufort at Stoke Gifford, near Bristol.

Empress Frederick, who was to have arrived on Friday at Windsor Castle on a visit to the Queen, is staying at the Château of Rumpenheim, near Frankfort, with her youngest daughter, Princess Frederick Charles of Hesse, who was very ill for some days after her recent accouchement. The Empress has changed her plans, and she will go direct to Berlin on leaving Rumpenheim (after a brief visit to the Grand Duke and Grand Duchess of Baden at Karlsruhe), and is to stay there until the end of January, when she will come to England for a few weeks to visit the Queen at Osborne and at Windsor Castle. The Empress Frederick's long-contemplated visit to Rome and Naples will take place in March and April next.

The Duc d'Aumale is to arrive, the week after next, at Wood Norton, his seat in Worcestershire, where he will entertain a large family party during his stay in England. The Duc d'Aumale, the Duc and Duchesse d'Orléans, and the Comtesse de Paris will pay visits to the Queen at Windsor Castle, and the Prince and Princess of Wales at Sandringham. The Duc d'Orléans has not hitherto received much notice from the Royal Family, and he has never been invited either to Windsor or to Sandringham, but now that he is so eligibly married, and presumably rangé, he is to be taken into favour at Court.

On Tuesday next Lord Lawrence and Colonel Browne are to replace Lord Kintore and Captain Drummond of Megginch, as Lord and Groom in Waiting on the Queen, and they are to be on duty until December 7, when Lord Bridport and Sir Edmund Commerell will succeed them.

For the TRUTH HOTEL LIST, see page 1330 in the present issue.
For HOSPITALS and APPEALS, see page 1329.
For AMUSEMENTS, see page 1331.
For OUR PUZZLES, see page 1341.

Every one was ready to congratulate the Queen on having attained the fiftieth year of her reign; but what an orgie of flunkeyism was that Jubilee year! And now we are threatened with another outburst of servility from every creature who fancies that it is almost getting into good society to suggest in print some tomfoolery as an evidence of his loyalty. An influentially-signed proposal has been put forward that the recognition of the Queen having reigned for sixty years might take the form of a fund raised by public subscriptions to endow in perpetuity the Queen Victoria Jubilee Institute for Nurses. By all means. Money could not be better applied, for the Institution, with the small means now at its command, does a vast amount of good. I should, however, be glad to hear that the recognition will begin and end with this, and that all moneys which it is proposed to devote to "fuss and feathers" will receive so far better a destination.

Before the new Lord Mayor came into office the inspired paragraphist gave us to understand that his lordship was going to signalise his mayoralty by raising a fund to pay off the debts of all the hospitals, as a memorial of the Queen's sixty years' reign. It would seem that the Lord Mayor has now thought better of this project. The hospital scheme struck me as rather a wild and impracticable one, however well-intentioned, and I hope we have now heard the last of it.

The case of Dr. David Johnston, Professor of Biblical Criticism at Aberdeen, who has been required to resign his chair by the University Court, came before the Queen at the Council which her Majesty held the other day at Balmoral, and it has been referred to a Special Committee "of Lords of the Council" for consideration. Professor Johnston has been requested by Sir Charles Lennox Peel (Clerk of the Council) to present his petition on the subject not later than Wednesday next, and the case will be settled at the Council which the Queen is to hold early next month at Windsor Castle. If Scotch Professors are to be forcibly retired because the conceited prigs of students are not pleased with their lectures, it will not be easy to find competent men to fill the Northern Chairs. It has been said that a dead set was from the first made against Professor Johnston, because he was appointed by Sir George Trevelyan, and is believed to be a man of decidedly Liberal principles.

Lord Caledon has been given the vacant ribbon of the Order of St. Patrick. He is an Ulsterman, and not known in Ireland outside the circle of his friends. No doubt he will wear the ribbon and star as gracefully as most other Irish Peers, but the distinction they may bestow on him will be the only distinction in the case. The Order of St. Patrick has nothing national—in the general acceptation of the term—about it, but the name. It is, nevertheless, a pity that it should be given as a Court favour, since it appertains to Ireland, a country which the Court ignores. The pity is still greater when there are available Irish noblemen who, besides receiving distinction from the Order, would bestow distinction upon it by being added to the ranks of its Knights.

Sir Edward and Lady Ermyntrude Malet, who are staying at Latimer, Bucks, on a visit to the Duchess Dowager of Bedford, will be the guests of the Queen at Windsor Castle, and of the Prince and Princess of Wales at Sandringham, before they leave England to pass the winter and spring months at their villa on the coast of the Riviera, near Monaco.

Lord Fitzhardinge made a speech to his Gloucestershire tenantry at Berkeley the other day, in which he stated that five or six years' income of the estates would be required to pay the various duties. He had been told that he must buy the deer and pheasants. The herd had been in the castle park for seven hundred years, and he was asked three shillings each for 7,000 pheasants, but refused to take them over on such terms, and he made another offer to the trustees, which had been accepted. Lord Fitzhardinge announced that he would keep up the buildings on the estate, and would continue the schools and his brother's pensions. He wanted to explain his position, as he had been overwhelmed by applications from all quarters for subscriptions for different objects.

I have no special feeling of like or dislike towards a horse. My sentiments towards him are those that I entertain towards a pig or a donkey, or any other useful animal; nor have I ever understood why any one should be deemed the better man because his affections are centred upon a horse. The object of a carriage is to convey people and goods. That carriage is to my mind the best, that, at the least cost, adequately fulfils this object. If motors, by all means let us have motors. Last Saturday I betook myself to Westminster Bridge to see the procession of these vehicles on their way to Brighton. I was disappointed. No one yet seems to have grasped the fact that there must be a new departure in their form. Judging from those in the procession their makers have simply sought to make them as like carriages drawn by horses as possible. Apart from form, the lighter ones seemed to vibrate greatly. By my side stood a talkative lady, whose acquaintance I had not previously enjoyed. "If the people inside of them were cream," she said, "they would be butter before they got half way to Brighton." I suggested to her that the petroleum cars smelt unpleasantly. "Stink," she said, "is the word for them;" and it certainly was.

By the way, a friend of mine, learned in all connected with electricity, tells me that a primary battery has been discovered of such potency that—to use his words—a big ship will be able to go to America with its motive power enclosed in a jam pot. The discovery was made accidentally by two Scotch boys, and has been taken up by several Scotchmen of large means and of considerable business experience.

A correspondent sends me what purports to have been his experience of Saturday's historical progress of the motor cars to Brighton. The conclusion he arrives at is certainly a pessimistic one — unduly so, I should say. The truth probably lies about midway between his sombre account and the couleur-de-rose descriptions by some of the more sanguine motorists:—

"TO BRIGHTON."

BY A CONVERTED MOTORIST.

(With apologies to Mr. R. G. Knowles.)

I've just arrived from Brighton—by train—
Saturday's ride nearly turned my brain;
I rode down on a motor-car,
Rumble, gurgle, jostle, and jar—
I went off at ten-thirty, proud,
Cheered and chaffed by a mighty crowd;
I arrived at six-fifty—cowed;
Oh! I'll never "mote" down any more
To Brighton,
To Brighton—
(Our first stand-still
Was on Brixton-hill);
To Brighton,
To Brighton—
Oh! I'll never "mote" down any more!

Never was I in so damp a scrunch,
Never had I such a fight for lunch;
Never have I known the mud so thick,
Never have I felt so much of it stick;
Never have I been so loudly cheered,
Never have I been so rudely jeered,
As when we into a coal-cart steered;
Oh! I'll never "mote" down any more
To Brighton,
To Brighton,
Through rain and through slush,
With a nerve-shaking rush,
To Brighton,
To Brighton—
Oh! I'll never "mote" down any more!

Motor cars may have come to stay,
But not in my coach-house, any way.
I hate their jolt and I hate their smell,
I hate their hideous shapes as well;
And when I resolve to seek again
London's suburb upon the main,
I'll go by coach, or I'll go by train,
But I'll never "mote" down any more
To Brighton,
To Brighton.
I'll go on my "bike,"
Or I'll walk, if you like,
To Brighton,
To Brighton—
But I'll never "mote" down any more!

As the Lord Mayor's Show does not go round the streets of Westminster, I did not have an opportunity of seeing it myself, but I gather from the reports that in the allegorical car that represented Dongola, the place of honour was occupied by a figure symbolical of my friend Tommy Atkins, while the Egyptian Army was apparently represented by men leading the horses of the triumphal car, and dressed like "syces" or native grooms. Considering that the Egyptian troops, as all the world knows, have borne the brunt of the Dongola campaign, and have fought well on every occasion, this seems a pitiful way of exalting our own warriors at their expense. It is only in keeping, however, with the usual custom in such matters. An officer reminds me, apropos of the Lord Mayor's Show, how in the Chitral spectacle, at Olympia, all the fighting was represented as being done by white soldiers, while the native army, which really formed the bulk of Colonel Kelly's force, and certainly did all the hard work and fighting, was represented by a few men in puggaries with black faces, who marched in the rear of the procession. This sort of thing seems to me calculated to make us very contemptible in the eyes of foreigners.

FIRE PROTECTION OF COUNTRY HOUSES.—Merryweathers' system. Economy, convenience, efficiency. Illustrated particulars post free.—Write MERRYWEATHERS, 63, Long-acre, London.

Let me warn my lady readers to be careful in these advanced days how they make appointments to interview servants anywhere except in their own houses. A lady friend of mine in Sussex, whose address ought certainly to have been a sufficient guarantee of her respectability, made an appointment to interview a servant in search of a situation in the waiting-room at Brighton Station. Imagine her feelings on receiving the following post-card :—

MADAM,—I write to decline the situation, as I do not aprove (sic) of meeting ladies in waiting-rooms.

M. T.

My friend has taken the rebuke to heart, and will be more careful in future.

The following epistle puzzles me. In what way is the wearing of fur or feathers inconsistent with humanity? Is it inhuman to kill animals in order to use their skins for clothing? If so, we must forswear the use of leather as well as that of fur and feathers, and I must request "the lady who presides over the fashion department" to refrain from describing boots and shoes, not to mention gaiters and travelling bags. Not only this, but if we may not kill animals for their skins, we clearly must not kill them for food, and my "Madge" must forswear beef and mutton as well as fur and feathers. Until I know what it is likely to lead to, I think I had better not interfere with "Madge" :—

DEAR SIR,—Would it not be more consistent with the humanity towards animals expressed in other portions of your paper if you requested the lady who presides over the fashion department to refrain from describing articles of dress trimmed with fur or feathers?

Forgive my abruptness, but it is difficult to combine brevity with civility, and believe me, faithfully yours,

LIZZIE J. CHADWICK.

The Editor of TRUTH.

The Show of Chow Chows and Foreign Dogs, which was such a remarkable success last year, has now become an annual institution, and the next show will be held at the Royal Aquarium on December 8—10. Those desirous of further information can obtain it from the Hon. Secretary, Mr. W. R. Temple, at 66, Carlisle Mansions, S.W.

A movement is on foot to establish a new club a Bournemouth, and judging from what has been heard in times past about the cliquishness and snobbishness that have flourished in the old institution, it would seem that there is plenty of room for the new venture. It is not altogether certain, however, from the prospectus that the new club will exactly supply the want. The promoters describe their undertaking as a "second club for gentlemen," and then go on to specify the following as eligible for membership :—"(1) The clergy, barristers, officers in the Civil Service, officers in the Army, Navy, Militia, and Yeomanry, either on the active or retired list; (2) Private gentlemen resident in Bournemouth or its neighbourhood." Is it to be understood from this that while the clergy and barristers are admitted, other professional men, e.g., doctors and solicitors practising in the town, are to be excluded; and that while the rest of the Services, including even the Yeomanry, are eligible, the line is drawn at Volunteer officers?

How comes it that no annual revenue and expenditure account of the Imperial Institute has ever been published? One of the Fellows has lately been endeavouring to obtain information on this subject. Being able to extract nothing from the officials beyond the meagre financial statements in some of the annual reports, he made inquiries of Messrs. Lovelock, Whiffen, & Dickinson, the accountants to the Institute, who informed him that they have annually audited the books of the Institute and prepared a balance-sheet. What becomes of this balance-sheet after the auditors have prepared and delivered it? There can be no question that it ought to be issued to the subscribers, and the Institute being a public concern I venture to think that it ought also to be published.

I have received a great many letters calling in question my statement that the President of the Royal Academy receives nearly £1,000 per annum. It is by no means easy to find out what he does receive, for everything in connection with the Academy's accounts is kept a dark secret by the Academicians. But it is the general opinion that, one way with another, the late Lord Leighton received from the Academy about £1,500 per annum. I do not know that there has been anywhere published of late years any account either of the invested funds possessed by the Academy, or of its income, which seems to be derived partly from interest on investments, and partly from entrance money to its exhibitions. In 1859 there was a general abstract published of the accounts for that year and the previous ninety-one years. The total amount received during this period was £384,480. 11s. 1d.; the total expenditure, £279, 98[illegible] 11s. 5d.—leaving a balance in favour of the Academy of £104,499. 19s. 8d. Its invested funds then amounted to £122,600. Since then this latter item must have very largely increased.

Last week I published the explanation of the editor of the Leamington Advertiser, that he was away from the office when the remarkable article on the Corporation mace appeared. Anxious that the paper should get full credit for the humour it displays, one of the editor's admirers now favours me with some cuttings from back numbers of the Advertiser, which show that the dissertation on the mace was by no means a first or solitary effort of the same journalistic genius. In particular, a leading article on "The Troubled East," which was published on October 1, is fully up to the high standard of the delicious composition which I quoted the other week. I suppose, therefore, that my friend the editor is not infrequently absent from his post.

If you want to entirely Furnish your House or select any article of Furniture or Carpet, &c., send for HEWETSONS' Illustrated Priced Catalogue.—HEWETSONS, Tottenham Court-road, London.

"HÔTEL BURLINGTON," AT SUNNY BOSCOMBE. (200 rooms) Every luxury. Delightful grounds. Magnificent golf links. Sea-water baths. Moderate charges.—Bournemouth East Station

There was a trial before Mr. Justice Cave last week, which, if correctly reported, shows what is the profit of the shareholders of the Times. Mr. Adams bought 1-14th of 2-3rds of 1-9th of 2-16ths (or $\frac{1}{1512}$) of the Times, from Mr. Brodie, for £353, on the assurance that this minute share was worth about £25 per annum. According to him, after he had purchased the share, he found it only to be worth £17 a year. On this he asked for damages. The jury assessed the damages at £65. Assuming this share to be worth £18 per annum (which seems about the average value), it is clear that the net dividend on all shares is £27,216. Mr. Adams, believing it to be worth £353, paid for it 14·1 years' purchase. The jury valued it at £288, which, taking the annual return at £18, would be sixteen years' purchase, making the Times worth £435,456. This, however, does not quite correctly, I believe, represent value, for Mr. Walter, as printer, derives a large profit on an old contract. This contract, in point of fact, represents what may be called Preference shares, whilst those of the shareholders may be termed Ordinary shares, the value of the Times being the sum-total of both.

By the way, in mentioning the Times last week among the London penny dailies, I was merely guilty of a slip of the pen. The Times is not to be obtained anywhere, as far as I know, at the price of one penny. I take this opportunity of thanking the numerous journalists and private correspondents, whose acuteness has enabled them to detect the error and enlighten me on this point.

M. Rochefort appears to be in error in the statement, which I quoted last week from his Memoirs, that Cornelius Herz has departed to the United States. I hear from good authority at Bournemouth that he is still confined to his room in that town. In justice to the medical men who have at different times reported upon him, it should be added that Dr. Fraser, who has been in attendance upon him throughout, pronounces his condition unchanged, while Dr. Brunton, on a recent visit, found him to be in a critical condition, and forbade him be moved. One of the correspondents who have communicated with me on this subject opines that I will "gladly make this correction." But why I should experience pleasure in recording Mr. Herz's distressing condition I do not know. I have no admiration for the man, but if he had sufficiently recovered to travel to America, I should not have been sorry.

A new scheme for encouraging "games" has just been adopted at St. Paul's School, which might be well worth imitation in other large day schools. The school has been divided into five sections, each of which has one half holiday a week to be devoted exclusively to games. The games, whatever they may be, are, I believe, compulsory, a call-over being held at the conclusion of the play. One of the great disadvantages of day schools is the difficulty of getting boys to play cricket, football, &c., systematically. The St. Paul's School system will, no doubt, overcome this difficulty effectually, and it cannot fail to add to the prosperity and reputation of the school.

In regard to a suggestion my sporting contributor made a few weeks ago, that St. Paul's School ought to take up rowing systematically, I hear that the school authorities are most favourable to the idea, and that the only difficulty in the way is one of £. s. d., considerable capital being required to start a boat club. Probably, if the fact is once made known that there is a large contingent of modern Paulines yearning to convert themselves into "wet bobs," there will be plenty of old Paulines and others ready to contribute towards the founding of a boat club. But it would probably do much to encourage benevolence in this direction if the boys now in the school gave some practical evidence of their aquatic tastes. It is easy enough to hire boats on half-holidays, and I cannot help thinking that if there were any rowing talent in the school, it would not wait to show itself until a boat-house had been built, and an expensive stock of rowing craft laid in.

In spite of the curious facts referred to in last week's TRUTH, Lord Huntly has been re-elected Lord Rector of Aberdeen University. A correspondent on the spot suggests that the consideration which probably weighed most with the electors was that if his lordship were ejected now, the last hope of getting the £600 which he promised five years ago would be destroyed. In view of the appearance of Isaac Gordon on the scene, it would seem that the hope must be at the best but an exiguous one; but Lord Huntly has a wealthy relative, and probably so long as the promised subscription comes, the canny Aberdeen electors do not mind whose pocket it comes from.

A curious story used to be current at the Education Office with reference to the circumstances under which Dr. Temple first entered the Church. The Archbishop-designate began life as an examiner in the office of the Committee of Council on Education, about the time when Kneller Hall was originally started as a training-school for masters of workhouse schools. A clergyman of the Church of England was required for the post of principal, and it was commonly believed by his contemporaries that young Mr. Temple was induced to take Orders quite against his own inclination, to increase his qualifications for this appointment, which in due course he obtained. Certain it is that the future Archbishop became a deacon in the same year in which the training school was founded by a minute of the Committee, and he had duly proceeded to priest's orders by the time the school was opened. The appointment was worth £800 a year and a house. When the school was closed, Mr. Temple went back to the Education Department as an inspector of schools.

WATER SUPPLY FOR MANSIONS, &c.—Artesian Bored and Driven Tube Wells, Wind Engines for pumping, &c.—State your requirements to ALFRED WILLIAMS & Co., 39, Gt. Eastern-st., London, E.C.

Here is another story about the Archbishop-designate, related by one who was a witness of the incident. With regard, however, to the remark in the first sentence, it is only fair to recognise that Dr. Temple may well have changed his opinion on this point, as he has upon others :—

What will devout Churchmen think of an Archbishop who does not believe in the devil, for this is Dr. Temple's position, unless he has changed his mind since he came to London? On one occasion, when Bishop of Exeter, he was holding a confirmation at St. Andrew's, Plymouth, at which service the young people promise among other things to renounce the devil and all his works. The devil, Dr. Temple was careful to explain in his rasping voice, meant evil things, which hardly tallies with his predecessor, St. Dunstan's, experience. And so we arrive at the latest conundrum for the clergy:—What is the difference between St. Dunstan of Canterbury and the Archbishop-designate? The one disposed of the devil with his tongue, and the other with his tongs.

Apropos of the remarks in last week's TRUTH upon the probable attitude of Dr. Temple towards the question of the retirement of aged parish clergymen, "A Country Parson" sends me the following lines :—

"You are old, Dr. Temple," the Editor said,
"And a Benefice Bill is in sight,
Yet they made you our Archiepiscopal head—
Do you think at your age it was right?"

"Inferior clergy," the Bishop replied,
"Must retire when their faculties wane;
But a Bishop, no matter how aged, may claim Promotion, again and again!"

Dr. Temple and the new Bishop of London will do homage to the Queen at Osborne early in January, and they will be enthroned directly afterwards, the Primate in Canterbury Cathedral, and Bishop Creighton in St. Paul's Cathedral, where the Bishop-designate of Peterborough is to be consecrated on St. Paul's Day, Monday, January 25.

I am greatly amused at a paragraph in the Liverpool Courier. It states that the brewers' organisations are "perfectly quiescent" over the appointment of Dr. Temple to the Archbishopric of Canterbury, because "they feel the fullest confidence in the Primate's predominating common sense." "The great brewers," it continues, "are by no means alarmed by the appointment." This is very gratifying. The next thing will be a proposal to add an additional Article to the thirty-nine Articles to which all clergymen of the Established Church have to swear, setting forth the belief of the Church in the virtues of brewers, and in their right to make huge profits by the sale of beer.

In connection with the recent appointment of juvenile vicars at All Saints', Hatcham Park, and St. James's, Hatcham, my attention has been called to the presentation about a year ago of the Rev. F. A. Pring to the living of St. Luke's, Deptford. At the time of obtaining his preferment this gentleman had only been a few months in priests' orders. The parish of which he was put in charge contains a population of about 13,000, and the result of this and the other appointments is that three adjacent parishes in South London, a district in which the work of the Church is peculiarly heavy and difficult, have been entrusted to the care of three priests, all of whom have held their orders less than three years. One who is well qualified to speak on the subject, from the point of view of the interests of the Church, describes the state of affairs thus created as "heart-breaking."

It is a noteworthy fact that all these three appointments have been made by trustees, and this fact accentuates the notorious truth, that Church patronage is even less safe in the hands of a body of trustees than in those of an individual private patron. The latter may possibly be to some extent amenable to his own conscience and to public opinion; but a body of trustees have no corporate conscience, and apparently no individual regard for any opinion that may be formed of their corporate acts. The question, indeed, of patronage must always be a hard nut for Church reformers. The Bishops, like trustees and corporations, have shown their unfitness to exercise patronage, by habitual and bare-faced jobbery. The principle of election by the parishioners has been discredited by innumerable scandals. Probably the only satisfactory way to overcome the difficulty would be to appoint in each diocese a standing patronage board, which should be largely reinforced for the purpose of each election by the churchwardens and other official representatives of the parish concerned.

A telephone has been placed in the pulpit of St Michael's, Chester-square, in order that Canon Fleming's sermons may be heard by inmates of the hospital, and by subscribers who are unable to come to church. Canon Fleming has just resumed his duties at St Michael's, having returned to town after his annual three months' residence at York.

While the Bishop of Worcester warmly supports the preposterous scheme for endowing a bishopric at Birmingham, which would relieve him of the heaviest portion of his diocesan labours, he does not hesitate to ruthlessly upset a modest proposal for the advantage of a poor country incumbent. It seems, from a statement in the Birmingham Gazette, that a movement was on foot for building a house and otherwise improving the position of the Rector of North Piddle, his income being only £90 a year, without a residence. When about £900 had been promised for this purpose, the Bishop took it into his head that the benefice had better be united with that of Upton Snodsbury, a parish two or three miles away. Both incumbents objected to this proposal, and so did the parishioners of North Piddle, but the Bishop insisted upon having his own way, and obtained an Order in Council uniting the two benefices.

Last April the Rector of North Piddle accepted another ving, and under the Order the union of the parish with pton Snodsbury should then have taken effect. But e Vicar of Upton Snodsbury refuses—as he always said would do—to recognise the arrangement, neither ceiving the stipend from North Piddle, nor accepting y responsibility for the spiritual welfare of that parish. he consequence is that for months past North Piddle s been disgracefully neglected, two Sundays in October d the first two in November passing without any rvice whatever at the parish church. For this scandal e Bishop is clearly to blame. Even if the amalgamaon of the two livings is desirable, it could very well ve been postponed for a time; and his lordship's highnded and pig-headed action in forcing the matter rough at once, in the teeth of the opposition of the two rsons and the parishioners, is wholly inexcusable.

How these Christian ministers love one another! ere was a very pretty example of this at the meeting the Cockett School Board at Swansea last week, when e Rev. John Davies (Cadle), a Nonconformist minister, d the Rev. D. Roderick, Vicar of Cockett, railed at ch other for all the world like a couple of angry old sherwomen. "Blackguard" and "big liar" were ong the choice remarks that Davies addressed to derick, while the latter mainly contented himself th taunting references to "the Cadle divine," is being, for some reason, a most exasperating rm to apply to Davies. At one point the two verend gentlemen appeared likely to get from words blows; but, instead of engaging in a bout of ticuffs, they seem to have proceeded to give each other rd knocks in their native Welsh, though owing to the porter's unfortunate ignorance of the vernacular, the ecise form of their exchanges of civilities through this edium could not be recorded. It is stated, however, at "tarw" and "asyn," which mean respectively bull" and "ass," were among the words which Davies ployed towards Roderick; and I dare say the Welsh guage was perfectly adequate to the occasion. The ifying effect which this display of clerical clapperwing must have upon the local public, and especially on the young people whose education is entrusted to e Cockett School Board, goes without saying.

An edifying story of religious intolerance is sent me by gentlemen who has been staying at Dunmore East, a all watering-place on the Waterford coast. It seems at during a severe gale last month three fishing-boats re destroyed, two belonging to Protestants and the ird to a Roman Catholic. All three fishermen were dered destitute by the loss, and a subscription was sed for their relief. The distribution of the money s entrusted to the Vicar and the curate; and ing without the faintest sense of Christian charity, e two ministers calmly proceeded to divide the whole ount between the two Protestant fishermen, leaving not a penny for the Roman Catholic sufferer. Comment upon the conduct of these reverend bigots is needless; but it is satisfactory to add that a Protestant lady took the lead in getting up another subscription on behalf of the unfortunate Roman Catholic fisherman.

A Roman Catholic priest, writing from the provinces complains of the conduct of an individual at Westminster Abbey, alleged to be a plain-clothes constable. The priest, when going round the chapels with a friend, unattended, was followed by the constable, told that he had better have a guide, and, finally, was refused permission to enter one of the chapels, the constable planting himself before the entrance, and ordering the visitor to join a party that was going round under the guidance of a verger. It seems pretty evident that this functionary must have exceeded his duty, and he ought to receive a hint to that effect. The reason for having a plain-clothes man on duty, I take it to be that the public are free to walk about by themselves (when they have paid their sixpences), and that it is necessary to have some one to see that this freedom is not abused. If people are only to go round in a "school" under the command of a verger, there is no occasion to have a constable there at all.

There is, to my mind, something specially obnoxious in training children to cadge for money, however laudable the object. Just at present the portraits of C. E. Perry (aged 14), A. P. Perry (aged 13), and E. J. Perry (aged 10) are being scattered all over the kingdom at the head of an appeal beginning, "We three Lynn boys have made up our minds to try hard to get 10,000 ladies and gentlemen to send us 10,000 shillings to pay off the debt upon the Lynn Young Men's Christian Association." Trying hard they certainly are, for if the lady or gentleman appealed to does not respond with a shilling, at the end of a fortnight the "three Lynn boys" follow up their picture with a printed postcard, reiterating their request. Now, it must be perfectly obvious that the three children are not the real authors of these appeals. They are simply the stalking-horses of some sturdy beggar in the background, who has devised this novel and striking form of advertising the needs of the charity. How does the trick differ from that of the mendicant parent who, instead of begging himself, sends out his child, barefooted and dirty, to work on the feelings of the tender-hearted?

Many months ago reference was made in TRUTH to a "snowball" which was vaguely stated to be designed to benefit the "Children's Penny Dinners," the lady to whom the money was to be sent being a Miss Effie Joseph. The history of this snowball furnishes a remarkable instance of the folly of this method of collecting money. Before the thing had gone very far, the promoters saw their mistake, and endeavoured to stop it. For that purpose I gave them the best assistance I could in TRUTH, but the snowball has gone on rolling, as snowballs invariably do, and I have just come across a fresh letter written in connection with it by Miss Davey, of Lynton, Devon. Miss Davey's letter is numbered "No. 36," but I should have thought that, from the time that the ball has been rolling, it ought to have got far beyond that point before now.

Epps's Cocoa is always found grateful and comforting both for akfast, supper, and luncheon. It is sold in packets & 1-lb. tins, d labelled "James Epps & Co., Ltd," Homœopathic Chemists.

A praiseworthy attempt on the part of some of the Executive of the Hospital Saturday Fund to do away with street collecting in connection with that charity, has unfortunately been frustrated. A meeting of delegates from the various committees was recently held to consider the question, and although it was pointed out that these collections had never fulfilled expectations, whilst they unquestionably lowered the tone of the movement, a motion for their discontinuance was eventually lost. The opponents of this sensible suggestion appeared to consider that the tone of the street collection would be at once raised if the collectors were, "as far as possible, to adopt the dress of hospital nurses," and wear on their sleeves a red cross of the ambulance description. I have so frequently expressed an opinion that all street collecting should be forbidden, in the first place as contrary to the law, and, secondly, as entirely opposed to the best interests of charity, that I can only regret the adverse decision in the present instance.

Commenting on the recent appointments of Mr. Alderman Wethered, of Cheltenham, and Mr. Philip Bagenal, Mr. Chaplin's private secretary, to Local Government Board Inspectorships, a professional paper remarks :—

> It does not seem that acquaintance with Poor Law administration, or special aptitude for Poor Law management, has been considered in the past any qualification for these particular duties. The Inspectors are chosen as educated and intelligent men, and, after a few years' practice, they become conversant with their duties, and, as a rule, perform them very well.

What a pretty theory of public appointments! In place of promoting men in the service thoroughly familiar with the work, you job in "educated and intelligent men" from outside, and congratulate yourself and the public if, "after a few years' practice, they become conversant with their duties," and, "as a rule, perform them very well!" As to what it costs the public to pay for the educational process, and how the duties are performed while the officials are engaged in learning them, you observe a discreet silence.

It is not, however, true, as the same journal suggests, that the system of jobbing outsiders into these berths is the traditional one. In 1895 Mr. Shaw-Lefevre, as President of the Local Government Board, said in Parliament :—

> During the last twenty years the officers appointed have almost without exception held office as assistant inspectors, and have thus obtained experience in the inspection of workhouses and the other duties which devolve on an inspector.

Mr. Chaplin's system, therefore, of selecting "educated and intelligent men," totally ignorant of the work (e.g., his own private secretary), is a departure from the general practice of the last twenty years.

The smoking-concert at Queen's Hall to-morrow (Thursday) evening in commemoration of the twenty-fifth anniversary of the Royal Amateur Orchestral Society will be an unusual brilliant entertainment. The Prince of Wales and the Duke of Coburg have promised to attend, and among other guests will be the Duke of Cambridge, Prince Edward of Saxe-Weimar, the Speaker, the Lord Mayor, and innumerable other notabilities.

As winter is coming on I venture to call the attention of my lady readers once again to the Westminster Needlework Society, which meets every week within a stone's throw of TRUTH Office at the Westminster Town Hall, and eventually distributes the products of its industry in the shape of gifts of clothing among the destitute poor of Westminster. Both subscribers and workers are urgently needed to extend the operations of the Society, and those of my readers who cannot help in the one way may possibly be able to in the other. Mrs. Langston, of 65, Warwick-square, S.W., the President of the Society, will gladly give any further information that may be desired.

I am asked to mention that a sale of needlework, in aid of the fund for building an annexe to the Cheyne Hospital for Sick and Incurable Children, will be held at the hospital in Cheyne-walk on Wednesday and Thursday in next week. The extension of this hospital has peculiar claims on the benevolent, as it was primarily undertaken for the purpose of affording to the nurses who have been on night duty bedrooms where they can sleep during the day.

One of the institutions in London that spends the money confided to it with most advantage to those concerned is Nazareth House at Hammersmith. There are six hundred poor persons in the home (old men and women, unable from age to work, and orphans and other children, who for one reason or another are cast upon the world). All these are absolutely dependent upon what the charitable give, and I am asked to urge that the Home should not be forgotten at Christmas.

The following amounts have reached me towards the Toy Fund for providing toys at Christmas to the poor and sickly children in the London Hospitals, Workhouses, Workhouse Schools, and Infirmaries: — A. E., £1; Dorothy, Petronel, and Patricia, £3. 3s.; Admiral, 10s.; Marie Corelli, £5. 5s.; Gwendoline W., £1. 1s., also £1. 1s. to Lady Jeune's Fund; Norwood, 10s.; Mrs. R. J. Neild, £1. 1s.; V. Whyte, 2s.; Sir Henry Hawkins, £3. 3s.; E. Wigram, 5s.; Sir Horace Farquhar, £3. 3s.; J. W. T., £5; Sir George Lewis, £5; Lady Lewis, £5; Mrs. Waugh, £2. 2s.

I have also received from the collections taken on board the steam yacht Midnight Sun £5 towards Lady Jeune's Fund.

SCOTT ADIE, 115, Regent-street, London, for Shooting Gowns, Cawdor Capes, Travelling Ulsters, Jackets, Racing Coats, Carriage Rugs, Mauds, Shawls, and Scotch Tweeds. Patterns post free.

RIVIERA.—Magnificent Building Sites at Beaulieu, facing the sea, to be Sold.—Apply, TERSLING, Mentone; KURZ, Agent, Beaulieu; SHERRY, Raymond-buildings, W.C.

Lord Lansdowne is the Secretary for War, and he is ıpposed to be under the Duke of Devonshire, who has ndertaken to keep his eye on the Army and Navy 'epartments. But, in reality, it is said that Lord ansdowne is but another name for Lord Wolseley, the ommander-in-Chief. Be the respective relations between ıese three gentlemen what they may, however, the out-ɔme is that more money is to be asked for the Army next ession, if the War Office has its way, and against this ir Michael Hicks-Beach has already registered a protest. he argument urged at Bristol for this further expendi-ıre is that additional money has been given lavishly to ıe Navy, and that consequently it is full time that the rmy should have its share in the golden shower. I ıould have said rather that if we have a superlatively rong Navy, this is a reason for being satisfied with the rmy as it is. The House of Commons is gradually being duced to that tax-collecting machine that the Germans ɔmplain that their Reichstag has become. There the mperor carries his edicts for additional expenditure; ere it is the House of Lords. Lord Beaconsfield pro-aimed that the heads of the two great spending Depart-ents—the Army and the Navy—should be in the ouse of Commons. Now the Army is entirely nder the control of the House of Lords, and so ng as this is the case the House of Commons should ıpport the Chancellor of the Exchequer in declining to ɔte more funds for its increase. Speaking broadly, the ısiness of a Commander-in-Chief is always to ask for ore money; that of the War Secretary always to refuse ; and that of the House of Commons always to support im in this refusal.

Apropos of the appointment of Sir Ralph Knox's son the Army Service Corps, a military correspondent nds me the following letter:—

DEAR TRUTH,—The officers of the Army Service Corps have ɔod reasons, as you say, to resent the appointment of Mr. nox to a commission in their branch of the Service. Taking is fact in cognisance with the War Office decision in the cases Messrs. Hodge and Bruce, what steps would the A.S.C., in ɔur opinion, be justified in taking, in order to get rid of young r. Knox? Do you think that we ought to at once ask him to nner, and inform him that he is not wanted in the Army ervice Corps, and that he had better make a graceful exit ɔw, instead of a disgraceful one later on? Or should e allow him to join without protest, and then take the rliest opportunity of breaking open his rooms, making bonfire of his clothes and furniture, and then putting m through a horse-trough in his night clothes? How many mes do you think he should be put in the horse-trough in order insure his prompt departure from the Corps without making necessary for the War Office to interfere? We remember, of urse, Lord Wolseley's declaration to Mr. Hodge père that he determined to put down bullying with a strong hand, and course we should not like to do anything which could be con-rued by the War Office as bullying.

his is a rather delicate point, on which I do not like express too confident an opinion. There seems to be doubt upon the decided cases that the treatment ıggested could be carried out without any fear of ıpleasant consequences, but I do hope that the Army ervice Corps will not think it necessary to put Mr. Knox to a horse-trough. It is true that his brother officers ıve the best possible grounds for objecting to Mr. Knox's appointment, the War Office itself having several times found him to be unfitted for a commission in the Army. But I trust that the desired result may be obtained without resorting to horse-troughs.

Another spasm of disgust has been caused in military circles by the announcement that Colonel Dundas, at present A.A.G. in Dublin, is to be transferred to Gibraltar as A.A.G. on the expiration of his Dublin appointment. The announcement is made with all appearance of authority, but it points to a job so atrocious as to be almost incredible. Reference to the "Army List" shows that with the exception of two brief periods, in all only about two years and a half, Colonel Dundas has held one staff appointment after another continuously from 1874 down to the present time. As if this were not a sufficient share of the plums of the Service, he is to be rewarded with a further period of Staff Service at Gibraltar, regardless of the claims of officers who have long since earned a reward of this kind. Though very possibly he has performed the office and routine work in connection with his different appointments with all credit, Colonel Dundas has never achieved distinction of any kind, and his sole claim to the appointment now to be conferred upon him is the personal friendship of the Commander-in-Chief. If Lord Wolseley goes on like this, he will soon beat all existing records in Service jobbery.

A case which occurred some little time back in India illustrates very forcibly the danger of placing the professional reputation of one officer at the mercy of the opinion of another, as is done in the confidential report system. As most of my military readers are aware, the C.O. of an Indian Cavalry Regiment is somewhat in the position of a contractor under Government for the mounting, equipment, &c., of his men, and by reason of this system, considerable differences of detail exist in the arrangements relating to the internal economy of different regiments. Some time back Brigadier-General H——, after inspecting a regiment of Bombay Cavalry, and reporting favourably on its general condition, found fault in his report with the system of accounts, purchase of remounts, feeding, equipment, and other matters, and also expressed an opinion that the C.O., Colonel S——, was not suited for further military employment, unless on remount duty. Colonel S—— argued the various points. The Brigadier-General had, among other things, recommended the adoption of a system of accounts in force in another cavalry regiment. The Colonel, anxious to oblige, made inquiries respecting this particular regiment, and found that its finances were in a very unsatisfactory state, whereas his own were in excellent order. He requested the Brigadier-General to forward the whole correspondence to head-quarters, whereupon the General, apparently conscious that he had made a mistake, suggested that the correspondence should drop, and offered, if this were done, to recommend the Colonel for an extension of his command.

Every requirement for Furnishing tastefully at least expense amply illustrated in the Galleries and Catalogues of AMPTON & SONS, Furnishers & Decorators, Pall Mall East, S.W.

There can be little doubt that in this case the one officer made his unfavourable report on the other, simply because he failed to appreciate a system that was new to him, and of which he knew absolutely nothing, and his report seems to have been a mere expression of a hasty personal opinion, which he himself saw was unjustifiable when he came to argue the matter out. In this particular instance the Colonel thus reported on was disqualified by the age rule for an extension of his command, but the unfavourable report might have been, and, I believe, has been, sufficient to prevent him obtaining further military employment. There are dozens of men in the Service who have been far more seriously injured by such reports, and all on account of mere personal fads or prejudices.

London publicans are not alone in their refusal to serve soldiers in uniform. Several flagrant cases have occurred at Glasgow, where a St. George's Cross publican—the newspapers seem chary of publishing his name—refused in one evening the pipe-major, two corporals, and a sergeant-major of the Argyll and Sutherland Highlanders and a private of the Medical Staff Corps, all of whom are stated to have been perfectly sober. The sergeant-major, incensed at being refused, took care to procure evidence on the spot that he was perfectly sober, and then reported the occurrence to the Commanding-Officer at Maryhill Barracks. The following morning a garrison order proclaimed the public-house in question "out of bounds," that is, the Argyll and Sutherland Highlanders are prohibited from visiting it; a somewhat unnecessary proceeding in the case of a publican who has let it become known that he does not want soldiers in his house. It is said that he has even refused to serve Volunteers. The Adjutant of the regiment intends to lay the facts before the Town Council, but that body is powerless to deal with the licence as long as the house is maintained in an orderly manner. The only reason which the publican has so far vouchsafed is that on one occasion some men belonging to the regiment raised a disturbance in his bar.

I have received a number of letters from N.C. Officers of the "foot" Artillery who are prepared to measure their waists against "R.H.A.," or any other wearer of the yellow jacket, and prove their claim to smaller girth-dimensions from the size rolls in Mr. Fleetwood Wilson's office. Passing, however, from this weighty side issue to the main complaint of "R.H.A." regarding the share of warrants and commissions which would fall to the mounted branch of the Artillery in case of reorganisation, if I am to judge by the following extract from a letter from Gosport, he and his mounted friends have more than their share at present:—

> A little calculation shows that the mounted men have one warrant to every two staff-sergeants, and two commissions to every five, and the dismounted men have one warrant to five staff-sergeants, and one commission to every six. Can it be wondered that the N.C. officers of the mounted branches dislike the idea of separation?

The same correspondent continues as follows:—

> I have served for over twenty-one years in Field, Mountain, and Garrison (ten years in the latter), and, speaking from a personal experience, which I doubt "R.H.A." possesses, I can say that, although the gunners in the mounted branches may, as a rule, be smarter-looking than their confreres of the "foot," the N.C. officers of the latter are quite equal to any horse artilleryman in appearance (always remembering that "fine feathers make fine birds"), and, on an average, far above him in education and intellectual capacity.
>
> As regards the easy times his brothers in the garrison artillery have, I would invite "R.H.A." to visit them in Dover, Portsmouth, or Plymouth and try and learn something of the garrison artillery manual, or if he is too hard worked by day let him study in the evenings the history of the Royal Regiment; he will find that the "foot" artilleryman has done well whatever work has been required of him, in all parts of the globe, even to manning horse, field, and mountain batteries, and has never failed, and it is to him chiefly that the honour is due of having earned for the regiment the motto "Ubique."

Quite so, but this hardly justifies my correspondent's plea in another part of his letter for what he calls "separation," seeing that "foot" artillerymen have always distinguished themselves when employed as mounted men in the field. My knowledge of a technical question of this kind is limited, but after spending fifty millions on ships I shall be very much surprised if the gallant garrison of Gosport are ever called upon to fire a shot.

Looking for the moment beyond the rival claims of N.C. Officers to commissions, as I understand the matter, the War Office propose to lock up thousands of highly-trained men in useless forts on shore, when we have not enough men to man the ships already built. Surely the science and ability which my correspondents affirm they possess would be better utilised afloat, or at any rate in the field, than wasted in casemates on land. I was glad to see Sir Michael Hicks-Beach rounding on Lord Lansdowne at the Dolphin Society dinner last week, and insisting on the primacy of the Navy in Imperial defence:—

> With the Navy in times past we have swept the seas, and when the seas were swept we were safe at home. This should be our policy in the future, and circumstances would compel future Governments to continue the same policy. I must say, speaking as a humble civilian, that there seem to be ways and means of increased efficiency and increased economy in our Army expenditure, and that view I commend to my right hon. colleague.

Though my limited space prevents the publication of all letters from N.C. officers, I am very glad to receive them as expressing their views on this or any other question.

Readers of Truth, especially those connected with the Army, may possibly have received during the last year or two piteous appeals from an individual representing himself as having served in the Crimea and elsewhere, taken his discharge after twenty-one years' service, and being now in the last stage of distress through illness. The appeals have been usually signed "Thomas Clark," and give particulars of the writer's regiment and the names of officers he served under, though these details may possibly have been varied in different cases for the benefit of the particular officer to whom the letter is written. The peculiarity about these appeals is that they purport

---

Winter Season, 1896.—How can last year's Sealskin Jacket be made to do duty as a fashionable garment for the present season? Take it to the International Fur Store, either 163 or 198, Regent-street, where special attention is given to remodelling these most useful garments. Perfect fit, great attention, and moderate charges may be relied upon. The only addresses of the International Fur Store (Jay's, Ltd.) are 163 and 198, Regent-street, London, W.

to be authenticated by a testimonial signed "J. C. Lawrence," written on paper bearing the printed address "75, Fetter-lane, Fleet-street, E.C.," and deposing to the virtues of "Clark," whom "Lawrence" states that he has employed for five years.

The true character of these appeals will soon be publicly demonstrated, for I am glad to say that the gang who have been working it are now in the hands of the police. The address, 75, Fetter-lane, is a mere "accommodation" address, where letters are taken in, and the fact of the operators going to the expense of having stationery printed with such an address shows the systematic way in which they have been working the trick. As it is certain that many people have been imposed upon by the veteran "Clark" and his kind friend "Lawrence," it is much to be desired that any who have received letters from these worthies (whether they have answered them or not) should at once communicate with the City Commissioner of Police, Old Jewry, E.C. Incidentally, I would remark that the case illustrates afresh the need of giving the police some control over the "accommodation address" business.

A gunner in the Royal Artillery at Chatham was recently sentenced to five days' C.B. for a trifling offence, and at the same time was sent out to a fort in the Medway, with instructions that he was to be allowed no privileges of any kind, and to be employed on no work at which he would receive extra duty pay. It is generally understood that this punishment has been imposed on the suspicion that the gunner supplied information to TRUTH respecting the messing of the detachment, which was noticed in these columns some two months ago. If that is the real motive, a more outrageous piece of injustice has rarely been committed. The gunner in question has eight years' service, and at the time of his being brought up for the minor offence above mentioned (that of being a few hours absent without leave) he had actually been for six years clear of an entry in his defaulter sheet. It is pretty evident, therefore, that this man has been subjected to a vindictive persecution from some motive quite apart from the only offence of which he has been proved guilty, and there ought to be some further inquiry into his case.

I was once severely rebuked by a Service journal for passing a wholesale criticism on the arrangements for military funerals in India. But reports still come to hand from various parts of India of cases in which these arrangements are deplorably defective. On the occasion of a funeral at Rangoon of an Artilleryman, who had lost his life by an accident, matters were so contrived that the funeral party, including the band, arrived on the scene some time before the grave-digger, and had to stand for over an hour while the grave was being dug. As the band had been in attendance an hour before the procession started, they were dismissed by the time the grave was completed, and took no further part in the proceedings. Surely it would not be a difficult matter to arrange things better than this.

For the hundredth time I would ask whether anything could be done to redress the grievance which has been created by allowing second-class passages to Army schoolmasters when on board ship. As soon as ever the trooping season comes round I begin to hear growls from other N.C.O.s of corresponding rank against this indulgence being granted to schoolmasters and refused to other men in Class 16. There are, I know, some very strong reasons in favour of keeping sergeants with their men on board ship, but these reasons do not apply to every N.C.O. travelling by sea, and there are many cases in which the indulgence granted to schoolmasters might be extended to others of the same class without harm to anybody.

It is satisfactory to know that the exposure in TRUTH of the horrors of the Invalid Trooping Service has not been altogether unfruitful. The Indian Military Authorities have just issued two orders, which are obviously attributable to the TRUTH articles. The first requires that in future extra accommodation shall be provided for invalids on the troopships, by allowing to seven sick the space which would be allotted to nine healthy men. The second orders that, "owing to certain allegations," officers in command of troops on board transports are to report upon the accommodation for the sick on their ships. It would also appear from the first of these orders that the number of invalids in any given ship is in future to be limited. All this is satisfactory as far as it goes, because it indicates that even the Indian Government is to some extent amenable to criticism; but it is little more than tinkering at a system, which, in my opinion, requires root-and-branch reform. After what has appeared in TRUTH respecting the difficulties of providing proper accommodation and diet for invalids on board ordinary troopships, there can be no question that the only satisfactory solution of the difficulty is the construction of hospital ships for the express purpose of the Trooping Service. An impoverished and famine-stricken country like India cannot be expected to undertake this expense, and I suggest that it is the duty of the Admiralty and the War Office to provide the requisite accommodation.

By the way, I would respectfully suggest to officers who report under the above orders upon the accommodation provided for the sick on each voyage, that they should furnish (of course, confidentially) a copy of their reports to the Editor of TRUTH. This will do more than anything else to insure their observations receiving proper attention at the military headquarters.

An envelope sent to me from India tells a curious tale of Post Office blundering. It was posted at Calcutta, addressed legibly enough to a gentleman on board the "Pilot Vessel Fanny, Sandheads," Sandheads being at the mouth of the river, and as well known in Calcutta as the Nore is in London. The postmarks show that the letter made its way in the first instance to Cowes—some intelligent Post Office man apparently thinking that Cowes was the most likely place in the world to find a pilot cutter. From Cowes it was sent to Stranraer, whence it found its way to a place called Sandhead—a better shot than the last, but still many thousand miles out. The letter then went on to Larne, and from Larne to Belfast, where the postal authorities gave the job up in despair, and sent it back to the dead-letter office in Bombay, whence it was returned to Calcutta. The entire journey lasted from March 3 to August 7.

The luxury of a bath is incomplete without the addition of SCRUBB'S CLOUDY HOUSEHOLD AMMONIA, which refreshes and exhilarates.

Cannot the high contracting powers who belong to the Postal Union agree amongst themselves to dispense with the words "Post Card" upon private cards sent abroad? At present the regulations require that private cards should have these words above the address, and cards not bearing them are liable to be charged as letters, and possibly returned. If all the countries of the Postal Union are agreed as to the size and shape of private cards, there seems no reason why any card which can be used in one country should not be available for international purposes.

The last few weeks' experience of those who have been compelled to reside in the West End of London must have proved in the most conclusive manner the urgent necessity which exists for constructing subways—at least under the leading thoroughfares of the metropolis. No sooner has a street been re-laid with wooden blocks on a good solid concrete foundation than a trench is forthwith opened in it for gas-pipes, electric wires, or hydraulic tubes, and so sure as the footways have been newly asphalted, so certain is it that the level surface will be immediately broken up for similar reasons. The construction of subways was one of the first London improvements which occupied the attention of the London County Council, but in this, as in other cases, definite action was delayed, partly by the party which is ever on the watch to resist any extension of the activity of the Council, and partly by fear of the outcry which immediately follows on every addition to municipal expenditure. If, however, the various Companies owning underground works could be made to bear their proper share of the cost, the construction of subways might be made a remunerative outlay rather than an addition to the ratepayers' burdens.

Surely the pertinacious harassing of the inhabitants of Portsmouth by the Government is not a punishment for their presumption in returning two Liberals to the House of Commons, both last year and in 1892! The military authorities appear to spend a considerable part of their time in devising schemes to worry the inhabitants and injure the town. It was actually proposed to destroy Southsea Pier, and considerable closed areas were to be established, but, luckily, the Board of Trade have refused to sanction the obnoxious by-laws. What will be the next project to alarm Portsmouth?

There is generally a good deal of the obscurantist about Bumble, but at Falmouth he seems to be rather more benighted than usual. A Commissioner in Lunacy, Mr. Frere, recently inspected the local workhouse, and directed attention to various shortcomings in the treatment and accommodation of the imbeciles, one fact which he mentioned being that the window in the women's sewing-room is so high that the inmates cannot see out of it. The cruelty of penning these poor old creatures in a dreary den with no outlook will be apparent to anybody of average intelligence and sympathy, and it is only fair to say that some of the Guardians concurred in the Commissioner's condemnation of the arrangement. But the majority of the Board, in their wisdom and humanity, came to the conclusion that an alteration of the arrangement was "not desirable," as they feared that if the women could look beyond the walls of their work-room they would "waste their time!" To try to reason with these beetle-headed persons would indeed be a waste of time. I am surprised, though, at their lack of fellow-feeling for the imbeciles, and I fancy their ideas would undergo a change if they were compelled to pass a few days in such a room as these afflicted women occupy.

The Bridgend Guardians have had under investigation the case of an unfortunate girl named Williams, who, though she was in a delicate state of health, was allowed to leave the workhouse and tramp to Cardiff, where she died a few days afterwards. Before her death Williams made a statement to the effect that the matron at Bridgend told her that that was not her parish, and that she was to take her clothes and make her way to Cardiff. Although the matron denied this, she admitted that she informed the deceased she must "either do her work or get her clothes and go out." It was suggested that the deceased was insubordinate; but if she was, the matron's was not a proper method of dealing with her, and it is pretty clear from this officer's own version of what occurred that Williams was not treated with the sympathy which should have been shown to a girl in her condition. In the sacred cause of "discipline," however, the Chairman exhorted the Guardians to exonerate the officers of the workhouse from all blame, and a majority of the Board proceeded to do so. There seems to be an idea at this Board that under no circumstances should any reflection be cast upon the management of the workhouse, and only a short time ago the Chairman succeeded in hushing up a disgraceful scandal in connection with the sick wards.

Yet another ugly Poor-law story comes from Ireland. Bridget Reid was a patient in the infirmary at Edenderry Workhouse, and the Medical Officer directed that she should not do any work beyond helping to keep the ward clean. The Master, however, insisted upon giving her other work, and, on her refusing to do it, she was prosecuted at Edenderry Petty Sessions for refractory conduct. The doctor certified that she was not fit to attend the court, but nevertheless, in her absence, the magistrates condemned her to two months' hard labour, nd the police removed her from the infirmary to the rison at Tullamore, where she is now serving the sentence. A more infamous example, both of Bumble's inhumanity nd Justices' justice, has rarely occurred, and I trust it vill receive the prompt and serious attention of the Local Government Board at Dublin.

After the enthusiasm about the Emperor of Russia's visit to Scotland has quite passed away, there comes the mauvais quart d'heure de Rabelais, when the bills have to be dealt with. At Leith there is much discontent at the arge outlay which the ratepayers have to defray. There s particular grumbling at an item of £33 for "new official robes supplied to the Provost."

Four cases of diptheria, three ending fatally, have ately occurred at Branston, near Lincoln, under circumtances which point to the conclusion that the outbreak vas due to some infected clothing having been brought to he village from a house at Lincoln where two children had died of the disease. The medical officer reported hat there was "some suspicion" as to this being the ause of the cases at Branston, but that the sanitary officials at Lincoln stated that the house there was twice disinfected and that "whatever clothing was taken was wice washed before being sent to Branston." In view, however, of the strong primâ facie evidence that this lothing was not disinfected, and that, in consequence, hree lives have now been lost, the matter ought not to be allowed to drop with this official explanation. If the hings were removed without being thoroughly disnfected, somebody must have acted with culpable and almost criminal negligence or recklessness, and the uthorities responsible for safeguarding the public health gainst such dangers should make it their business to find out the guilty party.

In the Bristol Town Council a member who is elected not as a Liberal or a Conservative, but as an Independent, s evidently very much like a fish out of water. Such a representative was returned by the ratepayers of Clifton at the recent elections, but at the meeting of the Council ast week it transpired that his name was omitted from the list of nominees for every one of the numerous committees of the Corporation, the explanation of this being that the list was agreed upon by a Tory caucus and a Liberal caucus, and that consequently a member owning allegiance to neither Party in municipal affairs, was left out in the cold. In the end two or three members offered to make way for the Independent on committees for which they were proposed, and so the difficulty was surmounted. But the system pursued in this Council seems a very undesirable one. Surely the proper method—the one adopted, I know, in some municipal bodies—is to delegate the nomination of committees to a selection committee representing all parties and interests, whose duty it should be to see that each member is appointed, regardless of his politics, to the committee or committees where his services are likely to be most useful.

A droll incident marked the first meeting of the Town Council at Todmorden, which place has only lately been elevated to the dignity of a municipal borough. Part of the business was the election of six Aldermen, and the inexperienced councillors filled up the papers and handed them to the Mayor, under the impression that the votes would be kept secret. To their confusion, however, the Mayor read out the lists, and it was then found that, out of the seventeen members taking part in the election, eleven had voted for their own appointment as Aldermen. These new Todmorden Councillors clearly have a good conceit of themselves.

"I wish," writes a correspondent at Bournemouth, "you would draw attention to the large number of infant deaths attributable to the practice of sleeping young babies in the same beds with their parents." To enforce the moral, the writer sends me the report of a recent inquest in connection with a fatality of this class. There is not much occasion, I should imagine, for me to "draw attention" to the subject, for the evil is notorious, and has been a matter of frequent public comment. My Bournemouth friend goes on to suggest means by which mothers can avoid the risks of this practice. But he overlooks the most serious question—namely, whether there is nothing worse than carelessness or indolence at the bottom of the evil. Twenty years ago I had a conversation on the subject with one of the most experienced London coroners. "I hold about four hundred inquests," he said, "every year upon children who have been overlain or suffocated in bed, and more than three hundred of them are downright murders, though, of course, no one can prove it." I do not suppose that the total number of deaths has decreased since this was said, nor the proportion of murders to accidents.

In answer to my inquiry, "Why is there no Anti-Organ Grinders' League?" I am told that the "Association for the Suppression of Street Noises" is virtually such an organisation. This Association, of which the Hon. Sec. is Mr. Charles Fox, of 104, Ritherdon-road, Upper Tooting, has been directing its efforts to the support of Mr. Jacoby's Bill, and its only fault seems to be that it has not yet made quite enough noise on its own account. Who fights street noises should himself be noisy. The Hon. Secretary tells me that a fund is now being raised to test the question whether a piano-organ is not a "noisy instrument" under the Metropolitan Police Act, and the effect of a decision of this question in the affirmative will be to throw upon the police, instead of the householder, the onus of suppressing the nuisance. It sounds like a satire on our law and lawyers that there should be any room for doubt on the point. If the piano-organ is not a noisy instrument, where, outside Pandemonium, is such an instrument to be found?

THE BATHS OF BATH.—Nauheim or Thermalsöolbad treatment. Owing to the great success of the treatment the Corporation have just doubled the accommodation. Good hotels. Band daily.

Five Deputy-Lieutenants for the City of Edinburgh were appointed last week by the Lord Provost, and four of them are Tories! Even supporters of the Ministry at Edinburgh have blushed over this audacious piece of political favouritism.

It would seem that Peers are bought and sold on the Stock Exchange like shares in mines and such-like securities, and they go up and down in the market according to supply and demand. The Committee of the Stock Exchange has had before it the case of a member of a firm of brokers, who provided two Earls as directors for one of the cycle companies recently floated. The broker had received £5,000 from the promoter for procuring them, and this amount he retained himself. His partners, on the other hand, claim that in the bargain he was acting for the firm, and that the sum total ought to have been placed by him to the credit of the firm.

I should not have thought that any Peer was worth 5,000 farthings as a Director of a company, for there is no reason to suppose that he has any special knowledge of business, which is not possessed in at least equal degree by those who are not Peers, and the glamour of an aristocratic flavour would, one would imagine, hardly, in the present day, lead persons to invest in a company's shares. But what singular persons these Peer Directors must be! Evidently they want money, or they would not become Directors. Why, then, do they not insist on the price paid for them finding its way into their own pockets? Only a week or two ago, the promoter of a company soon to be launched, offered a go-between a commission of £2,000 if he would obtain as one of its Directors a Duke with whom he was connected. The Duke, however, being a wise man, declined to have anything to do with the company. But what a light does all this throw upon the expedients to which Peers out of elbows and their friends are reduced, as well as on the utter flunkeyism of the country! Women love titles, and I am not surprised at the daughters of millionaire Americans bartering themselves and their dollars for titles. But that any human being should give his money to some speculative company because a Peer is amongst its directors is really a reflection upon that human being's sanity. Yet promoters probably know their own business, and when they give thousands of pounds for a Peer's name, they have doubtless taken stock of the servility of investors, and only bestow these amounts because experience has shown that their outlay will prove remunerative.

It would seem that not only does a Peer become a legislator as soon as he attains the age of twenty-one, but that when under that age, even the younger son of a Peer has to be fed on magnums of champagne, and that if his parents decline to provide him with this beverage, he may order it from any wine merchant, in which case his parents have to pay the bill. I presume that this view of the law is based upon the fact that, when the bees are in want of a queen, they bring one into existence by feeding an ordinary grub with a peculiar food, and that champagne is supposed in some mysterious fashion to fit a youth to fulfil legislative duties, if he ultimately inherits them. But I wonder what would be said if the father of a working man were sued by a publican for unnumbered quarts of beer that his child had drunk on credit, and if a jury were to decide that the father was responsible for the debt, because beer is a necessary with which, like clothes and bread, all children should be provided by their parents, as tending to produce bone and muscle.

So Mrs. Castle has, as I anticipated, been let out of prison. The Home Secretary has acted on the doctrine that there are a certain number of ladies, not mad enough to be put in asylums, but afflicted with a malady which impels them to pilfer. "Everybody in America," I see it stated, "feels relief." I should hardly imagine that the American shopkeepers are included in this "every one," for now that it is recognised that these interesting invalids can steal without fear of punishment, the malady under which they suffer will probably assume an epidemic form. I may, at least, express a hope that American ladies thus afflicted will not visit this island, but will confine their raiding to the shops of their own countrymen. This, however, is hardly probable, for with us there is not only one law for the rich and another for the poor, but one law for American ladies and another for English women.

It has been authoritatively stated that Mr. Castle is a man of vast wealth. I have my doubts about this. Wealthy Americans are rather lavish in their expenditure when on a trip in Europe. But Mr. and Mrs. Castle, together with their son, aged about twelve, all pigged together in one room in an hotel, which was a remarkable arrangement—even if they had not been possessors of great wealth. And this room seems to have been further encumbered by the proceeds of Mrs. Castle's larcenies, so that, as stated during the trial, it looked more like a museum than a bedroom. Should this reach the eye of any Californian, he will do me a favour, if he will let me know whether Mr. Castle is as wealthy as we have been asked to believe. In the meantime, I would suggest to that unfortunate husband that he would be wise to separate his son from his mother; for this child must have perceived what were her habits, and it is to be feared that, if left with her, he will catch the remarkable malady with which she is afflicted.

There is a peculiarly piquant circumstance in connection with the disappearance of the late Assistant Official Receiver for Chester and North Wales, one Hugh Roberts, whose affairs are now in the hands of his own Bankruptcy Court as those of an absconding debtor. During his official career this Mr. Roberts was always distinguished for the remorseless severity with which he gibbeted Shylock & Co., the malpractices of the notorious Isaac Gordon in particular coming in for the most unsparing exposure and denunciation at his hands. Before quitting the country, Roberts seems to have been inspired with the idea of spoiling the Israelites in the same manner in which the Israelites formerly spoiled the Egyptians. This he did by applying to Isaac and others for loans, which the usurers readily granted at a very low rate of interest, supposing, of course, that they would thereby secure a useful friend at court. Their rage on learning that he had suddenly bolted with the money, some hundreds of pounds, which they so confidingly and hopefully advanced him, must, indeed, have been pleasant to witness; and though in other respects Roberts's conduct is open to strong censure, I do not think people will judge him very harshly in regard to this little matter.

A little hint that I gave to the medical profession last week in connection with the circular of Sydney Bassett should be enforced by the reports that have appeared of the bankruptcy of Mr. Dawson, a doctor lately practising at Walton-on-the-Naze. It seems that Mr. Dawson left London and went into practice at Walton on account of his health, and was put to some expense in so doing. In this position of affairs he received, as I suppose most doctors do, a circular from the Clerical and Medical Bank, Bristol, which is an alias of the notorious Shuckburgh of the same town. In a weak moment Mr. Dawson had given Shuckburgh a promissory note for £65, but all he received in cash was £46. 10s. He understood from Shuckburgh's agent, who carried out the transaction, that the terms were to be repayment at the rate of £2 a month; but after a couple of months Shuckburgh demanded payment of the whole loan, and when the debtor instructed a solicitor to defend the proceedings which were taken, it was speedily discovered that there was nothing on paper as to the repayment of the loan by monthly instalments. The only result of the debtor's attempt to defend the action was to increase his liabilities and expedite his bankruptcy. Shuckburgh, it will be remembered, makes a special feature of assisting medical and professional men in times of adversity. And this is how he does it.

For some reason the money lenders seem just now to have marked the doctor for their own. In addition to Sydney Bassett and Shuckburgh, there is a man calling himself "Richard Pelham," of Whitcomb-street, W., who is issuing a special lithographed circular for the benefit of the medical profession. It is small wonder to see the eagles thus gathered together in view of such advertisements as the following, which appears in the current number of the British Medical Journal. It might throw a useful light on the present condition of the profession if Mr. Fisher Hall would let the public know precisely how many applications have been received in response to this magnificent offer:—

ROYAL SOUTH HANTS INFIRMARY, SOUTHAMPTON.—Assistant House-Surgeon; must be qualified and willing to engage for six months, at end of which period a gratuity of £10 will be given if found satisfactory. Applications to T. A. Fisher Hall, Secretary, by November 18.

SPA WINTER SEASON.—Balmy climate. Only 12 hrs. from London. Cercle des Etrangers, with every Monte Carlo attraction, always open. Hotel tariff from 10fr. per diem. Address, Jules Crehay, Sec.

There is a special interest at the present moment in the reports of the proceedings in the bankruptcy of Lieutenant Roderick B. Webb, of the Royal Dragoons. This gallant officer, who got his commission in 1889, has managed since that date to run up unsecured debts to the amount of £11,623, and he is in the proud position of being able to offer his creditors assets amounting to £725. It appears that he has enjoyed an income of £720 a year all told, so that he would have seemed to be living for seven years at the rate of about three times his income. His own statement is that his insolvency is due "to living beyond my means and payment of excessive interest on borrowed money." In other words, he has been "going the pace of the regiment" (and possibly a little beyond it), and Shylock has done the rest.

One of the creditors of Mr. I. H. Fisher, late of Commercial-street, Spitalfields, sends me the final statement of that gentleman's trustee in bankruptcy. The document tells rather a curious story. It seems that the creditors rejected an offer of 2s. 6d. in the £, being determined to have the debtor's blood, even if they got no dividend. They accordingly made Fisher a bankrupt, and then prosecuted him, with the result that he got twelve months' hard labour. Some of the bankrupt's goods had been concealed under the charge of a relative, and the trustee next proceeded to seize these goods. This led to the trustee himself being involved in an action for illegal trespass, in which a verdict was recovered against him. Very naturally, the result is that the bulk of the assets, which only amounted to £606, have been swallowed up in litigation; and the creditors, whose little bills amounted to £5,573, get nothing. They seem, however, to have had some fun for their money, and it is not often that bankruptcy proceedings yield even as much as that.

A J.P. writes expressing his disgust at the severity with which some of his brethren treat offences against property, and asking me to pillory a poaching case at Wigan County Police-court last week. Four men were convicted of poaching and committed to three months' hard labour each, one of them also getting another month for assaulting a gamekeeper. In addition to this sentence — in itself severe enough in all conscience — each of the accused was ordered to find sureties for not so offending again for a year, and in default they will have to undergo a further six months' imprisonment each; so that, as my correspondent points out, these men are to be punished twice as heavily for being unable to find bondsmen as for committing the offence with which they were charged. This power of calling for sureties in such a case is one of the most iniquitous provisions in the whole series of the special laws that have been made for the benefit of the game-preserver, and there is none which magistrates use more oppressively. It practically enables them to double, or for a first offence treble, the maximum penalty for the crime of poaching.

The Paisley Bailies have often figured in my Legal Pillory, owing to their excessive tenderness in dealing with wife-beaters, but I fancy they must now have resolved to turn over a new leaf. What is sauce for the goose is sauce for the gander, and after the sentence of three weeks' hard labour which Bailie Bell last week passed on a woman for giving her husband two blows in the mouth, it is impossible to believe that he or any of his colleagues will ever again have the temerity to let off men with the trumpery fines which have hitherto been imposed at Paisley for infinitely worse outrages on wives. In the following list I give the usual illustrations of such inadequate penalties in cases of assault and cruelty, the failure of the Greenwich Magistrate to inflict a term of imprisonment for most brutal ill-treatment of a child being particularly conspicuous. As to the cases on the other side, the monstrous sentences on girls, both first offenders, at Cork and Midhurst, should be at once brought to the notice of the Lord-Lieutenant and the Home Secretary respectively. Do the Midhurst Shallows really suppose that six weeks' prison life, even with the special attention of the chaplain, is likely to amend the ways of a wayward girl of sixteen?

Harleston Petty Sessions. Before Messrs. J. S. Holmes, A. Taylor, and J. Pipe. Joseph Gillman, labourer, charged with assaulting George Gardener. Complainant, who appeared with his head bandaged, said defendant struck him on the head with a stick, causing a severe wound. Fined 5s. and 11s. 6d. costs.

Grimsby County Police-court. Before Messrs. W. Bennett and W. Grant. Harry Ernest Cook, convicted of assaulting his wife. He struck her on the face and head, and kicked her in the stomach. Fined 5s. and costs, and bound over.

Pollokshaws Police-court. Before Bailie M'Farlane. James Green pleaded guilty to assaulting his wife by knocking her off the chair on which she was sitting, and dragging her across the room by her hair. Fined 30s.

Blackpool Petty Sessions. Before Messrs. H. Fisher, H. Buckley, L. Whittaker, R. B. Mather, and J. Cardwell. Edward Butterworth, cab proprietor, charged with cruelty to a horse by neglecting to supply it with food. The animal was found lying helpless in a hollow in a field, and one side of its face was described as "in a pulp," caused by its struggles to rise. Information had been given to defendant, but no effort was made to move the horse. Fined 20s. and costs.

Greenwich Police-court. Before Mr. Kennedy. Edwin Hanham, charged with ill-treating his son, aged 11. He beat the boy with a dog-whip, administering forty blows on one occasion, and the child's body was described by a doctor as "one huge livid mass of bruises." It was stated that one of the dog-whips which defendant employed on his son was loaded at the handle, had a long lash, and was knotted. Fined £20 and costs.

Harleston Petty Sessions. Before the same magistrates. William Brighton, labourer, charged under the Poaching Prevention Act with having a hare in his possession. Fined 10s. and 13s. 6d. costs.

Ardrossan Burgh Court. Two vagrants, named Welsh and Hardley, and John Murphy, a seaman, charged with appropriating to their own use a cloak which they found on the beach, and pawned for 2s. Ten days each.

Paisley Police-court. Before Bailie Bell. Mary Tonnar, charged with assaulting her husband by striking him two blows on the mouth. Twenty-one days.

St. Augustine's Petty Sessions. Joseph Henry Griffiths, charged with trespassing in search of rabbits. Fined £2.

Llanfyllin Petty Sessions. Before Messrs. C. R. Jones, T. K. Perrott, and T. Gill. Isaac Lewis, charged with sleeping out. Seven days.

Dursley Police-court. Charles Summers, labourer, charged with trespassing in search of game. Committed to prison for one month.

Midhurst Police-court. Before Mr. G. H. Drew and Colonel Lascelles. Bertha Boniface, aged 16, charged with stealing a five-shilling piece belonging to her father. She refused to return home, and a constable informed the Bench that she had "been very reckless of late in her conduct." Six weeks' hard labour, the magistrates remarking that they would write to the prison chaplain to do what he could for her.

Selkirk Police-court. Before Bailies Hardie and Smith. James Baillie pleaded guilty to assaulting his wife by seizing her by the hair, dragging her about, and striking her with his fists; also to committing a breach of the peace. He had been previously convicted. Fined £1 and bound over.

Huddersfield Police-court. Before Mr. F. Greenwood and other magistrates. Henry Dyson, convicted of assaulting his wife. He went home drunk, thrashed his wife, turned her and their child out of the house, and threatened to cut her heart out if she returned. She had been repeatedly ill-treated, and a separation order was granted on the ground of persistent cruelty. For the assault defendant was fined 5s. and costs.

West Hartlepool Police-court. Jane Ann Carter, charged with vagrancy by fortune-telling. A policeman was concealed in a house where she was expected to call, and after watching her profess to tell the fortunes of the occupant of the house and his wife, the officer took her into custody. One month.

Cork Police-court. Before Mr. Mayne, R.M., and Alderman Flavin. Anne Summers, domestic servant, charged with the larceny of a number of articles belonging to her employer, a clergyman. The stolen property had been restored, and the prosecutor did not wish to press the charge. It was the girl's first offence. Three months.

How difficult it is to instil into the minds of some of the amateur magistracy the most rudimentary notion of judicial duty has been strikingly shown by certain justices of St. Ives. At the Brewster Sessions in 1895 these gentlemen voted for granting a licence to a new hotel belonging to a Company in which they had been shareholders. Just before the sessions they took steps to transfer their shares to their wives and families, and, in their unsophisticated way, they seem to have thought that this transparent device would safely get them round that awkward legal corner with regard to magistrates adjudicating in any matter in which they are directly or indirectly interested. It is hardly necessary to say, however, that the moment the case came before a Divisional Court they were rudely undeceived, the Lord Chief Justice and Mr. Justice Wright promptly quashing the licence. But these St. Ives justices were too obtuse or too self-opinionated to learn anything from the decision of her Majesty's judges. At the Brewster Sessions in August, 1896, another application was made on behalf of the same hotel, and once more the justices in question voted for the granting of the licence, with the result that they again invalidated the proceedings, and Mr. Justice Grantham and Mr. Justice Wright last week quashed this second licence. It seems to me that the Lord Chancellor ought to follow up this judgment by removing from office the J.P.s who persisted in adjudicating a second time in a case in which the High Court had held that they were biassed.

It is a pity, by the way, that the stringent rules against interested magistrates adjudicating in licensing business cannot be extended to other matters, more especially the Game Laws. At Lancaster County Petty Sessions the other day a solicitor objected to any magistrate belonging to the local Poaching Prevention Society sitting to hear a case in which the prosecution had been taken up by that organisation. It is reported that the Bench "ignored the objection," though surely nothing could be more unjust and indecent than the presence of such magistrates on the Bench. To my mind, indeed, it is an outrageous thing that any justice who is a game preserver should adjudicate in any Game Law case, whether he is a member of a prosecuting society or not. Here and there a fairly impartial man may be found; but the vast majority of game preservers are swayed by the strongest and most obvious prejudices against all who violate, or are even accused of violating, the cult of the sacred bird; and as my columns constantly show, they use their powers in the most relentless manner for the benefit of their own particular interests. I may be told that if game preservers are disqualified no magistrates will be left to try poaching cases in many country districts. Very likely this is so. But the fact only helps to emphasise the necessity of breaking down the system under which the county benches are filled almost exclusively with men of one class.

Some time ago I mentioned the hard case of a tailor's assistant at Douglas who was sued by the Douglas Corporation for £8. 2s. 6d. for the treatment of his child for a period of seven weeks in the municipal fever hospital. The Deemster gave judgment against the defendant for £6, and he subsequently offered to pay off the debt by weekly instalments of 2s. 6d. In the circumstances the Corporation might well have shown such a small amount of consideration for the unfortunate man as would have been involved in the acceptance of this offer; but they, or the official who conducts such business on their behalf, refused to listen to the proposal, and without any previous warning, the defendant was served with an order which, but for the assistance of his employer, would have resulted in his immediate imprisonment. The Corporation appear throughout to have behaved in a very oppressive manner, and after this man's experience, parents in Douglas will probably be very slow to send sick children to the fever hospital unless they are absolutely compelled to do so.

It is a rare thing for magistrates to lay themselves open to adverse criticism on the score of lenity in dealing with a charge of robbery, but the quality of mercy certainly seems to have been somewhat strained in a case at Northallerton Quarter Sessions the other day. For some time the police had been receiving complaints of cattle-stealing at Scorton, and a few weeks back they traced the theft of a heifer to a butcher named Joseph Peacock, who took the animal from a field, slaughtered it, and concealed the skin, after which he offered to help the owner in making inquiries for the missing beast. Peacock admitted his guilt, and a clergyman and a churchwarden were called to testify to the good character he had borne, the former mentioning that the prisoner attended his church, and was a member of the choir and a bell-ringer. The Bench expressed the hope that "the charge would be a serious warning to the prisoner," ordered him to pay part of the costs, and discharged him under the First Offenders Act. This was a singularly lenient method of dealing with a serious, deliberate, and crafty robbery, and it stands out in strong contrast to the frequent refusals of the magistracy to give the benefit of the Act to first offenders convicted of simple and trumpery thefts. But, of course, the latter have not all of them the advantage of being church-goers, choirmen, and bell-ringers.

One of the touts employed in beguiling and bullying ignorant servant-girls into the purchase of extravagantly priced articles on the instalment system has had a lucky escape from condign punishment at Cambridgeshire Assizes. He was indicted for threatening a girl, and thereby inducing her to sign a paper in order that the same might be used as a valuable security, with intent to defraud. It seemed that he asked the prosecutrix to buy a Bible for 50s., and that on her refusing he said something about fetching a policeman, and by means of this and other threats so frightened her that she signed the form which he produced. The prisoner's counsel took the objection that this paper was not a valuable security, but only an order for goods, and Baron Pollock held that the objection was good, the accused being accordingly discharged. Seeing that such "orders for goods" frequently suffice to enable firms engaged in this sort of business to obtain judgment against their deluded customers in the County Court, I should have though that the document might fairly have been deemed a "valuable security"; but as this is not the judicial view of the matter, it is to be hoped that whenever another case of the kind occurs the charge will be differently framed so as to avoid any technical difficulty in securing a conviction. Meanwhile I fear that the result of the prosecution will encourage these canvassing pests in their impudent and unscrupulous impositions upon an ignorant and easily terrorised class of people.

Just a year ago I called the attention of masters of houses to the operations of a firm styling themselves "Howard & Co.," of 611, Chiswick High-road. These people were then cadging, by means of area-gate touts, to induce servant-girls to give orders for forty-five shilling watches worth about sixteen shillings apiece, and "small Bibles" at the same modest price. Howard & Co. are still at the same game, in all parts of the country, and the latest feature in their business is the employment of female touts. I have just heard of a case at Great Malvern, in which a woman tried unsuccessfully to book an order from a servant-girl, after which Howard & Co. had the impudence to send one of their watches to the girl, and when she returned it by registered letter they denied receiving it, and delivered the usual threats of proceedings if the girl did not pay up. It is high time that the itinerant touts who work for all firms of this character were brought under the same regulations as pedlars and hawkers. The mere fact of their having to take out licences would probably suffice to put an end to the game.

There is a firm styling themselves "J. B. Dent & Sons," of 189, Blackfriars-road, and Imperial Buildings, Ludgate-circus, who have at different times been introduced to the readers of TRUTH in connection with the business of getting "watch clubs" started by foremen in houses of business, N.C.O.s in the Army, and others in a position to exercise pressure upon their subordinates. When referring to their doings, I have expressed surprise at the appearance of the name of "Dent" in this connection. It turns out, however, that the name is merely an assumed one. The founder of the business of J. B. Dent & Sons is, I understand, a retired N.C.O. named Bryan, and his object in converting himself into "Dent" is sufficiently obvious.

Lately "J. B. Dent & Sons" have been soliciting orders from wholesale firms for advertisements in their "Illustrated Wholesale Price List of Goods," stating in their letters that they have taken over the business of "The Universal and Industrial Manufacturers Supply Association, at Commerce House, Blackfriars-road." On their stationery J. B. Dent & Sons describe themselves as "Watch and Chronometer Makers to Her Majesty's Army, Navy, India and Colonies" (sic). The chief foundation for this statement is probably the watch clubs business above mentioned. They also state that they are makers to the Lords Commissioners of the Admiralty, a statement which I take the liberty of believing to be a fiction. Another paragraph on their notepaper states "that the Kew Royal Observatory have awarded J. B. Dent & Sons, makers to the Lords Commissioners of the Admiralty, a first class certificate for excellence of workmanship and accuracy of performance in watches." This high-sounding announcement simply means that J. B. Dent & Sons have obtained a certificate which anybody can obtain by sending a watch to be tested at Kew. The same notepaper is plentifully adorned with the Royal Arms and Seal of the Admiralty, and a whole gallery of prize medals. Among the latter is the prize medal of the London Exhibition of 1862, which was held, roughly speaking, about twenty years before "J. B. Dent & Sons" came into existence. From these facts, all persons whom it may concern will be easily able to estimate for themselves the character of "J. B. Dent & Sons."

On August 13 I reprinted a paragraph from a previous issue of TRUTH respecting the appeals to charity circulated through the post by an old lady named Annie Labone, of 36, Fowler-street, Liverpool. It may perhaps be remembered that Mrs. Labone is, in her own words, "an old lady whom the Lord has heavily afflicted," and on the strength of her afflictions she hopes you will purchase recipes for cough mixtures, cures for rheumatism, lemon and potato cheesecake, or Grantham gingerbread. She also manifests a praiseworthy interest in the souls of those whom she addresses, by enclosing tracts suitable to the comprehension of children and adults. I stated that those who received Mrs. Labone's appeals would do well to hear what the Charity Organisation Society have to say about her before sending her any money, and I further stated that she had been in the begging-letter business for over thirty years. This was on August 13. A couple of months later Mrs. Labone wrote me a very long and confidential letter, chiefly taken up with distressing particulars of her bodily ailments, which make, if possible, more unpleasant reading than her begging letters, and she also asked me for the name and address of the writer of the paragraph, in order that she might write an explanatory letter to him. "Yours seems," she wrote, "a very nice, interesting periodical, and I shall have much pleasure in drawing my friends' attention to it." After these flattering expressions I felt it my duty to show what Mrs. Labone had written to the writer of the paragraph in question, but I am sorry to say that he still remains of the same opinion respecting this lady.

Although Mrs. Labone states in her letter that the only time that she ever collected cash was once when she went round with a book on the occasion when the congregation of her church desired to present their pastor with an Easter offering, and although she tells me that she never collected money on behalf of herself, I find that she is one of the very first operators in the begging-letter line who ever came under notice in TRUTH. Within a few months of the foundation of this journal (August 2, 1877) Mrs. Labone received an article all to herself; and it is, indeed, strange, therefore, that she should only have discovered what a nice, interesting periodical TRUTH is in October, 1896. It is true that in those days she was not collecting money for herself, but for a lady named Martin, who was alleged by Mrs. Labone to be suffering from the same distressing ailments which are now so graphically described by her in her own case. A great many of the statements which she then made on behalf of Miss Martin did not bear investigation, and for her own sake I would fain hope that the same may be the case with her account of her own afflictions. If not, then I think that the fact of her having fulfilled in her own person all that she ascribed to Miss Martin twenty-five years ago, would make a very nice moral tale for one of her own tracts.

I gave, a fortnight back, the history of a queer transaction in which a money-lender calling himself "Parmer," of Conduit-street, was concerned. It is a fact worth mentioning that a visitor to Parmer's office not long ago recognised there an individual whom he had formerly known by the name of Nicholls. The said Nicholls used to carry on business under that name at Savoy House, Strand, and under that name served a term of eighteen months' imprisonment for swindling by means of the preliminary fee trick. Whether Nicholls took any part in the transaction that has been described in TRUTH, I cannot say for certain; but his presence in Parmer's office ought to be an additional reason against the insertion of Parmer's advertisements in the Morning Post, or any other respectable journal.

Circulars are being sown broadcast from 9, Cathedral-street North, Prince of Wales-road, Norwich, by a usurer's tout signing himself "H. F. Harvey." These circulars begin with the statement that "several sums of money have been placed at his (Harvey's) disposal for investment by trustees," and go on to talk about the advantages which the said Harvey offers "to clients who cannot afford to pay the exorbitant fees and charges of professional lenders." "H. F. Harvey" is the nom de guerre of Joel Ford, a pestilent usury-monger in Gower-street, or of his agents in different parts of the country. Circulars in the same name have been issued in the last year or two from addresses at Exeter, Salisbury, Kingston-on-Thames, Peterborough, Lincoln, and other places. Occasionally "Harvey," alias Ford, addresses tradesmen with the information that he "has had several years' experience in the private financing of some of the largest tradesmen in London." At other times he tells agriculturists how he has "had considerable experience of over thirty years in the private financing of some of the largest farms in the home counties," and insidiously suggests that farmers should avoid the necessity of realising produce at the present depressed agricultural prices by availing themselves of the services of the "private financier." That no statement is too extravagantly mendacious to be used by this harpy in deceiving his victims may be judged by his present assertion, that he is using trust funds, which have been placed at his disposal for investment. Heaven help the struggling tradesman or farmer who falls into the clutches of such an unscrupulous blood-sucker!

Yet another new dodge of the money-lending tout is revealed by the following letter. It was addressed to an Irish gentleman. He has, he says, never communicated with Messrs. Browne & Co., nor was he aware of the existence of that firm:—

Strictly private.] 48, Darlan-road, Fulham, S.W.
October 31, 1896.

SIR,—I trust you will pardon the liberty I am taking in addressing you, but I have been for years confidential clerk to Messrs. Browne & Co., solicitors, 44, Bedford-row, with whom I understand you are in correspondence. Although I am doing this without any knowledge of my firm, I beg to say that if you desired an advance of from £500 to £1,000 for three or six months, entirely upon your promissory note, I could arrange the matter for you immediately.

It would not perhaps be necessary for you to come to town so long as you gave me your bank's agent here, that your signature might be verified; but if you could make it convenient to come to town, so much the better.

If you would kindly send me a wire to my private address the matter shall have my best attention, and you can rely upon the strictest secrecy.—I am, Sir, yours respectfully,

A. W. KING.

Apropos of money-lenders, a correspondent asks me whether I cannot "squelch" Jackson, of Duke-street. If I knew of any means of "squelching" any of these gentry, I should not be long in doing it; but how far Jackson is from being "squelched" at present may be judged from the fact that he last week favoured one of my staff with a circular offering "accommodation." It seems that Jackson has been delivering a special batch of circulars this last week in the Inns of Court. Is it possible that even in the headquarters of the Law are to be found pigeons waiting to be plucked?

THE LONDON HOSPITAL, E., APPEALS FOR SUBSCRIPTIONS. This Hospital for Men, Women, and Children, is the great General Hospital for the toiling poor of East London, & help is sorely needed

A fine swindling trade seems to be carried on at present in second-hand grandfather's clocks, oak-bureaus, and similar articles. The leading operator in this line calls himself "E. Reeves," and has been advertising lately from the address, "St. Stephen's, Norwich," or, "The Bungalow, St. Stephen's, Norwich." His usual trick seems to be to advertise the clock, or whatever it may be, at a certain price, and to demand half this price as a deposit before the article is forwarded. As soon as he has got the deposit, he invents some excuse for not forwarding the clock until the balance is paid. If the victim pays up the balance, a rubbishy article of no value is forwarded to him. If he objects to pay the balance, he gets neither goods nor deposit. An action has recently been brought against Reeves in the Norwich County Court by a gentleman who had purchased, on the strength of an advertisement, a grandfather's clock, and after Reeves had for some time evaded service of the summons by betaking himself to Belgium, judgment was eventually obtained for the full amount and costs.

In another recent case a lady at Warley has had a similar experience. She was induced to pay Reeves a deposit of £1 for the purchase of a bureau, which had been advertised in the Exchange and Mart. She offered to deposit the balance with the Exchange and Mart, but Reeves would not assent to this, and insisted on having the money direct. The lady had the bureau inspected by a representative of the Exchange and Mart in the neighbourhood, who pronounced it to be a perfect fraud, and not worth buying at any price. Upon this the lady demanded her money back under the threat of a summons, and on October 26 Reeves returned the money relieving his mind at the same time by sending with it an abusive letter. In this letter he made a sarcastic reference to the people who patronise the Exchange and Mart, remarking that it was a paper which he would carefully avoid. The truth is, I believe, that Reeves has been on the "Exclusion List" of the Exchange and Mart for years past, and it was only by an accident that his advertisement got into the paper now.

There are many other similar cases against Reeves, who has been the subject of frequent inquiries addressed to the Norwich Police. It will be remembered that not many weeks back a lady named Dring, of Boston, Lincoln, was prosecuted at the North London Police-court, for obtaining money under false pretences, she having failed to forward the grandfather's clock for which the money had been paid. It is a highly remarkable fact that when Reeves, of Norwich, was sued in the County Court above-mentioned, he attempted to get the judgment set aside on the ridiculous plea that his address had been wrongly given, as he did not live at "The Bungalow," Norwich,

"TRUTH" will be sent weekly to any address in the United Kingdom for 7s. for 3 months; 14s. for 6 months; or 28s. for 12 months. The subscription for all Countries included in the Postal Union is, 3 months, 7s. 8d.; 6 months, 15s. 4d.; 12 months, £1 10s. 8d. All subscriptions are payable in advance, and cheques and P.O.O.'s should be made payable to the MANAGER, "Truth" Buildings, Carteret-street, S.W.

but at 6, William Bank, Boston. Strange to say, 6, William Bank, Boston, is the address of Mr. W. Dring, and of his wife, Rebecca, who is also in the grandfather's clock business, and who had such a narrow escape at the North London Police-court. It seems to me possible that had the connection between the Drings and Reeves been known at the time of that prosecution, the course of events might have been different. The establishment described as "the Bungalow," is, I understand, a building in a slum known as Hunt's-yard, and leading off St. Stephen's-street, Norwich. One of the grandfather's clocks which had been supplied by Reeves was valued by an expert at thirteen shillings, the price which Reeves himself had obtained for it being £3. Reeves has continued advertising in the Standard and other papers within the last two or three weeks, and it seems to me high time that his advertisements were excluded from respectable journals.

Since I referred the other day to a man named Thomas Kempe, of Cathedral Offices, 41, St. Andrew's Hill, who advertises an infallible remedy for deafness at the price of £1. 2s. 6d., Kempe has forwarded to the gentleman whose case I mentioned what he is pleased to call his "treatment." The gentleman, in his turn, has forwarded the goods to me. They comprise two bottles of lotion and a small glass inhaler. An expert to whom I have submitted them reports that the whole consignment might be sold at a handsome profit for half a crown. Considering, therefore, that Kempe can make a profit of something over £1 out of every victim whom he entraps, it hardly seems worth his while to run the risk of unpleasant complications by sticking to the money and refusing to forward the goods. There is no doubt, however, that he adopts this method of increasing his profits, for I have just heard of a case of an Indian gentleman who, more than six months ago, paid Kempe 16s., and has not up to the present time succeeded in getting anything whatever for his money. Kempe was at that time established at Victoria Chambers, 19, Southampton Buildings, Holborn, and on inquiries being made at that place on behalf of the aforesaid Indian gentleman, it was found that Kempe had departed, leaving no address. Those who are in search of him had better try Cathedral Offices, 41, St. Andrew's Hill, E.C., though it is no very easy thing to find him even there.

I wonder how much success has attended a circular that has just been sent out by the "Editor of the Social World newspaper, Limited." This individual appeals to London and provincial editors to supply him with copy, and invites them to sign a contract binding them to reprint in their own journals any of their contributions which he may publish, mentioning at the same time the Social World. A copy of the reprint is to be sent to the Editor, and unless the contribution is reprinted in this way the contributor is not to be paid for it. In other words, the journalist who contributes to this publication is also expected to advertise the paper, and his remuneration is to cover not only the contribution, but the advertisement. Unless I am very much mistaken, the gentleman who evolved this original scheme is my old friend Manning Press. When that fact is known, I doubt whether it will increase the desire of provincial journalists to avail themselves of the offer thus made to them.

Once again I have been asked for information respecting Mr. John Martyn, of 64, Albert-road, Dalston, N.E. Mr. Martyn's line of business is the circulation of satin book-markers, with legends printed upon them, which he asks the public to buy out of charity. I believe the statements he makes are substantially true, but it appears that he has been getting a living by this means for a good many years past, and no one quite knows what his living is worth. It is therefore very doubtful whether he has any real claim to charity, or any better right to ask people to buy his goods out of sheer benevolence than any shopkeeper in London.

Can any of my readers at Dawlish give me any information about a certain Mr. M. A. Yonge, of that town? This gentleman recently inserted the following advertisement in the Manchester Guardian:—

> Secretary companion (gentleman) wanted: educated, refined, unmarried; liberal progressive salary; all expenses paid; cash deposit guaranteeing fidelity indispensable.—Woodbrook, Dawlish.

A gentleman at Manchester, who answered this advertisement, was informed by Mr. Yonge that his business was a financial one, bill-discounting principally, and that it was carried on at Monte Carlo, whither he would require his secretary to accompany him. The "cash deposit" required was £200, carrying interest at 4 per cent., and Mr. Yonge declined to accept a fidelity guarantee in place of the deposit. Although he selected Manchester for his advertisement, Mr. Yonge was not disposed to pay travelling expenses from that town to Dawlish for a personal interview, which in one case he invited himself. There is much about Mr. Yonge's business and correspondence on which further information would be interesting. Perhaps he has obtained a "secretary companion" by this time, in which case I only trust that the secretary likes his place.

In the early part of this year I had to inform Mr. R. L. C. Morrison, of Greenhill-avenue, Tenby, that he was not justified in inviting my junior clerk to sell to him all the old post-cards, envelopes, and newspaper wrappers to be found in this office. I have now been asked to convey a similar intimation to Mr. Morrison on behalf of a firm in the City, to whose junior clerk he has just issued a similar invitation. Mr. Morrison, as I pointed out when I last referred to him, is a postage-stamp dealer, and he appears to address himself to clerks in offices where there is likely to be a large foreign correspondence, in the hope of picking up old foreign stamps among the waste-paper which he offers to buy.

The New Silk Waistcoatings for Gentlemen's Evening Dress and Morning Wear can now be seen at Ulster House, Conduit-street, W.

Employers, therefore, who take any interest in keeping their employees honest, and in preventing them from being subjected to the temptation of disposing of what does no t belong to them, will do well to see that the clerks are not customers of Mr. Morrison.

The way we advertise now. A potato grower calmly forwards a circular, of which one page is devoted to business in the shape of a price list, one page is occupied by his own portrait and autograph, one page by an acrostic on his own name, one page by a few biographical notes on his life for the last fifty years, while on the outside is the modest request, "Kindly hand to a friend at afternoon tea." If cheek, as many believe, is the royal road to success in the world, this potato man ought to get on.

Here is another device in advertising. The lady who received it (lithographed) never heard of Grace H. Johnston :—

The Brantingham, Wednesday.

DEAR FRIEND,—Have you been thinking naughty things of me?

In passing the ——— Theatre yesterday I was reminded of my promise to send you word where I had my lace curtains cleaned.

It was at ———.

I have had my laces done up there for many years, and have always found the work very satisfactory.

Hoping you are quite well, I am, very sincerely,

GRACE H. JOHNSTON.

P.S. I have forgotten the number of ———, but it is almost directly opposite the ——— Theatre.

I see that it is denied that Mr. Martin White, the member for Forfarshire, is about to resign. He is a sound Radical, and his views as to Church Disestablishment in Scotland are strong, for he has embraced every opportunity to carry the war into the enemy's camp. Were he to resign, the electoral contest would be an interesting one, as Forfarshire is in politics what Cleopatra was in love—of infinite variety, one election generally reversing the verdict of the last. Much would depend on whether the farmers are in the main breeders or graziers, for the legislation of the last session favoured the former at the expense of the latter.

A correspondent writes :—

I have not often seen in print more preposterous nonsense than the statement, made last week in the St. James's Gazette, in a rambling, scrambling dissertation entitled "The Unleadable Party," that "the death of Lord Grey in 1845 left the Liberals practically leaderless during the space of two years." Lord Grey retired from public life when he resigned the office of Prime Minister in July, 1834. Lord Melbourne succeeded him as Prime Minister, and his colleague in the leadership of the Party was Lord John Russell. In 1843 Lord Melbourne's health failed, after an attack of palsy, and Lord Lansdowne became the leader in the House of Lords. In June, 1846, one year after the death of Lord Grey, the Liberals came into office with Lord John Russell as Prime Minister and Lord Lansdowne as Lord President of the Council and Leader of the House of Lords.

I have received a vast number of letters suggesting that Lord Rosebery's communication to Sir William Harcourt, declining all further political connection with him, should be made public. It certainly ought to be. When the Leader of the Liberal Party writes a letter for circulation amongst his former colleagues announcing that he will have nothing to do with the Leader of the Party in the Commons, this can hardly be deemed a private document; least of all when his friends, taking advantage of the letter having only been privately circulated, insist that the Commons' Leader was a species of traitor to the Party Leader because he did not after that missive take counsel with him. Whenever the public is appealed to on a personal issue involving the government of the country, the public has a right to have before it all the facts that are needed in order to form a proper conclusion.

Mr. Morley and Mr. Asquith both made very sensible and practical speeches last week; and at once the Unionist newspapers proceeded to jeer at them because they were cheerful. They ought, it would seem, to have appeared in mourning, as undertakers engaged in burying the Liberal Party, and to have asked gods and men to forgive them for ever having had anything to do with such a moribund concern. And yet, it is as certain as anything well can be, that one day the Tory reaction will be outdone by the Radical reaction. I am not for waiting supinely until the tide turns. We must give the Democracy something to fight for. With a good Leader and a good cry, I see no reason why we should not win the next General Election. Amongst gamblers, it is said, that a good winner is more rare than a good loser, for winners are too apt to be puffed up, and to show it offensively. The same may be said in politics. I never yet came across such a boasting, swaggering crew as the Tory journalists. Talk of beggars on horseback! Never were such prancing beggars known. It really becomes the duty of all who have any respect for that old virtue, modesty, to put them in their proper place. And what is that place? Cursing, snarling, and cowering under the hoofs of the good horse Democracy.

I cordially agree with Mr. Morley's suggestion that Peers should be allowed to give up their right to sit in the House of Lords, and, having done so, that they should become eligible to be elected members of the House of Commons. This would only be fair, if the view of Mr. Morley and of the Radicals is carried out, that a Ministry must be a Committee of the House of Commons, in the sense that its members must be selected from the People's House. In the last Parliament Mr. Curzon and others brought in a Bill to enable Peers to be elected to the Commons. But it found small favour with Radicals, because it allowed a Peer to seek election, and, if not elected, to revert to the House of Lords.

Last week I gave a list of the Peers who received official salaries in the last Parliament dependent upon the tenure of office of the Liberal Party. Exactly one half of all Liberal Peers were salaried. This can hardly be termed selection of the fittest for posts of profit and responsibility. Had I my way, the next Liberal Premier should compose his Administration exclusively from the Commons. A Bill passed in that House should be sent up to the Lords, and the sole argument for its passing there should be that, having received the assent of the People's Representatives, it ought to become law. Were this done, and were any lord allowed to give up his rights of peerage, should he wish to take part in public affairs, the House of Lords would fall into such ridicule and contempt, that no self-respecting man would wish to remain in it.

As for the Peers titles, they may keep them. If it makes a man happy to be "milorded" by his servants, Heaven preserve me from denying him this pleasure. Far from it, I would give any one a right to become "my lord" on payment of a reasonable sum to the Exchequer, and, on the same lines, all who are "my lords" might become "his grace." This was the view taken of titles by Cavour, who submitted to the Piedmontese Parliament a proposal to sell the title of Count to all aspirants for 10,000 francs. And as with titles, so I would deal with ribbons. If any fool can be found ready to pay for the privilege of hanging a yard or two of coloured ribbon round his person, I would make money by gratifying this singular craze.

I am surprised that in all the letters that are published regarding the Education controversy, no allusion is made to the reason why the politicians of the Unionist Party are not likely to agree to voluntary schools being aided from rates. This is that rates are derived from direct imposts, and taxes from indirect, whilst Unionists have always insisted that rates weigh unfairly in their incidence on agriculture. Many people are so silly as to imagine that when rates are reduced by the simple expedient of increasing taxes, it is as though money were rained down from Heaven like manna, instead of coming out of their pockets. No political Unionist would dream of imposing new rates. To give an additional amount from the Exchequer to localities which have voluntary and no Board schools is, in reality, a direct incentive to localities to prefer the former to the latter. It amounts to telling all that, if they have only voluntary schools, they will be relieved of the obligation to be rated for education; and this is precisely the aim of those who would prefer voluntary to Board schools, and who understand the right mode to give effect to their preference.

In theory, a voluntary school is one which is a secular school, except during a brief period each day which is spent in inculcating the tenets of the particular sect to which the school belongs. In practice, it is a school where, in season and out of season, it is sought to bring up children in those tenets. Theoretically, secular education is the major, and religious education the minor. Practically, it is the reverse. In most rural districts the schoolmaster is a lay curate of the clergyman of the Church of England who is the rector or vicar of the parish. In Italy, religion is allowed to be taught on only one day of the week in schools maintained by the State. Why should not this plan be adopted in regard to our voluntary schools? In this case all those not agreeing with the particular tenets taught would not send their children on that day. About fifty years ago I was at Eton. All the masters were clergymen of the Church of England. The religious instruction that they vouchsafed to me was a Greek Testament class on Saturdays. The cleric who conducted this class never entered into theological issues, and generally confined himself to sneering criticisms on the Greek of the Evangelists.

Lord Hugh Cecil has put the case of the Church of England in respect to education very fairly from the Churchman's standpoint. The problem that the Government has to solve is, he says, "What does the Church of England want?" Having discovered this, it is to grant to that Church what it does want. In days long past the Roman Catholic Church was the Established Church of England, and it wanted a great deal. It wanted a recognition that the Pope was the Suzerain of England; that priests could not be tried by the law of the land; that the property of the Church should not be liable to taxation; and many other things of a like character. It was only by the persistent opposition of our ancestors that these "wants" were not permanently incorporated in our laws, and in no Catholic country now does the Roman Church put forward such pretensions. But with the property of the Roman Catholic Church, the Church of England seems to have inherited the idea that the mission of the Government is to give it what it wants. Just now it wants to be provided with the means to bring up children in its tenets. If we admit this, I wonder what next it will want?

The Venezuela arrangement is very different from what the Jingo Press demanded when first the United States interfered in the matter. I heartily congratulate Lord Salisbury on having been able to sweep aside all the rabid bluster of his followers, and having assented to a settlement based upon common sense and justice. But since his Mansion House delivery, I have been amused at watching how the Tory newspapers have been eating their past swagger, and trying to show that everything is precisely as they had always wished it to be.

On two points Lord Salisbury refused to allow even discussion: (1) The right of the Americans to interfere. (2) The arbitration west of the Schomburgk line; and his newspapers announced that, rather than yield on either, we would meet the world in arms. As a matter of hard fact, he has—most wisely, I think—given up both these points.

I cannot say that I think that our present habit of beslavering one Power when we are angry with some other is very conducive to our dignity. When the Triple Alliance between Russia, Germany, and Austria was formed, Lord Salisbury, in announcing the fact, said that it was "glad tidings of great joy." When Russia withdrew, he was induced to make vague promises to Italy, at the request of Bismarck, to induce that Power to take the place of Russia in a new Triple Alliance. But no sooner do Russia and France make an alliance than Lord Salisbury begins to gush over Russia. All this renders us contemptible in the eyes of Continental Europe. Its countries, differing as they may amongst themselves, agree in objecting to our perpetual interference in matters that concern them rather than us. If we can only realise this, and act upon the principle that, so long as no one attacks us, we shall remain friends with all, instead of reviling our neighbours one day and grovelling at their feet the next, we shall best consult alike our honour and our interests.

A characteristic movement is now on foot for obtaining the release of Dr. Jameson and his fellow-prisoners. Petitions praying for their release have been placed in various hotels in different parts of the country, including Dublin. This is an old dodge for obtaining signatures on a large scale at a moderate expense, and doubtless it is anticipated that among the hotel-frequenting classes a large proportion of sympathisers with the imprisoned raiders is likely to be found. When, however, the petition comes to be presented, it is desirable that the signatures should be weighed as well as counted. The petition states, as one of the grounds for release, that, owing to the prisoners having been accustomed to an open-air life, their health is likely to be impaired by confinement in gaol. On the same argument, all the poachers at present in prison, and not a few of the burglars, and other representatives of the "dangerous classes," ought to be released at the same time as Dr. Jameson and his colleagues. Those of Dr. Jameson's friends who are still at large would do well not to make him and his companions ridiculous by these whining pleas for mercy. I have no vindictive feeling towards Dr. Jameson myself; on the contrary, I sympathise with him more than most people, for I believe him to have been to some extent the deluded victim of a more astute conspirator; but, having played the game and lost, he must pay the stakes.

Lord Lonsdale's defence of the Emperor William in his speech at Whitehaven has excited so much attention that his other remarks on the Transvaal raid appear to be in danger of being overlooked. What he said, however, was very much to the point. "When," Lord Lonsdale observed, "people told him that Jameson and Rhodes deserved the Victoria Cross, he had answered that they really deserved six months' imprisonment and the 'cat' just as much as the man who broke into a bank and stole bullion." Lord Lonsdale further expressed the opinion that "great blame attached to the Chartered Company," a view which will be shared by all competent and candid critics.

A "prominent member of the Chartered Company," I see, airs the opinion that the Chartered Company has practically purged itself of the raid, and that if some of the servants of the Company, acting without authority, undertook an unlawful expedition, the shareholders should not suffer. This idea of non-contributory responsibility will hardly hold water. Mr. Cecil Rhodes had a power of attorney giving him full authority to act for the Company in South Africa; Dr. Jameson was its administrator in Rhodesia. Certainly, if the telegrams which were produced at the Cape Parliament inquiry are authentic, and I have seen no doubt thrown on their authenticity, Mr. Rhodes and Dr. Jameson did confederate together with certain persons in Johannesburg to levy war against the Transvaal, and the troops of the Company were collected by them for this purpose. Whether Mr. Rhodes decided at the last moment to defer the expedition or not, has nothing to do with his liability for conspiring to bring together troops to take part in it. As well might it be said that, if A were to place B with explosives and matches close to a rick, A would escape liability if he sent at the last moment orders to B to put off the firing, and B did not attend to them. The British Government is responsible to the Transvaal, the Company to the British Government, and, I should say, Rhodes, Beit, Jameson, and Co. to the Company.

Again I say, far be it from me to hazard an opinion on the ups and downs of the Stock Exchange, for this I leave to my estimable friend Mr. Moses Moss. But I cannot help smiling at the manner in which the silly shareholders of the South African Chartered Company have been caught, owing to their robust credulity. They refused to allow an arrangement to be entered into, by which the greater portion of the new issue of their Company's shares was to be underwritten. The old shares then stood at a premium of 150 per cent., and the shareholders thought that they saw their profit in taking the new shares at a premium of 100 per cent., being under the impression that what they obtained for £2 they would at once be able to sell for £2. 10s. They failed, however, to realise that the premium is a nominal one, and that, were a large number of shares offered for sale, no one would buy them; for the very simple reason that no one not already a shareholder of the Company would dream of investing in its shares.

One day last week, it was authoritatively stated in the papers that President Kruger had made demand for an indemnity of £1,000,000. The next day this was met by an announcement that the President had seized the present moment to put forward this claim in order to prevent applications for the new shares. As a matter of fact, he has never formulated the amount of his demand. But I am bound to say that I think that £1,000,000 would be a moderate indemnity, in view of the fact that the Transvaal was invaded by the armed force of the Company, and that this caused loss of life and property, as well as a great disturbance of public order. But how does it affect the value of the shares of the Company, whether the demand be made at present or a little later on?

"TRUTH" will be sent weekly to any address in the United Kingdom for 7s. for 3 months; 14s. for 6 months; or 28s. for 12 months. The subscription for all Countries included in the Postal Union is, 3 months, 7s. 8d.; 6 months, 15s. 4d.; 12 months, £1 10s. 8d. All subscriptions are payable in advance, and cheques and P.O.O.'s should be made payable to the MANAGER, "Truth" Buildings, Carteret-street, S.W.

Apart, however, from this indemnity, the notion of the shares being worth a premium of 100 or 150 on their face-value is so utterly absurd, that those who pay this for them, only show into what abysmal folly a sanguine mind can fall. A coloured gentleman wrote to me last week to tell me that he wished to dispose of a gold mining land on the Gold Coast, and to sell certain mahogany lands in that part of the world, in order to carry out the intentions of H. M. Emmil Gnow, King of Eastern Massau, under a deed poll of this Majesty, who unfortunately is dead. I should as soon think of giving a large sum for these mahogany lands, as of becoming an investor in the shares of the Chartered Company, even if the latter were to be purchased at par. People are apt to think that these shares must be valuable, because they have been owned by eminent financiers, but it is forgotten that these eminently astute gentlemen got these shares for next to nothing, and made their profit by selling them to fools at a premium of 700 or 800 per cent.

The Bechuanaland News is not particularly complimentary to the European element in the Protectorate, judging by a copy dated October 10 that has been sent to me. The Protectorate, it says, has become "the Alsatia of all the light-fingered gentry of South Africa." The description is probably applicable to many of the Europeans in Rhodesia as well as in Bechuanaland. But reading on, I find that all this indignation is due, not to the evil habits of the Europeans, but to the reins being in the hands of Lord Rosmead, a "venerable, silly old gentleman, who is grasping and jealous of power." The charge against him seems to be that he is protecting the natives against these light-fingered Europeans. Sad, indeed, to relate, this "venerable, silly old gentleman" has established a native police force, "for the express purpose, it would seem, of insulting any white man or woman bold enough to ask them a civil question." The next thing that we shall hear is, that the Chartered Company has invaded Bechuanaland to defend the wives and children of the Europeans there from the savage Bechuanas. Possibly the letter, asking the Chartered forces to interfere—as was the case with that of the Johannesburgers—has already been manufactured, and is kept in the archives of the Company ready for use. Khama, it will be remembered, was only saved from the devouring zeal of the Chartered philanthropists by coming over to England and pleading his own cause.

CARPET BEATING SEASON.—The Queen says: "A good place to send carpets to is the Compressed Air Carpet and Tapestry Cleaning Company, Brook Green, Hammersmith, W. Dust blown out. No beaters used." To prevent deception carpets cleaned by this process bear the Trade Mark on the back.

SCRUTATOR.

THREE LITTLE ENGLANDERS.

THE three persons in the country who are the most strongly desirous that we should bring our occupation of Egypt to a speedy close are Lord Salisbury, Mr. John Morley, and myself. The first has, again and again, called attention to the dangers involved in this occupation. But Lord Salisbury has to reckon with his Party, and he dares not run openly counter to the howling Dervishes of Jingoism, who would have us not only remain in Egypt, but add also to our possessions in the Upper Valley of the Nile. Mr. John Morley has been even more outspoken than Lord Salisbury in his objections. But he was the representative of Home Rule in Lord Rosebery's Cabinet, and in his anxiety to ensure that the Cabinet would not throw over Home Rule, he condoned for a time Lord Rosebery's Egyptian policy, which was to convert temporary occupation into permanent annexation. I am but a humble soldier in the Radical Army, and have had to subordinate my views on this matter to no such exigencies. I represent the opinions of the rank and file of the Radicals, being one of the rank and file myself; therefore, as an unattached patriot, in season and out of season, have I denounced our occupation of Egypt.

Events move so swiftly that what occurred fifteen or sixteen years ago is almost forgotten, and the field is left open for romance. It is therefore desirable that the search-light of truth should dispel the mists beneath which the Jingo Press would conceal the truth. The Khedive Ismail borrowed large sums of money, and thus accumulated a vast debt against Egypt, that country having received about £20 for every nominal £100 of its indebtedness. So long as Ismail could borrow to pay interest on these usurious loans, he was represented by the money-lending fraternity as a most enlightened Prince. They continued to buy his bonds cheap and to sell them dear to fools. But when this remunerative trade became impossible, he was denounced by them as a rogue, who refused to meet his engagements. French and English interference took place, not with a view to benefit the Egyptians, but in order to force them to pay the usurious interest on the Ismail debts. Ismail protested that they could not pay without being crushed by the burthen. He was at once got rid of, and his son became Khedive. A joint control over the finances by France and England was established. At that time there was a sort of Egyptian Parliament. This Parliament asked that the salaries of a herd of European harpies, who were the employees of this dual control, should be submitted to it in the Budget. The new Khedive assented. But both France and England protested. Hence the Arabi outbreak. England undertook to suppress it, and in so doing burnt down Alexandria and slew many Egyptians. France had declined to join in these high-handed proceedings. Egypt consequently was occupied by England, on an express pledge to Europe that the occupation was to be temporary. An Egyptian Government was to be formed, and so soon as it got into working order we were to withdraw. We have remained there ever since, on the plea that the Egyptians are not fit for self-government, notwithstanding their protests, and the protests of Europe. At present our Jingoes contend that we have done so much for Egypt that we have created for ourselves a right to remain there for ever; or, in other words, that, having got hold of the country in the interest of financial sharks, on a pledge not to remain there, we may treat these pledges as piecrust.

Thus interest is made the test of honour. One of the main articles of the Jingo faith is, that the honour of the country is not concerned in keeping its plighted word, but that it is concerned in retaining any territory which it occupies, no matter under what pledges of withdrawal that occupation may have arisen. This is a new code of morality, but on the low standpoint of mere expediency, I venture to submit (1) that a country suffers from acting upon it, just as an individual would suffer in his business relations were he to make it his rule of conduct; (2) that in the particular case of our conversion of a temporary and conditional occupation of Egypt into annexation, whatever our loss of credit may be from lying, it is not balanced by any direct and immediate advantage accruing to us from so doing. This has long been the opinion of our leading Statesmen, and in order to bring this home to all, I give the following extracts from their public utterances, merely prefacing them with the admitted fact that, in 1887, Lord Salisbury did himself negotiate a treaty of withdrawal with the Porte, which, if the Porte had not refused to ratify it, would have already brought our occupation to an end:—

February, 1883:—

Sir Stafford Northcote complained that the Government was indefinite in regard to the time that the occupation would last. Lord Hartington, replying for the Government, said that the time was more likely to be six months than half a century.

March, 1883:—

Lord Dufferin, then British Commissioner in Egypt, wrote that "the permanent occupation of Egypt being contrary to the repeated declarations of H.M. Government, it is not an idea to which I can give the slightest sanction."

March 3, 1883:—

An order for withdrawal was issued, when Mr. Gladstone said: "This is a subject for congratulation, as it will offer a new testimony to the world that we have been in earnest in the declarations that we have perpetually made."

February, 1884. Lord Derby:—

"From the first our intention has been to withdraw our force as soon as circumstances allow. We wish to help Egypt out of her troubles, but we do not wish to turn Egypt into a British dependency. We have always looked forward to the time when our powers should end. Is it your proposition that the sacrifices of Egypt entitle her to claim exclusive influence in Egypt? We went there, having made a solemn declaration to Europe that we did not intend to do what you now ask us to do. We made that declaration in the name of the English Crown, and with the authority of the British Parliament."

June 24, 1884, Lord Granville to French Ambassador:—

"H.M. Government is willing that the withdrawal of the troops shall take place at the beginning of 1886. At or before the expiration of the occupation, H.M. Government will propose to the Powers and to the Porte a scheme for the neutralisation of Egypt on the basis applied to Belgium."

December 17, 1886, Lord Lyons to French Minister of Foreign Affairs:—

"H.M. Government is anxious to be relieved of the burthen which was entrusted to them by the occupation of Egypt."

January 27, 1887. Lord Salisbury to Lord Lyons:—

"The object which the Powers of Europe have in view, and which it is not less the desire of H.M. Government to attain, may be generally expressed by the phrase, the 'neutralisation of Egypt.' But it must be neutralisation with an exception designed to maintain the security and the permanence of the whole arrangement. This was the right of re-entry to which France had assented."

November 3, 1886. In a despatch of M. Waddington to the French Minister of Foreign Affairs, in which he relates a conversation with Lord Salisbury, he quotes the following observation of the latter to him:—

"They are greatly mistaken amongst you, who think that we want to remain indefinitely in Egypt. We seek the means honestly to withdraw. The troops that we have there would be more useful in India. This is the opinion of our best Generals."

When the Treaty with Turkey, which was not ratified by that Power, was signed, Sir Henry Drummond Wolff, the British negotiator, wrote:—

"The drain on the military and financial resources of England rendered it most desirable that an end should, as soon as possible, be made to a position of so delicate and dangerous a character. In time of peace it would have exposed her to constant jealousy and danger; in time of war, it would have been a weak point."

To the despatch from which the above is an extract, Lord Salisbury expressed his assent.

June 10, 1887. Lord Salisbury:—

It was not open to us to assume the Protectorate of Egypt, because H.M. Government had again and again pledged themselves that they would not do it.

December 20, 1888. Mr. Goschen:—

We are pledged before Europe not to occupy Egypt permanently. I say distinctly that we do not look upon the occupation of Egypt as strengthening the position of this country.

August 20, 1889. Lord Salisbury:—

To say that, in spite of all we have said, we will declare our stay in Egypt permanent, would show an insufficient regard to the sanctity of the obligations which the Government of the Queen have undertaken, and by which we are bound to abide.

1891, Mr. Gladstone:—

Our occupation of Egypt is an embarrassment and a weakness.

February 10, 1892. Lord Granville:—

Our occupation is fraught with great advantage to that country, the long continuance of which is, however, fraught with great disadvantage to our Empire.

Lord Salisbury, in reply, said:—

This constitutes a sound and orthodox statement of the view that has always been held on both sides.

Of all these eminent gentlemen, Lord Salisbury has been, it will be seen, the strongest in his declarations that we are most desirous to leave Egypt, not only because we are pledged to this, but because our occupation is a danger and weakness to the British Empire. It is to be noted that, during all the time that we have been there, not one Statesman until the present year remotely hinted that, before leaving, we must subdue the Soudan. Our Soudan expedition has, indeed, been obviously undertaken to furnish us with a new plea to continue our occupation, as well as to enlarge its area. To tell Europe that we only remain in Egypt because the Egyptians are not yet fit for self-government, and then to insist that we must remain there, not only until they have learnt to govern themselves, but also to govern a huge province inhabited by men who loathe them, is really the very cynicism of hypocrisy.

This hypocrisy is, in truth, the worst feature in our Egyptian "grab." In past ages there have been signal instances of bad faith in the dealings between nations.

But they were openly and avowedly done in defiance of all moral law, and I know of no case in which they were accompanied, as in that of our action in Egypt, with such paltry and contemptible pretence of the loftiest and most disinterested motives. For my part, I respect Lord Charles Beresford far more than I do the "sand the sugar" humbugs, who affect honesty in dishonesty, who when they lie, call God and man to bear evidence to their love of truth: and who when they rob pretend they are despoiling their victims on broad principles of philanthropy. Lord Charles Beresford—a rough and ready sailor—with a frank disregard of all except the accommodating ethics of the Norse freebooters from whom our ancient families glory to have descended, sweeps away all these cobwebs of complacent sophistry. We have, he says, got into Egypt, no matter how. It is a rich land, and one which may prove useful to us. Therefore, let us, without further subterfuges, annex it. Beati possidentes.

As to Lord Salisbury's foreign policy in respect to Turkey, if it means—although obscured by a firework of jokes and grandiloquent fustian designed to tickle the ears of City Aldermen and such-like beings—that he repents of all the follies into which he allowed his better judgment to be betrayed by that Oriental Jingo, Lord Beaconsfield, and that he is prepared to leave Russia to reduce the Sultan to a state of vassalage, in which the scoundrel will only continue to occupy his throne, provided that his power for evil over the Christians inhabiting his dominions be reformed out of existence, this unquestionably is a step in the right direction. But I prefer the clear policy of Mr. Gladstone, which is to withdraw from any European Concert, which, directly or indirectly, implies that we accept any share of responsibility for allowing the Sultan to have the shadow of the shade of authority over his fellow human beings; and to declare that never will we, as in the past, move hand or foot to hinder any one from bag and baggaging him and his Pashas off the face of the globe. We must remember, however, that Lord Salisbury has to reckon with the blatant dolts who support him in the House of Commons, and in the Press; and so long as he continues on the right path, we must extend a helping hand to him. What I fear, however, is that he will not be allowed by his own Party to give effect to his own views, and that we shall drift back into our old traditional policy of making the integrity of the Ottoman Empire the keynote of our Eastern policy, no matter what iniquities may be the consequence of this policy. There are in Lord Salisbury two men—one a man of common sense, whose opinions upon our foreign policy are identical with those of Sir William Harcourt, Mr. Morley, and others, who are termed, in the slang of Jingoism, "Little Englanders"; the other a man who is the Leader of a Party, the majority of whose members are almost as silly as Sir Ellis Ashmead-Bartlett. The sensible Hyde is often obliged to vapour as the foolish Jekyll. And, unfortunately, our late titular Leader is, if possible, more of a Jingo than "Sir Bartlett," so that Lord Salisbury has found himself not only surrounded by Jingoes, but faced with political opponents who have made themselves the allies of the advocates of this pernicious heresy, instead of combating it. Now, however, it is to be hoped that the Liberal Party will henceforward remain true to the principles of Mr. Gladstone, and that an end has been made, once and for all, to the doctrine of continuity in folly and crime.

THE 20TH HUSSARS.

As was to be expected, a great deal of correspondence has been addressed to me with reference to the article in TRUTH of November 5 on certain doings of the officers of the 20th Hussars in England and in India. I beg to thank my correspondents one and all, especially those who have contributed new facts deserving of attention. In view of what I now learn, it would be an easy matter to amplify considerably the indictment contained in my last article. Possibly it may yet become necessary to do so. For the present, however, I prefer to let the case stand on the facts which I published a fortnight ago, because these are facts in regard to which the military authorities can, if they so please, obtain for themselves all the evidence which has been communicated to TRUTH, and decide the issue—supposing the TRUTH allegations to be denied—judicially and decisively. In what has already been said the 20th have enough to answer, in all conscience, and the first question is when and how their answer is to be called for.

If I am rightly informed, the Commander-in-Chief in India has already had his attention called to the matter, and the action to be taken will rest with him in the first instance. Before all things it is to be hoped that Sir George White will profit by the blunders of Lord Wolseley and Sir Redvers Buller in their recent treatment of the 4th Hussars scandal. We have seen what a War Office "inquiry" meant in that instance. The allegations in that case had been made in TRUTH obviously on the authority of the relatives of the two officers whose treatment by their comrades was in question. To silence an awkward discussion in Parliament the Under-Secretary for War promised that the Commander-in-Chief would make a personal inquiry into the facts, and see that justice was done. Beyond inviting the fathers of the two officers concerned to put their complaints into writing, Lord Wolseley made no pretence of hearing their side of the case, or allowing them to substantiate their assertions, or to test those made in reply to them. The "inquiry" which followed consisted in obtaining from the officers whose conduct was impugned their answers to the allegations against them. On those answers, letters were written to the two gentlemen who had been invited to formulate their complaints, informing them that their sons were clearly unfit for the Service, and that though the Commander-in-Chief could not officially approve of the means taken to get rid of them, he fully approved of the result thereby attained, and was not disposed to interfere with it. A grosser travesty of justice than this pretence at an "inquiry" has never been perpetrated. Those who know Sir George White assert that he is not the man to deal with an ugly scandal in that way. Such assertions do not impress me too deeply, because those who knew Lord Wolseley asserted, with just as much confidence, that he would be the last man to condone such detestable misconduct as that which marked the bullying of Mr. Hodge out of the 4th Hussars. Functionaries in high places not unfrequently disappoint their admirers when it is a question between performing an unpleasant duty, to the possible displeasure of influential personages, and getting out of the difficulty with a bucketful of official whitewash. However, I am ready to believe the best of Sir George White until the contrary is proved, and I think I have given him in this instance an excellent opportunity of showing what he is made of. If he honestly desires to arrive at the truth, assuming that the TRUTH allegations are denied, he can have no difficulty in doing so, if he goes the right way to work. The allegations respecting the persistent ill-treatment of the particular subaltern who was the victim of the outrage in the Colchester riding-school cover a considerable period of time, and relate to matters which are within the knowledge of numerous witnesses, besides the officers of the regiment. The latter observation is particularly true of the disgraceful incident in which this subaltern was made to ride his horse over a bonfire in the compound, and also of the still more abominable performance when another subaltern was made to dress up as a native waiter and salaam his own servant. In any genuine inquiry into these circumstances, not only will all the officers be examined who have been at Mhow during the last twelve months, and have been in a position to know what has been going on, but also all the syces, mess-waiters, and other native hangers-on of the regiment, who are alleged to have witnessed the worst of the incidents that have been described. I would also point out to Sir George White that, for the reasons mentioned in my last article, any attempt on the part of the subalterns who have been thus bullied to extenuate the treatment they have received must be taken subject to considerable discount. The incident in the Colchester riding-school does not, I take it, come within the purview of the Indian authorities. That concerns the War Office, and I shall be rather surprised, after what I hear as to the late Lord Beaumont's action in the matter, if the War Office has not already some official information on the subject.

On one point, at any rate, let there be no mistake, either in Whitehall or in India. There will have to be a real, business-like investigation of this case sooner or later. Accounts have yet to be settled with Parliament over the empty farce which has been offered in fulfilment of Lord Wolseley's pledge to inquire personally into the 4th Hussars scandals. Whatever view may be taken of that case, it is not likely that the House will again allow itself to be bamboozled by any such subterfuge; and if a full and satisfactory explanation is not forthcoming by such time as the question is raised, the House will have to consider the advisability of adopting means of its own for getting at the whole truth. The question at issue is not limited to the conduct of one or two officers on this or that occasion. It touches the general state of discipline and esprit de corps in several cavalry regiments, and, indirectly, the honour and credit of the whole Army. The time for trifling with the question and burking investigation is passed, and the military authorities will best consult their own interest and that of the Army by recognising this at once, and dealing with the matter spontaneously in such a way as will satisfy the public.

LEIGH SAMPSON ON A NEW TACK.

The man of many aliases, best known as Leigh Sampson, has just adopted a new trick. It is one familiar to readers of TRUTH in connection with the operations of the Californian "buried treasure" swindlers, Captain MacVeigh, of Dumfries, and others. He writes a letter addressed to some likely man whose death he has seen announced in the papers, intimating that he has completed a commission given to him and is ready to deliver the work. This letter is, of course, expected to fall into the hands of the representatives of the deceased gentleman, who, it is hoped, will tumble to the suggestion, and purchase the work which the deceased is supposed to have ordered. Sampson's letters, of course, have reference to pictures which he professes to have painted, but which in reality he has bought of one or other of the artists who have worked for him for many years past. He carries out the trick with all the ingenuity and plausibility which have marked his previous efforts in the character of the impecunious and struggling artist. Here are a few samples of his correspondence. It will be seen that he writes in the name of "A. Clark," one of the many aliases under which he has attempted to conceal his identity during the last few months. The first letter is written to a clergyman in the West of England who had died some two months previously:—

100, Disraeli-road, Putney, London, S.W.
September 17, 1896.

REVEREND AND DEAR SIR,—I have lately removed here, and I respectfully beg to inform you that the drawing in water-colour you saw some time ago is now finished and awaits your final approval; the price being, as aforementioned, ten guineas (£10. 10s.).

Illness and trouble have prevented my writing earlier.

I have not framed it, but it is mounted and looks, I think, both artistic and pretty.

Will you kindly say when I may have the pleasure of sending it? I can do so without further delay.

With much respect and many thanks for your past great kindness, I beg to remain, Reverend and Dear Sir, very faithfully yours,

A. CLARK.

This letter, of course, as Sampson had expected, was opened by the son and executor, who wrote to inform "A. Clark" that his father had died. Sampson then penned the following communication:—

100, Disraeli-road, Putney, London, S.W.
September 23, 1896.

REVEREND AND DEAR SIR,—It is with deep and sincere regret I read your kind favour. Your father was one of the kindest of gentlemen, and his generosity and benevolence to me have laid me under a debt of gratitude I shall never discharge.

When I last saw him, now some time ago, he was especially cheerful and kind, and I little thought when I bade him good-bye it would be for the last time.

I shall never forget him!

I trust you will not think me selfish when I add that I have another reason to regret his death, and that is the water-colour drawing he saw and ordered to be finished has only just been completed.

CYCLING SUITS are a speciality at Ulster House, Conduit-street, London, W., where Ulsters, Overcoats, and Capes are kept ready for immediate use.

I have been long ill from a weak action of the heart, and now even am far from well.

This illness has prevented me from working, and I am constantly attacked.

I have a large family to support, and I am as poor as a man can be and live. Hence I was looking forward to the pleasure of selling your lamented father the drawing mentioned, and I would humbly make a respectful appeal to you to examine it.

I am sending it down with this letter enclosed carriage paid to your address. I call it "When Autumn Leaves are Falling: Scene near Manningtree, N.E., Essex."

The price of ten guineas (£10 10s. 0d.) is low when the quality and finish of the work are considered. I shall be profoundly grateful and obliged did you, in my anxious and unhappy circumstances, decide to honour me by retaining the drawing yourself. I can safely say it is worth the small price asked.

I do not ask charity and I could never accept it, seeking solely to sell the work.

Earnestly hoping for a favourable reply, I beg to remain, Reverend and Dear Sir, yours respectfully and faithfully,

A. CLARK.

The picture referred to was sent with this letter, and the gentleman who received it replied to the effect that he was sorry the picture had been sent, and that he did not want it. The truth, fortunately, was that he had a pretty shrewd suspicion as to Mr. A. Clark's identity. Consequently, although Sampson wrote two further letters offering to alter the picture (meaning thereby that he would have it altered by one of his "ghosts"), insisting that he had had the commission from his correspondent's father, and making touching references to the deceased gentleman, he utterly failed to impose upon his correspondent, and his letters in due course found their way to TRUTH Office.

Those who have seen my previous exposure of Sampson, and who know how the same trick has been worked by other swindlers, will hardly need further evidence that Sampson's story about the commission, and his pathetic allusions to his deceased patron, are a tissue of impudent lies. But, if such evidence were required, I have it in the simple fact that the executor of another gentleman, recently deceased, has also sent me a letter of Sampson's, word for word identical with the first letter printed above, except only in the omission of the word "Reverend," the gentleman addressed in this case not being a clergyman. In all probability Sampson has sent out many other letters in identical terms. I only hope that he has not succeeded in imposing upon anybody So far as readers of TRUTH are concerned, there is, I imagine, little chance of his having done so; but for the sake of those who have not seen my articles, I take this opportunity of mentioning again that the writer of the above letters, by whatever name he calls himself, is one of the most indefatigable and audacious imposters now at large. He has no right to the title of an artist, and he is totally incapable of producing anything that could be sold as a picture. He is simply a swindling picture dealer, whose true name seems to be Levi Sampson, who buys pictures of unknown artists at two or three guineas apiece, and unloads them on the public by every conceivable trick and subterfuge that ingenuity can suggest. He has been at this game for five or six years past, and he has now been so fully exposed that I hope it will not be long before he meets with the reward which he so richly deserves.

THE SANITARY ENGINEERING CO. (Carter Bros.), 65, Victoria-st., Westminster, for making Sanitary Surveys in London or country.

NOTES FROM PARIS.

AN OVERLORD OF HELLS.

THE roulette table which under Royal auspices sprang up in the Ostend Casino has, phylloxera-like, spread all over Belgium. I am constantly receiving prospectuses of municipal hells founded, or about to be founded, in that country. I have just had a gambling-house prospectus from Erquelines, the first town beyond the French frontier on the old road of invasion from Germany by the Sambre. The idea of the promoters of this concern is to bleed Monaco. There is the Monaco roulette table—that is thirty-six numbers and one zéro, rouge, noir, pair, impair, passe, manque, &c. Persons admitted to the tables must first be elected members of the "club" which runs the roulette. But as forms of admission are sent in all the prospectuses, and handed about by touts, some of my friends get prospectuses both at their offices and their houses. The profits must be enormous. I should like to have a talk with the King of the Belgians about them. He, you know, will not only be soon a neighbour of the Prince of Monaco, at Beaulieu, where he has bought a tremendously valuable property, but wants to be his émule. The Erquelines Casino has no expenses worth talking about. Unlike the Monaco Company, it has not to pay a huge royalty to any Prince. It claims to offer all the advantages of Monte Carlo, has the climate, has the greater advantage of being only three hours from Paris, and is sure to have crowds of small business people going there from Saturday to Monday. As it is near Liége and Spa, gamblers who go to Erquelines in summer can make nice little tours in the picturesque Walloon country, or recruit at mineral springs. The Casino was opened the other day. A big military personage, who is also a civic magnate, took the chair as Honorary President at the inaugural dinner. He wore the Star of Leopold on his breast, and made an enthusiastic speech about the glowing prospects of the commune. French gold was to stream in here. This caused a scandal, and the worthy officer found he must, ostensibly at any rate, drop the hell. He resigned the honorary chairmanship on the ground that sa bonne foi était surprise. Poor innocent being! In a prospectus that I received long before the dinner, his name appeared in full under a flaming chromo-lithograph of the roulette table. At Spa, certain amounts have to be paid to the Municipality, and coals have to be distributed to the poor in the town by the proprietor of the hell. But I am told that this financier boasts that his own net profit averages £80,000 per annum.

The King of the Belgians is fond of money. How could the son of Leopold I. and the grandson of Louis Philippe be anything else? It is a mistake to imagine that he has lost by the Congo Free State. He has found in it great pecuniary advantage. To enable him to "cap" Monaco, the people about Court are trying to secure for him a gambling monopoly in Belgium. They have secured the help of the Belgian Senate. Were he not willing to discharge the function of General Manager of the Belgian casinoes the movement would not now be on foot. The excuse for trying to invest him with a casino royalty is "public morals." Why not at once set up Falguères' nude danseuse, exhibited at the last Salon, as the Goddess of Chastity?

Gambling, I have said, began at the Ostend Casino. I have compared it to phylloxera. The King's adroit friends compared it to a leprosy. They got up an outcry against foreign casinoes, or casinoes managed by foreigners with an eye to attracting French players. The agitation was treated seriously. At any rate, the Belgian public were led to think so. It was referred to the Senate, which named a Select Committee to inquire into the alarmist complaints. I can fancy the members winking at each other, like the augurs in Couture's painting. After taking evidence in the usual way, but with more celerity than one might expect of a Select Parliamentary Committee, they have let the cat out of the bag. They judge that the suppression of casinoes would be too abrupt a measure. It would, besides, interfere with vested interests, private, municipal, and other. What they propose is that the King should be made "Overlord" of all public gambling-houses. A Royal functionary should act as his delegate. The doors of casinoes would be thrown wide open like those of the Palais Royal hells in the days of his Majesty's great-grandfather, Égalité. The butcher, the baker, the candle-stick maker, the workman, might enter and play. No more need for the formality of election, which costs 20f. This fig-leaf would be torn away, and the character of the casino would be bare—naked as the danseuse aforesaid, with the hidden ears. And still there would be more than a grain of hypocrisy. Louis Philippe offered Royalty to the revolutionists of Paris as la meilleure des Républiques. The Select Committee of the Belgian Senate would enable the King to collect gambling-house gains—"to do good to the working-classes." Is not this Socialist philanthropy up to date? But there may be a French side to the question. The drain of money, it is expected, will be from France. May not France think it better to direct the stream from Belgium by turning, say, the palaces of Versailles and Fontainebleau into open casinoes, and building a grand hell on the site of La Cour des Comptes? Or may she not treat Belgium as a European plague-spot particularly dangerous to France, and annex her? What an elusive thing progress is, and how often delusive!

England cannot do too much, short of going to war, to help the Armenians. As a cheap substitute for war I should not object to a grant to take that industrious and clever people to some of our over-sea dominions. That horror of horrors, the agreement of Foreign Ministers to purchase the silence of the Press in regard to the massacres, is depressing when it is not maddening. I can almost admit extenuating circumstances for a Sultan cooped up with three or four hundred wives, ignorant as owls, and with those fat and beardless creatures, in men's clothes, who surround him. The worn-out, wretched being remembers how Abdul Aziz was "suicided" and Murad locked up. He trembles for his luxuries and his safety, when tricky diplomats, or their agents, thrust bogies before his eyes. Pilate was not so guilty as the Sanhedrim who frightened him into signing the Crucifixion warrant. I dare say that Herod, in ordering the Massacre of the Innocents, was worked upon by goading agents of crafty Augustus, who wanted to turn the Jews against him, and make him the more a tool of Rome. But what I cannot understand is the unanimity of the Continental Press in keeping silence. I was told the other day by an Englishman that when certain journalists go to a certain Foreign Office, they are, one by one, shown into a room where they find sums of money on certain tables. They know they are expected to take the sums, and take them. But to avoid an improbable charge of theft, each asks a secretary who is looking on, "Is this for me?" "Yes." And without more ado, he pockets the money and the insult. The journalists, after this, one at a time see the great man or his secretary, and receive the cue — it may be to persevere in ignoring the massacres, or in bothering Salisbury, or in backing up some international expedient or nostrum. I can understand this being true to the letter. I know that my informant is truth itself, and I know who his informant is, and so can understand silence, but hardly unbroken silence.

Voltaire scouted the story of the Massacre of the Innocents. No contemporaneous writers, except the tax-collector, St. Matthew, ever mentioned it. I used to wonder whether Voltaire might not be right, but no longer do. Were England submerged, there would be no European newspaper record of the Armenian atrocities, unless in La Justice, and that paper cries in the desert, because the shout of "English agent" was raised three years ago against Clémenceau. To be sure, there are the speeches delivered the other day in the Chamber by MM. Jaurès and Comte de Mun. But here, again, Voltairian incredulity might find scope. The Comte spoke one way and voted the other, without an apparent excuse. We who are behind the scenes know that he wanted to please the clergy, who are secretly for Armenia; but that the Méline Cabinet French Ministers think it safe to keep on the course Prince Lobanoff marked out until the Czar is settled in his winter-quarters. A future Voltaire may say: "This explanation will not do. France at all times prided herself on the international generosity of her policy. Her Republican Government was based on Liberty, Fraternity, Equality, and for the whole world if possible. Nobody was more versed in her diplomatic traditions than M. Hanotaux. France was a protectress of the Sultan's Christian subjects. In his answer to the Jaurès speech he is so much behind the question that it is no answer. One must suppose that Jaurès was telling rhetorical lies, and that, as he was a very able man and a desperate, daring Socialist, Hanotaux did not dare to contradict him flat. He kept tacking about and neither saying Yes or No."

Another difficulty for the future Voltairian will be how to reconcile the story of the massacres with the facts. He will say: "The massacring Sultan is supported by a humane and enlightened Republic and three most civilised and Christian Emperors. One of the Emperors is the head of the Lutheran Church in Prussia; he professes to have a religious afflatus, communes with his own soul in Luther's room at the Wartburg, acts as a chaplain on board the Imperial yacht, and, though treating God as a junior partner, reverences His name. Another Emperor is 'most Apostolical;' he is good, kind, just as anxious as M. de Mun to please the Pope, and is no friend of Turkey. The third is the head of the Greek Church, God's anointed, and sincerely religious. Visiting irreligious Paris, the first thing he did was to go and thank God publicly for having brought him in safety there. The policy of his House has never varied. It is to cast the Turks out of Europe. It is possible that one or even two of these Powers might not have felt a lively interest in the Armenians. But one cannot believe they were all in a conspiracy of silence to stifle their cries. Their peoples would have cried 'shame!' treated them as a gang of malefactors, and hurled them from their thrones. Another point. Do you for a moment fancy that Berlin, Vienna, or Paris editors would have let English confrères monopolise such splendid 'copy' as the massacres afforded? Journalistic enterprise was at its zenith in 1896. Telegraphic wires then flashed night and day descriptive reports of every kind of event that met the taste of readers hungering for sensations. There was a fortune in the news of wholesale massacres. Sharp Continental editors would not have cast away the opportunity. Old files of English papers, it is true, reek with massacre. But the English were a nation of shopkeepers. Newspaper readers in England wanted horrors. The supply was equal to the demand, and was served up hot and hot. It is clear that there were no massacres of any consequence."

A fancy fair will be held on December 3 in the drawing-rooms of Mrs. Henry Drake, 45, Avenue du Bois de Boulogne, in aid of St. George's Jubilee Church, Rue Auguste Vacquerie. Mrs. Drake's flat is a charming specimen of a West-End Paris residence. It is sure to be filled with la crême de la crême. I am interested in St. George's Church, because an admirer of Mrs. Washington, the Chaplain's wife. She is clever, active, very pleasant to talk to, and really kind. Mrs. Washington is like a judicious mother to English girls here who invoke her help in their troubles. Her charitable action is so controlled by good sense that harm never comes of it. What is more baneful than ill-directed charitable impulse?

LETTER FROM THE LINKMAN.

ENGLISH men and women of to-day, dear Lady Betty, appear to have noticed as an altogether new circumstance that we are not a popular people. The following extract, quoted from a letter written at Berne at the commencement of the Franco-Prussian War of 1870-1, will show that the English were hated as much a quarter of a century ago as they are now:—

"It maddens me to hear Americans, Prussians, and French speak of the English. The first say, 'We long to whip them;' the second, 'When we wish to reduce England to the rank of a third-rate Power we can do it;' and the last declare that when they 'Conquer England' they 'will change this, that, and the other.'"

The English are no more unpopular now than they have been at any time in the history of our race.

* * * * * *

Some years ago it was maintained in these columns that a volume entitled "The Curiosities of Christie's," if compiled with intelligence, would be entertaining and interesting. The members of the firm of Christie & Manson have, during the autumn months, considerably enlarged their celebrated auction-rooms in King-street, St. James's, and when the sale season reopens in a few days those who frequent the rooms will notice with pleasure the improvements that have been effected. In the new exhibition gallery which has been built, a singularly interesting picture now hangs upon the eastern wall. The picture, which was painted by Gonbraud in 1829, represents the sale of the "Snake in the Grass," by Sir Joshua Reynolds, when the Angerstein collection was disposed of—an occasion which is especially memorable, as it was then that the foundation of the National Gallery in Trafalgar-square was laid. On the easel is the "Snake in the Grass." The auctioneer is James Christie, the second head of the firm, and in the foreground are Sir Robert Peel, Mr. Angerstein, Mr. Disraeli—father to the late Lord Beaconsfield, Mr. Allnutt—grandfather to the late Lady Brassey, Lord Stafford, Rogers the poet, Lady Morgan, and many other celebrities of the period.

The most important sale of the season of 1897 will take place in April, when the magnificent galleries of pictures collected by the late Sir John Pender will be dispersed. The finest pictures in the collections are "Mercury and Herse," "The Pictures of Bellini Carried to the Church of the Redeemer at Venice," and "The Wreckers," all painted by Turner; "The Proscribed Royalist," painted by the late Sir John Millais; "The Heights of Surennes," painted by Troyon, and "La Gloria," by John Phillip. The latter work should certainly be acquired for the new Tate Galleries, and it is probable that it will figure in that collection.

In 1894 Sir William Agnew compiled a magnificent catalogue to the collections of the late Sir John Pender, which were hung in Arlington-street and at Foot's Cray. Only a hundred copies of the catalogue were printed, and as they contain admirable platinotype reproductions of the finest pictures in the collections the value of the work is considerable.

Amongst other remarkable sales that are to take place during the forthcoming season are those of the fine collection of English mezzotint portraits and other engravings formerly belonging to the late Lord Bessborough, and the collection of modern pictures and works of art gathered together by the late Mr. Henry Jenkins, one of the partners in the Lion Brewery. Besides these, there will also be sold a considerable portion of the property formerly in the possession of the late Sir John Millais.

* * * * * *

The Colonial Office has lost a valuable official by the retirement of Mr. Frederic Fuller, who has resigned on account of ill-health, after having served the community for thirty-four years. Mr. Fuller was for some years private secretary to Sir Robert Herbert and to Sir Robert Meade, and was known to the public for his work in connection with Australasia, and more particularly as regards the colonisation of the Western Pacific, as to which region he spoke with authority. Mr. Fuller attended the International Congress, held in London some years ago, on behalf of the Colonial Office, which assembly it will be remembered he addressed.

SOLUTION OF TURKISH PROBLEM.—If the authorities at Constantinople would only supply themselves with that eminently soothing and strengthening liqueur, GRANT'S MORELLA CHERRY BRANDY, their difficulties would vanish, placidity of temper and the power of good government would follow as surely as the dawn succeeds the night. Sold everywhere.

CHINA AND GLASS. — Messrs. GOODE, Artists and Designers, solicit an inspection of their collection in their recently-extended South Audley-street premises, now by far the largest and most important in Europe. Messrs. Goode guarantee the excellence of all their productions, and invite a comparison of their prices with those of any co-operative stores.

* * * * *

The death of Mr. Roger Eykyn, which occurred on Saturday, is much to be regretted, for the late Mr. Eykyn was a well-known man in our generation—generally popular and especially amiable. In the City he was much respected; in the West End he was much liked; and whilst he sat in the House of Commons he made many friends amongst all parties. Mrs. Roger Eykyn, his second wife, who was a daughter of the sixth Lord Vaux of Harrowden, died last year.—Believe me to be, very truly yours, MARMADUKE.

SPORTING NOTES.

SIR VISTO has been the conspicuous failure of the present year among the older horses, and his career has been analogous to that of Silvio, who never won a race after his St. Leger victory, although he was in training as a five-year-old. His collapse was the more disappointing inasmuch as he appeared in the spring to be one of the most improved horses in training, and he was very much fancied for the Ascot Cup. He goes to the stud, his fee for next season being 50 gs., and he will stand at the Durdans, near Epsom, where he was bred.

The Duke of Westminster is going to "weed" his stud by getting rid of Conroy and Rampion at Newmarket next month, and he has sold Helm to go to Germany. It is probable that the Duke will also dispose of some of his two-year-olds, which have proved a disappointing lot this season. The Eaton yearlings, however, are a splendid team, and they ought to bring Orme to a high place in next season's list of "winning sires."

Vesuvian, the winner of the Dewhurst Plate, who will be one of the winter favourites for the Derby, has been nominated for nearly all his engagements by Sir Frederick Johnstone; but Lord Alington has a half share in this colt, who was bred at Crichel. Vesuvian commenced the season with nineteen engagements for 1896, of which he fulfilled only one. He has twenty engagements for next year and 1898.

I pointed out after the Newmarket Houghton Meeting that Regret must be in great need of a long rest, considering all the hard work he has gone through this season, both in public races and in private trials. It was a stupid blunder to send Regret to run at Liverpool in his present palpably stale condition. This horse has been by turns extravagantly praised and outrageously abused during the last seven or eight months. The fact is that he cannot stay a yard beyond a mile, but the Kingsclere people, with a truly asinine pertinacity, have gone on running the horse over longer courses. The climax of this calf-headed policy was the monstrous mistake of starting him against Persimmon for the Jockey Club Stakes, instead of Labrador. It may be hoped that next season this dolefully mismanaged horse will be kept to his own proper distance. Some writers, however, are perfectly infatuated about Regret, and when the weights for the Liverpool Cup were published these addleheads declared that he was the pick of the handicap, although the distance is three furlongs beyond his course. Whatever Regret may have achieved at Kingsclere over a mile, I am quite sure that both Shaddock and Labrador are considerably superior to him over any longer course. Next year Regret is entered for both the £10,000 stakes at Newmarket, but he need not be thought of seriously in connection with either event. If the Duke of Westminster is well advised he will have him prepared for the Rous Memorial Stakes at Ascot, which is the only one of his engagements which he seems to have any chance of winning. Regret is just the sort of horse to win the Royal Hunt Cup or the Stewards' Cup if he were reserved for a handicap.

There was an interesting race on Thursday for the Great Sefton Steeplechase, and the betting was very heavy between Rory O'More and Alpheus, who had 6 lb. the worst of the weights with Mr. Hibbert's horse, and who won very easily at the finish. Waterford, who was not backed for sixpence, fell. It is not often that two Grand National winners are to be found in the field for this race. Rory O'More is a good horse over this distance, but he cannot stay the Grand National course. Wild Man from Borneo was obviously backward, and Stratocracy is another of the starters that will see a better day. He is a very promising young horse, and ought to win many good races for Lord Cadogan if he goes on all right.

I see that Orelio is mentioned as likely to turn out a Derby colt next year. It may be hoped that no backer will be so idiotic as to be gulled by any such expansive nonsense into backing the brother to Ormonde, either for the Derby or any other race. Vesuvian is not only the best, but also by far the most promising two-year-old in the Kingsclere stable. Orelio may turn out a useful three-year-old if he trains on all right, but I do not believe he will ever be in the first class. He will probably be a second edition of Le Var, and might follow in that animal's steps by winning a £10,000 stake, thanks entirely to having so much the best of the weights.

The Prince of Wales has no sister to Thais, whose only relative is the two-year-old Oakdene, winner of the Criterion Stakes, who is her half-brother, by Donovan. Poetry, their dam, was barren last year to Kendal, and a few months ago she died at Sandringham with her foal by St. Serf, the sire of Thais.

Next week will be occupied with Warwick and Manchester. Prudent people will leave alone the November Handicap until the day of running, which is Saturday, the 28th.

Keelson, who discovered himself to be an inveterate rogue early in the season, made a successful début as a hurdle-racer at Hamilton Park last week, and he bids fair to develop into a fine jumper. He is now the joint property of Lord Zetland and of Mr. Cunningham, who has trained him for his new kind of work at his place in Roxburghshire.

The Liverpool Cup was a most unsatisfactory race, and there never was a more fortunate winner than Count Schomberg, who was all the rage in the betting at the last, exactly like Winkfield's Pride just before the start for the Cambridgeshire. Birch-rod would have won with a clear course, for she was going better than anything when she fell, and Count Schomberg certainly would not have beaten her. M. Lebaudy's horse showed that he had not forgotten his cross-country work at Auteuil, as he cleverly jumped Lord Stanley's prostrate filly, and but for his readiness he would undoubtedly have fallen down over her. The "placings" need not be regarded, as Count Schomberg had practically won the race after he escaped from the scrimmage. Royal Corrie ran well enough to justify the belief she will win a race before the season closes. Stowmarket was the great Newmarket tip, but he ran very badly indeed. It is certainly hard upon T. Loates that he should meet with another serious accident so soon after the Manchester disaster, but it may be hoped that he will have a speedy and complete recovery.

The statement, which has gone all round the papers, that Mr. Sullivan won £40,000 by the Cambridgeshire victory of his horse, Winkfield's Pride, is a ridiculous romance. Mr. Sullivan only bets in moderate sums, and his winnings were really under £3,500.

There are sure to be large fields at Derby, a meeting which usually proves a veritable Moscow campaign for backers. The Chesterfield Nursery of £1,000 has obtained twenty-six acceptances, out of an original entry of forty-nine, so the subscription already amounts to £505, and if there are twenty runners the Fund will get an additional £200. The weights have been raised 10 lb. My own opinion as to this race is that the Duke of Devonshire will win with the filly by Ayrshire out of Snood, although she is not mentioned by any of the sporting papers. She is also in the Friary Nursery on Friday. If the Snood filly is beaten for to-morrow's race either Greystone or Longest Reign may be the winner. There were fifty-one entries for the Derby Cup of £2,000, and thirty horses have been left in, the list being headed by Laodamia (9 st. 7 lb.), who won very easily last year with 8 st. 9 lb. on her back. Then Laodamia came out perfectly fresh, but now she must be tolerably stale after having been in severe training for several months, and having run for such races as the Doncaster Cup, the Cesarewitch, and the Cambridgeshire. Laodamia, however, is such a good mare that nobody will be surprised if she repeats her victory of twelve months ago, and if at the last she is backed in earnest, as was then the case, nobody who speculates on the race should let her run loose. The Rothschild stable will be represented by Imposition, who ran remarkably well in the Cambridgeshire for about three-quarters of a mile. Court Ball and La Sagesse are both fancied at Newmarket, but Sir James Miller's mare ran very badly in the Cambridgeshire. Lord Cadogan's horse is thrown in with only 7 st. 3 lb. to carry, and he has already shown good form over this course. Lord Ellesmere is to run Miss Frazer, who did well in a gallop at Newmarket last week, and she is sure to win a race either at Derby or at Manchester. Marco seems to have lost his form, although he looked so well on the Cambridgeshire day; but there have been mysterious whisperings that this horse might have a resurrection. Conroy may run well, and so also may Birch-rod if she is none the worse for her accident on Friday. Lord Hervey is apparently well in on his best running, but Lord Ilchester's colt is very uncertain, and I hear that he is believed to be inferior at the weights to his stable companion Miss Fraser. Bellevin seems to have quite enough weight if he showed his true form at Kempton Park, but his running there revealed a vast change for the worse since Manchester. Melange is put out of court by his penalty for winning at Liverpool, for it is out of all reason to suppose that he is 16 lb. superior to Birch-rod over this course. Ghislaine, who appeared to be the pick of the handicap, ran miserably at Liverpool. The distance is not far enough for Carlton Grange, and Amphora ran a perfect wretch last week. Everything in the race depends upon a good start, and it is decidedly not an event for any reckless speculation. I am most disposed to fancy either Court Ball or Sati.

Athletic sports are now in full swing at both Universities. Oxford appears to have the pick of the freshmen. Thomas, the Welsh champion, is probably overrated, and I should not be in the least surprised to see Jordan beat him handsomely in the sprint, while in the quarter the Old Blue is, of course, an entirely different class. By far the most promising freshman is Munro, from Repton. He carried off the Queen's open sprint with a long start easily, and in his College sports (Wadham) he ran out the quarter inside fifty-one seconds. He appeared to finish very strongly, and, naturally had no one to pull him out. In the Queen's sports Newton, the Rugby blue, showed up in the sprints. At Cambridge, Harrison, of Jesus, is showing very great promise as a sprinter. He won the open two hundred handicap in the Freshmen's sports easily, and simply romped home in the Corpus open sprint. He will have to start from scratch in future. In the Freshmen's sports Pilkington did very well. His best performance was over the hurdles, and with practice he should not have much difficulty in getting his blue. In the quarter Davison ran in a most promising manner, but it is doubtful if he will be as good as recent University runners at the same distance. In cross-country runs the South London men scored an easy victory at Oxford against the University team, Sanders running remarkably well. At Cambridge, the Blackheath Harriers were beaten. The University runners, Gibberd and Cook, had a close run for first place, while Richardson, the Freshman, of whom a great deal was expected, went dead lame. The United Hospitals and Lea Harriers had a pleasant invitation five miles run at Chingford, which was won by Barron of Guys.

With Guinness laid up, a number of very second-raters have taken their chances for the Colquhoun Sculls at Cambridge. The Cam is not as inviting as the Isis, and perhaps this may account for the fact that so few men go in for sculling. In the clinker fours there was some admirable racing, and a large entry, which was a very satisfactory feature. Peterhouse thoroughly deserved their win, as they had had some hard racing in the earlier rounds. There can be no doubt about their pluck and staying powers. Brickwood and Payne, three and stroke, are both fair weights, and they should be well worth a little care. The Caius men almost won the final. They were a light crew, and their stroke, Kellie, rowed admirably. At Oxford, the University fours were practically decided in the first heat, when New and Magdalen met. The former showed up much better in the race than in practice, and Whitworth stroked them admirably, keeping very long and regular, and the whole crew got on well to the work at the beginning of each stroke. He might very well have got flurried, for the pistol missed fire and his opponents got much the best of the start. It is, by the way, very rough luck for Whitworth that there is Gold to stroke the University eight. Crum, of course, rowed well, and his steering alone made up for any loss at the start. Gold was rowing two in the Magdalen boat as he had to steer. But he is a better stroke than steerer, and although Carr did his best he is not the same class of stroke as Gold. As an example of high-class rowing the race was well worth seeing. In the final Warre stroked the Balliol men well, but they were out-matched.

The Rugby match between London and the combined Universities was won simply by the play of Wells and Cattell at half. Wells has never played such a fine game. He made his openings when and where he pleased, and simply smothered the opposing halves. The Metropolitan forwards were rather heavier, and so had the best of the scrimmages. The University men quite failed to play up to their reputation, and neither Unwin nor Bell were any good. Judging by the play against Blackheath, Oxford have a lot to learn forward, and those enthusiasts who have been ascribing merits to the whole team which only belong to the outsides, have found themselves wrong. Blackheath, on a wet ground, won solely on their forward play. The Old Leysians did remarkably well to draw against the Scottish with a strong team playing. It was a hard game from start to finish, and it is one of the best performances they have done for a long time. The Old Merchant Taylors were not so fortunate against Coventry, to which town they only took a weak team. But they showed a very strong defence, and it was not until the last few minutes that they were beaten. Rosslyn Park fell all to pieces before Croydon with a heavy lot of forwards, and for the winners Ridge played a fine game, one of his tries being gained after a splendid dribble. Richmond were again in form, and gave Liverpool a bad beating, which was very satisfactory, as the forwards had hard work, owing to the state of the ground.

The London Charity Cup Ties produced some good Association football. Ilford were without their full strength and found Ealing much too strong for them, the Ealing forwards, especially Chater, playing a good game. The Casuals, with nine men only, were much too strong for the 3rd Grenadiers, thanks to the play of Fernie and Collier forward. Clapton were rather fortunate against the Caledonians, as they scored twice from free kicks. At Queen's Club, Sunderland and Corinthians drew a fair crowd, and it was the good shooting of the amateurs that enabled them to win. The "pros," on the other hand, messed about in front of goal, and so gave Lodge and Oakley plenty of time to get round and tackle them. The visitors' backs and halves played a strong, though rather energetic, defensive game at times. In the League matches, Liverpool continue to go very strongly. Although away from home, they drew with Preston North End, their forwards being particularly good, and Trainer's goal-keeping alone saving the home team from defeat.

A brief trip to the North or Midlands makes one realise how keen is the interest in Association football. The competitions opened by various papers for their readers to prophesy the result of matches are extraordinarily popular. The betting, though in small amounts, is very extensive, and one wonders how men can find time to take such an interest in a game. Nor is the knowledge merely on paper. The spectators' criticism of the play is sound and accurate to an astonishing degree, although partisanship runs very high. As an intellectual ideal this form of amusement is not very high. But, then, it gives thousands of people a common fund of amusement the merits of which they are all able to comprehend. They have no time to busy themselves with things they do not understand. Imagine what social problems might be stirred if our huge manufacturing population in the North and Midlands were suddenly bereft of its football. The blank would have to be filled. Football now fills it, and the future Green, in his history of the English people, will have to deal with football as an important factor in national life and character.

The finish of the billiard match between Roberts and Stevenson was peculiarly exciting, as the last-named player nearly caught his opponent napping, and played a finish worthy of the champion himself, for he put on two big breaks, one of 401, the other of 254. Stevenson has never shown better form before. Peall, in an uninteresting match with Spiller, scored an easy win.

Taylor, the late golf champion, being employed at Wimbledon, there was little difficulty in arranging a match with White, at Mitcham. A very good game resulted. Taylor, whose approach play was deadly, was four up at the end of the first round, but this lead White reduced by some fine play, especially on the green. At the last hole Taylor was dormy one, and only won because White just failed to bring off an eight yard putt.

MAMMON.

From MOSES MOSS to BENJAMIN BOSS.

Sunday.

MY DEAR BEN,—There has been nothing striking in the changes which have taken place in the Stock Markets during the past week. Increased stiffness of money has prevented any further upward movement in Home Rails, and generally put the brake on; but now that the settlement has been well got over, rates are easing off again. The syndicate of liars has again been very busy, and operators are so nervous that even the most unlikely rumours find credit temporarily.

The Syndicate of Liars at Work.

So far, all the adverse rumours have been contradicted, and there have not been wanting favourable developments, which in ordinary times would have given the signal for a strong improvement, but which, under present circumstances, are allowed to pass without affecting the markets. The "Bears" in New York were more particularly busy in propagating rumours of a coming war between the United States and Spain on the Cuban question. This canard has been finally disposed of by contradictions both from American and Spanish sources. The Kaffir Circus was disturbed by circumstantial reports that President Kruger had made a demand for an indemnity of one million sterling upon the Chartered Company. This news also proved false, and it is hardly necessary to point out that the "Bear" prophecy which was made a few weeks ago, that the Transvaal Government would throw up the London Convention on the 14th inst., may now also be relegated into the category of exploded rumours. Yet the South African market is still in the dumps, and speculators and holders have, without rhyme or reason, again been throwing their shares upon the market. Those who are doing so now will, I feel sure, be sorry for it afterwards, as the mining industry in the Transvaal is in a better condition than it has been for many a year, and the present weakness is entirely attributable to market conditions. It is impossible, under the circumstances, to exactly predict when a lasting recovery will set in; but that this will come in time cannot be doubted. The same view applies to the West Australian department. The industry in the colony is developing quietly, but steadily. Batteries are going up in all directions, and the time is not far off when numerous crushings will tell their tale, and confound the adverse critics, who are doing their best to belittle the goldfields of West Australia. To holders of all mining shares, carefully selected, I would give the strong advice to sit tight on their holding, and not to play into the hands of the "Bears." The Home Railway market has resisted the weakening influence of a harder Money Market remarkably well, and in several instances improvements have to be recorded. There is no doubt about the improvement in trade, which thus forms a sound basis for the advance in stocks, and the comparatively easy rates which prevailed at the settlement show that stock is by no means plentiful. American Rails have maintained the higher level, established with the election of Mr. McKinley as President, remarkably well. There have been temporary set-backs, but the active American list always seems to come up smiling again, while a considerable demand has arisen for Railroad Bonds. Amongst Foreigners the tone has been firm, even Spanish being quoted above the lowest, while South Americans have been fairly steady. The Industrial section has worn an active appearance, and will probably be further enlivened by the issue of the Bovril prospectus, which is anticipated at the end of this week. Cycle shares have been steady, although the volume of business has been restricted. A strong effort is evidently about to be made to inveigle the public into all kinds of motor-car enterprises dealing with this new means of locomotion, and the procession to Brighton under the auspices of Mr. H. J. Lawson, promoter in chief of horseless carriages, appears to have been intended to fan the flame. I should like to remind my readers that already ten Companies, with a total capital of £2,500,000, have been started for this purpose, and that many of the patents for which large sums are being paid will probably prove worthless, or be superseded by improved inventions. I need but remind the public of what happened at the time of the electric lighting boom, and how few of the patents then exploited for huge amounts have ever paid the shareholders a farthing dividend. Granting that there is a considerable future for the autocar, it must be borne in mind that the survival of the fittest will apply more especially in this case, and that much of the capital which is now being provided by a sanguine public will be irretrievably lost. The motor car demonstration of last Saturday was in many respects a failure, and has brought the defects of the present types of motors into strong relief.

Home Rails Still in Favour.

While there has been no further sensational upward movement in Home Rails, this market has displayed remarkable strength; and the settlement has passed off without any hitch, rates being comparatively easy, as a good deal of stock had apparently been mopped up by investors. Nor is it surprising that the public should again show a partiality for these stocks, as traffics are very satisfactory, and there is every prospect of a further increase in the near future. The dividend period, moreover, is drawing near, and in the case of the Deferred stocks, notably Brighton "A" and Dover "A," large dividends have already accrued. The last weekly traffics showed splendid increases, the Brighton return being £2,349, the South Eastern £4,052, larger than last year. Brighton "A" will doubtless receive at least 7 per cent.; and, therefore, at the present price of 181½, yield nearly 4 per cent. per annum on the investment. Dover "A" should receive from 3¼ to 3½ per cent., and the line shows such remarkable progressiveness that the distribution should be again increased next year, even though the present quotation of 103⅛ does not yield more than about 3¼ per cent. Investors are content to lock the stock up in the hope of higher dividends. It certainly is cheaper than Great Eastern Ordinary, which at the present price of 107¾ will hardly yield more than 2¾ per cent. A considerable amount of business has been transacted in the Heavy stocks, Midlands more particularly coming into favour, and showing a rise of two points; but at the present level of quotations purchasers of the Heavies cannot look for more than a yield of 3½ per cent. Special attention should be paid to the Scotch Deferred stocks, in view of the continued boom in Scotland, developments in the iron, steel, and shipbuilding trades there being quite phenomenal. Efforts have been made by professional "Bears" to put these stocks down by spreading reports as to coming labour troubles, which have, however, been grossly exaggerated. Smaller weekly traffics of the Caledonian and North British lines were also trotted out as a reason for the decline, the Caledonian having a decrease of £2,256, the North British one of £1,595; but this was evidently an exceptional occurrence due to special circumstances. This is what my Glasgow correspondent writes on the position:—

Champagne.—Périnet & Fils' Cuvée Réservée. Vintages 1884, 1887, and 1889, are of unrivalled quality and highly recommended for present consumption. Of all Wine Merchants.

> I believe the deficit this week in traffics is due to some clearing of sidings or other technical matter. I do not know whether the arrangements will be complete this week or next. When they are the traffics will again be large. There is a good deal of "Bearing" here—professional, I believe; the ordinary investing public believe (rightly, as I think) that Coras and North British Deferred are two of the best stocks going. Do not anticipate strikes; we really, sometimes, can arrange our affairs in the North without them.

I see that the Glasgow Herald takes the same view of the position as I do, with regard to the labour troubles. My contemporary states that there is nothing in the announcement that the engineers on the Clyde are moving for an advance in wages to create the alarm that has prevailed. Under the agreement that exists between the employers and the men, one month's notice must be given of any change desired on either side. Negotiations will follow thereon, and there is no reason to fear that matters will not be duly adjusted. Scotch Railway stocks, however, were banged as if a dispute were to be inaugurated to-morrow. At anything like the recent rate of increase, Caledonian Deferred will receive for the present year a distribution of 2½ per cent., and would therefore yield upwards of 4 per cent. to the investor at the present price of 60¼; and the increases in North British have been so persistent that a considerable improvement over the previous dividend may be looked for, thus showing the present quotation of 48⅛ to be very low. Metropolitan Districts have suffered from realisations. There has been a want of harmony amongst those chiefly concerned in the new deep-level scheme; but it would be a thousand pities if so excellent a plan were again put off, and I consider that it is the duty of the District Board to push it on most energetically, and, in case of need, to take the initiative themselves.

The Yankee Market Broadening.

The feature of last week's dealings in Yankee Rails has been considerable public buying, accompanied by an extension of the demand for the low-priced stocks. Hitherto, Milwaukee and Louisville had chiefly made the running; but now the market is distinctly broadening, and dealings have taken place in every one of the low-priced stocks; amongst which, by the way, Norfolk and Western Prefs., Southern Ordinary, and Union Pacifics have had more than their share. There have at times been moderate set-backs, but the declines have been promptly recovered; and it almost looks in the case of Milwaukee and Louisville as if special efforts had been made in New York to put down prices in order to come in at a lower level. This policy has so far been unsuccessful, as whenever Milwaukee reached about 80, and Louisville about 53, a sharp recovery ensued. Developments generally in the United States have been most satisfactory since the McKinley victory, and have exactly followed the course which I foreshadowed. Factories, mills, and ironworks are being reopened in all parts of the country. Trade is improving all round, and the hoarded gold is being released; while money is coming forward for investment, and rates are declining. The New York Bank statement showed very favourable changes, notably an increase in specie of 8,270,000 dols., and in net deposits of 15,920,000 dols. Loans and discounts, with an increase of 3,230,000 dols., show that accommodation is now again being more liberally given by the Banks. The "Bears" did their best to force a temporary relapse by predictions of trouble between the United States and Spain over Cuba, but this bogey has now been laid; and on the other hand the Venezuelan question is in a very satisfactory course of settlement. When it is remembered how disastrous a scare was caused last year by the Venezuelan incident, it is easy to draw the lesson to take such reports a little more coolly than the Stock Exchange generally does. As regards the future of American Railroad stocks, I should think that the course of prices will be distinctly upwards; although a higher level will not probably be obtained without occasional set-backs. As the fall has been very general, so the improvement should extend over the whole list, not forgetting Atchison Prefs., Denver Ordinary and Prefs., and Erie. The sharpest advance will, however, probably take place in Milwaukee, in view of the large surplus of profits available, which will enable the Company to pay a dividend of 6 per cent. in the near future. The situation is very graphically described in the November circular of the well-known banking firm of John H. Davis & Co., New York, which was drawn up soon after the Presidential elections. The circular lays special stress on the fact that mills are starting up on every hand, that American farmers are tens of millions better off than they were a few months ago by reason of the great advance in wheat, oats, &c.; on the enormous tonnage in sight for the railroads; on the smallness of stocks in the hands of merchants, ensuring large calls upon manufacturers; and on the certainty that the next Congress will maintain a sound financial policy. Messrs. Davis & Co. consider that the United States stand at the threshold of a period of national prosperity, and record the fact that manufactories long closed are opening their doors to thousands of skilled workmen, and that the execution of orders contingent upon McKinley's election will give employment to labour, trade to the merchants, and tonnage to the railroads. This is how they conclude their introduction:—

> In the financial market we have a solid foundation for trade and profit. We have absorbed hundreds of millions of home stocks and bonds which Europe sold when she had doubts of our ability to pay as good money as we had promised. Now Europe will want these same securities at higher prices. Hoarded capital will come out. Interest, dividends, and rents are better assured. The great spurt in prices at the Stock Exchange on the morning after election was indicative of the radical change in the financial atmosphere. The sudden advance was too rapid to last, but that we shall soon begin a steady appreciation of market values we fully believe, and the year 1897 will present a cheerful contrast to that of 1895.

With reference to the Northern Pacific Company it may be stated that the reorganisation carried out by Messrs. J. P. Morgan & Co. was very drastic, including as it did, assessments of 10 dols. on the old Preferred and 15 dols. on the Common bonds; the bond issues having to accept new Preferred stock as part payment of their interest in the new Company. A considerable amount, viz., 25,000,000 dols. of Prior Lien bonds, and 4,000,000 dols. of General Lien bonds, have been reserved for new construction, &c.; and of the Prior Lien bonds, 1,500,000 dols. a year only may be used, while the Irroy's Champagne. Vintage 1889. Carte d'or. Extra sec.

Irroy's Champagne. Vintage 1889. Carte d'or. Brut.
Ernest Irroy & Co., Reims. Established 1820.

fixed charges have been kept at a moderate figure, viz., 6,052,000 dols., as against an available income of 7,527,000 dols. It is estimated that this would be equal to 2 per cent. on the Preferred stock, after providing for the bonds. Of the Prior Liens the total amount is 105,000,000 dols., the interest on which is 4,200,000 dols. The proceeds of land sales up to 500,000 dols. per annum are, moreover, to be applied to purchasing the bonds in the market for cancellation until the quotation exceeds 110. Northern Pacific Four per Cent. Prior Lien bonds at 88 are, therefore, a gilt-edged security, yielding 4¾ per cent. per annum. My remarks of a week ago with reference to American Railroad bonds have brought me several inquiries, to which I will briefly reply. In answer to one correspondent, I herewith give the earnings of the Alabama Midland for September, 1896, viz., gross, 62,624 dols., against 51,067 dols. in 1895; net, 17,770 dols., against 10,213 dols. in 1895. Alabama Midland Five per Cent. Gold bonds are, as my readers will remember, guaranteed as to the capital and interest by the Savannah, Florida, and Western. That line earned a gross income in September, 1896, of 274,310 dols., against 260,123 dols. in 1895, and a net income of 77,917 dols., against 66,107 dols. in 1895. It should be remembered that the Alabama Midland requires only about 12,000 dols. per month to pay the interest on their bonds, and that ever since 1890—when the Company was taken over by the Savannah, Florida, and Western—very large expenditure has been made upon the road, which had to be charged to earnings, as the capital account is closed, and the interest on the bonds was paid by the Savannah, Florida, and Western, under its guarantee. The physical condition of the Alabama Midland is, therefore, now very much better than it was when it was taken over, and the security of the First Mortgage so much improved, while the earnings of the railroad are now showing its value. Alabama Midland Five per Cent. Gold bonds have advanced to 96, at which they yield £5. 8s. per cent., and are still an excellent purchase. With reference to the Lynn and Boston bonds, I have received the following communication from an Edinburgh correspondent :—

> May I suggest, as the complement of your remarks in TRUTH of November 12, on Lynn and Boston bonds, and as showing their steadiness as a security, that you should state next week that the Company has paid 8 per cent. on its Ordinary stock sixteen years in succession, and is now in a better position than ever to maintain that rate? The prospectus, and also the Stock Exchange Year Book, state that 8 per cent. has been paid since 1880.

My correspondent is quite correct in his statement, and I give the benefit of his remark to other investors. Lynn and Boston Five per Cent. First Mortgage Gold bonds are now quoted 102½ x.d., at which they yield just 5 per cent., being dollar bonds. In reply to several other correspondents, the best plan of investment in American Railroad bonds is undoubtedly to make up a small private trust, spreading the money over half a dozen bonds. In addition to Northern Pacific Prior Lien bonds, yielding £4. 15s. per cent.; Alabama Midland Five per Cent. Gold bonds, yielding £5. 7s. 6d. per cent.; and Lynn and Boston Five per Cent. First Mortgage bonds, yielding £4. 9s. 6d. per cent., such a trust might include New York and Putnam Four per Cent. bonds at 108, yielding £3. 15s. per cent.; Baltimore and Ohio Five per Cent. Sterling bonds at 95, yielding £5. 9s. per cent.; Pittsburg, Cleveland, and Toledo First Mortgage Six per Cent. bonds at 103, yielding £5. 16s. 6d. per cent.; and Detroit, Grand Haven, and Milwaukee Consolidated Six per Cent. bonds at 86, yielding £7. 12s. 6d. per cent. The average return on this investment would be about £5. 8s. per cent. per annum. Grand Trunks have improved on the view that the changed outlook in the United States will also benefit the Grand Trunk lines, and the Prefs. are now up to 33¾, the Guaranteed at 42¾. Canadian Pacifics are, however, easier at 60¼.

NOTICE TO CONNOISSEURS OF FINE DRY CHAMPAGNE.—PÉRINET & FILS' Cuvée Réservée, Extra Sec, is in magnificent condition, at Hotel Cecil, Hotel Savoy, Midland Grand Hotel, Spiers & Pond's Hotels and Buffets, and most leading Hotels & Restaurants.

FOREIGNERS AND SOUTH AMERICANS.

There has been a more confident tone in interbourse securities of late, and although Spanish are still fluctuating with every fresh rumour, they are above the lowest at 57¾, and were practically unaffected by the wild reports with reference to possible trouble with the United States. Italians have improved to 88⅞, on the conclusion of peace with Abyssinia. Turks are distinctly firmer, chiefly on the view that as the European Powers are working in concert, there is no fear of any disastrous results; but I should think that they are a dangerous gambling counter to hold. Ottoman Banks shares have shown a firmer tendency, but South Americans generally have been very inactive. The financial collapse in Brazil is an unpleasant feature, which brings other past South American financial troubles to mind again, and the position was aggravated by the illness of the President of Brazil, Dr. Prudente Moraes. The Vice-President has now taken over the reins, and it is reported that the President's health is improving. Argentine Goverment stocks are steady, and the gold premium in Buenos Ayres is very little higher at 182½. Until the Argentine Government proceeds to carry out the unification of the debt, however, I do not look for much of a rise in these stocks. Urugnay bonds have recovered slightly, the Old Loan being quoted 48, the New Loan 66, and Mexican Sixes show a firm tone. The outlook concerning a settlement of the Colombian Debt does not appear to be rosy. If, as is stated, the representative of the Council of Foreign Bondholders, who was recently sent to Bogotà to try and obtain a settlement, has not yet been able to notify any favourable development, it will probably be too late for matters to be arranged by the present Congress. I never expected any serious result of the Honduras negotiations, and it looks as if these were off again.

THE KAFFIR CIRCUS.

It is time to enter a strong protest against the wholesale throwing away of South African Gold Mining and Land shares, which has been going on for some time. It is surprising how holders of such shares can play into the hands of the "Bears" to such an extent. It is true that there has been some excuse for the uneasiness of English holders owing to the sauve qui peut which has prevailed in Paris, French investors and speculators having displayed an altogether childish tendency to get rid of their holdings at any sacrifice. Whenever our French neighbours have got over their attack of nerves, there will come about, barring accidents, a more lasting improvement; for all the weak elements on this side have been pretty-well shaken out, and it would require only a determined lead on the part of the big financiers to stop sales and induce a moderate amount of investment buying at the greatly reduced level. This is the market position, and the power of the ursine party merely rests upon the absurd nervousness of operators, which renders them susceptible to all the false rumours which may be propagated. Of these we have had an unusual number of late, the efforts of the syndicate of liars culminating in the report that the Transvaal Government had made a claim for an indemnity of £1,000,000 upon the Chartered Company in connection with the Jameson raid. I have not the slightest doubt that some claim will eventually be put forward, but the onus of providing the sum finally fixed upon will fall upon the originators of the raid, Cecil Rhodes and Alfred Beit, and not upon the shareholders in the Chartered Company. In any case, the Chartered troubles have absolutely nothing to do with the position of the gold mines in the Transvaal, which is inherently strong. The political position also is not by any means worse, as had been represented in some quarters; and President Kruger himself, in a statement to the Pretoria correspondent of the Daily Telegraph, made the remark that there was no intention to trouble about alterations in existing conventions. Concerning the indemnity, the President stated that the amount to be demanded would be a reasonable figure, and that there was no other desire on his part than to finally settle this disagreeable matter with the friendliest feelings. It looks, therefore, as if the Chartered raiders would get off with a very much smaller bleeding than they could have hoped for at one time. Recent events confirm the statement made to me by one of the South African millionaires, who is in touch with the Transvaal Government, and to whom President Kruger cabled on his repeated appeals in favour of the mining industry, that there was no need for alarm—that everything would come right. The decision of the Volksraad on the Sunday labour question bears out this promise, and now that the Witwatersrand Mines have cheap and plentiful labour, and are relieved from the Sunday labour trouble, there is nothing to affect the industry, apart, perhaps, from the dynamite monopoly and some scarcity of water which prevails. Latest cablegrams state, however, that rain is expected to fall at an early date, the atmosphere being charged with moistness. The October crushings were not quite so large as those for September, amounting to 199,899 oz., against 202,561 oz.; but the small difference is accounted for alone by the smaller output of the New Primrose, which was reduced by a stoppage caused by the short supply of water. With the Mining industry thus placed upon a sound basis, the incubus of cyanide royalties removed, and ample and cheap labour, I cannot but think that the time for a recovery is not far off; and I still consider the following stocks as very promising at the present reduced prices:—Langlaagte Estate, New Primrose, Glencairn, City and Suburban, Robinson, Wolhuter, Randfontein, New Johannesburg Consols, Barnato Consols, Buffelsdoorn, Langlaagte Royal, Henderson's Estates, Lydenburg Estates, Oceana Consols, Mozambique, Modderfontein "B," Waterfall Estates, Woodstock (Transvaal), and Knights. With reference to the assets of the Robinson Bank, I have to add to my remarks of last week that in addition to the figures given of £1,228,000 in cash, native gold, Consols, &c., other investments of £1,633,131. In addition, there are £284,368 in bills of exchange purchased and current, and £617,173 in bills discounted for and advances to customers; the total assets figuring up to £3,767,906. At Monday's meeting of shareholders statements were made by Mr. J. B. Robinson which should have a reassuring effect upon the whole of the South African market, if only people would get over their unreasonable nervousness. By the way, I am informed that Mr. J. B. Robinson will leave on the 28th inst. for South Africa. This journey is to be undertaken partly owing to the illness of Mrs. Robinson, who requires a change of climate, and will reside on Mr. Robinson's estate near Cape Town. Mr. Robinson himself will go straight through to Pretoria, and there have interviews with President Kruger and other leading Transvaal statesmen. That all his influence will be brought to bear in favour of the mining industry in the Transvaal goes without saying, and he will also be able to give special attention to all the various Mining Companies with which he is connected, so that his journey will doubtless be fraught with good results for the shareholders in these undertakings. By the same steamer Mr. Sol Joel will return to South Africa, and he will have an important task before him in looking after the interests of the various Barnato Mining and Land Companies. At the meeting of the shareholders of the Consolidated Goldfields of South Africa, the various speakers, including the Chairman, did their utmost to reassure investors in this Company and in the Deep Levels, but to judge from the tone which has since prevailed in the market they did not make much impression upon the public. All the same, I think that the selling of Consolidated Goldfields is now being overdone, the quotation having dropped ex. the dividend of 15s. to £8. Very severe comments are being made on the proposed juggle between the East Rand Company and the H.F. Syndicate, and the opposition is waxing so strong that it will probably have to be abandoned. As regards the new issue of Chartered shares, it seems doubtful whether the shareholders who objected to the arrangement with the Syndicate in connection with the option at $2\frac{3}{4}$ will take up all the shares, although the news is generally more favourable. The decision of the Transvaal Government to construct a railway from Machadodorp to Pilgrim's Rest, viâ the town of Lydenburg, is of great importance to the various Land and Mining Companies, which have already been formed. It need hardly be pointed out that cheaper carriage of coal and material generally will be of vast benefit to the mines. The Transvaal Exploring Company has issued a very exhaustive Directors' report and accounts to the shareholders, a meeting being called for the 20th inst. for the purpose of obtaining an authorisation for an increase of the capital of the Company. A credit balance is shown of £85,738, and although it chiefly consists of shares, the result must be considered distinctly satisfactory. The Company owns many valuable interests and claims in progressive districts of the Transvaal, which should especially be benefited by the extension of the railway system in the South African Republic. The total issue of capital has so far been only £142,000, and it is evident that a further considerable sum could be utilised with great advantage in the present position of affairs. At their present price of $\frac{5}{8}$ these shares appear to be at a very moderate level. At Tuesday's statutory meeting of the Oceana Consolidated Company, Mr. Henry Pasteur was able to state that the amalgamation of the old Oceana, Africana, and Austral-African Companies has been duly completed. The new undertaking is of great importance, as it not only possesses extensive farmlands and mineral rights in the Transvaal, but has also a large stake in Central Africa in connection with the Katanga Company and on the Zambesi. Oceana Consols are quoted at only $1\frac{3}{16}$, but will doubtless reach a much higher value in the near future. The Directors of the Woodstock (Transvaal) Gold Mine are sending a detailed report to their shareholders, from which it is evident that very important work is in progress. There is a full supply of native boys, and the necessary European miners are also at work. The sixty-stamp mill will be erected in a very advantageous position, and the whole of the ore will be brought to the mill by a short aërial ropeway. The first twenty heads of stamps are being erected, and the working of the property will take place on most economical lines. In No. 1 Block the 400-ft. level has been driven a total distance of 591 ft., of which 193 ft. have been on the strike of the reef. No. 1 shaft has been sunk 197 ft. on the reef, and equal progress has been made in the other blocks and shafts. The Sybil North-west drive has been driven on the reef and strike of dyke, and the north lode has been found to be 12 ft. wide. A considerable quantity of ore is at grass, and early in the new year crushing on a large scale will commence with what should prove very favourable results. The £1 shares at $1\frac{1}{4}$ are, therefore, a very promising lock-up. Diamond shares have also fluctuated, but upon the whole a firmer tone has been shown, and De Beers are quoted at $29\frac{1}{4}$, New Jagersfontein $10\frac{1}{8}$. An expression of opinion is made by the South African Financial Record that there is nothing in the rumours that the De Beers Company is likely to acquire the Jagersfontein mine. Jagersfontein is in the Free State, and the De Beers' Directors know only too well that if they bought up the mine the Free State Government would at once defeat the policy of regulating the output by making the condition that the mine should be worked for all it is worth.

Golden West Australia.

The condition of the West Australian market remains the same. A few more ignorant critics have misrepresented the goldfields of the colony, and a few more nervous holders have sold their shares; but the news from the goldfields is encouraging, good work is being done in all directions, and crushings will in the near future assume much larger proportions. While some disappointments have occurred, especially in connection with mines against which I have repeatedly warned my readers, many other properties are turning up trumps; and in Coolgardie the water difficulty is likely to be overcome even before the Government scheme is carried out. As nothing but actual crushings will apparently allay the present nervousness, I again give the results which have come to hand during the past week:—

Scottish Widows' Fund Life Assurance Society.—Special Notice.—Participating Assurances (by annual payments) effected before the 31st December, 1896, will rank for Six Full Years' Bonus Additions at the next Periodical Division of Profits. To secure this advantage application should be made to any of the offices or agencies of the Society without delay.—London: 28, Cornhill, E.C., and 5, Waterloo-place, S.W.

—	Tons of Ore Crushed.	Ounces of Gold.	Assay of Tailings per ton.	Assay of Concentrates per ton.
Lake View Consols	704	2176	25 dwt.	—
Great Boulder	718	2158	—	—
Cue One	300	226 & 14 dwt.	3 dwt.	5 oz. 10 dwt.
Consolidated Murchison..	530	290	—	—
Coolgardie Mint and Iron King	60	154	13 dwt.	—
Murchison Gift	83	332	—	—
Consolidated Gold Mines of Western Australia (Coongan Mines).....	508	515	—	—
Ejudina.....	150	262	—	—
Florence	100	108	8 dwt.	4 oz.
North-West Australian Goldfields	114	170	—	—

The result of the Lake View Consols crushing is distinctly satisfactory; and if these shares have reacted to 6-6½, this has chiefly been caused by the statement that the settlement will take place at the end of the present month. Now that realisations by holders who do not wish to take up their shares have come to an end, we may anticipate a sharp recovery, as the news from the mine is most satisfactory. With reference to the Mainland Consols, I learn that it has been decided to put up a new thirty-stamp battery, and to bring the water from Day Dawn. This will entail some extra expense, which should, however, be fully justified by results; and those who ought to know tell me that there is no fear of these shares falling much below the present quotation. The Consolidated Gold Mines of Western Australia is to the front with a crushing of 515 oz. from 508 tons from the Coongan mine, which is a good deal better than the estimate of the manager, which had always been of 15 dwt. per ton only. The Coolgardie Mint and Iron King has screwed out a crushing of 60 tons for 154 oz., but it is to be hoped that larger crushings will now take place. The Great Boulder is keeping up its average, and the shares are quoted 6$\frac{1}{16}$ x.d. London and Globe Finance and West Australian Exploring and Finance are steady at 4. In reply to various inquiries, I am able to inform my readers that the meeting of shareholders of these two Companies will take place on or about the 20th of next month. An excellent position will be shown, and a large dividend will be paid. Those who are able to take their shares up and pay for them can hardly do better than in these two Companies. There is little change in the various Menzies Companies, amongst which Menzies Mining and Exploration (Menzies O'Driscoll) stand at $\frac{5}{8}$, Menzies Crusoe at $\frac{3}{4}$, Menzies Consolidated at $\frac{11}{16}$; but all these shares deserve attention in view of the favourable developments which have of late taken place on the Menzies Goldfield. West Australian Goldfields are still being raided by "Bear" operators and stand at 5$\frac{7}{8}$, but whenever any improvement in this group comes about, they will not be slow in responding. The same applies to Hampton Plains, which were notoriously scarce at the last settlement, a backwardation being paid; yet the ursine party are still occasionally depressing the same, and the price fluctuates between 3$\frac{3}{8}$ and 3½. The shares of the Cue No. 1 Mine, to the crushing of which I drew attention last week, are quoted at ½, and these as well as Florence (a crushing from which mine will be found in the above list) at $\frac{13}{16}$, Lady Shenton at 2, White Feather Reward at 1$\frac{15}{16}$, Great Boulder Main Reef at 1⅛, Mawson's Reward at $\frac{15}{16}$, Robinson at $\frac{3}{4}$, East Murchison United at $\frac{3}{4}$, and Mount Margaret at 1$\frac{3}{8}$, are cheap shares which should be picked up at present. The news from the Mawson's Reward is very satisfactory. According to a cablegram, the ore body continues to improve in quality; 112 ft. have been driven on the 87-ft. level in No. 2 shaft. The level is now 100 ft. below the surface outcrop. The gold is very fine, but well distributed. In the south drive the reef is reported to be 12 ft. wide, with good quartz. With reference to the Hannan's Lode, a cablegram states that the lode shows a marked improvement in No. 1 shaft. General Gordon Mines are still quoted at 2. The North-West Australian Goldfields are to the front with a crushing of 170 oz. of gold from 114 tons, which is more satisfactory than had been anticipated; and these shares, which have hitherto been only a nominal market, have experienced a revival at $\frac{11}{16}$, which is still so cheap that a purchase might be advisable. Hit or Miss have rallied to 1⅛-$\frac{3}{16}$ on the statements at the meeting. Burbank's Birthday Gift are quoted 1$\frac{9}{16}$, and these shares, as well as Burbank's Consols, at ⅛ premium, and Burbank's North at ¼ premium, appear to have a satisfactory future before them. They are under the management of an excellent expert, Professor Nicholas. West Australian Joint Stock Trust shares are quoted at 1⅞ to 2 premium. There has been a severe shake out, and holders should certainly now stick to their shares. From the Hannan's Napier a cablegram has come to hand stating that the shaft has reached a depth of 132 ft. The Golden Plum has come to grief, and as I foreshadowed at the very outset on the publication of the prospectus, it has not proved a plum for the shareholders, the shares now standing at a rubbish price. It is, however, out of the question for the detractors of the West Australian goldfields to make capital out of this collapse; and as the concern was badly conceived at the outset, repeated warnings against it appeared in my columns and in those of my contemporaries. The same remark applies to the World's Treasure, another mine which has now collapsed, and against which I have always warned my readers. According to the West Australian Review these shares have been very largely placed in Paris, and even the advertising agents, Messrs. Dalziel, who circulated the prospectus, were good enough to underwrite 500 shares. This is a concern which was started under South African auspices. From the Western Australian Cement Proprietary Leases an excellent report has been received, showing that the work of development is proceeding apace. The special settlement of the Golden Links has been postponed until further notice, owing to the fact that the certificates are not ready. It is time that the authorities of the Golden Link bestirred themselves to comply with the requirements of the Stock Exchange. I am glad to see that some of the shareholders are moving in the matter of Waldon's Find Gold Mines, which has hitherto been a silent mine. Why do not the Directors issue regular reports?

Indian, New Zealand, and Other Mines.

Indian gold mines have also suffered to some extent by forced realisations, more especially of Mysore Gold, which are down to 7¼, and Champion Reefs, which are quoted 7$\frac{5}{16}$. I suppose that this is owing to the necessity in which holders of unmarketable shares found themselves of throwing over some of their sound securities. Coromandels are also easier, thus showing that my advice to clear profits on these on the recent rise was fully justified. Balagats are lower at 1s., but I have never trusted these. In Australian mines other than West Australian, Aladdin's Lamp have eased off to 2⅜ for no particular reason that I can discover. In Charters Towers shares Mill's Day Dawn are lower, and Day Dawn P.C. and New Queen have given way. Broken Hill Proprietary are dull at 47s. 6d., and one of the few shares which have improved is Mount Lyell. A very firm tone has prevailed for Croydon Consols, on a cablegram from the mine, according to which a further satisfactory crushing has taken place, and stating that the declaration of a dividend of 1s. per share will be made on the 26th inst. North Croydon Consols are quoted from 3s. 6d. to 3s. 9d. In New Zealand shares, the only favourable feature has been a rise in Waihi, which have advanced to 6⅞, apparently on some scarcity of stock. On the other hand, Waihi Silverton, United New Zealand, Hauraki, and Waitekauri, are all lower. Well selected New Zealand properties are, however, still finding favour. I referred in my letter of October 25 to the Royal Standard Mine, which is situated on the east coasts of the North Island, in the Hauraki district. A working capital of £30,000 has now been subscribed privately, and many people closely connected with New Zealand have taken an interest in the mine, which they expect to prove one of the most successful undertakings in New Zealand. The vendors have taken the whole of their interest in shares. In the general foreign section, Rio Tinto have again fluctuated, but the price has settled down to about 25½ in anticipation of the meeting. De Lamar, Burma Ruby, Frontino, Springdale, and Banner Gold are all lower. Grand Central Mining are firmer at 2¼. Major C. F. Buttle, late R.E., 70, Temple-chambers, London, E.C., is again to the front with his puffs of the Great Work Tin Mining and Development Syndicate, Limited, in which he states that "the honesty of the intention of the Company is guaranteed by merely mentioning the names of the Directors:—Lieut.-General McLeod Innes, R.E., V.C.; Major-General R. J. C. Marter; Colonel William Carey, R.A., C.B.; and J. Halcrow, Esq." I have the very worst opinion of this enterprise, the mine to be acquired not having been worked for many years, and there being very little chance of its ever being made to pay. My advice to investors is, not to listen to the blandishments of Major Buttle.

New Enterprises and Issues.

The prospectuses of the following new Companies and issues have been placed before the public during the week:—

Paquin, Limited.—Subscriptions will be received on Saturday next, November 21, for this Company, which has been formed to acquire as a going concern and extend the prosperous business of Messrs. Paquin & Co., the well-known ladies' dress, robe, and mantle makers, Rue de la Paix, Paris. The prospectus states that the marvellous success of this business, as shown by the accountants' certificate, has induced the proprietors to resolve upon a further important extension by opening a branch establishment in the West End of London, and suitable premises at 39, Dover-street, Mayfair, W., have been acquired on very favourable terms. The capital consists of £500,000, divided into 50,000 Cumulative Six per Cent. Preference shares of £5 each, and 250,000 Ordinary shares of £1 each, of which 83,333 will be allotted in part payment of the purchase price; the remaining 166,667 Ordinary shares and 50,000 Preference shares, including £100,000 which has been guaranteed for working capital exclusive of stock, are now offered for subscription.

This business has long been known as one of the largest and best houses in Paris, and there can be very little doubt but that the London branch will become equally popular. The firm are noted for their excellent workmanship and fit, Paquin French models being also much in request here. The vendor shows his confidence in the success of the business by not only taking over 80,000 Ordinary shares in part payment of the purchase money, but by agreeing to deposit a further £75,000 in Consols and French Rentes with Parr's Bank to secure the payment of the 6 per cent. dividend on the Preference shares for the next five years. The profits will, no doubt, be greatly increased by the opening of the London branch, and it is evident from the past results that a substantial dividend on the Ordinary shares may confidently be looked for.

Campbell, Praed, & Co.—A Company has been formed to acquire the brewery business of Messrs. Campbell, Praed, & Co., of Wellingborough. The share capital is £100,000, divided into 10,000 Ordinary shares of £10 each, of which 9,993 shares are taken by the vendors as part payment. The present issue is of £100,000 Four per Cent. Perpetual First Mortgage Debenture stock at the issue price of £105 per cent.

London Electrical Cab Company, Limited.—With a capital of £150,000, in shares of £1 each, this Company is formed to place on the streets of London electrically propelled cabs to supersede those at present in use.

These are early days for a Company to be promoted, with this amount of capital for what is, at present, an imperfect invention. Improvements are sure to be made that will, it is hoped, prevent the break-downs and sundry unexpected stoppages of motor cars that occurred on Saturday last in the experimental run to Brighton. The result of that expedition is not likely to infuse any great desire into investors to place their money in this industry at the present juncture.

Ridgways, Limited.—This Company is formed to carry on the tea business of Ridgway & Co., and those carried on by them under the names of Stock & Co., G. R. Chamberlain, Pegram & Co., and Chaloner & Co., tea merchants. The capital is fixed at £380,000.

I cannot see anything tempting in this traffic in businesses for the purpose of amalmation and turning them into a Company. It will probably pay the promoters, but I should be loth to recommend it as an investment. Moreover, why are the trading and profits of the businesses that have been contracted for not given separately?

My Letter Box.

The following are replies to inquiries from various correspondents:—

Government, &c., Bonds.

Taffy.—There was a rumour of an insurrection in Monte Video, which is contradicted. There is no other reason for the weakness of Uruguay bonds, which is, however, disappearing. Lone Lady.—A good investment; but if you are likely to require the money, you had better realise your profit. D. W.—Transvaal Five per Cent. Government stock is a good investment, and there is no reason to sell. "Jusc."—The finances of this colony will probably improve in view of the gold discoveries, and it would be advisable to hold now.

Banks, Trusts, and Financial.

J. T., Huddersfield.—As requested, I forward in your envelope the name of a smart firm of City solicitors. F. P. C.—This only applies to Chartered banks, upon which shareholders are liable for an extra 100 per cent. of their holdings. I cannot reply by letter. Clementina.—You cannot get this yield in Home Railway securities with safety. Do you wish to go as far afield as South American Railway debentures? T. T.—An outside concern; you should deal only through a member of the Stock Exchange. Honest Dick.—Outside brokers; it is preferable to deal with members of the Stock Exchange only. Loi.—Why do you not mention the name of the stock when making such an inquiry? The whole matter does not depend upon the signature of the transfer at all; but upon the time when you bought the stock, and when it was quoted ex dividend. Motto.—Be very careful; such "protection" is sometimes the very reverse. Perplexed, Chatham.—Outside dealers; have nothing to do with them—you are almost certain to lose your money. Fire.—A fourth-rate concern. In the case of insurance you should only deal with first-class societies. Investor, Norwich.—It is a third-rate office.

Home Rails.

F. S. N.—Hold your Dover "A" and Scotch stocks for a further improvement. B. J. R.—I should certainly prefer South-Eastern Deferred (Dover "A") to all the other Home Rails mentioned by you. T. W. L.—No reason to sell this Home Railway stock at present. As regards a further investment, South-Eastern Deferred should suit you. M. D.—No fresh news is available, but I still think that the matter will go through. I am glad to hear that you did so well in Louisville and Caledonian on my advice. No reason to sell Coras.

American and Foreign Rails.

Glasgow.—1. Yes; Alabama Midland Gold bonds are an excellent investment. 2. The price is now 94½. 3. They are quoted in the Official List of the London Stock Exchange, and the last coupon was paid on November 1, the next being payable on May 1. R. H. B.—Certainly hold your American Railroad bonds. Present conditions are favourable, and an advance is expected. X. L.—A fair investment; but I do not advise putting so much trust money into one particular bond. The proper thing would be to form a kind of trust, for which I would propose the following list of American Railroad bonds:—New York and Putnam Four per Cent. bonds at 108, yielding £3. 15s. 9d. per cent.; Alabama Midland First Five per Cent. Mortgage bonds at 94½, yielding £5. 10s. 6d. per cent.; Northern Pacific Prior Lien Four per Cent. bonds at 88, yielding £4. 15s. per cent.; Baltimore and Ohio Five per Cent. Sterling bonds at 94, yielding £5. 8s. 10d. per cent.; Pittsburg, Cleveland, and Toledo First Mortgage Six per Cent. bonds at 102, yielding £6. 0s. 7d. per cent.; and Detroit, Grand Haven, and Milwaukee Consolidated Six per Cent. bonds at 85, yielding £8. 7s. per cent. The yield on your £20,000 would thus be £1,125 per annum, an average of about £5. 13s. per cent., and would certainly be safer than the investment in one particular bond, such as proposed by you. Aylmer.—You should certainly hold Erie for a considerable advance, which should come about in due time. Aldine.—Apply to Messrs. Baring Brothers & Co., Limited, 8, Bishopsgate-street Within, London, E.C.

For Mosquito Bites nothing allays the irritation so quickly as Scrubb's Cloudy Household Ammonia, and it is an immediate remedy for Wasp or Bee Stings.

Mining Shares.

Cosmos.—Certainly hold your Mining shares for a recovery, and buy more to average if you can afford to take them up. Ajax, Bridgwater.—1. No reason to sell. 2. There has been a general "Bear" attack. 3. This is not the time to sell West Australian shares. G. W. S.—I certainly would not advise you to increase your holding of No. 2, which are quite high enough; and instead of buying more of Nos. 1 and 2, you will do well to make your selection from my letter. G. W. J.—1. You ought to have seen the last report of the shareholders' meeting; there is no fresh news. 2. No option but to hold; but do not average yet. 3. Keep these. 4. Crushing will not commence for a month or two. Unfortunate Speculator.—No option but to hold. Reward.—I have never recommended Bayley's Reward; but after the reconstruction it might be advisable to keep them. Hard Cheese.—I have heard nothing to alter my opinion of Hannan's Golden Treasure and Golden Group; but the general weakness of the Mining Markets has put prices down. If you hold, you will see your money back and a profit. C. F. E., Kent.—No option but to hold your shares, Nos. 1 to 11; they should recover again. As regards No. 11, what you mention must be an interested attack. Dundalk.—Possibly the West Australian mine acquired by this concern will prosper; but it is too early to form an opinion. Technical.—No particular temptation to buy these now; you can do better in the shares mentioned in my letter. M. M.—I do not recommend a further purchase of these shares yet, which should, however, be held for an improvement. R. and C., Paris.—French holders are chiefly to blame for the present collapse in the Mining Market, and there is nothing for it but to hold these shares. Enniskillen.—No reason to sell at present. P. B., Tuam.—I cannot help you in the matter, as the shareholders will not help themselves. I cannot reply by letter. W. R. S.—No option but to hold for a recovery in the Mining Market. L. E. O.—I do not like this mine at all, and should not advise you to put more money into it. Orillia.—The business is a good one, but it has been mismanaged. There is no alternative but to await developments. XXX.—If you are a holder of the shares Nos. 1 to 3, you must just keep them until a revival sets in. Didegmus.—I gave full particulars of this mine some time ago, and there is no option but to hold, as no doubt the mine will retrieve its fortunes. Kinnigillion.—No particular temptation to buy these Indian Mining shares; they are quite a toss-up. Scotty, Glasgow.—I do not advise a further purchase of these New Zealand shares. Irish Reader, Newry.—Stand where you are. Inquirer, Banbury.—No option but to hold the South African shares; they should recover again. X. Y. Z., Co. Durham.—The rumours about political trouble in the Transvaal are unfounded, and matters on the Witwatersrand are really improving. The West Australian mines should also be held, although some of these were badly selected, and against my advice. Archibald Arrowsmith.—I do not think much of the first-mentioned shares. I am glad you did so well in Croydon Consols on my advice. W. A. J.—In such cases it is always advisable to join the reconstruction and sell after. Aliquis.—1. Yes. 2. Ten per cent. was paid a month or two ago; but as regards No. 3, another dividend will not be paid for a year. Sweet Hope.—Hold; but do not average yet. The time will no doubt come when this can be done with advantage. J. G. M.—These anticipations with regard to the Chartered Company are quite absurd, and such an extravagant rise is altogether out of the question. W. H. S., Gateacre.—No option but to hold your Mining shares for the present; this is not the time to sell. Glyn.—1. The mine is doing well; but apparently further money will be spent to increase the battery power. 2. I expect an improvement. 3. No. 4. Not yet. C. A. R.—Randfontein Estates should suit you at the present low price. Puzzled, Douglas.—No option but to hold for an advance. Jim.—1. Arizona Copper shares are quite high enough now. 2. Not an investment, but a speculation. Non-Speculator.—At present prices all the shares mentioned by you would be suitable for investment, and they are all £1, fully paid. I also refer you to my letter. Re-deal.—Hold all your shares for a recovery; this is not the time to sell. Hold Nos. 14 and 15 also, but do not average the latter yet. P. M. L.—1. The New Bultfontein is a very promising diamond mine. 2 and 3. Yes. W. A. Trader.—No option but to hold. A. R. E.—1. It is a great pity that you ever had anything to do with the Hannan's Virginia Gold Mining Company, and it looks like throwing good money after bad. 2. Hold Randfontein for an improvement. You ought to have received your bonus in Porges Randfontein. 3. Not yet. 4. Certainly hold. H. K. W.—There is nothing new to tell about this mine. All Mining shares are at present under a cloud, but they will doubtless recover again. Unfortunate.—1. A strong "Bear" raid is being made against this group. Hold by all means. 2. Every chance. 3. No. 4. No. 5. Yes. There is no reason why No. 5 should not come right again. West York.—Your selection, Nos. 1-9, of South African and West Australian shares is a good one, and you should hold. Atalanta.—The publication in question is quite irresponsible. Hold your shares until the "Bear" raid passes over. Leo.—A meeting will doubtless be held shortly. Unlucky Star.—I am sorry you were disappointed in Balaghat, but this never was one of my recommendations. I must leave you to take your own decision. Dingle.—Yes, you will do quite right to average S.A. Gold Trust and Barnato Consols. Pym.—The consequences of some weak "Bull" selling and a "Bear" raid. Hold. Fernfield.—You should hold all your shares Nos. 1-9. S. C. G., Clifton.—No option but to hold the mines, and average c, e, and g. You can make your selection for a speculation with £600 from my letter. Herbert.—Yes; buy more to average Langlaagte Star. Cheshire.—Hold for a recovery. It is a good selection. Top Sawyer.—1. A promising little gamble. 2. A fair mining risk, but I prefer Croydon Consols (3). I consider No. 4 as promising. Architect.—No, I do not recommend purchases of Kathleen, Kathleen Crown, or London and New Zealand Exploration (1-3) at present. You can do better by following the recommendations in my letter. 4. Yes. Eisen.—1. A fair mining risk. 2. Ditto. 3. Yes. 4. Perhaps, some day; but I do not like Elandsfontein No. 1. Oxonian.—1. An improvement is probable. 2. No option but to hold. 3. Hold, and buy more to average. I am glad you are doing so well in Croydon Consols on my advice. Crater Bairn.—Hold Balkis Land. Heathen.—Certainly hold both shares Nos. 1 and 2. Mislead.—1. The Glencairn will be crushing with the full power of its batteries in March next. 2. Yes. 3. Write to the London agents. South Luipaards.—Await the course of events. Cadzow Forest.—1. When matters in Rhodesia settle down there should be a chance. 2. I can but judge from the reports, which are generally reliable. Interested.—An altogether unreliable stock. Do not allow yourself to be frightened out of your shares. T. G.—Yes, I think it is a good time to average Randfontein, Langlaagte Estate, Johnnies, and Glencairn. Better leave Chartered alone. It was a bad move of the shareholders. Kaffir.—No option but to hold and pay the call. Sitting Bull. A strong "Bear" raid has occurred, and a recovery is probable. H. E. W.—Certainly hold London and Globe Finance shares and see remarks under "Golden West Australia." J. S. W.—No need to go to the Yorkshire Post for information concerning Western Australians. There is very little market for these shares, and you will have to be patient. G. A. E.—Johnnies will recover again, when the present scare in the Kaffir Circus is over. Sugarloaf.—You had better hold all the shares for a recovery. Jock of Norfolk.—You should hold Nos. 1-9. Chathams are a fair gamble. Still a Holding.—I have always expressed an unfavourable opinion of Golden Plums. Do not buy any more, even at present low price. No, it is a one-sided opinion which you should disregard. Hold. W. B., Peckham.—The Balaghat is an unfortunate and much reconstructed concern. I have always held an unfavourable view, and do not see how I can help you. Inquirer, Cumberland.—Hold London and Globe and Explorers Syndicate. Ealing.—The Company may come right again. Abercorn.—The shareholders should unite against this atrocious swindle. I cannot reply by letter. Remedy.—Certainly hold Randfontein for a recovery. J. K., Cork.—No option but to hold your shares, Nos. 1-4. D. J. A.—I do not like the West Australian Mine Owners Exploration Syndicate. How could you take shares in it? Continue.—Yours is but the experience of every one else, and you cannot help it. D. M. B.—Get out of the concern if you can. Silly Kid.—Very probably you will on your figures again by next March. J. J. S.—Glad to hear you are doing well with North Croydon Consols on my advice. I do not advise purchase of Nos. 1 and 2, but No. 3 is promising, and do not sell your Buffelsdoorn now. Lincoln.—1. No option but to join the Bailey's Reward reconstruction, but do not buy more to average. Vinegar Hill.—I do not advise the purchase. 6. A recovery is probable. 7. No, you can do better in other shares mentioned in my letter. 8. Hold.

Industrial Shares.

Flint.—No; I do not advise purchase of Pegamoid shares, which are highly speculative. H. B., Leicester.—Nothing is known here about this provincial tramway, and you should inquire in Blackpool. I am not enamoured of the Tower Company. Impransus.—Why did you not make this inquiry before? What use is it for you to refer to a purchase made on July 10, 1895? You ought never to have bought these Brush Electric shares, of which I have always expressed an unfavourable opinion. Celtic.—It seems to be a fair investment; but I am not sure if this kind of shipping shares will improve in value. Trood.—There is no market for these steel tube shares, and I have never recommended the investment. You ought to have asked me before buying the shares. W. G., Accrington.—I cannot reply by letter. I am glad you made money on my advice. Why did you not limit your broker as regards the sale? It is quite true that they were 1¼ premium at the close of the market on Wednesday; but they dropped back again. Nothing has happened to bring about a change in the position, from the information which I have received through other quarters. Cyclist.—Amongst the shares mentioned by you I do not like any, with the exception of Swifts (7) and Humbers (2). Dundrum.—Highly speculative; I do not advise the purchase of these cycle shares. F. J. W.—It is a great pity that you ever went into this doubtful concern, which is quite hopeless. Tame, Uxbridge.—Not much of an investment; such publishing companies are very speculative. Finn Barr.—You ought to have sold sooner. It is a fair investment; but I do not anticipate much of a rise at present.

Mixed Investments.

A. J. M.—Amongst the shares mentioned by you Mexican Sixes are the best stock; the others are quite high enough. In future, you should number your inquiries. Hornblower.—There is no option but to hold all your mining shares Nos. 1 to 17 for a rise. Many of these are badly selected, and bought against my advice, but all should recover from the present level. M. R.—Amongst the shares mentioned by you, Randfontein (1) and Hannan's Proprietary (2) should be held. I do not think so much of Nos. 3 and 4. I do not at all approve of the outside concern to which you refer, and have repeatedly said so. You should deal only through a broker who is a member of the Stock Exchange. Dora.—1. No reason to sell now. 2. There is not much chance of a payment on the Second Prefs. yet. D. C. P.—You do not send your full name and address in token of good faith. When you do so, I will reply to your inquiries. Enquirer, Co. Armagh.—1. I do not approve of the mining and finance Company in question. 2. No; far too risky. The Bovril issue, however, is likely to go exceedingly well. K. B. A.—1. My information is, I believe, reliable. 2. What does it matter if some obscure paper makes an attack upon some particular mining section? 3. Impossible to tell; when the general market revives. B. H. R.—You cannot do better than make your selection from the American Railroad bonds mentioned in last week's issue, which are the best form of investment with proportionate safety. I certainly would not like to advise you to put your money into London and St. Katherine's Dock Ordinary shares. I cannot reply by letter. Eta.—1. Hold; they will recover again when the West Australian market generally revives. 2. Better leave this lottery alone. Unicorn.—There is no option but to hold your mining shares for a recovery. I do not think much of the Apollinaris Trust. Swifts should be held for a rise. Nemo, Upper Norwood.—Hold your mining shares. You might also safely risk holding the Home Railway stock (3). Cavalry.—1. I should think that the dividend will come in time for you. 2. Quite high enough. East Dulwich.—1. There is still a prospect of an arrangement being come to with regard to these Argentine bonds, and you had better hold. 2. Jones & Higgins shares are quite high enough. As a matter of principle, I do not recommend individual stockbrokers. Fastnett.—Hold the mining shares Nos. 3 to 5, but do not average yet. There is also no reason to sell the others. Justice.—1. Hold for a recovery. 2. No reason to sell; the market is sure to turn again. 3. Good prospects; but always take a profit if you can in these times. H. I. M.—Obviously, in order to obtain so high a yield you must be prepared to run some risk. If you want to be quite secure you must be satisfied with some such bonds as Alabama Midland Five per Cent. Gold bonds. The Uruguay Loan, however, should suit you. Nemo Black.—It is impossible to tell exactly to what prices Home Railway stocks will rise; but I look for a further improvement in this department. You have bought Consolidated Goldfields and East Rands entirely against my advice; but it would be preferable to keep all your mining shares now, this not being the time to sell. For the rest, I must refer you to my letter. Centaur.—1. You will find some particulars with reference to Northern Pacifics in to-day's issue. 2. No reason to sell your Brewery shares.

Various Investments.

The strength of Consols has not been quite maintained, and the quotation is again lower at 110½ for the account; but gilt-edged securities generally have been in good request, and an appreciable amount of business has resulted in British Corporation stocks and Colonial Government bonds. Home Railway Prior Charges have been neglected, many investors apparently substituting gilt-edged American Railroad bonds for them, which they can do with safety, now that the sound money party in the States has triumphed. Silver has further declined to 29⅞d., but Rupee Paper has advanced to 63½, and there is a talk of the possibility of gold shipments to India should the exchange further rise. On the other hand, withdrawals of gold for the United States are evidently over, and it is quite on the cards that the Money Market will ease off a little. Rather stiff rates were charged in connection with the settlement, but short money is now more plentiful. In Cycle shares but a moderate business has taken place, and prices are slightly easier. Dunlop Deferred are quoted 1$\frac{5}{16}$; the Ordinary, 1$\frac{3}{16}$; Humber, 1$\frac{7}{16}$; the Extensions, 1⅜. A considerable demand has been experienced for cycle tubes up to $\frac{15}{16}$, and Grapplers are quoted 1⅛; but Singer cycles are easier at $\frac{13}{16}$. Transactions of considerable extent have taken place in Gladiators at $\frac{3}{16}$ premium, and in Bagots at $\frac{15}{16}$ premium. Swift cycles have also come into some demand at $\frac{1}{16}$ premium. Bovril shares have been a strong market, and have risen to 5⅛, very little stock being left in the market. The prospectus of the new Company will be published on Monday, October 23, and the capital will be, as I stated on October 22, £2,500,000. I understand that the prospectus will show the progressive nature of the business, and the Board will be a very strong one, and will be composed of the following gentlemen:—The Right Hon. Lord Playfair (who has been closely identified with Bovril, Limited, for several years), Mr. J. Lawson Johnston (the inventor of Bovril), Mr. George Lawson Johnston, F.R.G.S., Sir Edmund Commerell, Sir Francis Knollys, G.C.M.G., and Mr. Andrew Walker (who has long been connected with the Bovril enterprise). I understand that it is intended to form a number of sub-Companies, and the profits for the past year are variously estimated at from £150,000 to £200,000. On this point the prospectus will no doubt give full particulars. The fact that Bovril is sold by nearly every grocer, store, chemist, confectioner, and publican in the kingdom, besides being retailed at the railway refreshment buffets throughout the world, shows that there is still a great future before it. Under the circumstances, I should think that there is every prospect of the shareholders in the old Company taking a very considerable proportion of the shares in the new Company. In American Brewery shares investment purchases are being made, more especially in Milwaukee and Chicago Ordinary and Prefs. in Springfield Ordinary, and in St. Louis Ordinary and Prefs. the position of which I explained last week. I see that the New Saturday goes in very strongly for criticising Mr. H. J. Lawson's promotions, and amongst these my contemporary specially refers to the Great Horseless Carriage Company, Limited, which was one of his principal achievements, having been floated in May last with the enormous capital of £750,000. It will be interesting to watch whether the New Saturday's predictions will be borne out by events. The price paid by the Great Horseless Carriage Company for the motor patents supplied by Mr. Lawson was £500,000, half in cash and half in shares; and as the public at the time appear to have very generously responded to the prospectus, Mr. Lawson's responsibility to them is certainly a very heavy one. "We predicted McKinley's election as President of the United States with the consequent boom in American Railway shares closing our 'Louisville and Nashville' deal at a profit of 762½ per cent. within fourteen days," say Frank Tarrant & Co., 70 and 71, Bishopsgate-street Within, London, E.C. As the enterprising Tarrant & Co. have made such large profits for their clients, they have undoubtedly also secured a fortune for their own account, and it is to be hoped, therefore, that they will retire from business and discontinue pestering absolute strangers in all parts of the country with their touting circulars. All the same, I should like to meet in the flesh any one who has received this magnificent profit of 762½ per cent. in Louisville and Nashville from Frank Tarrant & Co. It is years ago since I conducted an inquiry into the affairs of the Royal Liver Friendly Society of Liverpool, the result being that the Society was rescued from a very precarious position, and worked gradually into a thoroughly sound financial condition again. I am sorry to see, from a circular which has reached me, that there is renewed strife amongst the members. This circular, which has been sent out by Mr. J. J. Winters, speaks of a crisis in the Committee of Management of the Society, the complaint being that there is ceaseless bickering amongst the members of this Committee. The charge is also made that, after an error had been pointed out, an inaccurate balance-sheet had been issued. I daresay that there are two sides to the question, and I shall be glad to hear from the management of the Royal Liver Friendly Society what they have to say for themselves.—Your affectionate Uncle, MOSES.

Cascarine Leprince.—The housewife's ideal laxative. A pure vegetable product, free from irritating effects, which not only relieves, but permanently cures, obstinate and chronic constipation. Its action is mild, painless, and certain, and its tonic properties insure a regular habit of the body. It is invaluable in chronic congestion of the liver, dyspepsia and indigestion, biliousness and sick headache, owing to its tonic influence on the digestive apparatus. The mildness of its action and its absolute freedom from irritating or disagreeable after-effects render it peculiarly suitable for women during nursing. It has secured on the Continent an ever-increasing popularity. Sample gratis on application to Francis Newbery & Sons, 1 and 3, King Edward-st., Newgate-st., London, E.C.

All Rights Reserved.]

QUEER STORY.

BOB JIFFINGHAM'S ENGAGEMENT.

WHEN that wealthy and rather reckless young fellow, Bob Jiffingham, got himself engaged to Maggie Pillkins, daughter of the Piccadilly tobacconist, so famous for his excellent Havannahs, all his friends said what a confounded fool he was. Bob was not, perhaps, quite a gentleman by breeding, as he certainly was not by birth, being the son of a successful, but decidedly vulgar, curio-dealer, who had raised himself to affluence by a very particular genius in faking. Still, Bob had been well educated, had acquired such polish as public school and 'Varsity life could impart; and, above all, had succeeded, at the age of twenty-three, to the paternal shekels. With these advantages, he might easily have married well; might even have allied himself to a noble family, and have risen in time to be one of the aristocracy of the land. His folly, therefore, in engaging himself to the daughter of a common tobacconist, and thus ruining all his better prospects, was little short of criminal.

Maggie Pillkins, too, had nothing to recommend her, except the one point of good looks. She was fast, pert, slangy; she had the commonest ideas about things in general, and—worse than all—spoke with a Cockney accent. She had flirted for several years behind the counter, and had been in the habit of lighting cigars for masher customers, with whom she would exchange incessant salvoes of loud and spicy chaff. When she became engaged to Bob, he stipulated that this sort of thing, and, in fact, serving in the shop at all, should henceforth cease. His wishes were complied with. But the tone acquired by the damsel behind the counter was not to be obliterated. She remained just what she was—the sow's ear, out of which Bob's father himself (that prince of fakers) could never have manufactured anything distantly resembling a silk purse.

Bob, however, had fallen in love with her bright eyes, which, it cannot be denied, were particularly fine, and was suffering from the blindness incident to that condition. It never occurred to him that Maggie might have been simply attracted by his wealth; and that, as far as his person was concerned, she perhaps valued him at a lesser price than she set on one or two of her more vulgar, and therefore more congenial, admirers. But these things never do occur to rich young men. They always believe that they are loved for themselves. Herein is a difference between the sexes. For rich young ladies always suspect that they are loved for their money. It is one more instance—if instance were needed—of the superior cuteness of the fair sex; one more explosion of the fallacy, which (Heaven knows why) has long associated the ladies with innocence and trustfulness.

Bob then was very deeply in love with Maggie; and, so far from being ashamed, was actually proud of her. He was always taking her about with him, and lost no opportunity of introducing her to his friends. These were mostly of the male kind. The ladies in Bob's circle showed no inclination to become acquainted with Maggie. You could not blame them. Maggie, even when on her best behaviour, was dreadfully loud and vulgar. Her shrill, harsh voice and cockney accent jarred in a truly painful manner upon sensitive ears. It was a wonder that Bob himself was not disgusted by it. But then Bob, being in love, was no doubt deaf as well as blind; and, for any sign that he gave to the contrary, might have considered Maggie's tones to comprise all the most dulcet harmonics of the scale.

When the engagement had lasted for five or six months, Maggie's father, whose feelings were something less delicate than the flavour of his Havannahs, suggested one day to Bob that there was no particular reason for deferring the marriage. Bob cordially concurred. He said that he had, for some time, intended to press Maggie to name a date, but that he had been waiting to arrange certain rather worrying little matters of business before doing so. Maggie's father hoped that nothing serious had happened. "Oh, no," said Bob, "nothing very serious; nothing but what was easily capable of adjustment." Maggie's father looked rather inquisitive, and threw out feelers for more precise information. The young man, however, was evidently indisposed to talk about it, and took the first opportunity of turning the conversation into other channels. But his uneasy manner made an impression on the tobacconist, who decided that he would make a few inquiries, and, in the meantime, keep his eyes open. It was certain that for some weeks Bob had been rather depressed, and not quite himself. Was it possible that he had been wasting his fortune in gambling, speculation, betting, or anything of that sort? Hardly likely, indeed. Bob appeared to have no predisposition that way. Still it could not hurt to institute a few inquiries, and this he—the Havannah seller—would make it his business to do.

Bob escaped from his prospective father-in-law as soon as he could, and went upstairs to join Maggie, whom he heard singing one of her favourite music-hall ditties in the best parlour overhead.

"Hilloa, boy," she exclaimed, as he entered, twisting herself round on the music-stool to face him. "Glad to see you, by the piper! It's jolly slow up here by myself! You look a bit down in the mouth, too. Nothing wrong, I hope."

"I'm feeling rather seedy; that is all, darling," he replied, stooping to kiss her fondly. "But I have arranged a little outing, which, I am sure, will do us both good. Are you game, Maggie?"

"Rather! Just about. I'm spoiling for a spree. What is it?"

"I want you to come to a little dinner in my rooms this evening, and to go to the Gaiety afterwards. I have asked a few friends to join us; and my aunt, Mrs. Sheldon, will be there to play Propriety."

"Oh, stow propriety!" cried Miss Pillkins, with a half-petulant shrug of her ample shoulders. "We're properly engiged, aren't we? And you can tike me out, I suppose, without outriging Mrs. Grundy's susceptibilities? Well, at any rite, I'll come. Pa's just stood me a new evening gaown, yellow satin with red bows. Suits me a treat, I can tell you, boy. The modeest says she never sor anything so stylish."

"Ah, my darling, you would make any gown look stylish," said Jiffingham, admiringly.

"Oh, gao on! But who's to be there this evening besides Aunt Propriety?"

"Mervyn and Anstey—you've met them, haven't you?—and a friend of Mervyn's, whom he particularly wishes to bring. He is over from Ireland, staying with Mervyn. I don't know him myself, except by name. He's a swell—Lord Portmasherry, eldest son of the Earl of Bantry Bay. But Mervyn says he's a real good fellow, and some of the best company in the world."

"Oh, snikes! A live lord!"

Maggie Pillkins trembled with pleasurable anticipation as she spoke.

Bob laughed good-humouredly.

"My dear girl," he said, "lords are just like other men; often not so good. I may add that the greatest ass I have ever met is a Marquess. Titles ain't what they used to be, you know. Money is the go nowadays."

"Hasn't Lord Port—what's his name—got money, then?"

"Oh, yes. He's rich enough. Luckily for them, the family have large estates in England. Their Irish property ain't worth an old hat. But now, darling, let me hear you sing the 'Coster's Serenade.' I've been a bit worried to-day with business, and I want something to soothe me."

Miss Pillkins sang the song required with realistic effect. Also others of the same class and tenor. Bob sat on the sofa and listened, with half-closed eyes. There was no doubt that he looked rather depressed. When, at length, Miss Pillkins rose from the piano, he asked her to come and sit beside him on the sofa, which she did. Maggie was not (to use her own expression when talking to her girl friends) particularly "nuts on the spooning part of an engigement," still, as she phrased it, "you have to tike the rough with the smooth, and the billings and cooings along with the stitus and the oof." So she came and placed herself beside Bob on the sofa, submitting her waist to his arm and her cheek to his frequent salutes.

To-day, Bob was more than usually tender and affectionate. He addressed Maggie by every endearing term in Cupid's vocabulary, especially harping upon the possessive adjective of the first person and its many synonymous alternatives. At length, he said, suddenly:

"Maggie, darling, you will always be my own, will you not?"

"Of course, boy. Why need you ask?"

"I mean you'll stick to me, through thick and thin, whatever might happen? Nothing shall hinder you from marrying me—eh, Maggie?"

"What do you mean, boy? What's likely to happen?" inquired Miss Pillkins, half sharply.

"Oh, nothing—nothing," answered her lover, with a suppressed sigh. "At least nothing serious. But I like to hear from your own sweet lips that you will always be true to your Bob. And you will, will you not?"

"Ra-a-ther. What d'ye tike me for?" was Maggie Pillkins' not too romantic reply. And then she demanded of him, with a rather suspicious look: "But you're keeping nothing back from me, are you, boy?"

"No, no, darling. It was only my fun. We love one another too well for any concealment, don't we, Maggie? Well, I must be running away now. I have an appointment in the City this afternoon. Good bye, my own little girl. I shall send the brougham to fetch you at seven o'clock."

"Thank'ee, boy. So long!" said Miss Maggie, kissing her hand to him as he bowed himself out.

The brougham arrived at the appointed time, and duly conveyed Maggie Pillkins to Jiffingham's rooms in St. James's-street. The other guests had not arrived, except Bob's aunt, Mrs. Sheldon, an amiable, good-natured old lady, who could not have been rude to any one, and who welcomed her nephew's fiancée with a quite effusive cordiality. Shortly afterwards Anstey turned up, and then Mervyn, accompanied by the "live lord," Viscount Portmasherry. In spite of Bob's assurance that "lords are just like other men," Maggie found herself watching this titled guest with a sensation of pleased curiosity. She saw a handsome, well set-up young man, of agreeable manners and aspect, who appeared anxious to make himself as pleasant and friendly as possible. He was not at all like the Viscounts of whom she had read in novels—pale, languid, and of well-bred hauteur. On the contrary, he was sunburnt, athletic, hearty, and most affable. At dinner, where he sat opposite to Maggie, he enjoyed his food with no suspicion of languor, and cracked jokes all round in the friendliest manner. Altogether, he was the most affable of Viscounts. Maggie thought him really delightful.

Anstey occupied a seat on one side of Maggie and kept up a running flow of conversation with her, which somewhat took her attention off the Viscount.

"Poor Bob looks rather worried, doesn't he?" Anstey remarked, confidentially, in the course of his remarks.

"Yes; I think he does. He tells me that he is a bit seedy. However, I expect he'll soon be all right agine."

"It has been rather a harassing time for him lately, of course."

"Has it? Why?"

"Oh, this confounded South African business. The rebellion in Charterland, and all that, you know."

"I didn't know Bob had friends engiged in it. He never taold me so," answered Miss Pillkins.

"Ah—I didn't mean that. I was referring to the Hottentot market?"

"What's that?" inquired Maggie, not in the least understanding his phrase.

"Why, the mining shares, and all that sort of thing, you know. Gone down with a bang. Regular slump. I advised Bob not to touch 'em. But he would do it."

"Do—do—you think, then, that Bob has been dropping oof?" she asked, with sudden interest, as she recalled her lover's rather mysterious words to her earlier in the day.

"Think? But has not Bob told you?"

"He has told me nothing," answered Maggie, with an aggrieved air.

"Ah, well; then perhaps I ought not to have spoken. I didn't know it was a secret. No doubt he'll tell you shortly. In the meantime, don't say anything about this to Bob, please, Miss Pillkins . . . Hilloa, there's Mrs. Sheldon making the signal to you. How quickly time has gone."

They had a very pleasant evening at the theatre. Maggie's annoyance with, and anxiety about, Bob (which Anstey's words had awakened), was soon forgotten in the pleasure which she derived from Lord Portmasherry's polite attentions. His conversation was certainly charming and his manners most agreeable. He was too polite to engross her attentions all the while that they were at the theatre; still, he talked to her a great deal, and showed by his glances that he decidedly appreciated her charms. Probably, he did not intend to treat her with more than the ordinary homage that every pretty girl has a right to expect. But Maggie's head was in a fair way to be turned by it, and she went home to her father full of the delightful Viscount.

She saw nothing of Bob for the next few days. He wrote twice to explain his absence, saying that he was greatly occupied by pressing business in the City. But on the following afternoon, while out shopping in Bond-street, she happened to meet Lord Portmasherry, who stopped and politely offered to accompany her for a short distance on her way. Nothing loth, she accepted his offer, and spent a most agreeable half-hour in his company. When they parted, his lordship hoped that they might soon have the pleasure of meeting again, and asked her whether she often shopped in Bond-street in the afternoons. "Yes," she answered, "very often;" and, as if to substantiate her statement by her acts, she repaired thither on the very next afternoon. By a curious conjuncture of circumstances, she again fell in with the Viscount, who again accompanied her in her walk. This time, when they parted, he was bolder. He asked whether he might be allowed to call upon her in Regent-street. After some slight hesitation, she gave him leave.

He took advantage of this permission to come and see her next day. When he found himself alone with her in the best front parlour, his manner, for the first time, became awkward and constrained. He talked stupid commonplaces with a vague and distracted air, like a man who has something weighty on his mind and is very ill at ease. At length, however, he shook off his constraint, as if by a great effort, and broke out impulsively:

"Miss Pillkins—I—I—cannot—cannot help it. You—you—must not think me impertinent. But I—I—wish to know the truth. Is it—are you—you engaged to be married to Mr. Jiffingham?"

"Yes," faltered Maggie, in a low voice. "But—but——"

"Then," exclaimed his lordship, rising from his chair, and looking very pale and miserable, "I must leave you at once, Miss Pillkins, and not see you again. I—I—have always been a man of honour, and—and—I will not forfeit that title now; as forfeit it I must if I remain any longer in your presence. Good-bye, Mag—Miss Pillkins, good-bye!"

He moved towards the door as he spoke. Maggie Pillkins watched his retreating form with disappointment—with dismay.

"Oh, stop—stop, my lord!" she gasped, agitatedly.

He came back at the sound of her voice.

"What do you mean?" he demanded, almost fiercely.

"I—I—am engiged to Mr.—Mr. Jiffingham. But—but—oh, haow can I tell you?—I have—have—long thought that—that—we are ill—ill-suited—to—to—each other, and—and—I have been meaning—to—to—put an end to it for some time."

"Is this the truth—the Gospel truth?" he exclaimed, in a voice hoarse from suppressed excitement.

"Yes—yes. I—I——"

"And—and—" ejaculated the Viscount, bending forward and scanning her face eagerly. "Do—do—I—read your looks aright, Miss Pillkins—Maggie? Oh, for God's sake do not tell me that I am mistaken. Do—do—you—love me?"

"You are not mistaken—I do love you," replied Maggie, hanging her head in sweet confusion.

In an instant his lordship was at her side, and his arm was round her waist. She let him embrace her—passive, unresisting. She laid her head upon his shoulder, and ever and anon, as they sat together on the sofa—the seat which she and Bob had so often occupied—she murmured in his ear sweet confessions of love and devotion.

After awhile Lord Portmasherry said, "Maggie, my own, I—I—you are still—still engaged to Mr. Jiffingham, you know. And until you have openly broken off with him, I have no right, as a man of honour, to—to—claim you as—as—my promised wife. Will—will—you sever your engagement with him at once?"

"Yes; that I will, boy!"

"Will—will—you—write him a letter, giving him his congé now? I—I—wish to see your father, and to have our engagement recognised by him before I leave you this afternoon. And that I cannot do until you have taken steps to break with Mr. Jiffingham. Come, darling; come, Maggie, my pearl, I am in such a hurry—so jealous—so eager. Do not deny me! Come! Write the letter now, my queen of girls, and I will help you with it. Will you, sweet?"

"Right y'are, boy," answered Miss Pillkins with alacrity.

* * * * *

"So you've got the letter, all right?" said our old friend, Mr. Hydenseke to Bob Jiffingham. "And my little plan has turned out successfully. Now mind, Mr. Jiffingham, if any difficulties should arise, you simply stick to the authorised version of the affair. And you, Mr. Mervyn, of course, you've been simply imposed upon—as others have been—by a scamp of an adventurer, who has been passing himself off as Lord Portmasherry. In fact, if I were you, in order to give the thing more colour, I should just write a letter to the daily papers, warning the public against that impostor. By the way, you will be glad to hear that the young man sailed for New Zealand yesterday, with his £1,000.

"And you will be glad to hear," answered Bob, with a grin, "that the said £1,000 represents my entire loss over the—hem—Hottentot slump!"

MUSIC.

THE BOOM IN ORCHESTRAL CONCERTS.

THE fact that so many concert managers this autumn are speculating in orchestral concerts implies something more than that these gentry are performing their accustomed evolution of following each other like sheep. It means that symphony concerts are paying. Even at the Crystal Palace where the management, vicariously, and through the mouth of a writer whose very name is unfamiliar, seemed inclined to hoist the white flag, business is progressing gloriously. It may, of course, be true that large houses do not always mean commensurately large net profits, for in these commercial days, stars like Sarasate are fully alive to the virtues of "sharing in the gross" receipts. But the Henschel concerts, despite injudicious management in the drawing-up of the programmes, are doing well; the Lamoureux concerts have a big subscription and in fact upwards of eighty London orchestral concerts were announced between October and Christmas, more perhaps than can be heard in any other European capital the year round. Indeed, in some of the supposed "musical centres" of Europe, orchestral music is either strangely neglected, or is much mismanaged. It seems a ridiculous thing that four and sometimes five symphony concerts clash with one another in Paris on Sunday afternoons, while the rest of the week is left to comic or other operas and is altogether blank so far as orchestral performances are concerned. In Berlin orchestral concerts are more numerous, although this week there are only two as against eleven in London, while in Vienna they are comparatively few, the most important being the ten given during the season by the Austrian Philharmonic Society under Richter. At Leipzig, too, the Gewandhaus Concerts are only once a week. In fact, nowhere are there anything like the number of orchestral performances that we are hearing in unmusical London this winter. Every Saturday here there are the afternoon concerts at the Crystal Palace and the evening performances at Queen's Hall. On Sunday there are always two and sometimes three orchestral performances, while this week the Lamoureux Band play daily at Queen's Hall, and the autumn fixtures likewise comprise the concerts given by Mr. Henschel and by numerous amateur bands, some of them, such as the Stock Exchange and the Strolling Players, quite equal to the average professional orchestras, and a good deal better than certain of them who are compelled to grope about in the endeavour to hit upon the French pitch. Then there are the orchestral concerts given by the Royal Academy and the Royal College students, the Westminster Orchestral Society, the Imperial Institute band, the Royal Amateurs, and numerous others.

It might be expected that under such circumstances, and in accordance with the ordinary laws of supply and demand, the salaries of the players would have gone up. But, as a matter of fact, the tendency is to lower the fees. The ordinary rank-and-file at orchestral concerts are supposed to receive a guinea each, this including one rehearsal, while all other rehearsals are paid for at half rates. At the Sunday concerts, however, the bulk of the band accept half price on condition that they shall not be bound to attend any rehearsal at all. The half-price system has started the ball, and, as the alternative to a permanent orchestra, further reductions are threatened. According to a complaint which I see in the Gazette of the "Orchestral Association," itself a sort of trade union for the higher-class bandsmen, Mr. Newman has sought to engage his orchestra for the Saturday night concerts "at terms which work out to a fee somewhat lower than the usual concert terms." This seems to have aroused the sorrow rather than the anger of the Association, although I am bound to say the proceeding appears to me to be strictly in accordance with the time-honoured commercial law of a reduction on taking a quantity. Before Mr. Newman started his Saturday night concerts, that evening was to bandsmen practically a blank, so that, even if they have been asked to accept a reduced fee, they have not much to complain about.

The fees of members of British orchestras are, in fact, the highest in Europe. When there was a suggestion to take a dozen of Dr. Richter's best players to Bayreuth last summer, special terms were settled by Frau Cosima Wagner for the London men, who, however, to their astonishment found that the offer amounted to only £25, for that which, with rehearsals and travelling, was practically a five weeks' engagement, with the privilege of paying their own hotel bills at Bayreuth. This was the highest sum paid at the Festival, and the pecuniary preference thus offered to mere Britons so angered the Germans that the idea of bringing players from London had to be abandoned. Elsewhere on the Continent it is a comparatively frequent thing for the leaders to receive about £2 per week, and the rank and file half that sum, or less. It is for this reason that orchestral concerts can be given so much more cheaply abroad than in London. That the fees here will ever be greatly reduced is, however, unlikely. The total annual earnings of an orchestral player are not what might be called a South African fortune, and although some of the performers eke out their incomes by teaching, the work is hard and not too remunerative.

The worse feature of the orchestral situation lies, perhaps, in the annual output from our academies of dozens of girl players, despite the persistent refusal of conductors to engage women for the band, although some of those very conductors earn their money by teaching girls. Under these circumstances it seems a wicked waste of time and money to spend such large sums on the orchestral education of ladies. At the Guildhall School alone there are upwards of 100 girls being taught the violin or some other orchestral instrument. There are also many lady students of these instruments at professional colleges like the Royal College and the Royal Academy of Music, although the authorities know perfectly well that when the girls' education is finished there is not the slightest hope of any one of them being able to turn her talents to account. It may be that conductors are right in preferring male players. But if this be the case, teachers, whether "Principals" or subordinates, are indisputably wrong in encouraging girls to waste their time and their parents' money upon a branch of art which, as a means of livelihood, is absolutely useless, and is, in fact, debarred to them.

If you wish a good purgative drink the "Franz Josef" Aperient Water, the only PALATABLE NATURAL APERIENT, and the most popular of all Aperients.

Mr. Faber has resolved to purchase the operatic stock in-trade of the late Sir Augustus Harris, and for the whole of Harris's costumes, scenery, &c., he, it is understood, will pay rather over £7,000. The stuff will be added to the wardrobe and scenic collection at Covent Garden, of which Mr. Faber is ground lessee, and thus our principal opera house will exclusively possess the materials for mounting any one of something like 120 operas by giving the indefatigable and trustworthy Mr. Morse a few hours' notice. This will place in the hands of Covent Garden a complete monopoly of opera, for the manager of any other theatre will be compelled to go to the expense of painting special scenery and providing new dresses for any work he desires to mount.

We have only had telegraphic accounts of the newspaper controversy in New York between M. Jean de Reszke and Mme. Nordica. It seems to have been pretty brisk while it lasted, and it no doubt arose from the discussion as to the preference shown by the American public for foreign artists. Mme. Melba, it is said, is paid something like three times the fee of an American prima donna. Whether the journalistic warfare will interfere with the arrangement by which Mme. Nordica will sing Brünnhilde in London to the Siegfried of Jean de Reszke, next year, remains to be seen. The Covent Garden syndicate, however, has just effected two important engagements. The first is that of Mme. Frances Saville, who succeeded Mme. Melba as principal concert soprano in Australia, and who has since been under the same instructress, Mme. Marchesi. Unless her portraits unduly flatter her, Mme. Saville, who in private life is known as Mrs. Rown, is a woman of great beauty, and she brings an excellent Paris reputation. The other engagement is that of M. Van Dyck, who sang here six years ago, and who will now replace M. Alvarez. There is also some talk, but at present only a talk, of the engagement of Signor Tamagno, who, at any rate, proposes to be here in the course of the summer.

In one of the advertisements which I quoted last week from the Daily Telegraph as to Mr. Lansdowne Cottell's London Conservatoire of Music occurred the following line, "Opinions of the principal London papers recording the concerts and successes during the last twenty years, post free." Upon this point I have received a cutting from the Era of the 31st ult., concerning that which the reporter, in his most luxuriant vein, calls "a brilliant assemblage last Saturday night in the concert-room of the London Conservatoire." The musical portion of the notice commences thus:—

A mazurka, by Wicniawski, for violin and pianoforte, was the first item of the concert. Mr. F. Rubenius and Mr. J. W. Norton were the performers, and were greeted with cordial applause. Several pianoforte solos and duets were given. In one of the latter Miss Lansdowne Cottell joined Mr. R. Halton Pearce with complete success, the music being from Brahms and and Moszkowski. It was interpreted with adequate skill. Miss Cottell afterwards played her father's clever pianoforte piece called "A Sea Song."

I am informed by two people who really were present that neither Mr. Rubenius nor Miss Cottell took part in the concert, and that, although their names were down in the programme, the works announced for them were omitted. If this be the case, it will pretty plainly show the exact value of appreciative notices of this character.

The centenary of Schubert's birth is to be celebrated at the Crystal Palace, where Schubert has always been held in high honour, several of his works having, indeed, been performed there for the first time in England, and in one or two instances for the first time in Europe. There are to be two special Schubert concerts at the commencement of the spring season. No doubt also there will be Schubert programmes at the Monday Popular Concerts; but elsewhere, down to date, the centenary seems to be overlooked.

I must run very rapidly through some of the more important concerts of the week. At Queen's Hall on Saturday night Dvorák's symphonic poem, "Der Wassermann," was produced for the first time in England. No doubt it is a clever piece of workmanship, but the attempt to illustrate the repulsive story of a wicked sprite, who, to revenge himself upon his wife, decapitates his baby, and throws the headless trunk at the cottage-door of his mother-in-law, is, happily, impracticable in music. Surely there are more pleasant Bohemian national stories than this for Dr. Dvorák's acceptance. At the Crystal Palace, and also a few days later on at the Lamoureux Concerts, M. Vincent D'Indy's symphonic poem, "The Enchanted Forest," was produced. This is a light and agreeable piece, though quite of the French school of eighteen years ago. That the music has little or nothing to do with the story of Uhland's ballad, which narrates how the wood elves enticed away a party of knights and sent their leader to an almost everlasting sleep, is hardly the fault of M. Vincent D'Indy. Mr. Henschel at his first concert produced Smetana's so-called symphonic poem "Richard III." The performance was rather rough, and, indeed, Mr. Henschel this year has been very unwise in placing his principal novelties at the end of the programmes, when his band and the audience alike must be tired. Whether the "Richard III." of this symphonic poem is the Crook-back of Gloucester or some local monarch I am unaware. In either case, however, it matters little.

Perhaps the most interesting of the chamber concerts of the past week was that given by Mr. Gompertz, who produced Professor Stanford's new quartet in D minor. Here, curiously enough, both in a much too long slow movement and in the finale we have decided reminiscences of Irish tune, as though, indeed, as somebody said, the ghost of Shamus O'Brien had wandered through the quartet. Mr. Eugene D'Albert drew a big audience to the Popular Concerts on Saturday, when he played Beethoven's "Sonata Appassionata." Another clever pianist, Miss Aus der Ohe, a former pupil of Liszt, came out at the Henschel Concert, but she will be heard to greater advantage in a recital or a chamber programme. Mr. Luard Selby, at his concert, brought out a cleverly-written duet sonata, for pianoforte and violin.

I am glad to hear better news of the health of Miss Sofia Ravogli. This young lady, shortly after her arrival with her sister, Giulia, a few weeks ago to fulfil some concert engagements in England, was seized with typhoid fever, and lay at death's door. There is now reason to hope that she will recover. On the other hand, I have bad news of the once eminent operatic tenor, Signor Italo Campanini, who is at his native Parma, suffering from a malady which the doctors declare quite hopeless. However, Campanini is a man of only fifty, and, as he is in the full vigour of ripe manhood, I trust the reports are exaggerated.

MORTLOCK'S China and Glass Business, Oxford-st., has entered its 150th year, being founded by John Mortlock in 1746. It is carried on by John George Mortlock, the great-great-grandson of the founder, who solicits patronage and recommendation.

TYPEWRITERS AND CYCLES FOR SALE OR HIRE. Great bargains in Standard Machines.—N. TAYLOR, Manager, 74, Chancery-lane, London. Established 1884.

LETTERS ON BOOKS.

MY DEAR MR. WYNDHAM,—Both by association and by derivation an idyll has a right to be something pastoral or poetic, something ideal, delicate, and dainty; but Mr. Baring Gould's "Dartmoor Idylls" (1) are for the most part earthly, sensual, and gross. What is there idyllic, for instance, in the ideal joys—either of earth or heaven—depicted in "Goosie-Vair?" A bridegroom on his wedding-day is most of all enchanted with the goose of the bridal feast, and on each succeeding anniversary of this happiest day and dinner of his life he recalls the memory of its bliss by smoking sage and onions in his pipe. At his death his brother-in-law forced between the teeth of the corpse a pipe charged with sage and onions, in order that his sister, at the Resurrection, should have the happy surprise of recognising her husband through the delicate aroma of these condiments. Nor is the humour of these idylls more ethereal. A minister, in preaching against a Romish cross which had stood immemorially upon the moors, declared that Apollyon not only sat upon it, but curled his tail about it, and so emphasised by pulpit-thumping the statement that "he would have made his audience jump like fleas" if they had not been either asleep or thinking of their dinners. Next day he set forth to uproot the cross with his own hands, but had to take refuge upon it from a mad bull:—

"Depart, son of iniquity! Beast of Abaddon! I anathematise thee! Go far from me!" shouted the man, curling his long legs round the cross. "Oh, my gracious! he has twisted his horns in my tail!" He meant the tails of his long black coat. "You foul spirit!" shouted he, "I'll tell Butcher Edgcombe of you. I'll ask him to strike you between the horns with his axe. I'll order a round out of you, I'll have it salted, I'll eat it—I will, and enjoy it too!"

If fun must be made out of a man in a frenzy of terror, it surely ought to have been of a kind less forced and foolish than this. The fun of "The Sorrows of a Golfer's Wife" (2) is at times a little heavy-handed. A butler who hands round golf-balls at dessert by mistake, and a cook who intentionally serves them up in a pie, are not exquisitely humorous conceptions. The real fun of the novel is unconscious—the tragic horror of the little spit-fire of a wife at her husband's iniquitious absorption in golf. In all other respects she admits him to have been the kindest and most generous husband in the world; but his absorption in the game is so insupportable to her that she runs away from home on the eve of her confinement, at the risk and almost at the cost of her life! The only adequate treatment of such a case would be the feminine prescription, "She wants a good shaking." I must say, however, that, though your sympathies are out of tune throughout with those of the author, the novel is bright and readable. You will remember, perhaps, how charmed I was with "Eyes Like the Sea" and with "Timar's Two Worlds," and you will understand, therefore, the eagerness with which I opened "Black Diamonds" (3) by the same author. Well, it also is a fine novel of its romantic kind, but it is not to be compared in art or in interest with either of its predecessors. Its hero is too heroic, and too conscious also of his heroism, while the narrative of his exploits is too discursive.

"Look round you from this hill!" he cries to the girl to whom he is proposing. "Everything that lives in this valley owes its breath to me; every blade of grass has to thank me that it is now green. Hill and valley know that, under God, I have saved them from destruction. I have acquired a million, and I have not despoiled any one. With every penny I receive a blessing. In the palace of the prince, and in the cottage of the widow, I have dried the tears of despair. My name is spoken of with admiration all over the globe, and yet I have hid myself here, not to be troubled with their praises. I do not care for praise. The most lovely of women has smiled on me and loved me, but she was not of my world. My world is within me, and into that inner world of mine no one has ever entered, no one will ever enter but you! Speak, Evila! Answer me. Will you try to love me?"

This was all true, no doubt, but he was hardly the man, and it was hardly the moment to proclaim it. You are presumed in proposing to be thinking of the lady's perfections rather than of your own, and Evila's record was as noble of its kind as his. The fine portrait of Maurus Jokai with the orders on his breast—which forms the frontispiece of the novel—enhances the humour of the conclusion of the catalogue of honours heaped upon the hero:—

The simple villagers of Bondavara prayed for him night and morning; and when the first train steamed out of the station the locomotive bore his name. It was only God's providence that preserved him from receiving "an order."

No one can charge "The Last of the Haddons" (4) with forgetting how Christian a grace is humility, since self-effacement of the most Apostolic kind is the moral of the story. To say the truth, I felt in reading it a little like one of the unworthy souls in Swedenborg's other world, who, bored to death by the company of archangels, slips out of it at the first opportunity. All, or almost all, the characters are of the straitest tract pattern, and recall those silhouettes of my youth—square-cut, black, formal, and showing only a Sunday side face. It would be just the book for a Sunday-school prize, though even Sunday-school readers would resent the extreme propriety which prevented the last of the Haddons marrying her priggish "affinity," Robert Wentworth. From "The Last of the Haddons" to "The World's Great Snare" (5) is a far cry indeed. Every ingredient that has ever gone to the brewing of a melodrama has been flung into Mr. Phillips Oppenheim's cauldron to "make the gruel thick and slab." In every chapter almost you have a scene like that in which the heroine saves her own virtue and her lover's life by shooting her would-be ravisher:—

He laughed—a long hideous laugh which seemed to find a hundred strange echoes as it rolled away across the plain. Still she stood like a marble figure. Too late he stopped short, sobered by that strange set look in her ashen face—too late, for her hand had stolen out of the bosom of her gown. There was a flash, a loud report, and with a curse which twisted his lips and left them apart for ever, Dan Cooper threw up his arms, and rolled over like a log.

But it is such uncommonly appetising melodrama of its fiery-seasoned kind, that your interest is kept breathless from the first page to the last.—Believe me, my dear Mr. Wyndham, ever yours very sincerely,

DESMOND B. O'BRIEN

(1) "Dartmoor Idylls." By S. Baring Gould. London: Methuen & Co. Price 6s.
(2) "The Sorrows of a Golfer's Wife." By Mrs. Edward Kennard. London: F. V. White & Co.
(3) "Black Diamonds." By Maurus Jokai. London: Jarrold & Sons. Price 6s.
(4) "The Last of the Haddons." By Mrs. Newman. London: Jarrold & Sons. Price 3s. 6d.
(5) "The World's Great Snare." By E. Phillips Oppenheim. London: Ward & Downey, Limited.

GIRLS' GOSSIP.

DEAREST AMY,—They have such lovely things just now at the Goldsmiths' and Silversmiths' Company's showrooms at 112, Regent-street. We went to get some Christmas presents to send to friends in India and Africa, and, as one is permitted to look at everything there without being bothered to buy, and all the articles are marked in plain prices, we enjoyed ourselves extremely. One of the first things that caught my eye was a pansy carried out in opal matrix, with a diamond in the centre and small gold leaves on a golden stem. A new design in bracelets is certain to be popular. The twisted gold bangle has a circular gold pendant in which the stone of the month is set, so that birthday gifts can have a peculiarly appropriate significance in this way. For instance, a girl born in July has the ruby for her lucky stone. The emerald belongs to May, and both sapphire and diamond to April. The bangles are sure to take, especially as the date or name or monogram can be inscribed on the reverse of the circle. Other bracelets, also novel in design, have alternate cluster and chain in jewels and gold, the former consisting of rubies and diamonds, emeralds and diamonds, sapphires, pearls, or all diamonds. A most lovely girdle made of many strands of fine pearls is finished at the ends with tassels of pearls caught into a calyx of gold, one of them set with diamonds and rubies, and the other with diamonds and sapphires. The girdle can also be used as a necklace, twisted twice round the neck. and the tassels falling in front. It is a beautiful and graceful piece of jewellery. A necklet for a young girl is in fine pearls with a delicate little pendant, the centre of which is a turquoise surrounded by diamonds.

BUSVINE'S New Styles of Ladies' Fur-trimmed Cloth Jackets are separately designed and specially modelled to suit each particular figure.—Sketches by post, 4, Brook-street, W. "Positively moulded to the figure by the skilful hands of BUSVINE."—Queen.

Muff-chains are always acceptable presents, and the Goldsmiths have plenty of new patterns prepared for the season of gifts. One in gold and pearls and diamonds has the latter set open, so that they are visible on both sides. Some are enamel; others have stained cornelian, green or blue, or the plain gold cornelian which has become so fashionable of late. These stones are cut in two and divided by a rondel of white topaz. This is the new way of treating them. A bicycle brooch has the wheels surrounded by diamonds. Very jolly they look, too. Diamond-headed side combs are in more ornate designs than they have been. Some we saw were most attractive, being in a pattern of leaves and buds, the points rising higher in the centre than at the sides. Opals are growing steadily in favour, and will soon be among the most fashionable stones. A magnificent necklet has five enormous opals set in diamonds in such a way that the various portions come apart, forming brooches. The workmanship of this is intricate and admirable. I admired the wrong side of it for a long time. The mounting is all done in England, I am glad to say.

You would have delighted, as we did, in the beauty of a dog-collar of large pearls, ranged in five rows and most exquisitely matched. Diamonds, in a design of Staffordshire knots forming a trellis work, separate the pearls at intervals, keeping them in position and adding to their softness the contrast of their glittering splendour. Long strings of pearls are now in demand, it seems. One we saw, fifty-four inches long, was a lovely thing. Some of these strings cost as much as £7,000. The new diamond brooches struck us as mightily attractive. One is a Louis XVI. scroll, with small pendent brilliants that quiver always, thus adding to the effect of the jewels themselves. Another is heart-shaped, a copy from the antique; and a third is merely a Virginia creeper leaf in diamonds. A comet in brilliants is another novelty. Gold brooches are in the form of a flight of swallows, dragon-flies, merrythoughts, with an emerald or a diamond lighting them up; golf irons, with a jewelled grasshopper perched on it, pearl and diamond flies on a "knife-edge" gold pin, and so on. If you want to know the prices of all these pretty things, you must send early in December for the catalogue, which will be ready by the first of that month.

Aunt Tabitha has been spending a few days with us. She has favoured Richard with some of her usual strictures on things in general. Chronic disapprobation of everybody and everything is her moral atmosphere.

She reads her Bible daily, goes to church regularly, and performs the usual duties of the Christian; but she has no true Christianity within her, no loving-kindness, no pardon for faults, no excuses for sinners. Her heart must be a flint. To suffering that is brought before her ken she is sympathetic enough. But to all the great world beyond the range of her vision, she is adamant. Condemnatory of every one, she forms her harsh opinions without sufficient data, but never alters them.

Is she very unusual? I fancy not. There are men and women who are always mentally "'eaving 'arf bricks" at the community. Self-constituted censors, they dislike this, hate that, can't understand the other, and have no patience with something else. I think my poor old aunt represents a rather numerous class.

You should hear her about the New Woman. She has quite a gift in "slinging epithets." She never sees a girl on a bicycle without remarking "forward minx" in more or less audible tones, and during her visit our moral cowardice was such that we hid away our bicycles in simple fear of what she might say about us. Deceptions of this sort never answer, as you must have discovered for yourself ere now; and on the very last evening of her stay Richard suddenly said, at dinner, "Well, girls, what have you been about all the afternoon? Been biking?" You never saw such guilty faces as suddenly blossomed into blushes round the table. Aunt Tabitha looked sharply up from her curry, and, without the smallest error, read the whole situation at a glance. She is a little bit afraid of Richard, so she only sneered and uttered a horrid little "Hee-hee!" at the time. When we went to the drawing-room Bee and Clare disappeared, and I heard a smothered titter from one, "Poor Madge!" from the other.

Oh! it was "Poor Madge," I assure you. That terrible old woman said awful things. She spoke of knickerbockers as if the wearing of them was the first step on the road to perdition. "But we always wear skirts!" I cried. "What does that matter? You know you've got those horrid things on underneath!" was her senseless answer.

"You wouldn't have us wear petticoats on a bicycle?" I asked, and her reply was,

"I wouldn't have you adopt any form of amusement that is inconsistent with the wearing of petticoats!"

Did you ever? She made me think of the woman who had never taken a bath because she was too modest.

Aunt Tabitha was delivering herself at her topmost screech, when the door quietly opened and Richard came in. He stood for a moment unseen by her, and then suddenly disappeared, with a face of dismay, and with such remarkable alacrity and promptitude, that I could not help laughing. This drove the poor old girl simply furious, and she soon grew so exhausted that she had to go to bed.

Then it was my turn to scold, and I arraigned Richard and the girls with a charge of cowardice when they came softly in, apologetic and deprecatory. I don't want Aunt Tabitha to stop here ever again. She would make an ideal representation of the Goddess of Acrimony.

* * * * *

The sash has come back to stay. Out of place as it is on an afternoon winter costume under a warm coat, it is yet seen on three out of every four smart walking dresses. Wide and long, it is occasionally more of an embarrassment than a decoration.

Brown and mauve are the favourite contrast in millinery. I think I like it, but not when the tint of mauve is too vivid or when there is too much gold in the brown. I saw a very sweet toque the other day in mauve velvet with shaded mauve chrysanthemums and brown feathers for trimming. With it was worn a brown veil. You know, I suppose, that veils of mauve and violet tulle are worn again. They are far from being universally becoming, but those whom they do suit they embellish marvellously.

Have you seen the new mahogany hair yet? It is funny to observe the change into something rich and strange that is coming over the heads of our acquaintances just now. Some of them are in a transition stage, the hair being on its way to the new colour, but not yet arrived. Other heads have achieved it, and the owners have usually found an elaborate make-up necessary if they would avoid looking ghastly from the contrast of pallid skin and mahogany locks. One or two of our friends, halting midway between two opinions, who have abandoned the idea of dyeing to so deep a tone, show the most extraordinary mixture of light and shade. Altogether, the new dye has been already prolific of amusement to us, and we are still awaiting developments.

History of Feminine Costume. Tracing its evolution from the earliest times to the present. 38 illustrations. Price 6d. Published by Liberty & Co., Ltd., London and Paris. (To be obtained from principal Booksellers or Publishers direct.)

Hunting.—An elegant and graceful up-to-date figure is produced by the easy and perfect fit of the ingenious and appropriate Corsets built by Mesdames Sykes, Josephine, & Co., Anatomical Corsetières, 280, Regent-street, Oxford-circus, London, W.

What a saving of time, trouble, and money it is to be content with Nature's own colour schemes in hair, on cheeks and brow, to say nothing of outline. Many a smart woman might paraphrase Wolsey's famous speech, and wish she had paid as much attention to her soul as she had done throughout life to her body. It would be a better investment.

I love portraits and miniatures. They are, in one way, better than the originals, for one can have a good stare at them without the embarrassment of being caught in the act of gazing. Of course, this is enjoyable only when the portrait is a good one. At the Grafton Galleries, the exhibition that opened on Friday affords some excellent opportunities for this amusement, and I had a good look at the Prince, as portrayed by Mr. A. Stuart-Wortley. He has a nice face, and but for the retreating forehead that, in common with all his brothers except the Duke of Coburg, he has inherited from his father, he would have a very intellectual head. There is some tendency to heaviness at the back, but H.R.H. is an immense improvement on the Georges. A century of civilisation might have intervened between grandfather and grandson. Little Lady Marjorie Cochrane's lovely face has been charmingly depicted by Mrs. Waller. She is the youngest daughter of the Earl of Dundonald. Mr. Ellis Roberts' portrait of the Duchess of Sutherland has a splendid position on the dais, near the Duke of Portland and his stepbrothers, and the pretty Countess of Dalkeith in white satin and a summer hat. Near these a group of portraits of the Millais family enchain the attention. The artist's likeness is by G. F. Watts, R.A., but all the rest were painted by the adoring husband and father himself.

Gustave Courtois' "Girl in Red" piques the curiosity. One would like to know all about the owner of that gentle, lovely face and delicate figure, with the white arms and refined hands. The "red" consists of a Japanese embroidered robe, turned back with sky-blue at the neck. Mr. William Stott's depressing picture of his father and mother reappears in this exhibition. I am told that it is very clever. I had a long look at Mme. Sarah Grand. I should never have suspected her of the "Heavenly Twins" if I had not known that she wrote the book. She has none of the characteristics of the rebel or the fighter.

Why should Miss Emma N. look so different in her dressing-glass and out of it, as she does in 163? Before referring to the catalogue, I guessed Lady Ulrica Duncombe's portrait to be that of her sister, the late Duchess of Leinster. It is a lovely profile likeness by Lady Granby.

One could spend a week among the miniatures, so fascinating are they, but to enjoy them properly they should not be taken after the pictures; so we intend to go and see them some other day, and "do" them thoroughly.

In a short time Cosenza begins to give at his premises in Wigmore-street demonstration lessons on soups and sauces. Admission is free by invitation-cards, which can be procured by applying to the firm. I think I intend to go if I can make time, and expect to become very clever in these two branches of cookery in consequence.

The annual sale of work in connection with the Ladies' Work Association at Craven-terrace, Lancaster Gate, is to be held on Tuesday and Wednesday, December 1 and 2, at Spencer House, St. James', by permission of Mr. B. I. Barnato. It opens at half-past two each day, and lasts till half-past six. This Society does so much good in relieving poor gentlewomen by enabling them to find a market for their work, that you must ask all your friends who will be in town that day to go and buy something.

It has been remarked over and over again that, for Autumn and Winter wear, a lady never looks better and more suitably clad than in a Redfern Gown. Messrs. REDFERN's New Models are now ready. Inspection invited.—26, Conduit-street, W.

Clare sends the following from Dublin :—

DEAREST MADGE.—The beginning of November is essentially a "shopping" time. The occupation which is usually our pastime and recreation becomes then a necessity, and by being turned into a duty assumes a stern aspect. For the thing which must be done is very different—even when it is the same thing—from what we may do or leave undone, according to the dictates of our own sweet wills. No one can question that the getting of a winter outfit is a very serious matter, and one which grows in seriousness each year, with the need of a special costume for each special fad and occupation which we take up. The cycling, the hockey, the golfing dresses are late additions to our wardrobes. If our costumes continue to increase at the rate of the last few years, a wardrobe room must join the box room as a necessity in every house. Even without specialities, what a task the outfitting of oneself is for the winter. Everything to be new, or at least renewed, which is still worse. Hats, bonnets, mantles, dresses, &c. The strain on the strongest taste for dress is so severe that the most ardent enthusiast of the clothes cult runs a risk of being satiated with its rites. One thinks with envy, in the whirl and worry of the winter shopping, on the robin of the poet, who gets a "fuller crimson" on his breast—it might as well be "vest"—only in the spring. Of all the wearisome occupations in the world, can any compare to the fitting on of clothes? Were I a personage, I should certainly have the operation done by deputy. Not that the highest lady in the land does this. Apropos of this subject, Court etiquette, always very curious, seems to surpass itself. When the Sovereign is being fitted it is not according to etiquette for her to directly address the fitter or be addressed by her; communications have to be made through the lady-in-waiting, who is present. Can anything be more idiotic? A revision of Court etiquette to make it more conformable to average human society and modern ideas would be a good work by which to celebrate the record reign.

Last and not least serious in the business of the winter outfit is the element of uncertainty which the weather of these climes introduces. The same risks attend our investments as attend those of the Stock Exchange: if we buy for a fall, there may be a rise, and vice versâ. The furs, which, to go by the American prophets, would be the only wear for the coming winter, may be made impossible by a season of mild mugginess, such as not seldom visits us.

Dublin is still socially stagnating. The world which amuses itself is engaged in outdoor pastimes, chiefly hunting, especially in the neighbourhood of Dublin. The capital is within easy reach of the meets of the Meath, Kildare and Ward Union hounds, which gives the hunting man—including woman—ample opportunity. A new feature of the meets is the large attendance of cyclists. As yet they do not go across country, but a time will probably come when a further development of cycle science will enable them to do so.

Last week the flagstaff at the Viceregal Lodge still stood up bare against the wintry sky. Lord Cadogan had not yet returned to resume the burthen of "onerous duties and heavy responsibilities" which he seems to think rest upon his shoulders. By the way, here, in Ireland, we wonder what they are, and, furthermore, who it is that bears them, whilst the Irish Viceroy goes his calm round of English country visits. What a different time our Lord-Lieutenant has from the Viceroys of India and Canada. How they must envy him his frequent holidays, and smile at his idea of hard work. The newspaper which is, what one may call, the inspired organ of Dublin Castle, announced last week that the coming season "would be, if possible, more brilliant than the last." A season which was half a mourning one and curtailed of a fortnight! How sad for us that "if possible," who have allowed ourselves to expect better things than a mourning season gave. And what a descent from the "brilliancy" of the inspired prophecies which heralded Lord Cadogan's reign. If only we had a Viceroy who would seriously devote himself to promoting the "Society" industry in Dublin, how advantageous it would be for trade.

A good many shooting parties have been going on through the country. Lord and Lady Portarlington have been entertaining at Ems, Lord and Lady Rosse at Birr Castle, and Lord and Lady Carew had the Count of Turin staying with them in the county of Wexford, and, of course, a party to meet him.—Yours ever,

CLARE.

Here are the recipes I promised you. This is a delightful way of dressing a young hare with cream sauce :—

Take a young, full-grown hare and prepare it for roasting. Lard the back thickly with strips of fat bacon. Tie a greased paper over it and roast it before a brisk fire, basting very frequently. Now take the hare from the fire, remove the paper, and put it in the oven to dry the larding, glaze it lightly with thin glaze and serve it on a dish with groups of French beans, cut in diamond-shaped pieces, boiled and tossed in a stewpan with salt, pepper, and a few drops of lemon juice. Serve cream sauce and red-currant jelly in separate boats. To make the sauce: Put a gill of thick cream and 2 oz. of butter into a stewpan and stir it incessantly over the fire until quite hot, but it must not be allowed to boil.

The remains of a dish of jugged hare make a delicious purée :—

Pick out every particle of bone, and pound the meat with the sauce until it is a pulpy mass ; warm it in a stew-pan and rub through the tammy, add sufficient stock to make the desired quantity of soup, and stir over the fire until quite hot, but on no account allow it to boil. Season, if necessary, with salt, cayenne pepper, lemon juice, and half a glass of port wine, and serve with dice-shaped croûtons of fried bread on a separate plate.

This is a very old recipe for "Clear Hare Soup." It is lovely. An old hare will answer the purpose admirably:—

Having skinned and paunched the hare, reserve the blood, remove the fillets and place them aside for the quenelles, cut every particle of meat from the carcass and chop the bones ; put them into a stewpan, with the flesh of the hare cut into fine dice cover with cold water, bring slowly to the boil, skim thoroughly, and simmer for six or seven hours, adding an onion stuck with two cloves, a stick of celery, a carrot, a blade of mace, 6 peppercorns and a piece of lean ham. When the soup is sufficiently boiled, strain it through a cloth and return it to the stewpan with the white part of a couple of sticks of celery previously cut into strips 1 in. long and ⅛ in. thick and parboiled in salt water for ten minutes ; simmer the soup for half-an-hour longer, then add a glass of port wine, a pinch of cayenne pepper, a squeeze of lemon juice, and the quenelles. Put the blood of the hare into the tureen, pour in the soup, stir, and be careful that it does not curdle. The soup should be served immediately. To make the quenelles, put 3 parts of a gill of the hare broth into a stewpan, stir in about 1 oz. of bread crumbs, and simmer until it is a stiff paste, pound the fillets, add 1 oz. of butter and the prepared panada, pound again until the ingredients are well blended, add an egg, season with salt and pepper, rub through a wire sieve, and mould into quenelles with two teaspoons. Blanch them in a small quantity of boiling stock.

Ever, dear, your loving cousin, MADGE.

DIAMONDS OR OLD SILVER For PRESENTS.
SPINK & SON

SPOONS AND FORKS 2/11 oz BELOW STORE PRICES.
17 & 18, Piccadilly, W.
AND AT
1 AND 2, GRACECHURCH STREET
CORNHILL E.C. [Est. 1772.

MODERN MOURNING.
Messrs. JAY
SUBMIT for INSPECTION WITHOUT CHARGE, in any part of the Kingdom, as at their Warehouse in Regent-street, a FULL SELECTION of MOURNING, either WITH or WITHOUT CRAPE.
SKIRTS, MANTLES, AND MILLINERY
Are READY for IMMEDIATE WEAR, and BODICES are COMPLETED to measure in a FEW HOURS.
JAY'S (Ltd.), REGENT ST., LONDON

THE MANUFACTURING
GOLDSMITHS' & SILVERSMITHS' COMPANY,
(The Goldsmiths' Alliance, Ld. (A. B. Savory & Sons), late of Cornhill, E.C., is transferred to this Company).
Show Rooms: 112, REGENT STREET, LONDON, W. (Adjoining Stereoscopic Company.)
Supply the public direct at Manufacturers' Cash Prices, saving purchasers from 25 to 50 per cent.

Fine Gold Bracelet, £2 15s.

Fine Diamond Brooch, £5. 10s.

Fine Pearl and Gold Bracelet, £7 10s.

Awarded Nine Gold Medals and the Cross of the Legion of Honour.

NEW ILLUSTRATED CATALOGUE POST FREE.

THE LARGEST AND CHOICEST STOCK IN THE WORLD OF NOVELTIES IN HIGH-CLASS JEWELLERY FOR CHRISTMAS PRESENTS.
AN INSPECTION INVITED.

Goods forwarded to the Country on approval.

Fine Gold, Pearl, and Diamond Bracelet, £3 15s.

Fine Pearl Brooch, £1 18s.

Fine Pearl and Diamond Cluster Half-Hoop Bracelet, £50
Sapphires and Diamonds, same price.

GRESHAM LIFE OFFICE.
Assets Exceed £6,000,000.
Special Terms for Naval and Military Officers.
ESTABLISHED 1848.
THE GRESHAM LIFE ASSURANCE SOCIETY, LIMITED.
Head Office: ST. MILDRED'S, POULTRY, LONDON.

By Special Appointment to H.R.H. the Prince of Wales.

PHILIP MORRIS & CO., LTD.,
22, NEW BOND STREET, W.
Importers of Havana Cigars.
Manufacturers of the celebrated "BOND STREET"
CORK TIPPED CIGARETTES.
Hussars, 15s. Blues, 10s. Cambridge, 8s. Derby, 7s. Per 100.
As supplied to the Royal Family, leading West End Clubs & Military Messes.

THE REFINED SMOKE.

Awarded wherever Exhibited.
CHICAGO, BORDEAUX, SHEFFIELD, HULL
Best French Briar Root from 3s. 6d.
Ordinary ..... 1s. 6d.
Insist upon having "BILTOR."
THE BILTOR CO. 93. OXFORD ST., LONDON, W

GAIETY RESTAURANT, STRAND.
LUNCHEONS (HOT and COLD)—At Popular Prices, in BUFFET and RESTAURANT (on 1st floor). Also Chops, Steaks, Joints, Entrées, etc., in the GRILL ROOM.
AFTERNOON TEA—Consisting of Tea or Coffee, Cut Bread and Butter, Jam, Cake, Pastry, ad lib., at 1/- per head ; served from 4 till 6 in RESTAURANT (1st floor).
DINNERS IN RESTAURANT—From 5.30 till 9 at Fixed Prices (3/6 and 5/-) and à la Carte. In this room the Viennese Band performs from 6 till 8. Smoking after 7.45.
American Bar. The GRILL ROOM is open till 12.30.
Private Dining Room for Large and Small Parties.
SPIERS & POND, Ltd., Proprietors.

Musical Instruments.

Mason and Hamlin Organs.
Mustel Organs.
Mustel Celestas.
Mason and Hamlin Pianos.
Rönisch Pianos.
Rönisch Organo-Pianos.
Metzler Pianos.
Alexandre Harmoniums.

NEW ILLUSTRATED CATALOGUES POST FREE.

METZLER.

Violins and 'Cellos by Degani.
Violins and 'Cellos by Collin-Mezin.
Mandolines by Angara and by De Meglio.
Guitars by Leblanc.
Auto-Harps by Müller.
Zither Banjos and Banjoretts.
Instruments for Toy Symphonies.
Pianoforte Chairs of New Design.

NEW ILLUSTRATED CATALOGUES POST FREE.

London: 40 to 43, GT. MARLBOROUGH ST., W.

The Piano Resonator

(DANIEL MAYER PATENT) LD.

PADEREWSKI says:

DEAR MR. MAYER,

I am delighted with your Patent Resonator, because I find that it makes the tone of the piano richer, fuller, and it adds greatly to its singing quality.

Sincerely yours,
I. J. PADEREWSKI.

London, October 11th, 1895.

Owing to Erection of Special Machinery, the Resonator can now be applied to Upright Pianos from £5, and to Grand Pianos from £10.

Address—
33, NEW BOND ST., LONDON, W.

ROWLANDS' Macassar Oil

Preserves, Beautifies, Strengthens the Hair:
Also in Golden Colour, 3s. 6d., 7s., 10s. 6d.

ROWLANDS' ODONTO

The Best and Safest Dentifrice; 2s. 9d., of Chemists and Perfumers.
Send Postal Order to—

A. ROWLAND & SONS, 20, Hatton Garden,
LONDON.

Great Improvements in Ladies' Watches—Reduced Prices.

BENSON'S SPECIAL MAKE KEYLESS LEVER WATCH

Silver Cases, £5

18-ct. Gold Cases. £10

Three-quarter Plate LEVER Movement, Compound Balance, Jewelled throughout, strong Keyless action, with Seconds Dial and Gold Inner Cases. In Hunting, Half-Hunting, or Crystal Glass Cases, Monogram free.

Illustrated Book of Watches, Engagement Rings, Brooches, Bracelets, &c., post-free.

18-carat Gold, £10. Silver, £5.
Sent Free and Safe at my risk to all parts,
Selections of Watches and Jewellery sent on approval.

J. W. BENSON, STEAM FACTORY,
62 & 64, LUDGATE HILL.
Also at 28, Royal Exchange, E.C., and 25, Old Bond-street, W., LONDON.

Recalling the delicious gardens of the Sunny South.
Of all Dealers in High-class Perfumes, price 2/6, 4/-, and 8/-, or from the LONDON DEPOT: 25 BOUVERIE ST., E.C. Accept no Substitute.
H. LABERN & SON, Perfumers,
Patronised by H.M. the Queen.

"TRUTH"

CAN BE OBTAINED AT
No. 48, QUAI ST. JEAN BAPTISTE, NICE.

THE ANCIENT WRITING PAPER OF THE PRIESTS.

NOTE PAPER, 5 Quires, 1s.
COURT ENVELOPES, 1s. per 100.
MOURNING ENVELOPES, 1s. 6d. per 100.
THIN, FOR FOREIGN CORRESPONDENCE, 5 Quires, 1s.
MOURNING NOTE, 5 Quires, 1s. 6d

HIERATICA (Regd.)

Every Sheet and Envelope Watermarked HIERATICA. Reject Imitations. Any difficulty in obtaining, send stamps to Hieratica Works, 68, Upper Thame Street, London. Samples Free. Parcels Carriage Paid.

"Sanitas" Eucalyptus Soap

A Delightfully Perfumed Sanitary Soap of the Highest Quality, and made from the very best materials, SUPERFATTED and ANTISEPTIC. 1s. 3d per Box.

OTHER PREPARATIONS:—"SANITAS" EUCALYPTUS OIL, 1/- PER BOTTLE; "SANITAS" EUCALYPTUS DISINFECTORS, 1/- EACH; DITTO "RESERVOIR" PATTERN, 2/6 EACH.

Sole Manufacturers: THE SANITAS CO., LIMITED, BETHNAL GREEN, LONDON, E.

CHATTO & WINDUS'S NEW BOOKS

LEONARD MERRICK'S NEW NOVEL.
Just ready, 2 vols., crown 8vo, 10s. net.; and at every Library.

CYNTHIA: a Daughter of the Philistines. By LEONARD MERRICK, Author of "Violet Moses," "This Stage of Fools," &c.

SIR WALTER BESANT'S NEW NOVEL.

THE CITY OF REFUGE. By SIR WALTER BESANT, Author of "All Sorts and Conditions of Men." 3 vols. at every Library.

"We should be surprised if this new romance from Sir Walter Besant's pen does not prove one of his most popular."—Daily News.

A NEW VOLUME OF DRAWING-ROOM PLAYS.

THE CHARM, and other Drawing-room Plays. By WALTER BESANT and WALTER POLLOCK. With 50 Illustrations by Chris Hammond and A. Jule Goodman. Crown 8vo, cloth elegant, gilt edges, 6s.

JUSTIN H. McCARTHY'S NEW ROMANCE.

The ROYAL CHRISTOPHER. By JUSTIN H. McCARTHY, Author of "A London Legend," &c. Crown 8vo, cloth decorated, 3s. 6d.

A MINION of the MOON. By T. W. SPEIGHT, Author of "The Mysteries of Heron Dyke." This Story forms the "GENTLEMAN'S ANNUAL" for 1896. Demy 8vo, Picture Cover, 1s.

BRET HARTE'S NEW STORIES.

BARKER'S LUCK, and Other Stories. By BRET HARTE. With 39 Illustrations. Crown 8vo, cloth, 3s. 6d.

"Admirers of Bret Harte will find ample entertainment in the volume of short stories just issued under the title of the first and longest in the book, 'Barker's Luck.' . . . The story is told in Bret Harte's crispest style, and makes healthy and entertaining reading."—Scotsman.

"There is one story at least in the book which, in the beauty of its imagination and the simplicity of its style, recalls vividly those earlier Californian stories which we all love. 'In the Tules' is an idyll in its way."—World.

REVENGE! By ROBERT BARR, Author of 'A Woman Intervenes,' &c. With 12 Illustrations. Crown 8vo, cloth, 6s.

"The contents are admirable. . . . The characters are vividly drawn, and the narratives have scarcely a superfluous word."—Glasgow Herald.

In the KINGDOM of KERRY. By B. M. CROKER, Author of "Diana Barrington," &c. Crown 8vo, cloth, 3s. 6d.

"A fascinating volume of short stories, slight and simple in point of plot, admirable in style. Mrs. Croker writes with sympathy, knowledge, and conviction; and this, her latest effort, will add to a reputation that is already well advanced."—Vanity Fair.

A CAPFUL o' NAILS: a North-Country Story. By DAVID CHRISTIE MURRAY, Author of "Joseph's Coat." Crown 8vo, cloth, 3s. 6d.

"Mr. Christie Murray's new book is one which will certainly add to his already great popularity. . . . It is written at once with sympathy and knowledge. . . Altogether, 'A Capful o' Nails' is a clever and an impressive book."—New Saturday.

DIARY OF A CITIZEN OF PARIS DURING "THE TERROR." By EDMOND BIRÉ. Translated by John de Villiers. With Photogravure Frontispieces. 2 vols. demy 8vo, cloth, 21s.

"The volumes give a life-like, breathing picture of the most grotesquely terrible epoch in the history of modern times. M. Biré has given us a work which . . . . we should receive with gratitude. It is scholarly without being pedantic, it is picturesque without being inaccurate. It can be consulted as a text-book and read as a romance."—Pall Mall Gazette.

EIGHTEENTH CENTURY VIGNETTES. THIRD SERIES. By AUSTIN DOBSON. Crown 8vo, buckram, 6s.

"All the qualities that give value and distinction to Mr. Dobson's earlier studies in the century of his choice are to be found in this new series of his admirable "Vignettes." Never had century a devotee more loving and exact. . . . . One of the best existing collections of literary anecdotes and portraits."—Manchester Guardian.

MIGHT HAVE BEEN: SOME LIFE NOTES. By Dr. JOSEPH PARKER. Crown 8vo, cloth gilt, 6s.

"Space fails to tell other good things, but Dr. Parker's book will speak for itself. Many things in it might make even 'Arthur' roar."—Pall Mall Gazette.

Completion of the Library Edition of CHARLES READE'S NOVELS.

A New Collected Library Edition, complete in Seventeen Volumes, set in handsome New Type, Printed on Laid Paper, and elegantly bound in cloth, 3s. 6d. each.

1. PEG WOFFINGTON; and CHRISTIE JOHNSTONE.
2. HARD CASH.
3. THE CLOISTER AND THE HEARTH.
4. IT IS NEVER TOO LATE TO MEND.
5. THE COURSE OF TRUE LOVE NEVER DID RUN SMOOTH; and SINGLEHEART AND DOUBLEFACE.
6. THE AUTOBIOGRAPHY OF A THIEF; JACK OF ALL TRADES; A HERO AND A MARTYR; and THE WANDERING HEIR.
7. LOVE ME LITTLE, LOVE ME LONG.
8. THE DOUBLE MARRIAGE.
9. GRIFFITH GAUNT.
10. FOUL PLAY.
11. PUT YOURSELF IN HIS PLACE.
12. A TERRIBLE TEMPTATION.
13. A SIMPLETON.
14. A WOMAN-HATER.
15. THE JILT, and other Stories; and GOOD STORIES OF MAN AND OTHER ANIMALS.
16. A PERILOUS SECRET.
17. READIANA; and BIBLE CHARACTERS.

New Three-and-Sixpenny Novels.

NORA CREINA. By Mrs. HUNGERFORD.
A LIFE INTEREST. By Mrs. ALEXANDER.
HEART OF OAK. By W. CLARK RUSSELL.
LONG ODDS. By HAWLEY SMART.
THE WOMAN IN THE DARK. By F. W. ROBINSON.
THE VOICE OF THE CHARMER. By L. T. MEADE.
LADY KILPATRICK. By ROBERT BUCHANAN.
THE REVOLT OF MAN. By Sir WALTER BESANT.
A TRAMP ABROAD. By MARK TWAIN. With 314 Illustrations.

London: CHATTO & WINDUS, 111, St. Martin's-lane, W.C.

MACMILLAN & CO.'S NEW BOOKS.

F. MARION CRAWFORD'S NEW NOVEL.

TAQUISARA.

In 2 vols. globe 8vo, 12s.

Punch.—"The novel is delightful and its perusal a real recreation."

ILLUSTRATED EDITION OF CHARLES KINGSLEY'S

WESTWARD HO!

An Edition de Luxe, with Full-page and other Illustrations by CHARLES E. BROCK. Printed in red and black. In 2 vols. extra crown 8vo, 21s.

NEW VOLUMES OF THE CRANFORD SERIES.
Crown 8vo, cloth elegant, or cloth, paper label, uncut edges, 6s. each.

THE ALHAMBRA.

By WASHINGTON IRVING.

With an Introduction by ELIZABETH ROBINS PENNELL.

Illustrated with Drawings of the Places mentioned by JOSEPH PENNELL.

Also a Limited Edition on super-royal Hand-made, with 12 extra Lithograph Proofs. 42s. net. (250 copies for America, and 250 for England.)
[Ready November 20th.

THE SCHOOL FOR SCANDAL AND THE RIVALS.

By R. B. SHERIDAN.

With 50 Illustrations by EDMUND J. SULLIVAN, and an Introduction by AUGUSTINE BIRRELL, Q.C., M.P.

Also a Limited Edition on super-royal Hand-made, 30s. net. (250 copies only for England and America.)

Demy 8vo, 15s. net.

THE LONDON PLEASURE GARDENS OF THE EIGHTEENTH CENTURY.

By WARWICK WROTH, F.S.A., of the British Museum, assisted by ARTHUR EDGAR WROTH.

With 62 Illustrations.

(Uniform with Mr. Arthur Dasent's "St. James's Square.")

Second Edition Now Ready.
By RUDYARD KIPLING.
Crown 8vo, cloth gilt, 6s.

SOLDIER TALES.

Containing: With the Main Guard—The Drums of the Fore and Aft—The Man Who Was—Courting of Dinah Shadd—Incarnation of Krishna Mulvaney—Taking of Lungtungpen—The Madness of Private Ortheris. With Head and Tail Pieces and Twenty-one Page Illustrations by A. S. HARTRICK.

Daily News.—"Mr. Kipling's Stories of Mulvaney & Co. are as captivating at the tenth reading as at the first—as all stories of first-rate genius are."

NEW NOVEL BY MRS. HUGH FRASER.
Crown 8vo, 6s.

PALLADIA.

MACMILLAN & CO., Limited, London.

KEGAN PAUL, TRENCH, TRÜBNER, & CO. Ltd.

NOW READY.

ADDRESSES TO THE STUDENTS OF THE ROYAL ACADEMY.

By the late Lord LEIGHTON, P.R.A. Demy 8vo, 7s. 6d.

MEDITERRANEAN WINTER RESORTS. By E. A. REYNOLDS-BALL B.A. (Oxon), F.R.G.S. Third Edition, enlarged and in great part re-written. With new Map and Plans. Small crown 8vo, 5s.

"One of the best guide books in existence."—Queen.

EGYPT AS A WINTER RESORT. By F. M. SANDWITH, F.R.G.S., Formerly Vice-Director of the Sanitary Department of Egypt. Crown 8vo, 3s. 6d.

PATERNOSTER HOUSE, Charing Cross-road, London.

DOWNEY & CO.'S NEW NOVELS.

THE UGLY MAN. By the Author of "A House of Tears." 3s. 6d.

A STAR SAPPHIRE. By MABEL COLLINS. 6s.

THE DUNTHORPES OF WESTLEIGH. By the Author of "Suspicion." 6s.

A TRAGIC IDYL. By PAUL BOURGET. 6s.

THE CIRCASSIAN. By MORLEY ROBERTS and MAX MONTESOLE. 3s. 6d.

12, YORK STREET, COVENT GARDEN, LONDON.

THREE IMPORTANT BOOKS

PUBLISHED BY

Messrs. SAMPSON LOW, MARSTON, & CO., Ltd.

A SUMPTUOUS ART VOLUME. Price 52s. 6d.

"The illustrations are an education in themselves."—SPECTATOR.

THE CENTURY OF LOUIS XIV.

A Magnificent Volume of 500 pages.

Imperial 8vo, with 500 Illustrations and 22 Photogravure Copperplate Engravings.

Price Two Guineas and a Half.

"It would not be possible for the most desultory of readers to skip through the pages without attaining a fair notion of French life in the seventeenth century." —SPECTATOR.

JOSEPH THOMSON, African Explorer

A BIOGRAPHY.

By his Brother, the Rev. J. B. THOMSON, of Greenock.

With six Maps, Portraits, and numerous Illustrations. Crown 8vo, cloth, 7s. 6d.

The TIMES says: "Joseph Thomson was the Bayard of African travel. . . . His biography will, we are sure, be welcome to many."

The DAILY CHRONICLE.—"His brother has set forth the shaping influences and the leading incidents of Thomson's life with clearness and due sense of proportion."

The SCOTSMAN says: "A worthy and substantial memorial of a noble character and a bright but too brief career."

ROUND ABOUT ARMENIA

The Record of a Journey through Turkey, the Caucasus, and Persia in 1895.

By E. A. BRAYLEY HODGETTS,

Author of "In the Track of the Russian Famine," &c.

With Map and Frontispiece. Crown 8vo, cloth, 6s.

The DAILY MAIL says: "One of the most notable of the many commentaries on the Armenian question is Mr. Brayley Hodgetts' 'Round About Armenia.' Mr. Hodgetts is a competent authority on the situation in the East, a keen and accurate observer, and a very capable writer, and his book is singularly free from bias and sensational exaggeration."

London: SAMPSON LOW, MARSTON, & COMPANY, Limited.

MISS BRADDON'S NEW NOVEL,

LONDON PRIDE,

In One Volume, handsome cloth, gilt top, crown 8vo, 6s.,

NOW READY AT ALL BOOKSELLERS.

MISS BRADDON'S LAST NOVEL.

SONS OF FIRE.

Cheap Edition. Cloth gilt, 2s. 6d. Picture boards, 2s.

NOW READY AT ALL BOOKSELLERS.

London: SIMPKIN & CO., Ltd.

CHAPMAN & HALL'S NEW NOVELS

At all Libraries and Booksellers.

THE STORY OF ALINE. By Mrs. EDWARD RIDLEY.

Mr. Andrew Lang in Cosmopolis.—"A masterly sort of sentiment, undiluted by preaching and 'problems,' is a rare thing in modern English literature, but such a story Mrs. Ridley has given us, with a complete knowledge of the world which she describes, and with dramatic force, free from strain and excess. In brief, the 'Story of Aline' comes to me as a happy surprise, a thing rich not only in promise, but in fulfilment, and endowed with a rare poetic quality."

WHERE THAMES IS WIDE. By CHARLES JAMES, Author of "Turnham Green."

THE CAREER OF CANDIDA. By GEORGE PASTON, Author of "A Study in Prejudices."

THE DRAGON-SLAYER. By ROGER POCOCK, Author of "The Arctic Night," &c.

CHAPMAN & HALL, LTD., LONDON.

F. V. WHITE & CO.'S LIST.

SIX SHILLING NOVELS.

THE STRANGE STORY OF MY LIFE.	By JOHN STRANGE WINTER.	(Second Edition).
A SPLENDID SIN.	By GRANT ALLEN.	(Third Edition).
DEVIL'S DICE.	By WILLIAM LE QUEUX.
A GOLDEN AUTUMN.	By MRS. ALEXANDER.	(November).
A SON OF ISHMAEL.	By MRS. L. T. MEADE.
GODS OF GOLD.	By MRS. AYLMER-GOWING.
A MARRIAGE IN CHINA.	By MRS. ARCHIBALD LITTLE.
THE PROCTOR'S WOOING.	By ALAN ST. AUBYN.

F. V. WHITE & CO.'S PRIZE SERIES, 6/- EACH VOLUME.

Large Crown, gilt edges. Illustrated by the first Artists.

SAPPERS AND MINERS.	By G. MANVILLE FENN, Illustrated by Hal Hurst.
TRAVELS BY THE FIRESIDE.	By GORDON STABLES, Illustrated by Gordon Browne.
CROWN AND ANCHOR.	By J. C. HUTCHESON, Illustrated by J. B. Greene.
KINGS OF THE SEA.	By HUME NISBET, Illustrated by J. B. Greene.
A LITTLE MOTHER TO THE OTHERS.	By MRS. L. T. MEADE, Illustrated by Fred Barnard,
THOSE CHILDREN.	By CURTIS YORKE, Illustrated by Hal Hurst.
THE PIRATE JUNK.	By J. C. HUTCHESON, Illustrated by J. B. Greene.
THE GREAT WHITE QUEEN.	By WILLIAM LE QUEUX, Illustrated by Alfred Pearse.

NEW 3/6 BOOKS.

THE REBEL CHIEF.	By HUME NISBET.
TWO COUSINS AND A CASTLE.	By MRS. LOVETT-CAMERON.

JOHN STRANGE WINTER'S FIFTIETH BOOK.

GRIP! THIRD EDITION.

WINTER'S ANNUAL. (Twelfth Year of Publication.)

A Notable Fact—Over two millions of copies of the Works of this favourite Author have now been sold.

F. V. WHITE & CO., 14, BEDFORD STREET, STRAND, W.C.

FIVE STRIKING NOVELS

LATELY PUBLISHED BY

A. D. INNES & CO.

BY E. F. BENSON.

LIMITATIONS. Crown 8vo, cloth, 6s.

"Mr. Benson has written an interesting and truly human book. His range is much wider than it was, his character-drawing has gained in depth, delicacy, and precision, while the sparkling dialogue which we enjoyed in 'Dodo' has lost none of its old brilliancy."—Daily Telegraph.

BY ROMA WHITE.

A STOLEN MASK. Crown 8vo, cloth, 6s.

"It is well and tersely written. It is thoroughly original, and is peopled by fresh and novel characters. We have rarely met a new novelist of so much promise and performance, nor a tale which can be more confidently recommended."—Times.

BY FRANCIS GRIBBLE.

THE LOWER LIFE. A Story of the Stock Exchange. Crown 8vo, cloth, 6s.

"The Stock Exchange is the villain of the story, and a mighty villain it is. . . . The romantic elements of fiction are most cunningly introduced. . . . the Author of 'The Lower Life' has accomplished the first purpose of a novelist in writing a most entertaining story."—The Referee.

By NELLIE K. BLISSETT.

THE WISDOM OF THE SIMPLE. Crown 8vo, cloth, 6s.

"An original and very clever story, the satire light yet trenchant, and the characters drawn by keen and graphic touches. There can be no doubt as to the ability and charm of Miss Blissett's book."—Pall Mall Gazette.

By W. L. ALDEN.

THE MYSTERY OF ELIAS G. ROEBUCK. Crown 8vo, cloth, 6s.

"They are brimful of bubbling whimsical humour. 'The Man who was Emperor' is simply the most refreshing liar you meet out of real life."—Pall Mall Gazette.

London: A. D. INNES & CO., 31 and 32, Bedford-street, Strand.

MESSRS. HURST & BLACKETT'S LIST.

A NEW ILLUSTRATED EDITION.

The FIRST PRINTING being nearly EXHAUSTED on Subscription, a SECOND PRINTING is now in course of preparation.

NOW READY AT ALL BOOKSELLERS' THROUGHOUT THE UNITED KINGDOM.

John Halifax, GENTLEMAN.

By MRS. CRAIK.

ully Illustrated by HUGH RIVIERE. In 1 vol. large crown 8vo. Handsomely bound. Gilt top.

PRICE SIX SHILLINGS.

NEW WORK BY WALTER WOOD.

NOW READY. In 1 vol. large crown 8vo, Gilt top, price Six Shillings.

BARRACK AND BATTLEFIELD. TALES OF THE SERVICE AT HOME AND ABROAD. By WALTER WOOD, Author of "A Captain in the Fusiliers," &c.

NEW NOVEL BY MRS. TOM KELLY.

NOW READY. In 1 vol. crown 8vo, with frontispiece, price Six Shillings.

A LEDDY IN HER AIN RIGHT. By Mrs. TOM KELLY, Author of "Time and Chance."

NEW NOVEL BY VERE CLAVERING.

Now ready, in 1 vol. crown 8vo, price Six Shillings.

SIN FOR A SEASON. By VERE CLAVERING, Author of "Barcaldine," &c.

NEW AND REVISED EDITION.

Now ready, in 1 vol. crown 8vo, price Three Shillings and Sixpence.

IN TIME TO COME. By ELEANOR HOLMES, Author of "A Painter's Romance," "The Price of a Pearl," &c.

HURST & BLACKETT, LTD., 13, Great Marlborough-street.

BICYCLE GYMKHANA and MUSICAL RIDES, by Major WALTER WINGFIELD, the Inventor of Lawn Tennis, with Diagrams and Instructions how to Arrange and Practice them.—To be obtained from the Author, 100, Buckingham Palace-road, London, and all Booksellers, price 5s. net.

A. & C. BLACK.

A MAN OF HONOUR. By H. C. IRWIN. Crown 8vo, cloth, price 6s.

THE LIFEGUARDSMAN: A Novel. Adapted from Schimmel's "De Kaptein van de Lijfgarde." Crown 8vo, cloth, price 6s.

THE STORY OF MAURICE LESTRANGE. By G. W. T. OMOND. Crown 8vo, cloth, price 6s.

MRS. FINCH-BRASSEY. By Mrs. ANDREW DEAN, Author of "The Grasshoppers," "A Woman with a Future," &c. Third Edition. Crown 8vo, cloth, price 3s. 6d.

A JAPANESE MARRIAGE. By DOUGLAS SLADEN, Author of "Brittany for Britons," &c. Crown 8vo, paper boards, price 2s.; also in cloth, price 2s. 6d.

THE LAST TOUCHES. By Mrs. W. K. CLIFFORD. Third Edition. Crown 8vo, paper covers, price 2s.

MERE STORIES. By Mrs. W. K. CLIFFORD. Crown 8vo, paper covers, price 2s.

AN ODD SITUATION. By STANLEY WATERLOO. With an Introduction by Sir Walter Besant. Crown 8vo, paper covers, price 2s. 6d.; cloth, price 3s. 6d.

A KENTUCKY COLONEL. By OPIE READ. Crown 8vo, paper covers, price 2s. 6d.; or in cloth, price 3s. 6d.

London: A. & C. BLACK, Soho-square.

DIGBY, LONG, & CO.'S NEW LIST.

NEW NOVEL BY J. E. MUDDOCK.

1. WITHOUT FAITH OR FEAR: The Story of a Soul. By the Author of "Stripped of the Tinsel," &c. Cr. 8vo, cloth, 6s.

Note.—The large First Edition nearly exhausted. Second Edition in rapid Preparation.

NEW NOVEL BY THE PRINCESS DE BOURG.

2. THE AMERICAN HEIRESS. Crown 8vo, cloth, 6s. [Just out.

 Published simultaneously in London and New York.

BY KATHLEEN BEHENNA.

3. SIDARTHA. An Original and Powerful Novel. Crown 8vo, cloth, 6s. [Just out.

NEW NOVEL BY ALBERT HARDY.

4. A CROWN OF GOLD. With Frontispiece by the Author. Crown 8vo, cloth, 6s. [Just out.

NEW SENSATIONAL NOVEL BY FERGUS HUME.

5. A MARRIAGE MYSTERY. By the Author of "The Masquerade Mystery," &c. Crown 8vo, pictorial cloth, 3s. 6d. [Just out.

NEW BOOK BY MRS. E. LYNN LINTON.

6. 'TWIXT CUP AND LIP. Crown 8vo, cloth, 3s. 6d. Second Edition.

7. A WOMAN'S CROSS. By Mrs. ALICE M. DIEHL. Crown 8vo, cloth, 6s.

"This cleverly written and intensely interesting book."—Dundee Advertiser.

SENSATIONAL NOVEL BY DR. GORDON STABLES.

8. THE ROSE OF ALLANDALE. Crown 8vo, cloth, 3s. 6d.

"The plot is developed with remarkable skill, and the interest is sustained without a break."—Aberdeen Press.

NEW ROMANCE BY A. E. ALDINGTON.

9. THE QUEEN'S PREFERMENT. Illustrated by H. A. Payne. Crown 8vo, cloth, 3s. 6d.

"Considerable literary achievement; a story of unusual excellence."—Nottingham Guardian.

10. A MAN AMONGST MEN. By FRED HOLMES, M.A. [Just out.

NEW HUMOROUS BOOK BY W. CARTER PLATTS.

11. THE TUTTLEBURY TALES. By the Angling Editor of the Yorkshire Weekly Post. Crown 8vo, pictorial cloth, 2s. 6d. [Just out.

12. THE HISTORY OF A SOUL.

 Autumn List of Books post free.

DIGBY, LONG, & CO., 18, Bouverie-street, London, E.C.

MR. WM. HEINEMANN'S PUBLICATIONS

Gold Medal, London, 1896.

THE CASTLES OF ENGLAND: THEIR STORY AND STRUCTURE. By Sir JAMES D. MACKENZIE, Bart. Dedicated by permission to Her Majesty the Queen. With 40 Full-page Plates, 160 Text Illustrations, and many Plans. In 2 vols. imperial 8vo. Price to Subscribers, £3. 3s. net.

This sumptuous work affords a record of no fewer than 660 Castles, many of which would be forgotten but for the enthusiasm and zeal of the historian. The plates have been executed in the finest style, and the book is in every way indispensable to a country gentleman's library.

UNDERCURRENTS OF THE SECOND EMPIRE. By ALBERT D. VANDAM, Author of "An Englishman in Paris." 1 vol. demy 8vo, 7s. 6d. net.

THE DAILY TELEGRAPH.—"Mr. Vandam displays a thorough mastery of his subject, and writes with exceeding energy and effectiveness."

TIMBUCTOO THE MYSTERIOUS. By FELIX DUBOIS. With 153 Illustrations from Photographs and Drawings made on the spot, and 11 Maps and Plans. 1 vol. 12s. 6d

THE PALL MALL GAZETTE.—"The excellence of the narrative, the style, the information, and the illustrations make this the most important book of travel that has appeared for many a day."

THE NOVEL OF THE MUTINY.

ON THE FACE OF THE WATERS. By FLORA ANNIE STEEL, Author of "The Potter's Thumb." Second Edition, 6s.

THE SPECTATOR.—"We have read Mrs. Steel's book with ever-increasing surprise and admiration. It is the most wonderful picture. We know that none who lived through the Mutiny will lay it down without a gasp of admiration, and believe that the same emotion will be felt by thousands to whom the scenes depicted are but lurid phantasmagoria."

ON THE FACE OF THE WATERS.

THE PALL MALL GAZETTE.—"Mrs. Steel has beaten Mr. Kipling on his own ground, India. She has written a fine novel, whose scene is laid in the world Mr. Kipling was the first to make real to us. There is no need to tell a story which all men and women who love their country and her honour should read for themselves before the month is out. Books like this are so rare that it is difficult to welcome them too warmly."

ON THE FACE OF THE WATERS.

THE DAILY CHRONICLE.—"A picture, glowing with colour, of the most momentous and dramatic event in all our Empire's later history. Mrs. Steel has challenged comparison with Mr. Rudyard Kipling, and she need not fear the result."

ON THE FACE OF THE WATERS.

W. L. COURTNEY, in the DAILY TELEGRAPH.—"There is no arrest in the march of her narrative, there is no needless display of historical knowledge. No one, not even Mr. Rudyard Kipling, knows India better than Mrs. Steel."

THREE VOLUMES OF LARGE AND LEGIBLE TYPE.

LIFE THE ACCUSER. By EMMA BROOKE, Author of "A Superfluous Woman." 3 vols, 15s. net.

DAILY CHRONICLE.—"A three-volume novel which has no superfluous page is of itself a wonderment. But Miss Brooke has accomplished much more than this. She has given us a story in which our interest grows, becomes absorbing, and is fast held until the last word upon the last page."

LIFE THE ACCUSER.

THE SCOTSMAN.—"Of exceptional power."

LIFE THE ACCUSER.

THE SHEFFIELD TELEGRAPH.—"More than redeems the promise of 'A Superfluous Woman.'"

MR. HENRY JAMES'S NEW NOVEL.

THE OTHER HOUSE. 2 vols. 10s. net.

THE TIMES.—"Mr. Henry James is not an author who usually keeps a reviewer sitting up to unnatural hours, but in 'The Other House' he has achieved this degree of absorbing interest. He has a story to tell, and how well he tells it."

THE OTHER HOUSE.

THE ATHENÆUM.—"A very notable and distinguished piece of work. A story of human interest and passion."

THE OTHER HOUSE.

THE DAILY NEWS.—"We admire the unfailing felicity of the author's phrase, the subtlety of his discriminating touches, the dexterity of his handling."

A List of Mr. Heinemann's Announcements post free.

London: WM. HEINEMANN, 21, Bedford-street, W.C.

ON THE STŒCHIOLOGICAL CURE OF

CONSUMPTION,

ASTHMA, BRONCHITIS, AND LUNG COMPLAINTS.

By JOHN FRANCIS CHURCHILL, M.D.

One Shilling, Post Free.

T. BURLEIGH, LATE DAVID STOTT, 370, OXFORD STREET.

STERILITY IN WOMEN: Its Causes and Curative Treatment. By J. B. RYLEY, M.D., M.R.C.S., London. An Illustrated Edition of this Work is now ready. Price 3s. 6d.; post free, 3s. 8d.

London: HENRY RENSHAW, 356, Strand.

CONAN DOYLE'S NEW NOVEL.

Just Published, with Eight Full-page Illustrations, crown 8vo, 6s.

RODNEY STONE.

By A. CONAN DOYLE,

Author of "MICAH CLARKE," "THE WHITE COMPANY," &c.

From the Times.—"'Rodney Stone' is, in our judgment, distinctly the best of Dr. Conan Doyle's novels. . . . There are few descriptions in fiction that can vie with that race upon the Brighton road."

From the Daily Telegraph.—"Dr. Conan Doyle has written a wonderful book in this his latest contribution to the new romance. The story goes so gallantly from start to finish that we are fairly startled out of our fin de siècle indifference, and carried along in breathless excitement to learn the fate of the boy-hero and the inimitable dandy."

London: SMITH, ELDER, & CO., 15, Waterloo-place, S.W.

NEW WORK BY THE REV. H. N. HUTCHINSON.

Ready This Day, with a Preface by Sir HENRY HOWORTH, M.P., F.R.S., and 10 Full-page Illustrations, small demy 8vo, 10s. 6d.

PREHISTORIC MAN and BEAST.

By the Rev. H. N. HUTCHINSON, Author of "Extinct Monsters," "Creatures of Other Days," &c.

London: SMITH, ELDER, & CO., 15, Waterloo-place, S.W.

This Day—1s.—for SCHOOLS BREAKING-UP, CHRISTMAS PARTIES, DRAWING-ROOM ENTERTAINMENTS, &c.

Short Plays and Charades

for young people. Original, highly amusing, and only the simplest "properties" required.

SKEFFINGTON & SON, Piccadilly, W.

1/- BY POST, 1s. 2d. 1/-

Reprint of 6th Series (Violet).

QUEER STORIES FROM "TRUTH."

PUBLISHING OFFICE, 10, BOLT COURT, FLEET STREET, LONDON, E.C.

HOSPITALS & APPEALS.

LONDON FEVER HOSPITAL, Liverpool-road, Islington, N. ADDITIONAL HELP is urgently needed.

Scarlet fever and diphtheria are very prevalent. Subscriptions and donations will be thankfully received by the Secretary at the Hospital.

MAJOR W. CHRISTIE.

Bankers—Prescott & Co., 50, Cornhill, E.C.

CANCER WARDS of the MIDDLESEX HOSPITAL.—35 beds devoted to Hopeless Incurable Cases.

A FUND of £12,000 is being raised for the purpose of erecting a separate BUILDING for the accommodation of the FEMALE CANCER PATIENTS hitherto located in the hospital, an improvement which is urgently demanded on the ground of the health, comfort, and convenience of the patients. Towards the cost of the new building the sum of £9,000 has been paid or promised, and an URGENT APPEAL is now made for the balance of £3,000 still required. Patients are admitted without letters or any recommendation, save that of necessity, and are permitted to remain until "relieved by art or released by death."—F. CLARE MELHADO, Secretary-Superintendent.

THE EARLSWOOD ASYLUM FOR IDIOTS.

About 150 AFFLICTED CASES, from all parts of the United Kingdom, are now seeking admission.

FUNDS URGENTLY NEEDED to maintain the Elected Patients now under care and training in the Institution.

Cases on payments regulated by the Board received as soon as approved.

JAMES DOWNING, Secretary.

Offices—36, King William-street, London Bridge, E.C.

GREAT NORTHERN CENTRAL HOSPITAL.

VERY POOR, FREE, and UNENDOWED.

The only Hospital available for a population of one million.

An urgent APPEAL is made for FUNDS to support the work of relieving 1,200 In-patients and 30,000 Out-patients annually.

Holloway, N. L. H. GLENTON KERR, Secretary.

MUDIE'S SELECT LIBRARY.

CHRISTMAS PRESENTS & SCHOOL PRIZES.

A LARGE COLLECTION of SUITABLE BOOKS in LEATHER BINDINGS is kept in STOCK in the SHOW ROOMS.

A full and REVISED CLASSIFIED CATALOGUE sent post free on application.

A SELECTION of GOOD EDITIONS of FRENCH and GERMAN STANDARD AUTHORS in LEATHER BINDINGS is also kept in STOCK.

A POPULAR CHRISTMAS PRESENT IS A SUBSCRIPTION TO THE LIBRARY.

TERMS ON APPLICATION.

MUDIE'S SELECT LIBRARY, LIMITED, 30 to 34, New Oxford-street, London.

241, Brompton-road, S.W.; and 48, Queen Victoria-street, E.C.; and at Barton Arcade, Manchester.

"TRUTH" HOTEL LIST.

BATH.—LANSDOWN GROVE HOTEL.—Desirable residence, in beautifully wooded grounds, 400 feet above sea level, facing south, and protected from north and east. Air dry and bracing. Assembly and Pump Rooms within easy distance. Omnibus free to and from Hot Mineral Baths. Billiards, Tennis Lawn.

BONCHURCH HOTEL, Bonchurch, Isle of Wight, one mile from Ventnor Station.
A comfortable, quiet, and most beautifully-situated Hotel. Pretty garden. Good sea view.
H. RIBBANDS, Proprietor.

BOSCOMBE, Bournemouth.—THE CHINE HOTEL. Under new management.
Magnificent sea views. Moderate charges. Book East Station.
Miss BARNETT (late of the Inns of Court Hotel), Manageress.

BOURNEMOUTH.—HOTEL MONT DORE.—South aspect, 150 rooms, electric light throughout, passenger lift, first-class cuisine, winter garden and lounge, covered tennis court. Turkish, sea-water, and medicated Baths. The Hotel is within two minutes' walk of the Golf Links.—For tariff, address W. KNEESE, Manager.

BOURNEMOUTH.—HIGHCLIFFE HOTEL (first-class). Unrivalled position, West Cliff, full south. Splendid sea view. Most comfortable. Electric light. Table d'hôte (separate tables). Supplies from own Alderney Dairy Farm. Telephone 27.
JOHN KILNER, Proprietor.

BRIGHTON.—GRAND HOTEL.
Centre of Sea Front. Electric Light throughout.
NEW LIFT TO ALL FLOORS.
For Illustrated Tariff apply to A. D. HOOK, Manager.

BRIGHTON.—BEDFORD HOTEL.—Old-established. Unequalled in situation; opposite West Pier. Spacious coffee and reading rooms; sea-water service; unequalled cuisine; great variety of excellent wines. Moderate tariff. Electric light in all rooms.
GEO. HECKFORD, Manager.

CARBIS BAY HOTEL, CORNWALL. The very spot to obtain rest and quietude. Overlooking the finest bay in England. Mild yet bracing climate. Within easy distance of London by G.W.R. Splendid Golf Links. "A more beautiful spot for residence could hardly be imagined."—Truth.

FOLKESTONE.—WEST CLIFF HOTEL (180 Apartments). Stands in own private grounds of 2½ acres, facing the sea. All latest sanitary improvements. Excellent cuisine and wines. Table d'hôte at 7 p.m., separate tables.—For tariff please address The PROPRIETOR.

FOLKESTONE.—BATES' HOTEL, West Cliff Gardens, and LONGFORD PRIVATE HOTEL, The Lees. Oldest established and most select Family Hotels in Folkestone. Reduced terms during Winter and Spring months. Pension (new Coffee-room) at Bates' Hotel.—G. L. HART, Proprietor. Sanitation Certified.

GRAND CANARY.—THE METROPOLE.
Newest and best Hotel.
Delightful position, fronting the sea.
Terms most moderate.

JERSEY.—The GRAND HOTEL is charmingly situated, facing the sea, with full south aspect, and sheltered from the north and easterly winds. Every home comfort and liberal management.—For terms apply to D. DE LEIDI, Manager.

MALVERN—One of the most charming places for the Holidays.—The IMPERIAL HOTEL occupies the best position, and receives visitors en pension. The golf-links (18 holes) are one of the best in England. Capital stabling for hunters. Droitwich Brine, Turkish and large Swimming Bath in separate buildings. For tariff, apply to the Proprietor and Manager.
F. MOERSCHELL.

TORQUAY.—IMPERIAL HOTEL.—Under entirely New Management. New sanitary arrangements throughout. It is the largest and best-situated Hotel in Torquay, and the best winter residence on the South Coast. Visitors received en pension or à la carte. Terms moderate.
F. FISCHER, Manager.

TUNBRIDGE WELLS.—WELLINGTON HOTEL, Mount Ephraim. Under the distinguished patronage of his Grace the late Duke of Wellington, K.G., the leading nobility and gentry, &c. 422 ft. above sea level, south aspect; elegantly furnished; piano in every sitting-room. Cuisine. English and French. Electric light throughout.—BRABY, Proprietor.

All applications for spaces in this List should be made to the ADVERTISEMENT MANAGER,
"TRUTH" BUILDINGS, CARTERET STREET,
QUEEN ANNE'S GATE, S.W.

HANS CRESCENT HOTEL

HANS CRESCENT, BELGRAVIA, LONDON, S.W.
Within three minutes' walk of the Albert Gate Entrance to Hyde Park and Tattersall's.

THIS FAMILY HOTEL is sumptuously Furnished and Appointed, and complete in every detail. There are many self-contained Suites of Apartments, ensuring the utmost privacy (each having a Bathroom), as well as Single Bedrooms.

A HIGH-CLASS RESTAURANT
(à la carte and at fixed prices) is attached to the Hotel for Non-Residents.

RECHERCHE CUISINE.
The splendid COVERED WINTER GARDEN (2,500 square feet in area) forms a charming lounge, an attraction which is not possessed by any other Hotel in London. The entire building is agreeably heated during the winter. Mons. F. Casano's exquisite String Orchestra performs in the Palmery every evening during dinner time. Manager, MONS. C. DIETTE.

AVONDALE RESTAURANT

PICCADILLY (entrance in Dover St.).

Table d'Hote Luncheons and Dinners at Separate Tables.
A la Carte at any Hour.

High-class Service. Unrivalled Cuisine and Cellar. Private Dining Rooms for Luncheons, Dinners, and Meetings.

In the Reception Room there are TEN ELECTROPHONES, by which Visitors can hear, Free of Charge, the Performances at all the Theatres.

Tables and Rooms can be booked by Telegram or Telephone No. 35,322.

INNS OF COURT HOTEL, Holborn.—A first-class Family Hotel, with 200 bedrooms, all modern conveniences. Electric lights, lifts, &c. Banquets arranged. The Central Hall is the finest and the Dining-room the pleasantest in London. Masonic lodge, public meeting rooms, &c. Table d'hôte, 6 to 8, 3s. 6d.—FRANK BLACKLEY, Manager. Inclusive terms from 10s. 6d. per day.

ILFRACOMBE.

The WARMEST WINTER SEASIDE RESORT in England

THE ILFRACOMBE HOTEL.

First-class Return Tickets issued from London (Waterloo), L. and S.W.R., from November to March, including seven days' Bed, Board, and Attendance at the Ilfracombe Hotel, £5. 5s. each, available for one month.
Ask for HOTEL TICKETS, available by all trains. Fast trains leave Waterloo at 11 and 3 o'clock. H. R. GROVER, Manager.

A COMPLETE LIST OF

HOTELS OF THE MIDLAND RAILWAY.

London MIDLAND GRAND (St. Pancras).		Leeds ...	QUEEN'S.
Liverpool...	ADELPHI.	Derby ...	MIDLAND.
Bradford ...	MIDLAND.	Morecambe	MIDLAND.
		Normanton	STATION.

The Favourite Hotels for Tourists, Cyclists, and Pedestrians.

Specialities—Comfort, Good Cuisine, Moderate Charges.

WILLIAM TOWLE, Manager, Chief Office, St. Pancras, N.W.

LAS PALMAS. Grand Canary.—SANTA CATALINA HOTEL.—For all particulars apply at London Office, the Canary Islands Company, Limited, 1, Laurence Pountney-hill, E.C. Golf links.

LOWESTOFT GRAND HOTEL.

Standing in its own grounds. Open all the year round. Special reduced terms until May. Splendid sea fishing.

CONTINENTAL WINTER RESORT, five hours from London.—The magnificent HOTEL DE PUYS, near Dieppe, offers to English families a luxurious home in a mild and sunny climate; English sanitation, sea air, perfect cycling roads; tariff from £2. 10s. a week. Return fare, Friday to Tuesday, first class, 24s.—J. PELLETIER, Manager.

HASTINGS.—ALBANY HOTEL (Robertson-terrace).—Inclusive terms from 2½ gns. upwards. Finest position on the whole sea front. Electric Light everywhere. Lift to all floors. Smoking room and all public rooms face the sea. Billiards. Special Notice! No charge for attendance is made. Visitors can bring their own wines; no corkage is charged.—C. A. SCHWABE, Manager.

CAP MARTIN HOTEL

(BETWEEN MENTONE AND MONTE CARLO.)

FINEST SITE ON THE RIVIERA.

NOW OPEN, under the same Management.

Since last season the Hotel has been lighted throughout by electricity, re-decorated, and about 30 new rooms have been added.

Perfect Sanitation of Hotel and District. The Hotel has private Dairy and Laundry. Omnibus meets trains at Mentone.

Address—MANAGER, Cap Martin Hotel, Mentone.

WESTON-SUPER-MARE.—"One of the healthiest and most invigorating watering-places in the world."—The GRAND ATLANTIC is the principal and leading Hotel, facing the sea. 130 sumptuously appointed rooms, delightful public rooms, hydraulic lift, every modern comfort. Nearest to Golf Links and Railway Station. "Own model farm."—Apply, Manager. Telegraphic address, "Atlantic." Telephone No. 11.

AMUSEMENTS.

QUEEN'S HALL.

LAMOUREUX ORCHESTRAL FESTIVAL.
The remaining Concerts will take place
To-night, Wednesday ..... 8.30 | To-morrow, Thursday 3.0
Friday next ..... 8.30 | Saturday next 3.0
Tickets 12s. 6d., 10s. 6d., 5s., and 2s. 6d., of the usual Agents, and Robert Newman's Box-office, Queen's Hall.

ST. JAMES'S HALL.

EUGEN D'ALBERT,
in consequence of the great success of his last Recital, and by general desire.
Will give a
BEETHOVEN RECITAL,
TUESDAY AFTERNOON next, November 24, at 3.0.
Under the direction of Mr. A. S. Curtius.
Programme:—32 Variations in C minor; Sonata, Op. 27 No. 2 (Moonlight); Sonata in C (Op. 53); Sonata in E (Op. 109); Sonata in A flat (Op. 110); Sonata in C Minor (Op. 111). Reserved seats, 10s. 6d. and 5s.; unreserved, 5s. and 1s., at Tree's Ticket Office, St. James's Hall; usual Agents; or Mr. A. S. Curtius, 16, Shaftesbury-avenue, Piccadilly.

THE ANNUAL WINTER EXHIBITION of PICTURES and WATER COLOUR DRAWINGS by Artists of the British and Foreign Schools is NOW OPEN, at THOMAS McLEAN'S GALLERY, 7, Haymarket. Admission, 1s., including Catalogue.

HAYMARKET THEATRE.
Sole Lessee, Mr. Frederick Harrison.
Managers, Mr. Frederick Harrison and Mr. Cyril Maude.
TO-NIGHT and EVERY EVENING, at 8.30,
UNDER THE RED ROBE.
Adapted by Edward Rose from the novel by Stanley Weyman.
Mr. Cyril Maude, Mr. Herbert Waring, and Miss Winifred Emery.
MATINEES EVERY WEDNESDAY and SATURDAY, at 2.30.
Box-office (Mr. Leverton) 10 to 10. HAYMARKET.

NIAGARA. SKATING.
The First GRAND CARNIVAL will take place on FRIDAY, December 11.
RESTAURANT NOW OPEN for LUNCHEON and DINNERS.

NATIONAL SKATING PALACE,
ARGYLL STREET, W.
TIMES OF SESSIONS.
10.30 a.m. to 1 p.m. 3/-
3 p.m. to 6 p.m. 5/-
7.30 p.m. to 11 p.m. 3/-
PALACE SKATING CLUB (Sundays only), Subscription £3. 3s.
Full Particulars of THE MANAGER.

PRINCE'S SKATING CLUB.
HYDE PARK, KNIGHTSBRIDGE.
The LARGEST and FINEST SHEET of ICE in LONDON.
For particulars of Membership apply to the Secretary, Prince's Skating Club, Knightsbridge, S.W.

CRYSTAL PALACE.—SATURDAY CONCERTS. Saturday, November 28, at 3. Vocalist, Miss Ella Russell. Pianist, Mdlle. Clotilde Kleeberg. The Grand Orchestra. Conductor, Mr. August Manns. Seats, 1s. to 4s.

MADAME TUSSAUD'S EXHIBITION, Baker-street Station.—Grand Ecclesiastical Tableau, His Grace the Archbishop of Canterbury (Dr. Temple, D.D.), &c., &c. The celebrated Roumanian Orchestra. Afternoon and Evening. Admission, 1s. Open from 10 a.m. till 10 p.m.

THE CAPE COLONISATION COMPANY, LIMITED.
HOW TO MAKE AN INCOME-PAYING HOME.

The object of the above Company is to develop the resources of their estate, consisting of about 12,000 acres, situated in the far-famed Tulbagh district in the Western Province of Cape Colony, about 75 miles distant by rail from Cape Town. They are promoting the establishment of a successful colony. The estate has been surveyed and laid out in blocks of about 40 acres each, a number of which have already been sold. The purchase price of this land this year (with all water facilities) is £12 per acre, threequarters of which can remain bearing interest at six per cent. per annum.

In order to provide for the success of every colonist who has sufficient capital at command to be able to enter into this business, but has no practical knowledge of the work, the company have engaged the services of an efficient manager and a skilled horticulturist; and who will, if desired, plant, cultivate, and attend to the development of each client's farm for one year or more.

Thus any settler, provided he gives ordinary attention to the details of the work this company have undertaken for him, can obtain, under the guidance of a skilled specialist, that practical knowledge which is essential in the working to the best advantage of dairy and fruit farms.

THE CAPE COLONISATION COMPANY, LIMITED.
The Company undertake, if desired, to clear, plant, fence, supervise, and generally manage any holding. They guarantee that 90 per cent. of the trees and vines planted under the supervision of their staff grow to maturity, as specified in the agreement, a copy of which can be obtained on application. The company will manage the estate of any absentee at a charge of £1 a year per acre, and will also undertake to erect on the estate any houses for the residence of a settler, which can be chosen in London before sailing, with estimates given. They further undertake to purchase from a settler, at marketable prices, any approved dairy, farm, and orchard produce.

At the company's headquarters, at Seven Fountains, are the orchard and vineyard belonging to the company, and extensive creameries, packing houses, &c., will be erected as soon as necessary.

Steps are already being taken for the erection of a sugar beet factory, &c., and it is the intention of the company to promote milling and other industries.

THE CAPE COLONISATION COMPANY, LIMITED.
The Company solicit enquiries from families who are seeking a fresh start in life.

Young gentlemen who are looking for an opening in which to make their way.

Farmers who for years have been losing money in this country and would like to start afresh.

Retired members of the Military, Naval, and Civil Services, desiring to increase their incomes.

The delicate (those inclined to bronchial and pulmonary troubles) who need an avenue for making an income in a congenial climate.

The General Manager of the Company is going out at the beginning of October, and will be pleased to have the Company of any one who desires to avail himself of this opportunity of a fresh start in life in a new field.

All are requested to be good enough to place themselves in communication with the Secretary of the Company—
3, PANCRAS LANE, QUEEN STREET, LONDON, E.C.,
from whom full particulars and papers on all points can be obtained. Also the illustrated book on the subject, price 2s., together with a Manual of Practical Orchard Work at the Cape. Published by the Department of Agriculture of the Cape of Good Hope.

AMUSEMENTS.

LYCEUM.—CYMBELINE, EVERY NIGHT, at 8.
Iachimo ..... Henry Irving.
Imogen ..... Miss Ellen Terry.
MATINEES, WEDNESDAYS, November 25, December 2 and 9.
THE BELLS, Wednesday, 25th, and Saturday, the 5th December, at 8.
Box-office (Mr. J. Hurst) open 10 to 5, and 7.30 to 10. Seats also booked by letter or telegram. LYCEUM.

GAIETY.—Lessee and Manager, GEORGE EDWARDES.—ANOTHER GAIETY SUCCESS.—EVERY EVENING, at 8.15, a New Musical Play, in Two Acts, entitled MY GIRL, by James T. Tanner, Music by Osmond Carr, Lyrics by Adrian Ross. Box-office open daily from 10 till 6. MATINEE Saturday Next, at 2.30.

ADELPHI THEATRE.—A. & S. GATTI, Sole Proprietors and Managers.—TO-NIGHT, at 8 o'clock, BOYS TOGETHER. William Terriss and Miss Millward; Mr. W. L. Abingdon, Mr. C. W. Somerset, Mr. Luigi Lablache, Mr. Mackintosh, Mr. J. D. Beveridge, Mr. Oscar Adye, and Mr. Harry Nicholls; Miss Nesbitt, Miss Kate Kearney, Miss Alice Kingsley, &c.

SAVOY.—Every Evening, at 8.30, and Every Saturday Afternoon, at 2.30. THE MIKADO, by W. S. Gilbert and Arthur Sullivan. At 7.50, WEATHER OR NO. Box-office 9 a.m. to 11 p.m.—R. D'OYLY CARTE, Proprietor and Manager.

CRITERION THEATRE.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. CHARLES WYNDHAM.—Every Evening, at 8.30, ROSEMARY, by Louis N. Parker and Murray Carson. Mr. CHARLES WYNDHAM, Miss MARY MOORE, and the Criterion Company. MATINEE EVERY SATURDAY, at 2.30. SPECIAL WEDNESDAY MATINEE on November 18.

DALY'S THEATRE.—Sole Lessee and Manager, Mr. AUGUSTIN DALY.—EVERY EVENING, and SATURDAY MATINEE. Mr. George Edwardes's Company in THE GEISHA. The book by Owen Hall. Lyrics by Harry Greenbank. Music by Sydney Jones.

COURT THEATRE.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. ARTHUR CHUDLEIGH.—At 9, THE BELLE OF CAIRO, by Messrs. Cecil Raleigh and Kinsey Peile, in which Miss May Yohé will appear. At 8.15, NUMBER ONE ROUND THE CORNER. Doors open 7.45. Box-office 10 to 10. Telephone No. 3,031. MATINEE SATURDAY NEXT, at 3. Doors open 2.30.

VAUDEVILLE.—A. & S. GATTI, Sole Lessees and Managers. EVERY EVENING, at 9, A NIGHT OUT. Preceded, at 8.15, by ROUND A TREE. MATINEE EVERY WEDNESDAY, at 3. Doors open 7.45. Box-office open 10 to 10.

ST. JAMES'S.—THE PRISONER OF ZENDA.—
By Anthony Hope and Edward Rose.
EVERY EVENING, at 8.15. Doors open 7.45. Box-office 10 to 10.
Telephone (3,903).
THE PRISONER OF ZENDA.
Mr. George Alexander, Miss Julia Neilson; Messrs. W. H. Vernon, H. H. Vincent, Allan Aynesworth, C. Aubrey Smith, Henry B. Irving, William H. Day, Henry Loraine, George Bancroft, Arthur Royston, Vincent Sternroyd; Miss Hackney, Miss Darvill, Miss Fay Davis.
MATINEE EVERY WEDNESDAY and SATURDAY, at 2.
ST. JAMES'S THEATRE.
Sole Lessee and Manager, Mr. GEORGE ALEXANDER.

ROYALTY THEATRE.—HIS LITTLE DODGE, at 9.
By Justin Huntly McCarthy.
Lessee, Miss Kate Santley. Telephone 3,855.
Mr. GEORGE ALEXANDER'S SEASON.
Preceded, at 8-30, by IN AND OUT OF A PUNT.
MATINEE EVERY SATURDAY, at 3, and WEDNESDAY NEXT, Nov. 25.
Box-office (Mr. Horne) 10 to 5. ROYALTY.

COMEDY.—Sole Manager, Mr. CHARLES HAWTREY.
On THURSDAY EVENING NEXT, November 19, Mr. Charles Hawtrey will produce an original Farce, in Three Acts, by R. C. Carton, entitled
A WHITE ELEPHANT.
The cast will include, Mr. Charles Hawtrey, Messrs. Charles Brookfield, Henry Kemble, Eric Lewis, W. T. Lovell, Cecil Ramsay, William F. Hawtrey; Miss Compton, Miss Nina Boucicault, Miss Mansfield, Miss Nina Cadiz, Mrs. Charles Calvert, and Miss Lottie Venne.
Preceded by A WHITE STOCKING, by Edward Ferris and Arthur Stuart. Box-office open 10 to 5. Seats may now be booked and at all Libraries.
COMEDY.

ALHAMBRA.—TO-NIGHT, Two New Grand Ballets, RIP VAN WINKLE and DONNYBROOK. Grand VARIETIES. Prices, 6d. to £3. 3s. Open 7.30. ALFRED MOUL, General Manager.

EMPIRE THEATRE.—EVERY EVENING, the New Grand Ballet, MONTE CRISTO. Great success. LUMIERE'S CINEMATOGRAPHE. Grand VARIETY ENTERTAINMENT. Doors open at 7.30.

PALACE, Shaftesbury-avenue.—The HANDSOMEST THEATRE in EUROPE. The finest Variety Entertainment in London, including the NEW SERIES OF TABLEAUX VIVANTS. Full Licence. Prices from 6d. Doors open 7.30.—Manager, Mr. CHARLES MORTON.

LONDON PAVILION.—TREMENDOUS PROGRAMME. Bunth, Rudd, and Barnard, exclusively engaged; Eugene Stratton, Vesta Victoria, Mdlle. La Belle Rose, Robert Arnold, Walter Munroe, Maggie Duggan, George Robey, Lillian Alexander, Will Evans, George Beauchamp, Lady Mansel, Athas and Collins, Laura Lyle, Leo Stormont, The Avolos, Minnie Duncan, Jessie Lindsay, Mark Anthony, Walter Stockwell, Fish and Warren, W. P. Dempsey, Violet Nelson, Mdlle. Lucretia, Marie Tree, and the Great Selbini Troupe of Bicyclists. Prices from 1s. to £3. 3s. Doors open at 7.30. Box-office open from 11 to 5.

TIVOLI, Strand, London.—The Greatest Combination of Talent in London.—Open EVERY EVENING, at 7.45, and SATURDAY MATINEE, at 2.30, with a STAR PROGRAMME, embracing every Artiste of note.—Manager, Mr. VERNON DOWSETT.

ESTATES, AUCTIONS, &c.

NORFOLK and SUFFOLK.—TO BE SOLD, a magnificent FREEHOLD RESIDENTIAL and SPORTING DOMAIN, extending to nearly 12,000 acres, lying well together, and intersected by two rivers. The mansion is of a stately and commodious character, seated in a beautiful park of 200 acres, with large lake. The shooting is of the very highest class, while many important seats are in the immediate neighbourhood, and Newmarket is within easy reach.—Apply to Messrs. TROLLOPE, Estate Agents, 15, Parliament-street, Westminster.

TO INVALIDS.—A LIST of MEDICAL MEN, in all parts, willing to RECEIVE RESIDENT PATIENTS, giving full particulars and terms, sent Gratis. The List includes Private Asylums, &c. Schools also recommended—Address, Mr. G. B. STOCKER, 8, Lancaster-place, Strand, W.C.

GROSVENOR GARDENS.—A MANSION TO BE LET or SOLD. Unexceptionable position, lately most tastefully re-decorated throughout. The spacious reception rooms, consisting of drawing-room (panelled in silk), boudoir, dining-room and library, large room on ground floor, suitable for billiard or ball-room, eleven bedrooms, two dressing-rooms, two bath-rooms, splendid offices, hot and cold water, speaking tubes and bells fitted throughout. Sanitary arrangement under the latest improvements.—Apply for full particulars and orders to view, THE LADIES' AGENCY for Apartments and Houses, 83, Ebury-street, S.W.

WANTED, for the WINTER MONTHS, a FURNISHED HOUSE, south or west aspect, seven bedrooms, three reception. Five guineas a week.—Apply, THE BELGRAVE LADIES' AGENCY, 83, Ebury-street, S.W.

OIL PAINTING.
PORTRAITS, LANDSCAPES, &c., faithfully REPRODUCED.
For terms, address K. M. C., Grove House, Helston, Cornwall.

WINTER IN THE WEST INDIES

SPECIAL TOURS, 65 days for £65.

By magnificent vessels of the

ROYAL MAIL STEAM PACKET COMPANY.

For particulars apply, 18, Moorgate-street, or 29, Cockspur-street (West-end), London.

PRINCE LINE.—EGYPT and the HOLY LAND.

CHEAP ROUND TOURS a SPECIALITY.
RIVER PLATE DIRECT (not calling at Brazilian Ports).
MADEIRA and the CANARY ISLANDS.
GIBRALTAR, TUNIS, MALTA.
Superior Services. Fares extremely moderate. High-class Cuisine.
Luxurious saloons and cabins, promenade decks, all amidships.
Head office:—JAMES KNOTT, Newcastle-on-Tyne.

NILE SEASON, 1896-97.

COOK'S NEW FIRST-CLASS TOURIST STEAMERS.

(The only Steamers on the Nile specially constructed for the conveyance of First-Class Tourists).

LEAVE CAIRO for the First Cataract Dec. 1st, 15th, 22nd, 29th, and every Tuesday until March 9th.

SECOND CATARACT Service worked by Tourist Steamer, "Prince Abbas," leaving Philae Jan. 4th, and every Monday during Season.

EXTRA STEAMERS on Thursdays, Jan. 28th, Feb. 4th and 18th.

Four Weeks' Voyages to First Cataract and Back, leaving Cairo Jan. 6th.

COOK'S NILE MAIL SERVICE
BETWEEN CAIRO, NAGH HAMADI, AND ASSOUAN.
Every Wednesday, Saturday, and Monday.

(The only Steamers on the Nile conveying Mails, &c., under contract with the Egyptian Government).

COOK'S NEW MAIL SERVICE, leaving Cairo for Assouan, twice a week. Fare £27.

CAIRO to Second Cataract and back, by Mail Steamers and "Prince Abbas," Fare, £50.

NEW STEEL DAHABEAHS, various sizes, modern improvements, to accommodate small or large parties.

SUPERIOR STEAM DAHABEAH for private Families.

KARNAK, LUXOR, and ASSOUAN HOTELS. English Medical Gentlemen in residence during Season.

See programme, with maps and plans, 6d., or apply to any of the Branch Offices, or Chief Office, Ludgate Circus.

THOS. COOK & SON (EGYPT), LTD.,

Sole Contractors to the Egyptian Government for the conveyance of mails, &c., between Lower and Upper Egypt, and to the English Government for the conveyance of troops and stores on the Nile.

JAPAN, CHINA, CANADIAN PACIFIC ROUTE, viâ New York, Montreal, Vancouver. Only line running through trains, Atlantic to Pacific, under one management. Largest, fastest, only twin-screw steamers on Pacific. Leave England thrice weekly; Vancouver, tri-weekly.

ROUND THE WORLD, £115.

CANADA, UNITED STATES.—Cheap through tickets by fast trains. For berths or descriptive pamphlets apply, CANADIAN PACIFIC RAILWAY, 67-8, King William-street, London Bridge, or 30, Cockspur-street, Charing Cross.

N.B.—Allan, American, Anchor, Beaver, Cunard, Dominion, and White Star Agency.

ORIENT COMPANY'S YACHTING CRUISES,

by the Steamships "LUSITANIA," 3,877 tons register, and "GARONNE," 3,876 tons register, from LONDON, as under:—

For TENERIFFE, the WEST INDIA ISLANDS, BERMUDA, &c.
Leaving January 13, returning March 16.
For MOROCCO, SICILY, PALESTINE, and EGYPT.
Leaving February 17, returning April 15.
For SOUTH of SPAIN, GREECE, CONSTANTINOPLE, &c.
Leaving March 31, returning May 17.
For PORTUGAL, MOROCCO, CORSICA, ITALY, and SICILY.
Leaving April 21, returning May 21.

String band, electric light, electric bells, hot and cold baths, high-class cuisine.

Managers, { F. GREEN & CO. / ANDERSON, ANDERSON, & CO. } Head Offices: Fenchurch-avenue.

For passage apply to the latter firm at 5, Fenchurch-avenue, London, E.C.; or to the West End Branch Office, 16, Cockspur-street, S.W.

SPECIAL SHIPMENTS OF
ORIENTAL CARPETS

TO BE SOLD AT GREATLY REDUCED PRICES.

TRELOAR & SONS,

LUDGATE HILL.

PRICES ARE MUCH REDUCED, as not only is the Raw Material lower, but cheap freights and a low rate of exchange are at present in favour of buyers.

TURKEY AND INDIAN CARPETS

Are delivered to the warehouse two or three times a week in all sizes, both in the old and new colourings.

ANY CARPET WILL BE SENT ON APPROBATION TO APPROVED CUSTOMERS.

A CATALOGUE OF FLOOR COVERINGS POST FREE ON APPLICATION.

TRELOAR & SONS, LUDGATE HILL, LONDON, E.C.

Dunlop
Pneumatic Tyres for Carriages.

Absence of Noise.

Driving on Air Cushions.

Comfort Increased.

Draught Decreased.

In a closed carriage conversation can be carried on in a whisper.

The DUNLOP PNEUMATIC TYRE Co., Ltd.

(Patentees and sole makers of the celebrated Dunlop tyres for cycles).

Telegrams: "AIRINESS." Telephone No. 6,754.

166, Clerkenwell Road, London, E.C.

SHOW ROOMS: 14, REGENT STREET, LONDON, S.W.
WORKS: ALMA STREET, COVENTRY;
BRANCHES: Dublin, Manchester, Birmingham, Nottingham, Glasgow, and Abroad.

FARADAY & SON's
Electric Light Fittings

Dining Room Coronæ
Drawing Room Sconces
Counterpoise Pendants
Adjustable Standards
Porch & Loggia Lanterns
Tortoise-shell Shades

ORIGINAL DESIGNS
HIGH-CLASS FINISH

2 & 3 BERNERS ST. LONDON W.

BATH,
"The Queen of the West."

FAMOUS NATURAL HOT MINERAL WATERS.

Number of Bathers last Season,
95,935.

BLADUD,
Discoverer of the Healing Springs.

Latest Scientific Appliances, including the

NAUHEIM or THERMALSÖOLBAD.

Good Hotels.
BAND DAILY.

Bath is now only Two Hours from London.

MAPLE & CO
Brass Bedsteads
Brass Bedsteads

THE LARGEST STOCK IN THE WORLD

Thousands of Brass Bedsteads at from

38s 6d to £50

Purchased before recent advances
Buyers effect a great Saving

Brass Bedsteads
Brass Bedsteads

MAPLE & CO
TOTTENHAM COURT ROAD LONDON

THE ALBEMARLE CYCLE CO.,

291, OXFORD STREET, LONDON, W.,

Are the West End Agents for the

'Necec' CYCLES,

ON WHICH M. DIAKOFF WON THIS YEAR'S CHAMPIONSHIPS.

Highest Grade Machines.

Reasonable Prices.

CALL AND SEE OUR STOCK BEFORE DECIDING ON YOUR MOUNT.

ILLUSTRATED LIST SENT POST FREE ON APPLICATION.

ALSO AGENTS for the "EAGLE," one of America's Best Cycles.

EPPS'S COCOAINE.

COCOA-NIB EXTRACT.

(TEA-LIKE.)

The choicest roasted nibs (broken-up beans) of the natural Cocoa on being subjected to powerful hydraulic pressure, give forth their excess of oil, leaving for use a finely-flavoured powder—"Cocoaine," a product which, when prepared with boiling water, has the consistence of tea, of which it is now, with many, beneficially taking the place. Its active principle being a gentle nerve stimulant, supplies the needed energy without unduly exciting the system.

WATCHES FROM THE FACTORY BY POST

DIRECT TO THE WEARER!

57/- THE 'COUNSELLOR'

H. SAMUEL'S KEYLESS ENGLISH LEVER. A splendid Watch, highly finished interchangeable movement, with 15 JEWELS; three-quarter plate, most accurately constructed; CHRONOMETER BALANCE; tempered hairspring; polished wheels and pinions: flat crystal glass front. In highly-finished close-fitting SOLID SILVER cases, hall marked. H. Samuel's price £2. 17s.; in 14-CARAT ROLLED GOLD Case, consisting of two outer plates of 14-carat gold, lined inside with a case of specially prepared metal. Wears for years. H. Samuel's price, £4. 5s. Heavy 18-carat Gold Case, £13, SEVEN YEARS' warranty. A MONTH'S FREE TRIAL. Full amount returned if dissatisfied. LARGE SAVING on London prices. H. Samuel's "ACME" Sterling Silver Watches for Ladies and Gentlemen. Handsome, exact, and durable. Five years' warranty. Worth three guineas. H. Samuel's price 25s. H. Samuel's New Improvements, protected by HER MAJESTY'S ROYAL LETTERS PATENT, are only to be obtained in H. Samuel's Watches. Largest Sale! Highest Quality! Lowest Prices!

FREE. It will please you to read our new book (just published). Only necessary to send your NAME AND ADDRESS, and this handsome volume is despatched by next post. CONSIDERABLE REDUCTIONS effected by sending direct to H. Samuel for all requirements. Please say if we may have the pleasure of posting you this new book.

H. SAMUEL, Lever Watch Factory, MANCHESTER.

THE NEW PATENT

"Self-Closing" BRACELETS.

NEVER SLIP in whatever position placed.
Delightfully flexible and comfortable.
Specially suitable for Presents, as they fit any wrist.

Made in plain gold. Also with the pretty and Fashionable Turquoises and Pearls studded all round.

LARGE VARIETY OF PATTERNS.

Sold by all leading Jewellers.

Wholesale only Saunders & Shepherd, London.

Toilet "Lanoline" For Delicate and Sensitive Skins. 6D. AND 1S.

"LANOLINE" Toilet Preparations "LANOLINE"

Dartring Brand. from all Chemists.

Wholesale Depôt:—67 HOLBORN VIADUCT, LONDON.

"Lanoline" Toilet Soap For Health and Beauty of the Skin. 6D. PER TABLET. 8 IN A BOX 1S. 6D.

Best is Cheapest & Lasts Longest
Fixed, moderate prices.
Permanent Protection from Chill.

JAEGER

PURE WOOL UNDERWEAR, HOSE, PYJAMAS, RUGS, BLANKETS, CASHMERE SHEETS, DRESSING GOWNS, SHAWLS, CORSETS, CYCLING OUTFITS, BOOTS AND SHOES, etc. etc.

"Health Culture" & Jaeger Coy.'s Price List sent free.

JAEGER DEPOTS:—

3 and 4, PRINCES-ST., CAVENDISH-SQ. (near Regent-circus)
126, REGENT-STREET (near the Quadrant).
30, SLOANE-STREET (adjoining McPherson's Gymnasium).
456, STRAND (near Trafalgar-square).
85 and 86, CHEAPSIDE (near King-street).

TAILORING (only):—

42, CONDUIT-STREET, NEW BOND STREET, W.

The "Jaeger" goods are sold in many Towns. Address sent from Jaeger Co.'s Head Office, 95, Milton Street, E.C.

TRADE MARK ON EACH GARMENT.

The "Jaeger" goods are tested for purity and durability.

WARMTH WITHOUT WEIGHT.

Guaranteed Non-Shrinking.

"Australlama"

THE PERFECTION OF

Woollen Under-wear

For Ladies, Gentlemen & Children

SOFT LIGHT & WARM — TRADE MARK.

SCOTCH { AUSTRALIAN WOOL AND INDIAN CASHMERE } MADE

ILLUSTRATED PRICE LIST & SAMPLES POST FREE FROM THE SOLE MANUFACTURERS.

Greensmith Downes, Edinburgh.

THE 'QUEEN' FIRE-LIGHTING FAN

Lights a clean bright fire in a few minutes without wood. Saves time, labour, worry, and money. Will light 30 fires at the cost of 1d. Blows a dead fire into life at once. Will last a lifetime.

14 Days' Free Trial allowed.

Delivered free in United Kingdom with Japanned Cover, 15/6; with Embossed Brass Cover and Brass Handle, 21/- Please mention this Paper. Full particulars post free from CHERRY TREE MACHINE CO., LTD., CHERRY TREE, BLACKBURN.

PUREST IN ENGLAND.

BOURNE TABLE WATERS

SODA, SELTZER, LITHIA, POTASH, LEMONADE, GINGER ALE, ETC.

Supplied in 6 Dozen Cases Carriage Paid by

Analysis, &c., on Application.

R. M. MILLS & CO., BOURNE, LINCOLNSHIRE

West-End Agents, WHEATLEY & SONS, 24, South Audley-street, W.

City Agents, RAE & CO., 6, Railway-place, E.C.;

And of all CHEMISTS, WINE MERCHANTS, &c.

BERKEFELD FILTER

FOR THE PRIVATE HOUSE OFFICE, FACTORY, HOTELS RESTAURANTS, CLUBS, &c. &c.

Can be Easily and Cheaply Fixed to the Service-Pipe of any HOUSE having ordinary pressure.

No Country House Should Be Without One.

In use in all the Principal Hotels. Simple in Construction. Most easily cleaned.

PRICE FOR FILTER AS ABOVE, 42s. SMALLER SIZE, 25s.

For other prices see price-lists.

Offices and Show-Rooms: The BERKEFELD FILTER Co. Ltd. 121, Oxford St., London, W.

NOTE. — Write for Copy of the Special Report to the "BRITISH MEDICAL JOURNAL," Nov. 10, 1894, in which the BERKEFELD FILTER is specially demonstrated as affording COMPLETE PROTECTION against the communication of WATERBORNE DISEASES.

Supplied to H.R.H. the PRINCE OF WALES, DUKE OF WESTMINSTER, K.G., and others too numerous to mention; THE HOUSE OF LORDS, and THE HOUSE OF COMMONS.

BUY THE

4711 Eau de Cologne

IT IS THE BEST GENUINE, STRONGEST, MOST LASTING, MOST REFRESHING AND INVIGORATING.

CAUTION. — Be sure and insist upon MULHEN'S 4711 Brand, as inferior makes are sometimes offered. Refuse all substitutes. Of most dealers in first-class Perfumes.

Case of 6 Bottles, carriage paid, for 13s. or Sample Bottle, 2s. 6d. post free.

The 4711 Depot, 62, New Bond St. W.

ALL HEADACHES INSTANTLY CURED OR MONEY REFUNDED.

LEGAL GUARANTEE.

7½D. EMERSON'S BROMO-SELTZER, the most successful American remedy, is an effervescent powder, taken in water. If three doses do not cure any head-ache, no matter how caused, send the bottle to us, saying where obtained, AND WE WILL AT ONCE REFUND THE PRICE.

Trial Bottle, post free, 7½d. Larger Sizes, 1s. 1½d. and 2s. 3d. Sold by many Chemists or obtained to order by almost all.

EMERSON DRUG CO., Ltd.
46, Holborn Viaduct
LONDON, E.C.
INSIST ON FULL NAME—

EMERSON'S BROMO-SELTZER

CHRISTMAS PRESENTS

AND NEW YEAR'S GIFTS.

RIMMEL'S SATCHETS, 6d., 1/-, 1/6, 2/6, 3/6, 5/-.
Richly mounted and sweetly perfumed.
RIMMEL'S FANCY CASES, 7/6, 10/6, 18/-, 21/-, 30/-, &c.
Containing only the best Perfumes.
RIMMEL'S ARTISTIC EMPIRE FANS, from 5/6 to 20 guineas.
Exquisite designs. Splendid variety.
RIMMEL'S PERFUMED ALMANACK, 6d.
Beautifully illuminated.
RIMMEL'S "EXQUISITE" PERFUME, 5/-, 10/-, 15/-, 21/-, & 30/- per bottle.
A very lasting, concentrated, and extremely fine perfume.
RIMMEL'S "NESSARI" PERFUME, 3/6, 5/-, and 8/6 per bottle.
A sweet and lasting perfume.
RIMMEL'S FRESH VIOLET EXTRACTS, 2/6, 3/6, 5/-, and 8/6 per bottle.
A perfect and most delicate perfume of the Violet.
RIMMEL'S TOILET VINEGAR, 1/-, 2/6, and 5/- per bottle.
A tonic and refreshing Lotion for Toilet and Bath.
RIMMEL'S BEST PERFUMES, in cut-glass bottles, 2/6, 3/6, 5/-, 7/6, 10/-, 12/6, 15/-, and 20/-, forming remarkably handsome Presents.
RIMMEL'S EXTRA-SCENTED SOAPS, 4/6 per box of three tablets.
Highly purified and exquisitely scented.
RIMMEL'S POUDRE de BEAUTÉ, 2/6 per box.
Refined, imperceptible, and adherent Toilet Powder.

To be had at 96, Strand, 180, Regent Street, 64, Cheapside, LONDON; and at 76, King's Road, BRIGHTON. Also at Rimmel's Continental Branches, Paris, Brussels, The Hague, and Florence.

GUARANTEED PERFECTLY HOLLOW GROUND

IVORY, 6/-

ENCORE RAZOR

BLACK 4/-

SEND FOR FREE LIST OF CASES

From all Dealers, or write direct to Makers:

T. TURNER & CO., Suffolk Works, SHEFFIELD.

Who will supply through nearest Agent.

ASK FOR "ENCORE" POCKET AND TABLE CUTLERY.

LIQUEUR of the GRANDE CHARTREUSE.

This most excellent Liqueur, the great preventive of Indigestion, and almost certain remedy for sea-sickness, can now be had of all Wine Merchants, and at prices much lower than formerly.

Sole Consignee, W. DOYLE, 35, Crutched Friars, London, E.C.

AMERICAN

TOOTH CROWN CO.,

24 OLD BOND ST., W.

50 & 52 LUDGATE HILL, E.C.

FOR FIRST CLASS DENTISTRY.

Decayed and broken-down teeth should not be extracted. They can be saved for many years by skilful crowning and filling at moderate and fixed fees. Experts in all methods of dentistry in attendance daily.

Descriptive book post free on Application to the Secretary at either Address.

NO FEE FOR CONSULTATION.

AN ABSOLUTE CURE FOR CONSTIPATION.

CASCARINE LEPRINCE.

CHRONIC CONSTIPATION.

IMPAIRED DIGESTION.

PILES.

SICK HEADACHE.

DISORDERED LIVER.

BILIOUSNESS.

CONSTIPATION DURING NURSING, &c.

GRATIS Sample Box post free on application to FRANCIS NEWBERY & SONS,

1 & 3, King Edward Street, Newgate Street, London, E.C.

LATEST AWARDS—

Geneva, 1896	(Hors Concours)	HIGHEST HONOURS
Frankfort O/M, 1896	(Gold Medal)	HIGHEST HONOURS
Chicago, 1893	(Medal and Diplomas)	HIGHEST HONOURS

THE LATE EARL OF BEACONSFIELD,

SIR MORELL MACKENZIE,

OLIVER WENDELL HOLMES,

MISS EMILY FAITHFUL,

THE LATE GEN. W. T. SHERMAN,

and many other persons of distinction, have testified to the remarkable efficacy of Himrod's Cure for Asthma.

Established nearly a Quarter of a Century.

Prescribed by the Medical Faculty throughout the world. It is used as an Inhalation and without any after bad effects. A free Sample and detailed testimonials free by post. In tins, 4s. 3d. British Depôt—46, Holborn Viaduct, London; also of NEWBERY & SONS, BARCLAY & SONS, LYNCH & CO., J. SANGER & SONS, W. EDWARDS & SON, MAY, ROBERTS & CO., JOHN THOMPSON, Liverpool, and all wholesale Houses.

For ECZEMA and all Skin Diseases wash with this Soap.

DR. MACKENZIE'S ARSENICAL SOAP 6d. & 1s.

Produces a lovely complexion, and cures Spots, Pimples, &c.

For ECZEMA and all Skin Diseases wash with this Soap.

DR. MACKENZIE'S ARSENICAL SOAP 6d. & 1s.

Produces a lovely complexion, and cures Spots, Pimples, &c.

The most emollient and soothing Toilet Soap in the World for irritable skins. Madame ADELINA PATTI writes from Craig-y-nos Castle:—"I find Dr. Mackenzie's Arsenical Toilet Soap most excellent." Beware of the many imitations. Have Dr. Mackenzie's or none.

Asthma, Bronchitis,

DIFFICULT BREATHING,

Promptly & Effectually Relieved

BY THE USE OF

SAVORY & MOORE'S

DATURA TATULA.

Cigars and Cigarettes—Boxes, 3s., 6s., 8s., and 15s., Tobacco—Tins, 2s. 6d., 5s., 10s., and 18s. For Non-Smokers, Pastilles and Powder for Burning and Inhalation—Tins, each containing a censer for burning, 2s. 6d., 5s., and 10s.

SAVORY & MOORE, London.

And of Chemists everywhere.

"FOR THE BLOOD IS THE LIFE."

CLARKE'S

WORLD-FAMED

BLOOD MIXTURE

Warranted to cleanse the blood from all impurities from whatever cause arising. For Scrofula, Scurvy, Eczema, Bad Legs, Skin and Blood Diseases, Pimples and Sores of all kinds, its effects are marvellous. It is the only real specific for Gout and Rheumatic Pains, for it removes the cause from the blood and bones. Thousands of Wonderful Cures have been effected by it. In bottles, 2s. 9d. and 11s. each, of Chemists everywhere.

BEWARE OF WORTHLESS IMITATIONS.

THE MEXICAN HAIR RENEWER

Prevents the Hair from falling off.
Restores Grey or White Hair to its ORIGINAL COLOUR.
Being delicately perfumed it leaves no unpleasant odour.
IS NOT a dye, and therefore does not stain the skin or even white linen.
Should be in every house where a HAIR RENEWER is needed.
Ask your Chemist or Hairdresser for

THE MEXICAN HAIR RENEWER.

Price 3s. 6d. per large Bottle.

Prepared only by the

ANGLO-AMERICAN DRUG COMPANY, Ltd.,

33, FARRINGDON ROAD, LONDON, E.C.

FLORILINE

FOR THE TEETH AND BREATH.

IS THE BEST LIQUID DENTIFRICE IN THE WORLD.

Prevents the Decay of Teeth.
Renders the Teeth Pearly White.
Is perfectly Harmless and Delicious to the Taste.

Of all Chemists and Perfumers throughout the World.
2s. 6d. per Bottle.

FLORILINE TOOTH POWDER.

Put up in Glass Jars, price 1s.

A Bad Complexion

4d

is often due to a bad soap.

BLOTCHES ARE REPULSIVE, AND WILL MAR THE APPEARANCE OF ANY FACE. YOU CAN'T GET RID OF THEM WITH BAD SOAP.

VINOLIA

IS A

COMPLEXION

4d

SOAP.

VINOLIA CREAM.—For Itching, Eczema, Face Spots, &c., 1/1½ and 1/9.
VINOLIA POWDER.—For Roughness, Redness, Toilet, &c., 1/1 and 1/9.

SUN INSURANCE OFFICE

63, Threadneedle-street, London, E.C.
FOUNDED 1710.
THE OLDEST PURELY FIRE OFFICE IN THE WORLD.
SUM INSURED IN 1895,
£390,775,000.

SPECIAL ADVANTAGES TO PRIVATE INSURERS.

THE IMPERIAL INSURANCE COMPANY, LIMITED. FIRE. Est. 1803, 1, Old Broad-st., E.C., & 22, Pall Mall, S.W. Subd Capital, £1,200,000. Paid-up, £300,000. Total funds, over £1,500,000.—E. COZENS SMITH, Gen. Man.

PRUDENTIAL ASSURANCE COMPANY, LIMITED.—Holborn Bars, London.

EVERY DESCRIPTION OF LIFE ASSURANCE AND ANNUITY BUSINESS TRANSACTED.
REVERSIONS PURCHASED.

Invested Funds, £25,000,000.

The last Annual Report can be obtained on application to the Secretary.

BIRKBECK BANK (Estab. 1851), Southampton-buildings, Chancery-lane, London. Two and a-half per cent. interest allowed on deposits, repayable on demand. Two per cent. on current accounts, on the minimum monthly balances when not below £100.
The BIRKBECK ALMANACK with particulars, post free.
FRANCIS RAVENSCROFT, Manager.

THE
JOHANNESBURG BOARD OF EXECUTORS AND TRUST CO., LIMITED.

HEAD OFFICE.
JOHANNESBURG, S.A.R.
DIRECTORS.
S. B. HARSANT (Chairman).
JNO. S. PARKES (Vice-Chairman).
S. J. WILKS. G. A. JONES. A. FRIEDLANDER.
BANKERS.
THE BANK OF AFRICA, Ltd., 113, Cannon-street, E.C.
CHIEF MANAGER, L. EDWARDS.
LONDON OFFICE.
ST. CLEMENT'S HOUSE, CLEMENT'S-LANE, E.C.
(Telegrams: "ETHIOPIAN," London.)
(Telephone No. 2154, Avenue.)

The above Company beg to advise having opened a London Office at the above address, and invite correspondence. All descriptions of TRUST and AGENCY BUSINESS undertaken either in London or South Africa. Secretaryships of Companies undertaken. Special facilities are obtainable through this Company for the placing of funds in secure and remunerative investments. Advice is given on all classes of South Africa Mining, Real Estate, Mortgage, or other Investments, and proxies are accepted to represent European Shareholders at South African Companies' meetings. This is the oldest and most successful Trust Company in the Transvaal. Reference has been kindly permitted to the Bank of Africa, Ltd., 113, Cannon-street, London, E.C.; and to the Head Office of the London and Lancashire Fire Insurance Company, 45, Dale-street, Liverpool.

JOHN SHAW, STOCK & SHARE DEALER.

HEAD OFFICE:—
WARDROBE CHAMBERS, DOCTORS' COMMONS, LONDON, E.C.

BANKERS:—
CAPITAL AND COUNTIES, Ludgate-hill, Long Acre, Piccadilly, and Brighton Branches.
LONDON AND MIDLAND, Newgate-street and Tooley-street Branches.

DIRECT PRIVATE TELEGRAPH WIRE between LONDON and BRIGHTON Offices.

FULL PARTICULARS of SPECIAL ARRANGEMENTS for DEALING sent post free on application.

COVER SYSTEM.—The loss is limited, the profits are unlimited, and there is such an independence in acting that the principle must and does recommend itself to business men—indeed, it is the only method on which they deal—for speculative accounts.

£5 COMMANDS £500 STOCK.
£10 COMMANDS £1,000 STOCK.
£50 COMMANDS £5,000 STOCK.
£500 COMMANDS £50,000 STOCK, and so on in proportion.
NO OTHER LIABILITY WHATEVER.

JOHN SHAW, STOCK AND SHARE DEALER,
LONDON, BRIGHTON, MANCHESTER, AND DUBLIN.

W. B. COCHRANE & CO.,

STOCK AND SHARE DEALERS.
13 and 14, CORNHILL, LONDON, E.C.
Telegrams: "Reinvest, London."
Bankers: London and Westminster, Lothbury, E.C.
Accounts opened for the Stock Exchange Fortnightly Settlements, and also upon the usual Cover System. Accounts opened for Three-monthly Settlement without Carrying-over Rates being charged.
Prospectus, Monthly Investment Book, Mining List, and Market Reports, with the latest advices, forwarded gratis upon application.
W. B. COCHRANE & CO., 13 and 14, Cornhill, E.C.

The SUBSCRIPTION LIST will OPEN on TUESDAY, NOVEMBER 17th, and CLOSE on or before THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 19th, 1896, for both town and country.

CAMPBELL PRAED & CO., LIMITED, BREWERS, WELLINGBOROUGH.—Incorporated under the Companies Acts, 1862 to 1890.—Share capital £100,000, divided into 10,000 Ordinary Shares of £10 each.

ISSUE of £100,000 FOUR PER CENT. PERPETUAL FIRST MORTGAGE DEBENTURE STOCK at the price of £105 per cent., payable as follows:—

On Application,	10 per cent.
On Allotment,	45 ,,	(including premium).
On 17th Dec., 1896,	50 ,, £105

The stock will be transferable in multiples of £5, and will be registered in the books of the Company. The interest will be payable half-yearly on the 31st March and 30th September in each year.

The first warrant will be issued on the 31st March, 1897, and will be for the amount of interest accrued from the dates on which the several instalments fall due.

The Company is at liberty to create and issue further Debenture Stock not exceeding £50,000 ranking pari passu with the stock now offered, provided further properties suitable for the purposes of the Company, worth at least twice the nominal amount of such further stock (and not purchased with the £20,000 cash, part of the proceeds of the present issue, which will remain with the Company), are added by way of first mortgage.

TRUSTEES FOR THE DEBENTURE STOCK-HOLDERS.
The Right Hon. the Viscount Dungarvan.
Mackworth Praed.

DIRECTORS.
Campbell Praed, Praed's Brewery, Wellingborough.
Herbert B. Praed, 29, St. James'-place, London, S.W.
W. K. D'Arcy, Stanmore Hall, Stanmore.
Herbert Sartoris, Weekly, Kettering.

BANKERS.
Lloyds Bank, Limited, 222, Strand, London, W.C., and all Branches.
The Capital and Counties Bank, Limited, Wellingborough.
SOLICITORS.—Nicholl, Manisty, & Co., 1, Howard-street, Strand, W.C.
AUDITORS.—Edwin Belfield & Co., Chartered Accountants, 57, Moorgate-street.
SECRETARY (pro tem.).—Andrew Barr.
REGISTERED OFFICE.—Star Chambers, 30, Moorgate-street, London, E.C.

ABRIDGED PROSPECTUS.

This Company has been formed to acquire as from 30th September, 1896, the brewery business of Messrs. Campbell Praed & Co., at Wellingborough. The business is a very old-established one, and Mr. Campbell Praed, who has managed the business for the last 18 years, has consented to act as Managing Director for the term of five years.

All mortgages and liabilities existing at the date above-mentioned will be discharged by the vendors, and the vendors will pay all costs and expenses of and incident to the formation of the Company and the present issue of Debenture stock.

£20,000, part of the proceeds of the present issue of Debenture stock, will remain with the Company for further development and working capital.

The assets of the Company will comprise the Freehold Brewery, Storehouses, Stables, Freehold Trade Houses, &c., &c., which, with £20,000 cash (part of proceeds of present issue), are valued at a total of £158,698.

The assets will also comprise seven Trade houses held by the firm on lease or under tenancies, and the general goodwill of the business mentioned in the report of Messrs. Collins, Tootell, & Co., Brewery Valuers and Accountants, but not included in the valuation.

The First Mortgage Debenture stock will be secured by a First Mortgage to the trustees for the Debenture stockholders of the whole of the Company's freehold and leasehold properties and fixed plant, and by a floating charge upon the other property, and the undertaking of the Company.

Messrs. Edwin Belfield & Co., chartered accountants and brewery valuers, report that the profits of the business including rentals have been as follows; For the year ending 30th September, 1894, £8,869. 6s. 7d.; 1895, £10,561. 6s. 2d.; 1896, £12,904. 0s. 4d.

Giving an average for the three years of £10,778. 4s. 4d. per annum. To which must be added the interest or profit to be derived from the £20,000 cash above mentioned.

The interest on the £100,000 First Mortgage Debenture stock will only amount to £4,000.

Application for Debenture stock should be made on the form accompanying the full prospectus, and forwarded with a cheque for the deposit to Lloyds Bank, Limited, 222, Strand, London, W.C., or any branch of Lloyds Bank, Limited, or to the Capital and Counties Bank, Limited, Wellingborough.

Full prospectuses and forms of application can be obtained from the Bankers or Solicitors, or at the offices of the Company.

November 14th, 1896.

No.....

This form is to be filled up and forwarded entire, with cheque for the amount of the deposit, to Lloyds Bank, Limited, 222, Strand, London, W.C., or any of their branches, or to the Capital and Counties Bank, Limited, Wellingborough.

CAMPBELL PRAED & CO., Limited.
Incorporated under the Companies Acts, 1862 to 1890.
FORM OF APPLICATION FOR FOUR PER CENT. PERPETUAL FIRST MORTGAGE DEBENTURE STOCK.

To the Directors of Campbell Praed & Co., Limited.

Gentlemen,—Having paid to your Bankers the sum of £ as a deposit of £10 per cent. on £ Four per Cent. Perpetual First Mortgage Debenture stock, I request you to allot me that amount of such Debenture stock, and I agree to accept the same, or any smaller amount that may be allotted to me, upon the terms of the Company's prospectus, dated 14th November, 1896, and to pay £45 per cent. on allotment, and £50 per cent. on 17th December, 1896, as provided by the prospectus.

Name (in full) .....
Address .....
Description .....
Date 1896
Signature .....

THE STOCK EXCHANGE.

NOTICE.

No Member of the Stock Exchange is allowed to advertise for business purposes, or to issue circulars to persons other than his own principals.

Persons who advertise as Brokers or Share Dealers are not Members of the Stock Exchange, or under the control of the Committee.

A List of Members of the Stock Exchange who are Stock and Share Brokers may be seen at the Bartholomew-lane Entrance to the Bank of England, or obtained on application to

FRANCIS LEVIEN,
Secretary to the Committee of the Stock Exchange.
Committee Room, The Stock Exchange, London, E.C.

LONDON AND COUNTY ADVANCE AND DISCOUNT COMPANY, Limited.—Cash advanced from £10 to £500, without preliminary fees or deductions for interest, for short or long periods, repayable by easy instalments, at moderate rates, upon approved security. Bills Discounted. Forms free. Offices, 57 and 58, Chancery-lane, W.C.—JOHN STONE, Secretary.

The List of Applications will open on Saturday, the 21st November, and close for London and Country on or before Tuesday, the 24th November, 1896, at 4 p.m.

PAQUIN, LIMITED,

3 & 5, Rue de la Paix, Paris, & 39, Dover-street, London, W.

Incorporated under the Companies Acts, 1862 to 1890.

CAPITAL - £500,000,

Divided into

50,000 Cumulative Six per Cent. Preference Shares of £5 each; the Dividend of six per cent. per annum will be guaranteed for five years by the deposit with the Bankers of the Company in London of English Consols and French Rentes of £75,000 value.

250,000 Ordinary Shares of £1 each, of which 83,333 will be allotted in part payment of the purchase price; the remaining

166,667 Ordinary Shares and 50,000 Preference Shares,

Including £100,000, which has been guaranteed for Working Capital, exclusive of Stock,

ARE NOW OFFERED FOR SUBSCRIPTION.

Payable as follows:—Preference Shares: £1 per Share on Application, £1 per Share on Allotment, and £3 on the 28th December, 1896. Ordinary Shares: 5s. per Share on Application, 5s. per Share on Allotment, and 10s. on the 28th December, 1896.

The Preference Shares will be entitled out of the profits to a fixed Cumulative Preferential Dividend of 6 per cent. per annum, payable half-yearly on the 1st January and 1st July in each year. Payment of the Dividend on the Preference Shares has been guaranteed for five years; they will also be entitled to rank in respect of Capital on the Property and Assets of the Company in priority to the Ordinary Shares. The first Dividend will be calculated from the dates of the Instalments.

After payment of 6 per cent. dividend on the Preference Shares, 20 per cent. of the surplus net profit will be set aside for the formation of a reserve fund, until the same, together with the Working Capital, shall reach the sum of £250,000, or equivalent to the full amount of the Preference Share Capital.

The Preference Shares will be the first capital charge upon the undertaking, and no Debenture Debt or Mortgages will be created unless authorised by a resolution of three-fourths of the Shareholders at a special meeting.

DIRECTORS.

J. BARKER, J.P. (John Barker & Co., Limited), Chairman.
A. J. NEWTON, J.P., Chairman Harrod's Stores, Ltd.; and J. R. Roberts' Stores, Ltd.
JAMES BAILEY, M.P., Director D. H. Evans & Co, Ltd; and Spiers and Pond, Ltd.
PAUL BERNHARD (Bernhard, Carpentier & Co., Bankers), Paris.
ISIDORE PAQUIN, Managing Director, Rue de la Paix, Paris.

Bankers.—PARR'S BANK, LIMITED, Bartholomew-lane, E.C.

Brokers.—JOHN PRUST & CO., 37, Throgmorton-street, E.C.

Solicitor.—ALFRED R. GERY, 2, Vere-street, Oxford-street, W.

Auditors.—CHATTERIS, NICHOLS, & CO., 1, Queen Victoria-street, E.C

Secretary (pro tem.) and Offices.—THOMAS NEVELL, 1, Leadenhall-buildings, Leadenhall-street, E.C.

ABRIDGED PROSPECTUS.

This Company has been formed to acquire as a going concern and extend the prosperous business of Messrs. Paquin & Co., the well-known Ladies' Dress, Robe, and Mantle Makers, Rue de la Paix, Paris.

The marvellous success of this business, as shown by the Accountants' certificate, has induced the proprietors to resolve upon a further important extension by opening a branch establishment in the West End of London, and suitable premises at 39, Dover-street, Mayfair, W., have been acquired on very favourable terms.

The history of this business is probably one of the most remarkable ever told in connection with industrial successes.

The firm of Paquin & Co., as at present constituted, began business in 1891 on a very moderate scale, with a working capital of less than £8,000, with which, owing to the exceptional ability and taste of both Mr. and Madame Paquin, profitable results were obtained even during the first year's working, so that after providing for Mr. Paquin's personal remuneration, the balance-sheet for

1891 showed a net profit of	Francs	15,803	(£632)
1892 ,, ,, ...	,,	96,854	(£3,874)
1893 ,, ,, ...	,,	315,828	(£12,633)
1894 ,, ,, ...	,,	821,053	(£32,842)
1895 ,, ,, ...	,,	1,170,994	(£46,839)
whilst for 1896 the net profits are estimated at about	,,	1,500,000	(£60,000)

The books and accounts have been verified by Messrs. Chatteris, Nichols, & Co, Chartered Accountants.

During the first nine months of 1896 the turnover was 31 per cent. greater than during the corresponding period of 1895; Mr. Paquin therefore confidently expects that the net profits for 1896 will show a corresponding increase.

Taking, however, the net profit at only £60,000 a year as a basis, there will be required to pay:—

6 per cent. Dividend on the Preference Shares ...	£15,000
10 per cent. Dividend on the Ordinary Shares ...	25,000
Total	£40,000

leaving a surplus of £20,000 for reserve, bonus to Mr. and Madame Paquin, and additional dividend on the Ordinary Shares above 10 per cent.

It will thus be seen that the present net income covers the amount required for payment of dividend on the Preference Shares about four times over.

The subscription of a part of the present issue has been guaranteed by the Directors and the Vendors' friends, sufficient to secure the £100,000 cash payable on account of purchase-money, and the £100,000 for working capital.

Complete prospectuses, containing information respecting contracts entered into, will be advertised in Saturday's daily papers, and can be obtained, with forms of application, from Parr's Bank, Limited, Bartholomew-lane, E.C.; or at the offices of the Company, 1, Leadenhall-buildings, Leadenhall-street, E.C.

London, 18th November, 1896.

PLAYER'S

Beautifully Cool and Sweet Smoking.

The Original NAVY CUT

PLAYER'S NAVY CUT TOBACCO is sold only in 1-oz. Packets, and 2, 4, and 8-oz. and 1-lb. Tins, which keep the Tobacco in Fine Smoking Condition. Ask at all Tobacco Sellers, Stores, &c., and take no other. The genuine bears the Trade Mark, "NOTTINGHAM CASTLE," on every Packet and Tin.

PLAYER'S NAVY CUT CIGARETTES are sold in Packets of 12, and Tins containing 24, 50, and 100.

Also supplied in a new size—"MAGNUMS"—packed in Pocket Tins containing 16; and in 50's and 100's.

A MASTER KEY

of this SIZE

Can be made to open any number of Locks. Many Ladies and Gentlemen have the whole of their locks so arranged that a MASTER KEY, so small as to be worn in a finger-ring or locket, will open every lock they possess—from their Dressing Bags, Trunks, Jewel Cases, Despatch Boxes, &c., to the Front Door, Wine Cellar, Park Gates, &c. Just think of the Convenience! The locks are made in suites, each suite with its own key, so that the ladies' maid or valet can open the luggage, the butler the wine cellar, and so on, but the suite keys are of no use for any but their own series.

For Prices and Particulars apply to—

NEEDS & CO. Late BRAMAH & CO.

Sole Manufacturers of the real Bramah Locks,

100, NEW BOND STREET, LONDON, W.

BRAMAH JEWEL SAFES,

BURGLAR AND FIRE RESISTING, SPECIALLY ADAPTED FOR BED AND DRESSING ROOMS.

Specialities in fitted Suite Cases and Dressing Bags, Jewel Cases, Despatch and Deed Boxes, Bramah Street Door Latches, with small keys, Bramah Padlocks for Bicycles, with Leather-covered Chains, &c. &c.

NEW ILLUSTRATED CATALOGUES POST FREE.

ROAD SKATING.

Practising Saloon for Ladies

With Lady Attendant.

It only requires a little practice on the NEW RITTER ROAD SKATE to enable anyone who has never had on a pair of skates to attain proficiency, and be able to skate on the roads at any speed up to 16 miles an hour.

CAN BE SEEN AND TRIED AT THE ROAD SKATE CO.'S Show Rooms

271, OXFORD STREET, W.

SINGER

Grand "Modèle de Luxe"

HIGHEST GRADE CYCLES ONLY.

Prompt Delivery may now be had.

SINGER & CO. LTD., COVENTRY.

LONDON: 17, HOLBORN VIADUCT.

In Bottles, 2s. 9d. and 4s. 6d. Sold Everywhere. Over 4,000 Testimonials received from Medical Men.

Sole Manufacturers COLEMAN & CO. Lim. Norwich & London.

OUR PUZZLES.

"TRUTH" PUZZLE, No. 925.—ACROSTIC ON "VICTORIA."

SCRIVENER (real name and address will be published in due course) £2 2 0

"TRUTH" DOLL AND TOY SHOW.—SPECIAL NOTICE.

In the last number of TRUTH an important notice was printed as to the Prizes to be given in connection with the coming Show. It may be well to remind those ladies who are dressing dolls that it will be necessary for the latter to be returned to this office by the middle of December at the latest.

CONDENSED RULES.

All answers to the current Puzzle must be sent in on or before the morning of the Monday week following the date of that Puzzle's publication, to the PUZZLE EDITOR, TRUTH Buildings, Carteret-street, Queen Anne's-gate, London, S.W. The answers must be signed by a nom de plume of not more than twelve letters, and must not be sent on post-cards, nor by telegraph, nor by hand; whilst in the case of new competitors the real name and address must be forwarded with the first reply sent.

"TRUTH" PUZZLE, No. 926.

The Prize in this Competition will be awarded when Competition No. 929 is decided.

"TRUTH" PUZZLE, No. 930.

The usual Prize of Two Guineas is offered this week for—

THE BEST SUGGESTION OF A NEW ROUND GAME SUITABLE FOR A CHRISTMAS PARTY.

Competitors will please make their details of the suggested games as brief as possible, taking care, of course, at the same time to make them intelligible. All answers must reach me by the morning of Monday, November 30, at the latest.

ANSWERS TO CORRESPONDENTS.

 The real name, with the address, of ANALYST, winner of Prize No. 910, is C. H. Southwell, Esq., 94, West-street, Boston.

 The real name, with the address, of VITI, winner of a half of Prize No. 918, is Francis E. Palmer, Esq., Hillsyde, Seaton, Devon.

 The real name, with the address, of BOWZER, winner of a half of Prize No. 924, is A. H. Barron, Esq., Cheam, Surrey.

NITRAM.—I have no objection to the proposed change being made.

KOORAH.—Your letter was delayed in its transit to me, or I would have answered it before.

EBORACUM.—Your points shall have my consideration.

NEW ZEALAND, PANSY, and LADY ALICIA.—Your conundrums arrived too late to be printed with the others last week.

CULPEPPER.—I have received your amended line.

PETO and LITTLE OXENHOLD.—I am obliged to you for your letters.

THE PUZZLE EDITOR.

"TRUTH" PUZZLE, No. 927.—ASSORTED SPECIMENS—GOOD AND OTHERWISE.

ORIGINAL SONGS SUITABLE TO BE SET TO MUSIC.

THE BLACK PITCH.*

"Oh! wild is the night," said the Maid of Ross,
"My heart grows faint with fear;
Oh! is it the light from your castle height
That flames thro' the darkness rear?"
"Not far need we ride, my bonnie bride,"
With a scornful smile, said he,
But his face grew white as he clasped her tight
And kissed her tenderly.
"Oh! haste, oh! haste," cried the Maid of Ross,
"For near lies the 'Black Pitch' land—
I fear the place of the lawless race,
The hated gipsy band;
And when I rule in your castle home,
And you my pride shall be,
With sword and scout you'll drive them out
For love of me," said she.

. . . . . .

Then down he stepped to his horse's side,
And bared his breast to his bonny bride—
"Take, take my sword and do the thing,
For I am the 'Black Pitch' Gipsy King!"

* An old gipsy camp near Warwick.

Dulce.

TO CYNTHIA.

What time the stars, like silver lamps,
In heaven begin to burn,
My thoughts, as sunflowers to the sun,
To Cynthia's fairness turn.
When sweet the nightingale begins
His song where joy is pain,
Her voice takes up my 'plaint of love,
And sighs it back again.

What time the moon in crescent fair
Doth rise to mourn the sun,
What time the rose's flowers are bowed
In slumber every one.
I gaze on Cynthia's hazel eyes,
Twin lakes of love, and dare
To hope, because my question finds
Its answer written there.

Unsigned.

LOVE THE SORCERER.

If Wizard Love my friend would be,
And heed my earnest call,
His mantle might he lend to me—
Invisible to all;
So whereso'e'er my darling strayed,
By moor or meadow green,
Secure in magic cloak arrayed,
I'd watch her steps unseen.

And Love to me might lend perchance
His magic mirror rare;
Within the glass need I but glance
To see my darling there;
By magic aid to compass space,
To gaze o'er land and sea,
Afar to where, with raptur'd face,
She smiles, and thinks of me.

And Love his magic power might wield
A wishing-cap to frame;
The secret to mine eyes revealed,
One wish alone I'd claim.
With magic pace to speed amain
(Eyes shut and heart afire!),
Far, far, o'er shore and sea to gain,
The Land of "Heart's Desire!"

Vallima.

THE BELFRY TOWER.

Recitative.

The loud-toned chime, from out the belfry tower,
Proclaims to all around the vesper hour;
Its mighty tones peal thro' the evening air,
And call the passer-by to praise and prayer,

Air.

A little child creeps to the old church door,
And gazes at each one who enters there,
His clothes are ragged, and his feet are sore;
His eyes are hollow, and his young head bare.
Too grand a place, he thinks, for such as he
To dare to enter 'midst the well-dressed throng;
And so he listens long and eagerly,
While loud on high the choir send up their song—

Father of Heaven, Creator blest,
Give weary ones eternal rest;
On rich and poor Thy blessings pour,
And teach us humbly to adore.

The music fills his heart with rapture sweet,
And makes him long within the church to pray;
Thro' all his frame the little pulses beat,
And urge him on to join the people gay.
It is for all men, be they old or young,
To praise their God thro' all the ages long—
And so one more is brought in heart and tongue
To join in singing with the choir their song:—

Father of Heaven, &c.

J. C. Crawford.

PLANTATION SONG.—"THE HAPPY DAYS OF YORE."

Dinah, I am sittin' by my lonely cabin door,
In de shadow of de ole 'simmon tree;
They say de sun's declinin', they say de stars am shinin',
But, honey, 'tis your face alone I see.
Now you're gone, my gentle Dinah, in de fields of light to dwell,
I think I see you on de shinin' shore;
For I loved you, O my Dinah, more than words can ebber tell,
In de bright and happy days that are no more.

Dinah, I am lookin' at de cradle and de chair
Dat am empty—and I brush away de tear,
They say de coons am hummin', they say de banjo's strummin',
But, honey, 'tis your voice alone I hear.
Since you've gone, my gentle Dinah, in de fields of light to dwell,
I think I hear you singin' on de shore;
And I miss you, O my Dinah, more than words can ebber tell,
For I loved you in the happy days of yore.

Dinah, O my Dinah, gone for ebber from my side,
With de picaniuny sleepin' at your breast;
De days am dark and dreary, my life am sad and weary,
And I'm lonely since you both have gone to rest.
I am longin', gentle Dinah, in de fields of light to dwell,
Where you're waitin' for me on de shinin' shore;
For I miss you, O my Dinah, and dis broken heart can tell
How I loved you in de happy days of yore.

Georgina.

FASCINATION.

"Les yeux bleus vont aux cieux
Les yeux gris vont au Paradis,
Les yeux verts vont Enfer."

The eyes I love are blue, are blue,
Truth dwells within, they're heaven's own hue
The eyes I love.

The eyes I trust are grey, are grey,
Fringed with dark lashes, like a winter's day
The eyes I trust.

The eyes I fear are green, are green,
Their light unholy—what those glances mean
I fear.

Dear eyes of blue,
Oh! tender eyes of grey,
The eyes I loved, and trusted, yesterday—
But those that hold me now,
With glittering sheen, are green, alas!
Are green, are green.

Queen Anne.

TAKE-IT-EASY LAND.

There's a land apart from this world unblest,
Whither fancy shall serve as guide;
Where men for a while find peace and rest,
And lay all their cares aside.
Once a day you can visit this realm of bliss,
And the way, as I understand,
Is across the deep, in the vessel of sleep,
To Take-it-easy Land.

'Tis the fairest land that was ever seen,
And its sky is always blue,
And nobody asks you where you've been,
Or what you are going to do.
You can lie on the shore, and dream all day,
By a pleasant sea-breeze fanned;
Too quick, they say, time flits away
In Take-it-easy Land.

Then, come, let us leave this world of strife,
With its endless toil and worry,
Where only a few know the joys of life,
And the rest but its maddening hurry;
Let us hasten away to the Slumber Sea,
Let the boat of sleep be manned,
And, nodding slow, away we go
To Take-it-easy Land.

Wandering Jew.

THE OLD LOVER AND THE NEW.

In the good old days that the simple lays
Of our fathers celebrate,
Now in language terse, and anon in verse,
Improper for me to state,
'Twas a common thing for a knight to bring
And lay at his lady's feet
The great big head of some monster dread—
Moustaches and all complete.

Singing, "Lady, thou at whose shrine I bow,
The chiefest of devotees,
Of thy slave dost ask the valorous task
Of the ancient Hercules;
That 'twas he who slew the Hydra, you
Of course with delight have read,
And like him I have lopp'd and cropp'd and chopp'd
Off many an ugly head."

It may now be said that there is no head
Good enough to decapitate,
So the only deeds that a mistress needs
Are the deeds of a fine estate;

Neither heart nor soul but a long rent-roll
If the lover his own can call,
He may win and wear his lady fair,
With never a head at all. Waynflete.

MIDLOTHIAN'S FAIREST DAUGHTER.

In blithesome mood, from wynd and street
I once was wont to sally,
And westward wend with willing feet
My way through yonder valley.
'Twas sweet to hear adown the dell
The music of Leith-Water,
For on its smiling banks did dwell
Midlothian's fairest daughter.

Ah, me! the fond enchantment now
Has vanished from the scene,
Nor bluer is yon Pentland brow
Than other hills I ween.
Now many a stream more blithely flows,
Than flows the sad Leith-Water;
Midlothian's vale no longer knows
Midlothian's fairest daughter.

What scenes the loveless oft despise,
Thou, Love, canst clothe with splendour,
And beautiful to lovers' eyes
The grimmest wild canst render;
Since thou couldst paint the Pentland chain
And tune Leith's laughing water.
O why, O why, couldst not retain Midlothian's fairest daughter.? Collis.

A SLUMBER SONG.

Close, lovely eyes, that dark lashes shade
With a shy, imperious air;
Close on the world that her love has made
As blithe as herself, as fair
As the pearly cheek where the blush still lies.
Close, lovely eyes!

Part, lovely lips, whence the dear words well,
That live in her tender soul;
Part, that her breath, in its fragrant swell
May reach to the rose, its goal.
As one pink leaf from another slips.
Part, lovely lips!

Curl, lovely hair, on the pillow spread
In a wonderful golden mist;
Curl round the nestling, wayward head
In the ringlets and tendrils you list.
To touch the glitter I hardly dare!
Curl, lovely hair!

Rest, lovely life, through the dark, soft hours
That woo you from day's long joy;
Rest, like the breezes and birds and the flowers,
From your beautiful, bright employ,
Till I claim you back with a kiss, sweet wife!
Rest, lovely life.
Koorah.

THE DESERTED DAMSEL.

(For a Sullivanesque strain.)

You silly little maiden with the tears upon your cheek,
I really wonder whether you've been weeping for a week.
Are you mourning for a lover who is fickle, do you say?
Come dry your pretty eyes and put your handkerchief away.
But since your sorrow shows a bit
Put powder on your nose a bit
(I know the habit grows a bit)
To hide from the inquisitive and interfering eye
Your nasal rubicundity,
With cynical profundity
Make mock o' love your one ditty,
And probably you'll get a satisfactory reply.

But, after all, supposing that the Johnny doesn't choose,
I warrant there are dozens who will step into his shoes.
So, pretty one, remember, be as merry as you can,
'Tis the proper hunting humour, when the quarry is a man.
And mind whatever checks a sigh's
The best of mental exercise;
But if to too complex a size
The list of your adorers should unhappily attain,
Then curl your pretty fringe and see
Your cheeks a proper tinge, and see
You set to work with stringency
To captivate a party who is likely to remain.
Twins.

Songs have been received from:—Burgage, W. M., Vailima, E W. S. B., R. Martin, Fidelc, Irma Lee, Collis, Lichfield, Libra, Grasmere, Lloyd Wollen, Emily, Bowzer, Espoir II., Septuagenarian, Twins, E. L. T., Miriam, Laurista Carlud, Baritone, Jeff, Henriette, Stephanotis, Little Oxenbold, Jap, Luda, Rugeley, Sol, Alison, Yiezil, Farlewell, Miriam II., Oom Paul, Queen Anne, Kathleen, Ethmold, W. Wynn, Winifred H., North Countrie, Esperanza, P. J. Dear, Koorah, Warrior, Maiden, Malaprop, Clewe, Eglantine, Venture, Tapch, Clara, Rex, Pan, Relwof, Rouge Gorge, Islander, Wandering Jew, Datis, Lady Alicla, Iota, Forget-me-not, Pansy, Rev. J. C. Crawford, Norfolk, Scandeus, J. McGrigor Allan, Free Lance, Matches, Jeannie, Pando, A. Parker, Espoir, Culpepper, Lethe, Georgina, Janet, Dulce, Waynflete, Ottile, Bird, Swansea, Ina, Sylvanus, Rekrap, Peto, Ethelon, Phyllis, Pivot, Noiram, Pelican, Ivy, Leaves, Bird, Swansea, Autumn Crocus, Canaker, Almaviva, Rob Roy, David, Sergeant, Emla, Ash, Christie Deas, B. E. R., Ermengarde, K. M. B, W. J., C. C., R. R., Leeda, Lancashire, W. C. H., Pastry, Salop, R. Rob, Nadejdo, Gurkha, C. D., Kingston, C. A., W., Coalheaver, Londoner, St. Neiac, Malignant, E. Bowcher.

The Perfect Food.
Prepared from the Finest Grain.
TRITICINE
Highly Recommended by the Medical Press, and Prescribed by the Medical Profession.
The IDEAL FOOD for INFANTS and INVALIDS.
TRADE MARK
TRITICINE is recommended by the Medical Faculty, as containing all the elements necessary in the constitution of a perfect Food; it also contains the albuminous or flesh-forming ingredients in an unusually large proportion, as well as all the properties which are necessary to form both bone and muscle. A FOOD FOR THE MOST DELICATELY CONSTITUTED. Guaranteed to remain on the weakest of stomachs. Makes delicious Puddings; and can be used with great advantage in place of Bread Crumbs for Browning, Frying Soles, &c. It is satisfying, and easily digested, and is equally suited to the requirements of the young, the old, the weak, and the strong.
The Sale of TRITICINE has increased 4,000 per cent. during the last three months.
Price 1s. 3d. per Tin; Post free, 1s. 6d. H. GOODALL & SONS, Millers, CASTLEFORD, And of all Chemists and Grocers.

CHIVERS'
DELICIOUS. WHOLESOME. REFRESHING.
Prepared in silver-lined pans. Highly prized by all. Flavoured with Ripe Fruit Juices.
Dr. GORDON STABLES, R.N. says:—'Jellies that really add to our health and luxury.'
GOLD MEDAL
½-PINTS, 2½d. PINTS, 4½d. QUARTS, 8d.
S. CHIVERS & SONS, Proprietors of the First English Fruit Farm Jam Factory, Histon, Cambridge.
CHIVERS' PATENT CUSTARDS and BLANC MANGES—2d. and 3d. packets and 6d. boxes — two more delicious and digestible additions to the dinner and supper table. Made by simply adding milk and boiling.
CHIVERS' 1st PRIZE JAMS. The Royal Commission on Agriculture, in its report (1895), says: "Messrs. Chivers' Factory at Histon . . is now well-known throughout the country for the excellence of its manufactures."
JELLIES.

Ask Your Grocer FOR HELM-COCOA.

USED BY HER MAJESTY THE QUEEN
CLARKE'S PYRAMID NIGHT LIGHTS
THE ONLY SAFE NIGHT LIGHTS.
THE BURGLAR'S HORROR.
FAR, FAR, AND AWAY THE BEST.
Should be lighted in a front and back room in every house as soon as it is dark.
N.B.—No PARAFFIN or other DANGEROUS MATERIAL used in the manufacture. No water required.
Single Wicks, in boxes containing 8 lights, to burn 9 hours; or 12 lights, to burn 6 hours.
SOLD EVERYWHERE.
Clarke's Pyramid and Fairy Light Co., Ltd., CRICKLEWOOD, LONDON, N.W.

SPHAGNOL
ENGLISH PEAT
SMOKELESS AND SANITARY FUEL
Price—1,000 LOGS FOR 20s.
TRUTH says:—"I have burnt the blocks on the top of a coal fire, and I find that the peat seems to act as a smoke consumer,"
Send order, or write for leaflet.
Sole Agents—CHAMBERLAIN & CO., 10, HART STREET, BLOOMSBURY, W.C.
(One minute from Mudie's Library).

Goddard's Plate Powder
SIX GOLD MEDALS
Non-Mercurial.
THE BEST and SAFEST article for CLEANING SILVER and ELECTRO PLATE. Sold in Boxes, 1s., 2s. 6d., and 4s. 6d. each, by Grocers, Oilmen, Chemists, &c., everywhere.

Genuine Old Welch Dressers

(Inlaid and Carved Oak), from £6. 10s.

ILLUSTRATED PRICED CATALOGUES POST FREE.
ALL GOODS CARRIAGE PAID TO ANY STATION IN GREAT BRITAIN.

HEWETSONS,

TOTTENHAM COURT ROAD, London, W.

£20 TOBACCONISTS COMMENCING. Illd. guide (259 pages), 3d., "How to open respectably £20 to £2,000." Tobacconists' Outfitting Co., 186, Euston-rd., London. Mngr. H. MYERS, Est. 1866.

CARTER 6A, NEW CAVENDISH ST. PORTLAND PLACE, LONDON.

ONLY ADDRESS OF ORIGINAL CARTER

LITERARY MACHINE.

For holding book, lamp, meals, &c., in any position over an easychair, bed, or sofa. Deliciously luxurious. A most useful gift. Prices from 17/6

INVALID FURNITURE.
ADJUSTABLE COUCHES and BEDS from £1. 10/-

Bed Lift £3. 10/-
Reclining Boards, 25/-
Walking Machines
Portable W.C.'s.
Electric Bells, Urinals, &c.
Air & Water Beds.
Bed Rests 7/6
Leg Rests 10/-
Crutches 10/6
Bed Baths 12/6
Commodes, £1. 5/-

Carrying Chairs from £1.
Breakfast in Bed Tables from 30/-

Self-Propelling Chairs from £2

BATH CHAIRS FROM £1. 5/-

ILLUSTRATED CATALOGUES POST FREE.

JOHN CARTER, 6a, NEW CAVENDISH ST. Portland-pl London, W.

REVERSIONS and LIFE INTERESTS in LANDED or FUNDED PROPERTY or other Securities and Annuities PURCHASED, or Loans or Annuities thereon granted, by the EQUITABLE REVERSIONARY INTEREST SOCIETY, LIMITED, 10, Lancaster-place, Waterloo Bridge, Strand, Established 1835. Capital £500,000. Interest on Loans may be capitalised.

The most popular and most appreciative since 20 years.

FRANZ JOSEF Aperient Water is the BEST.

The only Palatable Natural Aperient Water.

THERE IS ONLY ONE
Pill to a dose of

CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS.

AND THERE IS ONLY ONE GENUINE PACKAGE.
It is EXACTLY like this, only the wrapper is printed in blue on white.

The vial contains forty pills, and costs 1s. 1½d. at the Chemist's. This is cheaper than pennyworths of doubtfully compounded pills. It is but a trifle over a farthing a dose, for ONE PILL IS A DOSE, though they are so small that FORTY-NINE of them only measure one inch square.

Cure TORPID LIVER WITHOUT FAIL, SICK HEADACHE, MALAISE, DISTRESS FROM EATING, and SALLOW COMPLEXION promptly done away with.

BRITISH DEPOT FOR
CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS
46, HOLBORN VIADUCT, LONDON. E.C.

"BUT BE SURE THEY ARE CARTER'S."

ST. RAPHAËL
TANNIN

ST. RAPHAËL
WINE

ST. RAPHAËL
TANNIN

ST. RAPHAËL
WINE

A BLOOD-MAKING WINE.—Best known and largely prescribed in all cases of debility, scrofula, anæmia, phthisis, convalescence.—Blood-Making Wine. Most valuable for growing girls, children, ladies nursing, old people, and brain exhaustion. A Natural Tonic, not to be confounded with preparations so much advertised for nervous diseases, or soothing in cases of insomnia, hunger, &c. Of an Exquisite Taste, invaluable as a tonic, efficacious, and pleasant.

E. GALLAIS, Sole Agent, 90, Piccadilly, London, W.

FOR YOUTHFUL APPEARANCE. ✣ BEAUTIFUL HAIR.

IMPERIAL HAIR DYES &c

ONE LIQUID.

No. 1.—Black.
No. 2.—Dark Brown.
No. 3.—Light Brown.
No. 4.—Golden Brown or Auburn.
No. 5.—Pure Golden.
No. 6.—IMPERIAL HAIR GROWER.

Harmless, Perfect, Permanent, and Odourless.
A Medical Certificate with each bottle.

2/6, 3/6, 5/- & 10/6 (Secretly Packed).

J. BRODIE, 41, Museum-st. London.
ESTABLISHED 1868. ONCE TRIED, ALWAYS USED.

STRAINED VISION.

DISTRESSING HEADACHES, indigestion, simulated neuralgia, and nervous depression, are frequently caused by some peculiarity of the Vision, which can at once be overcome by the use of proper glasses. See "OUR EYES" (Now in its Sixteenth Edition), price 1s.; by JOHN BROWNING, F.R.A.S., F.R.M.S., President of the British Optical Association, &c.
Or consult, free of charge—
MR. JOHN BROWNING,
OPHTHALMIC OPTICIAN,
63, STRAND, LONDON, W.C.

ROYAL EXCHANGE
ASSURANCE.

SETTLEMENT POLICIES
Guaranteeing FIVE PER CENT. on the sum assured. No Trustees Required.

DEATH DUTIES
Provided for by a small annual payment through life.

ANNUITIES
Special Terms for Impaired Lives.

For Rates, apply to the Secretary,
Chief Office—ROYAL EXCHANGE, LONDON.

A WONDERFUL MEDICINE

BEECHAM'S PILLS

Have been before the Public for more than fifty years, and have now the greatest sale of any Proprietary article. This has been achieved without the publication of testimonials, the convincing fact is, that BEECHAM'S PILLS RECOMMEND THEMSELVES.

WORTH A GUINEA A BOX

FOR ALL
Bilious & Nervous Disorders
SUCH AS
Sick Headache, Constipation, Weak Stomach, Impaired Digestion, Disordered Liver and Female Ailments.

Annual Sale, SIX MILLION BOXES.

Sold everywhere in boxes 9½d., 13½d. and 2/9 each.

IZOD'S

LONG WAISTED. A GREAT SUCCESS.
THE LONG WAISTED.

200 Dozen or 2,400 Pairs of this Celebrated Make alone delivered this season in London per Day. The great question of the day with all Ladies is the Fashion in Corsets, which grows year by year, until our Special Artistes have produced corsets for every type of figure.—
IZOD'S CORSETS are cut on scientific principles, with a precision of accuracy formerly unknown.—
IZOD'S draw Ladies' attention to their Long Waisted Corsets, which have been designed by their British and Foreign Artistes, which are the best the world produces.—
The Ladies' Tailors always recommend these celebrated goods for the elegance with which they set off a tailor-made dress and create a long waist and graceful figure. They are made in a variety of qualities, and are beautiful and inexpensive. Every pair stamped on busk Izod's Long Waisted, and also on lid of the box.—
To be had of all Drapers and Ladies' Outfitters in Europe, India Canada, United States, Australia, the whole of the British Colonies, and throughout the world.—
Write for our Sheet of Drawings.

IZOD'S LONG WAISTED E. IZOD & SON, 30, MILK ST., LONDON, E.C.
Manufactory: LANDPORT, HANTS.

RIDE SWIFT CYCLES

They are manufactured by the pioneer firm of the cycle industry, and the result of a quarter of a century's experience by practical cyclists and experts, which is responsible for the world-wide reputation of these famous machines.

THE SWIFT CYCLE CO., LTD.

Showrooms—15 & 16, HOLBORN VIADUCT, E.C. (LATE COVENTRY MACHINISTS' CO.) WORKS IN COVENTRY.

Printed for the Proprietor by WYMAN & SONS, Limited, Great Queen-st. W.C. and published at 10, Bolt-ct. Fleet-st. E.C. in the Parish of St. Dunstan's-in-the-West, in the City of London. Cheques and Post Office Orders should be made payable to REGINALD E. BOOKER, "Truth" Buildings, Carteret-st. Queen Anne's-gate, S.W.

• TRUTH •

"Cultores Veritatis Fraudis Inimici."—Cicero.

No. 1039. Vol. XL. Thursday, November 26, 1896. Price Sixpence.

NOTICE.

The Twentieth Christmas Number of TRUTH,

ENTITLED

LIHUNGISMS,

Will be published on THURSDAY, DECEMBER 3RD.

PRICE ONE SHILLING.

It will be profusely illustrated by Mr. R. A. Brownlie and Mr. Roland Hill.

The illustrations will include FOUR DOUBLE-PAGE CARTOONS and TWO SINGLE-PAGE CARTOONS (printed in colours):—

1. Checkmate.
2. Right v. Might.
3. Changing the Leader.
4. Motormania.
5. A Good Joke. (From Mr. Cecil Rhodes' point of view.)
6. A Good Joke. (From Dr. Jameson's point of view.)

In response to various communications which reach me on the subject, I beg to notify that the terms of Subscription to Truth, which are payable in advance, are as follows:—To any address in the United Kingdom, for 3 months, 7s.; 6 months, 14s.; and for 12 months, 28s. The Thin Paper Edition is forwarded to countries within the Postal Union for 3 months for 7s. 8d.; 6 months, 15s. 4d.; and 12 months, 30s. 8d. Cheques and Post Office Orders should be made payable to the Manager, Truth, "Truth Building," Carteret-street, S.W.

ENTRE NOUS.

THE Queen is to hold an Investiture of the Bath, the St. Michael and St. George, and the Indian orders before the Court leaves Windsor for Osborne, and several individuals will then be knighted. There will also be a Council, when Parliament is to be called for the despatch of business.

The Prince and Princess of Wales and Princess Victoria are to pay a visit shortly to Lord and Lady Derby at Knowsley Park, Lancashire, where Princess Louise is this week a guest. The Prince and Princess of Wales will entertain a shooting party at Sandringham next week.

The Crown Prince of Denmark and his eldest son Prince Christian, who are staying at Gmunden with the Duke and Duchess of Cumberland, are to arrive in London next week on a brief visit to England. They are to be the guests of the Prince and Princess of Wales at Marlborough House, and of Prince and Princess Charles at Appleton, and will also pay a visit to the Queen at Windsor Castle. The Crown Prince and Princess Christian will be accompanied on their return to Copenhagen by Prince and Princess Charles, who are to reside there in the new Palace of the King of the Hellenes, who has placed a large suite of apartments at their disposal.

I was amused to read in a morning paper last Wednesday, under the heading "In Society," that Princess Henry of Prussia and Princess Irene, sisters of the Empress of Russia, are to proceed to St. Petersburg in January for a fortnight. As a matter of fact, Princess Henry and Princess Irene are one and the same individual, and it so happens that H.R.H. is not going to St. Petersburg in January, but she is expected there about the end of March, in order that she may be with the Empress when her accouchement takes place, that event being due in April.

The Emperor of Austria must regret that he conferred the Order of the Golden Fleece upon the Duc d'Orléans with such precipitation, as there has since been a prodigious hurly-burly at the Court of Vienna, and the ruff-and-farthingale coteries, who are there all-powerful, are horrified at the discoveries which have been made. A Knight of the Golden Fleece must produce an unimpeachable pedigree for eight generations, and that number of his ancestors must have been Roman Catholics. It was imprudently taken for granted that there would be no flaw in the credentials of the Duc d'Orléans. Imagine, therefore, the consternation of the Austro-Hungarian aristocracy on learning, not only that the grandmother of the Duc d'Orléans (Princess Helen of Mecklenburg-Schwerin) lived and died a Protestant, but also that her ancestor, the Regent Orléans, married Mdlle. de Blois, an illegitimate daughter of Louis XIV. and Mme. de Montespan! If the Duc d'Orléans is to remain a Knight of the Golden Fleece, the statutes of the Order will have to be altered by the Emperor Francis Joseph, for his creation is invalid, as he is doubly disqualified.

Some of the German newspapers are commenting, with much asperity, on the fact that a second-hand bookseller at Frankfort is reported to be offering for sale a presentation copy of "Deutsche Gedenkblätter, 1870-71," a book written by the late Empress Augusta, and published by her in aid of the Patriotic Women's Aid Society. This copy was given by the late Empress to the Queen, and it contains the following inscription:—"To my dear Victoria, from her faithful sister, cousin, and friend, Augusta." It would be interesting to learn how on earth this book ever came into the hands of its present possessor. One can only suppose that it must have been stolen out of the library at Windsor Castle.

Colonel Davidson and Colonel Carington are to be the Equerries-in-Waiting on the Queen during December, replacing Colonel Byng and Major Legge.

A contemporary thinks it necessary to warn "the public" that they should "hold their hands" until the Queen has intimated her wishes "as to the direction which the offerings of her loyal subjects in celebration of the sixtieth anniversary of her illustrious reign shall take," and so forth. It seems to me that the floridly-worded caution is quite superfluous, for, although appeals are numerous, there does not seem to be any corresponding eagerness on the part of the "loyal subjects" to respond to them. Considering the desperate determination with which subscriptions were whipped up all over the country for Jubilee memorials only ten years ago, it cannot be reasonably expected that there will be a repetition of the lavish generosity of 1887. On that occasion the Royalties were all crazy about the Imperial Institute, and the vast sums of money which were so insanely squandered on that fantastical scheme might just as well have been shovelled into the Channel, for all the benefit that any section of "the public" has derived from it. My own opinion is that there will be no general disposition on the part of the "loyal subjects" to contribute "to some great national object," in addition to their own celebration of the anniversary.

The fact is that people are getting utterly sick and tired of the incessant demand for subscriptions for anniversaries, memorials, monuments, distressed foreigners, and church and charitable objects. Whenever an individual of the very slightest eminence in any walk of life now dies, some bustling, jobbing, self-advertising person appeals to the public to provide a memorial for the deceased, which usually takes the form of a fund on behalf of some object in which the person in question is interested.

By the way, I have been consulted by a professor in the North of England as to the best means of stopping the flow of appeals for a proposed "Public testimonial to Mr. Mark H. Judge." Perhaps if I suggest to the honorary secretary of the movement that he has done his duty when he has sent five or six of these appeals to the same individual, this hint will have the desired result. My correspondent suggests that if Mr. Judge is entitled to a testimonial, Professor Corfield, the honorary secretary, may eventually become entitled to one for his energy in puffing the movement.

For the TRUTH HOTEL LIST, see page 1398 in the present issue.
For HOSPITALS and APPEALS, see page 1396.
For AMUSEMENTS, see page 1397.
For OUR PUZZLES, see page 1413.

Lord Cadogan returned to Ireland early last week from England, and took up his residence at the Viceregal Lodge, to be joined there later on by Lady Cadogan. This week Lord and Lady Cadogan are spending in the South of Ireland with Lord and Lady Dunraven at Adare Manor, co. Limerick. A great ball, "to have the honour to meet their Excellencies," will be given by Lord and Lady Dunraven on Friday night. On such an occasion it is customary in Ireland for military guests on duty in the country to wear uniform. Etiquette does not require those who are on leave to do so. Adare Manor is a modern Tudor house, but within the demesne there are several beautiful and picturesque ruins, the most interesting being those of the Franciscan Friary, dating from the fifteenth century, and of Desmond Castle, the keep of which still stands surrounded by a moat. There are still, unfortunately, more ruins to be seen in Ireland than any signs of coming prosperity.

Malta is filling for the winter season, though the weather is still hot. The Governor, Sir Arthur Fremantle, and all the leading officials have returned. Sir Michael Culme Seymour, on his return with a portion of the Mediterranean fleet from the East, gives up his command. Sir J. Hopkins, his successor, is expected this week in the island. Prince and Princess Louis of Battenberg will again be in Malta for the season with their family. General Lord Congleton will also be there with Lady Congleton, as he is retaining his command. Although Malta has not been so much frequented since the "discovery" of Cairo, it is a very pleasant place to winter in, especially for those who are sociable rather than delicate. It is unique in one way, being one of the few resorts of the kind where a surplus feminine population does not prevail, but contrariwise.

The Lords of the Admiralty paid a short visit of official inspection to several places in the South of Ireland last week. Mr. Goschen afterwards went to stay with his daughter, Mrs. Roche, who resides in the county of Cork. Mr. Roche is a brother of Lord Fermoy's, another of whose brothers entered Parliament last year under the auspices of one party of the Irish Nationalists.

In reference to a recent remark of my correspondent, "Marmaduke," respecting the Queen's alleged aversion to type-written documents, I am credibly informed that a number of type-writers are in use in the Royal Household, and that a large quantity of type-written correspondence and documents passes before the notice of her Majesty. As this is a question of historical accuracy, I should add that my informant is the managing director of the company which supplies type-writers to the Royal Household, but I feel confident that I am only complying with the tacit desire of this gentleman in refraining from mentioning the name of his company.

WATER SUPPLY TO COUNTRY HOUSES.—Read "Water Supply to Mansions." The Times says, "a practical pamphlet." Post free.—MERRYWEATHERS, 63, Long-acre, London, W.C., & Greenwich, S.E

Mr. Farquharson, of Laughton, who died last week at the age of ninety, was one of the most popular landlords in Dorsetshire, and quite the last of the old school of squires in that county. He was the eldest son of Mr. J. J. Farquharson, who for many years hunted the whole of Dorsetshire, with two packs of foxhounds, at his own expense. Mr. Farquharson was a country gentleman of the best type, and a great favourite among all classes of his neighbours. He was a Tory, and was long Chairman of the Dorsetshire Conservative Association. He was the founder of the first Dorsetshire cricket club.

I am asked to mention that a ball in aid of the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children, will be held in St. Martin's Town Hall on Tuesday, December 15, the Countess of Ancaster, Lady Halsbury, the Countess of Iddesleigh, and Lady Mathew being among the patronesses. The Hon. Mrs. Stephen Coleridge, 7, Egerton Mansions, S.W., will supply tickets or further information.

Prior to the smoking concert of the Royal Amateur Orchestral Society last week, the Prince of Wales, the Duke of Coburg, the Duke of Cambridge, Prince Edward of Saxe-Weimar, and other notabilities who attended the concert, were entertained at dinner by Sir James Blyth, at 33, Portland-place.

"Can you tell me," asked a correspondent the other day, "whether it is no longer considered bad form to converse in a loud tone about one's private affairs in public places, and in the hearing of strangers?" I never pose as an authority on "the manners and tone of good society," but judging from the number of well dressed people whom one hears addressing their conversation to the world at large on railway platforms, in railway carriages, and in the streets, I conclude that the answer to my correspondent's question must be in the negative. Our forefathers certainly considered it the mark of a cad to shout out private conversation in public for the benefit of every chance hearer, but this is one of the matters in which, I take it, we have entirely abandoned the opinions of our ancestors.

So far as I am able to judge, indeed, it seems to be deemed specially becoming to advertise one's private affairs in this way whenever it is possible to introduce into the conversation the names of titled or distinguished personages, whose acquaintance the speaker is privileged to possess. The other day I was seated in a railway train, while a gentleman on the platform was discoursing with another in the carriage about their mutual affairs. At the last minute, just as the train was moving off, the speaker on the platform called out, "Please remember me very kindly to HER LADYSHIP." The last two words were shouted out at the top of the speaker's voice as the train moved off, the intention being, so far as I could judge, that they should be heard, not so much by the individual addressed, as by all those who were assembled on the platform to see the train off. As we departed I doubt not that we left the crowd gazing in admiration at the gentleman who was thus able to send his compliments to a "lady of title." One hears this sort of thing so often from people who are evidently moving in exalted circles, that I humbly conclude that it is now considered to be "good form."

This reminds me of a grievance which was brought under my notice the other day by a lady, namely, the lamentable need of some better method of marking the gradations of rank among the wives of titled men. The title "Lady" may mean anything, from the wife of a descendant of one of the barons of the Magna Charta, to the wife of a country mayor who got a knighthood last week—two points as wide asunder as the poles. It is a distressing thing to think of all the ladies between the top and the bottom of the social ladder being lumped together under one label without the slightest mark of the innumerable steps which separate them. What the remedy should be, I am not prepared to state; but it seems to me a question which the Primrose League ought to take up, and with a Conservative majority of one hundred and fifty in power, there ought to be no difficulty in providing effective measures of relief.

To be really in the charmed circle, nowadays, or to appear to be so, a person must not only know the titles borne by the great ladies, but also their Christian names. They are spoken of in familiar conversation as "Jenny," and "Polly," &c., and to this is sometimes added the lady's title, and sometimes it is left out. Thus, for instance, Lady Bareacres, would not be spoken of as "Lady Bareacres," but as "Polly Bareacres," or as "Polly," tout court. Only the other day I found myself thrown in the company of a lady, recently admitted (she is really) into the inner circle. It was all the time, "Jenny this," and "Polly that," much as it used to be in my young days in the now defunct Argyll Rooms.

In view of the approach of Christmas, a gentleman owning a country-house in one of the home counties is desirous of putting forward, through the columns of TRUTH, a suggestion for the benefit of other owners of country houses. Having been a traveller himself, this gentleman is much exercised about the forlorn condition of those strangers within our gates who are condemned to spend Christmas in hotels—more especially those who hail from the United States and the Colonies. So strong is his feeling, that he is prepared to receive four travellers of this class as his guests for three days at Christmas-time, and he thinks that there will be other owners of commodious country houses ready to follow his lead when the idea has been suggested to them. If such there are, Heaven forbid that I should stand in their way. There is not so much open-handed generosity of this kind now prevalent that one is called on to throw cold water on it. But I must confess that I don't feel quite so sanguine about my friend's idea as he does himself. Even he recognises that somebody must be found "to take the position of M.C., and be the medium of introducing those who would be eligible guests to those who would open their doors to them." How this indispensable individual is to be found, I confess I do not see, nor how he is to be responsible for the "eligibility" of all the floating population of the London hotels at Christmas-time. It is a responsibility that I should be sorry to undertake myself. Fancy the position of an "M.C." who had introduced Mr. and Mrs. Castle to a Christmas house-party!

A BEAUTIFUL HOTEL AT BOURNEMOUTH.—The "ROYAL BATH." "Hôtel de Luxe of the South." Sea frontage, 1,000 ft.; grounds, 5 acres. Due south. Only Hotel on East Cliff. Moderate fixed tariff.

Even granted the "M.C." and the satisfactory introductions, how many people are there who care about the risks of entertaining chance strangers of whose tastes and dispositions they know nothing? Only a few weeks back, in connection with the question of entertaining strangers for congresses, tennis tournaments, and other gatherings, I made the remark that most people would rather contribute to an entertainment fund than put up in their own houses people whom they don't know, and whom even the introducers don't know. And I fancy that the people who are most likely to take this view are the people who have tried the experiment of dispensing promiscuous hospitality, and are not altogether pleased with the result.

Henry Carey is supposed to have written the words of "God Save the Queen." They are—as words—not much above the ordinary trash which is dished up in a libretto to serve as a medium for music. But they have been sung so often that they have a quaint, old-world flavour of their own. It would seem that of late various divines, with more zeal than poetic genius, have been adding verses to the old jingle, which they practise on their congregations. Against all such additions I register a protest. If it pleases them, by all means let them write a new hymn to celebrate the sixtieth year of the Queen's reign; indeed, I suppose that the Poet Laureate will deem himself bound to do so. But they must not add one line to "God Save the Queen." They might just as well publish a new edition of the Gospels with a few verses of their own in mediæval English. Here is an effort which is due to the Vicar of Kew, and which was sung a short time ago in Kew Parish Church "at a service at which the Duke of Cambridge was present":—

Thanks for the sixty years,
Ripened hopes, scattered fears,
England has known.
Dark clouds have fled away,
Dawn has led on to day,
Love is our monarch's stay,
God bless her throne.

Poorer verse I seldom have read. By "scattered fears," the gifted author probably means that fears have been scattered and have vanished; but grammatically the words mean that we are thankful for fears having been scattered, i.e., spread, like "ripened hopes," over the sixty years that the Queen has reigned. What "dark clouds" have fled away? Did ever "dawn" not "lead on to day"? The "stay" in the last line but one is evidently dragged in because it rhymes with "away" and "day." "God bless her throne" is not to be compared to "God bless the Queen." The first is personal, the second is impersonal, and, as Napoleon said, a throne is four pieces of wood covered with velvet. If, when a Sovereign is popular, a verse to the glorification of the Sovereign is to be added to the National Anthem, this certainly opens a wide field, for it equally follows that, if a Sovereign is unpopular, a verse would have to be added not precisely to the Sovereign's glorification.

I am always grateful to the ladies and gentlemen who read TRUTH, and then send me lessons on English grammar, founded upon supposed errors that they have discovered in these columns. But I do not know that the result is always equivalent to the trouble taken by my instructors. For instance, a lady who signs herself "Americaine," takes the following sentence from last week's TRUTH, "One of the correspondents who have communicated with me opines, &c.," and tells me that if "opines" is in the singular number, the first verb should be "has" and not "have." I do not know anything about American grammar, and it is some time since I went to school, but the rule which I was taught was that a verb personal agrees with its subject in number and person. In the sentence quoted, the subject of "opines" is "one," and as "one" is certainly singular, "opines" must be singular also. Another rule that I learned was that the relative agrees with its antecedent in number, gender, &c. In the same sentence the antecedent of "who" is "correspondents." "Who" is therefore plural, and, by the rule that I quoted first, should have a verb in the plural following it. However I am no bigot, and I shall be very glad to reconsider my views if any one can show cause why these rules should be altered.

The interesting information was last week furnished to the readers of several daily papers, that "the Poet Laureate has been salmon-fishing in the Tweed, in the Lennel Water belonging to the Earl of Haddington, and the Sprouston Water belonging to Mr. Charles Balfour." The origin of this announcement appears to be a paragraph issued to the press by Messrs. Macmillan & Co., of which I have a copy before me—although by some oversight the information was not sent direct to this office. It is quite a new departure for the publishers of a poet—and a Poet Laureate, too—to stimulate interest in the bard by advertising his private movements. But I take it that this step has been thought desirable in view of recent comments on the silence of the inspired writer. He could not write, evidently, because he has been out fishing. For my part I am only sorry that we are so near the end of the angling season.

WINTER SEASON, 1896.—How can last year's Sealskin Jacket be made to do duty as a fashionable garment for the present season? Take it to the International Fur Store, either 163 or 198, Regent-street, where special attention is given to remodelling these most useful garments. Perfect fit, great attention, and moderate charges may be relied upon. The only addresses of the International Fur Store (Jay's, Ltd.) are 163 and 198, Regent-street, London, W.

"HÔTEL BURLINGTON," AT SUNNY BOSCOMBE. (200 rooms.) Every luxury. Delightful grounds. Magnificent golf links. Sea-water baths. Moderate charges.—Bournemouth East Station.

It is a fact worth notice, that the Southampton Art Society has just been holding an exhibition of sketches and drawings by the late Mr. Walter D'Elboux, and I understand that the exhibition has been highly successful, many of the pictures having been sold. Mr. D'Elboux, it will be remembered, is the gentleman who, after forty years' connection with the Ordnance Survey Office, recently died from an illness which was undoubtedly brought about by his receiving notice that if he could not work faster he would lose his berth.

In reply to the remarks in last week's TRUTH on rowing at St. Paul's School, I have had a letter from the captain of the School Rowing Club, which shows that plenty of evidence exists of the aquatic tastes of the present generation of Paulines. Although the club has not a local habitation and craft of its own, it is regularly in evidence on the river on holidays, has its regular races, and has furnished representatives to College eights and the University Trials. I remarked last week that if the existence of rowing talent was shown in this way, the funds for a boat-house and boats might be expected to follow. Now that the facts are known, I can only say that I hope my prediction will be speedily justified.

There has been a great deal of grumbling lately in Coventry and the neighbourhood against certain incidents connected with the management of the Coventry Grammar School, and the time seems to have arrived when the trustees of the school should intervene actively in what is going on. One of the most extraordinary of these incidents is the expulsion of a boy at the beginning of the present term, who had actually left the school at the end of the previous term. The boy had been treated in a very conspicuously unfair manner by the head-master during his last term in the school, and the pretext on which his formal expulsion was recorded was a most flimsy and insufficient one. The result of the boy's expulsion is that he was disqualified for an exhibition, and it is not to be wondered at, under all the circumstances of the case, that local opinion should see in this result the motive of the action taken.

A further matter for dissatisfaction is that the exhibition just referred to has been awarded to a boarder who is in no way connected with either the town or the county, but belongs to a very well-to-do family at Brighton. The exhibition in question should, by the terms of the foundation, be given to a "poor scholar" belonging to the county of Warwick or the city of Coventry, provided that a competent candidate is forthcoming, and there seems to have been at least one in the present instance. The truth seems to be that it has been the policy of the present head-master to convert the school into a boarding-school rather than a local grammar school, and that the preference thus given to a boarder is a result of this policy. The head-master has even gone so far as to receive girls as well as boys as boarders in his official residence. In another recent case a musical scholarship was awarded by the head-master, not to the boy whom the examiner placed at the head of the list, but to another boy who was placed fourth; but whether this step was taken for the benefit of one of the boarders I do not know. I understand that there has also been some difficulty between the head-master and the governors over the head-master's refusal to give any particulars of the expenditure of a sum of some £842 paid to him for salaries of masters. There seems, therefore, ample ground for calling upon the governors to assert themselves.

The Ford Lectures on English History are at last an accomplished fact at Oxford, after much delay and a great waste of money. Professor Rawson Gardiner has been appointed the first Lecturer, and he has wisely chosen a subject on which he is thoroughly qualified to speak with authority—the life and work of Cromwell. The Lecturer, who is to be elected every year, is to receive £100, and he must deliver six lectures. No Lecturer is eligible for re-election until four years have elapsed from the date of his appointment.

Canon Newbolt is to be the Canon-in-residence and Sunday-afternoon preacher at St. Paul's Cathedral during December, replacing Archdeacon Sinclair.

A correspondent writes:—

The St. James's Gazette relates a story of how the new Primate, having "entered a popular service in an East-end church," sang during a hymn "lustily, but not in tune," and was thereupon told to "dry up" by a working man. Like nearly all the other stories of the same kind which have been going about lately, this is a very venerable anecdote. The incident to which reference is intended to be made occurred early in Bishop Temple's Exeter episcopate (about 1871), at Brixham Church, in South Devon.

Lord Halsbury has made an excellent appointment to the living of Kensington. Canon Pennefather's Church views are similar to those of the present Vicar—the Bishop-designate of Peterborough—and he is an excellent organiser and administrator, fond of hard work, and an enthusiastic advocate for popular education. Canon Pennefather has been for some time Chairman of the Newcastle School Board, and at the last election he was returned at the head of the poll. He is widely known as being one of the most popular and most successful parish clergymen in the North of England. He is also an admirable preacher.

It is untrue that Mr. Gladstone offered the Primacy to Dean Vaughan in 1882, after Dean Church had refused to leave St. Paul's. Dean Vaughan would, no doubt, have reached Lambeth had he wished for such promotion, but, long before Archbishop Tait's death, he had deliberately

For Throat Irritation and Cough, "Epps's Glycerine Jujubes" always prove effective. They are now sold only in tins, price 7½d. & 1s. 1½d., labelled James Epps & Co., Ltd., Homœopathic Chemists.

W. & F. THORN'S SPECIALITY.—Job Carriages.—This is by far the best and cheapest way to keep an establishment, saving all trouble, annoyance, and expense. Carriages kept like new for small annual payments.—19, Gt. Portland-street, W.; Ranelagh House, Lower Grosvenor-place, S.W. London only.

put away from himself the great places of the Church of England. In 1856, Macaulay wrote: "The sooner Vaughan is made a bishop the better;" and Lord Palmerston offered the distinguished ecclesiastic mitre after mitre, including the see of Durham when Bishop Villiers died in 1861. Dr. Vaughan, however, had quite made up his mind that he would not accept a bishopric. Mr. Gladstone gave him the Mastership of the Temple in 1869, which was a piece of preferment that exactly suited him.

The Bishop of Hereford has given some excellent advice to young ladies. He warns them—and especially those of the upper middle class—not to ape men's manners and fashions, for men's waistcoats on women are a mistake in the opinion of all men. They are in mine. A woman dressed as a man is, to my eyes, just as objectionable a sight, as a man dressed as a woman. This may, perhaps, be unphilosophical, and due to an artificial association of ideas, but so it is, and if girls have any wish to find favour in men's eyes they would do well to consult men's prejudices.

Apropos of the reference to Westminster Abbey in last week's TRUTH, a lady who visited Ripon Cathedral the week after the harvest festival had been held there, sends a curious picture of the state in which she found the church. Dead greengrocery seems to have been hanging about in all directions; while the font, the niches in the choir, and other prominent spots were adorned with old medicine bottles, empty pickle-jars, and cheap flower-pots, which had contained the decorations. As this state of things was noted on a Monday morning, it would seem to follow that the Sunday services must have been held with the church in this condition.

I am asked to call the attention of my readers to the annual sale of work under the auspices of the Ladies' Work Association, which is to take place at Spencer House, St. James's, on Tuesday and Wednesday, December 1 and 2. This Association is of great service to numbers of ladies of limited means, and its sale last year at Stafford House realised about £400. If the amount could be doubled this year, the money would be well spent.

These amounts have been sent to me towards this year's Toy Fund:—

M. H., 10s.; B. A., £3; H. W. P. H. and M. H. G. H., £1. 1s.; A Friend (Windermere), 10s.; Mrs. Hugo, 7s. 6d.; G. L. (Camden-square), 2s.; Cecil Clarke, £1. 1s.; Mrs. Arlosh, £2. 2s.; J. M., £2. 2s.; C. M. Y., 10s.; J. W., £1; Gerald, 10s. 6d.; Muriel, 10s.; Winifred, 10s.; Jimmie, 10s.; Derrick, 10s.; Harold, 10s.; Col. St. Maur-Wynch, £2. 2s.; Geo. Bolton, £1. 1s.; A. N., £2. 10s.; L. J. F., 5s.; E. F. G. Hatch, £2. 2s.; R. B., 5s.; J. H. L., £5; Mrs. Alfred Mond, £2. 2s.; Viscount Oxenbridge, £2; W. W. £2; Lionel H. Lemon, £1. 1s.; Lady Diana Huddleston, £1. 1s.; C. Lord, £3. 3s.

CARPET BEATING SEASON.—The Queen says: "A good place to send carpets to is the Compressed Air Carpet and Tapestry Cleaning Company, Brook Green, Hammersmith, W. Dust blown out. No beaters used." To prevent deception carpets cleaned by this process bear the Trade Mark on the back.

The following important military intelligence reaches me from a correspondent in whose information I place the greatest confidence. Before publishing his statements, I thought it my duty to remind him of the terms of the Official Secrets Act, but he replies that he is willing to take his chance, on my undertaking to conceal his identity at any cost, which, of course, I gladly give. In the present critical condition of foreign politics, it seems to me possible that this disclosure of the important changes in contemplation in our armaments may have an important effect upon the European situation. At any rate, it will teach foreign Powers that our War Office, under its new and gifted head, is fully alive to the requirements of the times:—

The country will learn with satisfaction that the new mess jacket, the recent announcement of which by the authorities was hailed with national acclamation, was but an instalment of the important military reforms about to be introduced by the present Commander-in-Chief.

It is now confidently anticipated that the infantry full-dress tunic is shortly to be made double-breasted instead of single-breasted, as at present, and it is not impossible that a new button may be designed for this article of equipment. It is further reported that the whole question of regimental facings is about to be subjected to a comprehensive revision.

A correspondent of the Army and Navy Gazette very happily suggests that the Foot Guards should wear stripes instead of mere cords down the exterior seam of their pantaloons. It is, moreover, whispered in circles likely to be well informed that, in lieu of ostrich plumes, peacock's feathers are shortly to be adopted for the Highland bonnet. It is also confidently announced that the Royal Welsh Dragoons are not to be deprived of their piebald horses.

From several quarters I hear that there is a chance of the Government "doing something"—something in such a connection being, of course, £. s. d.—for the Cadet Volunteer Battalions in the course of next session. If Lord Lansdowne's threatened demand for more money for the Army were limited to this item, few objections to the vote would be heard from any quarter. Money spent in this direction is quite as much educational as military expenditure, and, as educational expenditure, is far more sensible than a good deal that goes under that head at present. The boys in these corps get a definite training for one profession, and learn habits which will be of use to them in any walk in life; and what is, perhaps, of most consequence of all, they are placed under discipline, and provided with healthy occupation, just at the time when they are most likely to fall victims to the influences of the public-house and the street corner. A more useful way of spending public money, whether it comes under the Army Vote or the Education Vote, I can hardly imagine.

As I said the other day, all of these Corps are greatly hampered in their work by want of funds, and the funds that they have are chiefly derived from the charity of private individuals, those who have to dip their hands most deeply into their pockets being usually the officers, who are already devoting their time and labour freely to the interests of the Corps. As the result of what was said in TRUTH on the subject, I have been asked to give publicity to the financial distress of many different battalions. This I cannot possibly do, but I may take as a representative case a battalion which has special claims on Londoners, the 1st Cadet Battalion of the King's Royal Rifles. Probably a good many readers of TRUTH have seen something of these boys under canvas in their summer camp at Eastbourne, on the cliff just under Beachy Head. The last balance-sheet of the battalion shows that the year's expenses amounted to some £1,550. Towards this, £906 had been provided by private subscriptions, and the Commanding Officer had given £100. Further sums had been raised by subscriptions and other payments of members, &c., but there was a deficit on the year of £123 odd, which the Commanding Officer had had to advance. Such a state of things is altogether wrong. I would not say a word to discourage private subscribers from devoting money to such an excellent purpose, but the Government ought to bear a handsome share of the expense, and the least that it could do would be to provide every such corps with uniforms and with an office. In the case of the 1st C.B. King's Royal Rifles this would mean a grant of something under £500.

SAVOY HOTEL, Savoy Restaurant, London. Large reception-rooms for fashionable réunions. Orchestra plays daily during dinner and opera supper.

Much dissatisfaction prevails among the "ranker" officers in the Army Ordnance Department at the failure to promote men from the Assistant to the Deputy-Commissary rank under Article 21 of the Royal Warrant of June last. Four such promotions ought by this time to have taken place, and although the establishment of Assistant-Commissaries was fixed by the Royal Warrant at thirty-four, it would seem that there is an intention to maintain it at thirty-eight, notwithstanding that there are actually fifteen vacancies in the next higher rank. If the object of this evasion of the Warrant is the saving of a few shillings per week in pay, the trick is a peculiarly shabby one—perpetrated, as it is, at the expense of the men who can least afford the loss. If that is not the object, then the officers who are performing duties intended to be performed by the rank above them should be allowed the pay attached to the duty, even if they are denied the rank.

A recent general order notifies the promotion of Conductor Alfred Stoddart, of the Bengal Commissariat Department, to Deputy Assistant Commissary, for services on the Pamir Boundary Commission. This promotion accentuates the failure of the Government to recognise the services of the subordinates of the Commissariat and Transport Departments in the Chitral Campaign. As has already been pointed out, a number of such men were specially recommended for recognition, and no branch of the Service contributed more to the success of the expedition. From the fact, however, of a Commissariat conductor having now been promoted for services rendered subsequently to the campaign, it can only be concluded that the Government intend to ignore all recommendations for earlier services. Taking this circumstance with the apparent intention not to issue a medal, the Chitral force has been conspicuously badly treated.

CHARING CROSS HOSPITAL, W.C., entirely dependent on voluntary support, urgently requires help. Liabilities, £11,000. No investments.

The time seems to have arrived for the British Government to take some action upon the repeated miscarriages of justice reported from Malta, in cases where native magistrates have to adjudicate between their own countrymen and Britons. The Malta Chronicle of November 13 contains the latest report of this kind. A cab-driver named Zammit was charged with having revenged a grudge against the British Army by slashing a corporal and an acting sergeant-major of the garrison with his whip. The sergeant-major witnessed the assault on the corporal, and stopped the cab, whereupon he was assaulted in turn. He secured the driver with the assistance of four other soldiers who came up, and when the case came into court the evidence against the prisoner was irresistible. He was convicted and fined 10s.

A counter charge of assault which the cabman had preferred against the soldiers was then heard, and on this the sergeant-major was convicted and fined £1, the corporal being acquitted, and the four privates reprimanded. This decision is transparently unjust, for the conviction of the cabman is utterly inconsistent with that of the sergeant-major, who had only interfered because he saw the assault on the corporal, while the four privates, who were reprimanded, had only interfered when the sergeant-major called them to his assistance. The crowning iniquity of the whole thing, however, is the fine imposed on the sergeant-major—double the amount imposed on the Maltese. The latter was actually excused by the magistrate on the ground that he "had acted under the influence of uncontrollable passion," an expression which ought in itself, apart from any other circumstance in the case, to be accepted as conclusive proof of the magistrate's unfitness for his position. Possibly, of course, the report may not have done justice to the magistrate in every particular; but at least this is a case which the Government ought to inquire into.

One of the books of Irish lottery tickets now scattered broadcast over the country has been addressed to "The Sergeant-Major" at the Depot of one of the Northern districts, and in all probability to others also. The promoter of this lottery is the Rev. D. O'Hara, of Kiltimagh, co. Mayo, and he sends with the book of tickets a letter begging the sergeant-major to dispose of them among the men under him. As an inducement to do this, a "free complimentary ticket" is offered for each book disposed of. The sergeant-major showed his appreciation of the compliment by sending letter and tickets to TRUTH, and I hope his sentiments will be shared by any others who may receive similar applications. It is, I fancy, an open question whether, in soliciting people on this side of St. George's Channel to sell lottery tickets, Irish priests are not inciting them to a direct breach of the law; but, whether that is so or not, there can be no question that in trying to get warrant or non-commissioned officers in the Army to induce the men under them to buy tickets, or anything else, their reverences are tempting such officers to abuse their authority.

WATER SUPPLY FOR MANSIONS, &c.—Artesian Bored and Driven Tube Wells, Wind Engines for pumping, &c.—State your requirements to ALFRED WILLIAMS & Co., 39, Gt. Eastern-st., London, E.C.

Why should a candidate for Sandhurst who is examined at Wellington College be charged fees to the amount of £4. 5s. while the fee for examination in London is £2? Part of the extra fee, to wit 25s., goes, I understand, to the school authorities for the use of the examination room, but even this seems an unjustifiable tax, and it still leaves an additional sum of £1 to be explained. What is the explanation?

Below I pillory a further batch of minor military grievances, several of which seem to be of more than local interest. I am particularly impressed with the story from the 2nd East Yorkshire Regiment, which, to an unsophisticated civilian mind, seems to point to a system of sweating the mess-caterer which is unfair to him and disadvantageous to his customers. How is the man expected to make this surplus? Honestly or dishonestly? And, whether honestly or dishonestly, how can the surplus possibly come to the same amount within a penny every month, regardless of the amount of business done? It looks to me as if the man were expected to "make" something as a matter of course, and were simply required to refund a fixed sum out of his makings. If that is the idea, it is as bad as it can be, and I do not understand how any C.O. can countenance it. The state of things respecting promotion in the 2nd Gloucestershire is also interesting, from its bearing on the relations of the linked battalions. The grievance is likely to be aggravated shortly, as the 1st Battalion is about to move to India, and will probably shed another batch of N.C.O.s, on medical grounds, before it sails. It would seem to be desirable, for the sake of this battalion itself, that some of the old N.C.O.s at home should have a chance of transferring themselves, if they desire it. Finally, I would express a hope that something may be done for the M.S.C. men who have been in the Soudan, for their work has been exceptionally arduous:—

2nd Battalion East Yorkshire Regiment, The Curragh.—The sergeant who acted as caterer to the sergeants' mess here last month was called upon to pay a surplus of £1 over and above his cash takings. He replied that he had not made any surplus, beyond a small quantity of ale, value about 5s., to be returned to the contractor. As he persisted in declining to pay over the surplus which he had not made, he was made a prisoner and brought before the officer temporarily commanding on a charge of neglect of duty while caterer of the sergeants' mess, and in due course he was "severely reprimanded" for this neglect of duty. It seems to have been a practice in the battalion to call on the caterer to pay in a "surplus" of £1, but no order to this effect appears in the rules of the mess, nor is it notified to the caterer on taking over his duties.

1st Battalion Leinster Regiment, Tipperary.—In this battalion the married sergeants are prohibited from undertaking the duties of sergeants' mess caterer. At this they feel aggrieved, and their grievance was aired at a recent mess meeting, when a proposal that the C.O. should be asked to admit married N.C.O.s to this office was brought forward, but was apparently vetoed by the sergeant-major. There does not seem to be any rule in this battalion requiring the caterer to hand over a surplus, and possibly if there were, the views of the married N.C.O.s might undergo a change. But on the assumption that the caterership is a post worth holding, and that the perquisites are recognised as legitimate, the exclusion of the married N.C.O.s hardly appears justifiable.

In the same battalion a man is at present to be found who combines in his own person the duties of orderly-room clerk, librarian, savings bank clerk (both carrying extra duty pay), and paid recruiter. Here, again, there seems to be a little too much monopoly.

2nd Battalion Gloucestershire Regiment, Plymouth.—In this battalion only one corporal has been promoted to sergeant in the course of two and a-half years, and it is calculated that at the present rate of promotion nearly a century must elapse before the last-made corporal will get his promotion. The cause of this state of things is the undue importation of sergeants from the 1st Battalion. A number were left behind, and taken on to the strength of the home battalion, when the 1st Battalion went abroad, and many more have since been sent home, either to join the 2nd Battalion or to fill Militia and Volunteer vacancies, to which the 2nd Battalion have also a claim. The last-joined sergeant from the 1st Battalion has only $5\frac{2}{12}$ years' service, while the four senior lance-sergeants of the 2nd Battalion range from eleven to seventeen years. The obvious remedy would seem to be to give some of the junior N.C.O.s of the 2nd Battalion a chance of transferring to the 1st.

4th Battalion Derbyshire Regiment, Normanton.—A colour-sergeant on the Permanent Staff of this battalion appears to be exclusively engaged upon the duties of barrack-gardener, having done no regimental duty this year except during his annual training. He is a man of some twenty-three or twenty-four years' service. Would it not be better, under such circumstances, to pension him off, and let him then do a little odd jobbing as gardener if his tastes run that way, while filling his place on the staff with a man who can devote himself to military duty?

Donegal Artillery, Letterkenny.—The customers of the regimental canteen here complain that butter is sold at 1s. a lb., while an equally good article can be obtained in the open market at 8d., or under. The contract appears to be in the hands of the sergeant-major's wife, and, possibly, if it were put up to competition, the grievance would be remedied. There is no Canteen Committee in existence. Why not?

Medical Staff Corps, Cairo.—Of the men of this corps who took part in the Dongola Expedition a few are now to be allowed to return home, but only those who have completed five years' service in Egypt. Practically all the men attached to the Expeditionary Force—there being only one exception—have been over three years in Egypt. They have wound up this service with a summer campaign in the Soudan, in which there has been a great deal of sickness, including a serious outbreak of cholera. There is a strong feeling among them that all might, under these circumstances, be allowed to come home, and the public will probably share this feeling.

A very voluble correspondent—one of those whose letters I have to keep by me for two or three weeks before I can find a chance of reading them—expounds to me at length the necessity for rejecting candidates for the Army who are not completely furnished with teeth. After telling me the probabilities that a man who has lost two or three teeth before he is out of his teens will be "during the greater part of the rest of his life" so distracted by toothache as to be unable to sleep, and incapacitated for his duties, while his digestion and power of speech are sure to be impaired, he draws the following appalling picture of the possible loss of a British Army through an officer's false teeth:—

Thirdly. Let us suppose that the candidate has lost all his natural teeth, and that he is supplied with a complete set of artificial ones. Now most people in such a case are compelled to remove their teeth at night-time, for the sake of cleanliness, to avoid swallowing their teeth during sleep—a comparatively frequent accident—and to prevent the gums from becoming tender. Moreover, most people when their teeth have been thus removed, find difficulty in properly articulating their words. Now, suppose such an officer to have been present during the last Soudan campaign. A sudden sandstorm in the middle of the night overturns tent, officer, and the precious teeth, and the latter, with other of his belongings, are scattered over the desert, and buried beyond recall in its sands. At the same time the alarm is raised that the enemy is at hand. The unfortunate officer—perhaps an officer of high rank—mumbles out his commands, which are misunderstood by his orderly; as a consequence, confusion reigns supreme, the camp is rushed by the enemy, and all these disasters are caused by a sandstorm and a set of false teeth.

After this I trust that no time will be lost in examining the grinders of every officer in the Army above the rank of subaltern, and packing off every Colonel and General who is found to have any false ones. A mere examination of the mouths of cadets before they receive their commissions is no guarantee for the safety of the nation. There must be an annual dental inspection for all ranks, or we shall be involved in a gigantic catastrophe.

No aperient water can boast of such sure and beneficial purgative efficacy as the "Franz Josef." It was known on the Continent twenty years ago, and is now sold everywhere.

On February 1 last, a private of the 2nd Middlesex Regiment, at that time with a detachment at Satara, had the misfortune to kill the master-cook of his detachment. It seems to have been a pure accident. The cook was very drunk, and the private, who was acting as cook-orderly, had reported him for misconduct. The cook made a movement as though he were about to attack the orderly, and the latter, thinking prevention better than cure, gave him a back-handed blow which caused him to reel and fall. In falling, the cook sustained an injury to his head, which, probably complicated with his drunken condition, prevented him from ever getting up again. The soldier was then brought before a native magistrate, committed for trial on a charge of culpable homicide, and eventually acquitted. I have never killed a cook myself, though I have occasionally felt tempted to do so; but I can understand that the position of anyone who has had an accident of this kind is a little awkward. In this case, when the soldier rejoined, native feeling in the place was very strong against him. Relations also seem to have been strained between him and his comrades, who had not subscribed a halfpenny towards his defence. Under these circumstances, it is not surprising that the cook-slayer should have applied to be transferred to another battalion. After much delay this request has been refused. I must say that I should have thought that it is a case in which the man ought to have been allowed to shift his quarters, and it is difficult to believe that the circumstances were fully understood by the authorities when they refused his request.

Mr. Charles Dibdin, the secretary of the Lifeboat Institution, is not usually backward in noticing any criticism of the Institution, but so far he has not favoured me with an answer to my inquiry of November 5 respecting the Stevens bequest. I asked what was being done with the £50,000 which the late Mr. Stevens left three years ago on condition that twenty lifeboats bearing his name were placed round the coast. But while no reply has been forthcoming from Mr. Dibdin, I see that Mr. A. J. Boyle, the organising secretary, has been making some observations on the subject to a meeting at Swindon, where attention had been directed to my paragraph. What he said was so remarkable that I think it best to quote his own words:—

> Although Mr. Stevens died in 1893, the affairs of his estate were not settled till a year later, and even then it was not possible for the Institution to take a large portion of the invested money. Besides, there were other legacies and gifts which the Institution had under consideration prior to this, and these matters required a good deal of attention. He was convinced that the public would consider it a great waste of charity if the money was spent in placing boats on the coast where their services were not likely to be wanted. Under these and other circumstances, it was some time before the Institution could get to work. However, the first boat in connection with Mr. Stevens's bequest was now being built, and would be placed at Port St. Mary. The Institution's difficulty was not so much in getting money to build boats, as in finding sufficient funds to maintain those they already had.

The inference most people will draw from the organising secretary's statement is that, so far as the building of new boats is concerned, the Institution really has more money than it knows what to do with. I should, however, like to hear from Mr. Dibdin himself whether this statement is to be accepted as an authorised official explanation of the extraordinary delay that has occurred in giving effect to the wishes of the late Mr. Stevens.

On the other hand, what Mr. Boyle means by suggesting that the Institution has a difficulty in finding sufficient funds to maintain its existing fleet, he alone can possibly explain. As has been pointed out in TRUTH and elsewhere, the income of the Institution has for years past largely exceeded its expenditure, and a very handsome capital has been created by the accumulation of the annual surpluses. In 1894 over £74,000 was put by in this way. I venture to suggest again to the officials of the Lifeboat Institution that it is time that this fiction about the Institution's financial difficulties was abandoned.

The Governor of Ceylon has occasioned much disquietude among the mercantile community at Colombo by his recent action in regard to a case of embezzlement. Cases of this kind have been uncommonly numerous at Colombo, and, owing in part to the indisposition of employers to prosecute, and in part to the vagaries of the law, scarcely one of the offenders has been punished. In the case referred to, however, a clerk named H. W. de Silva was convicted by the local magistrate and sentenced to a month's imprisonment, and, on appeal, the Supreme Court confirmed the conviction and sentence. Then the Governor stepped in with his prerogative of pardon, and the prisoner was released, on the ground of his previous good character. I am myself all for the merciful treatment of first offenders, but in this particular instance due weight appears to have been given to the character of the accused in the original sentence, and the remission of the punishment was an excess of mercy which is likely to have a mischievous effect on employees with an inclination to be dishonest. It is, too, decidedly calculated to encourage employers in the policy of letting such crimes pass with the dismissal of the culprit, which has already been pursued by many defrauded firms at Colombo.

There seems to be no end to the shabby dodges to which the Indian Government is prepared to resort in its present financial extremities. Prizes are offered to soldiers in India who pass certain examinations in Oriental languages, the prizes being money grants increasing with each standard passed. An inquiry was recently made of a responsible official in Burmah whether two standards could be passed at once, and the reply was in the affirmative. Accordingly at the half-yearly examinations in June last two candidates from a regiment stationed at Rangoon presented themselves for the elementary and lower standards in Burmese. They duly passed, and thereby became entitled—if they were allowed a prize for each standard—to prizes, in the aggregate, of Rs. 540 each. The Controller of Military Accounts, however, raised an objection to paying the full amount, and when the successful candidates appealed to the previous official declaration on the subject, a circular was issued laying down that men who passed the two standards at once would forfeit the lower prize of the two that they had won. Finally, by this piece of ex post facto legislation, the two successful candidates were deprived of the reward for passing the elementary standard, amounting to Rs. 180 each. It would be difficult, surely, for any Government to resort to meaner trickery than this.

A conflict is at present going on between the Treasury and the Post Office respecting the place which Mr. Algernon Turnor has just resigned. Mr. Hanbury considers that there is no justification for appointing another Financial Secretary at the Post Office with a salary of £1,500 a year. The Duke of Norfolk wishes the place to be retained, having, no doubt, a nominee in his eye. As I have said before, the duties ought to be divided between two of the well-paid officials in the department, who could perfectly well undertake them. The Treasury will, of course, win the battle if Sir Michael Hicks Beach supports Mr. Hanbury, whose zeal for economical reforms is by no means to the taste of jobbing Ministerialists.

There never has seemed to me to be any great principle involved in the question, whether a public body should do its own building work directly, or through a contractor. The entire issue is one of £. s. d. The work, it is said, is scamped by the contractor. But, if so, this is the fault of those whose business it is to see that it is not scamped. The real issue, therefore, before the County Council is, which system is the cheaper. The Council has now data on which to arrive at a just conclusion. As a rule, the man who gets a big contract cuts things so fine that he does not count on a profit, unless he can get alterations whilst the work is progressing. I am inclined to think myself that contracting is the better plan, provided that no changes are made in the contract, and that there is close supervision as to material and work. But I am quite open to correction if it can be shown by figures that I am wrong.

In reply to a note in TRUTH two or three months ago, the Town Clerk of Totnes assured me that the Corporation have provided a drainage system for the town in accordance with the plans of the Local Government Board. If the system is satisfactory, as I was led to understand, the authorities will now have time to turn their attention to other matters, and, judging from a statement which has just been published by the Vicar of Totnes, they would do well to begin with the question of the housing of the working classes. It is alleged that nearly all the poorer inhabitants of Totnes have to live in dark, miserable passages, a few feet wide, into some of which a ray of sunshine never enters; and so inadequate is even this kind of accommodation, that, according to the Vicar, the borough exhibits "some of the worst cases of overcrowding it would be possible to imagine." The plea has been raised that there is no land in Totnes on which to build new houses; but, in view of the fact that the area of the borough is 1,500 acres, while the population is only 4,000, it is difficult to believe that this objection is well founded.

There is a duly constituted Sanitary Authority for the village of Mogerhanger, but, like many such bodies, it is peacefully slumbering while the people whose health and lives it is supposed to protect are being stricken down by a deadly disease. Ten months ago typhoid fever broke out in this Bedfordshire village, and it is still claiming victims. More than fifty cases, several ending fatally, have occurred among a population of 400; but still no real attempt is made to deal with the cause of the mischief, the responsible officials apparently considering that their duty begins and ends with the distribution of a little disinfectant now and then, and the carting of fever-stricken patients to a place some miles away. Sanitary Authorities have before now been mulcted in heavy damages for illnesses and deaths brought about by their negligence. But then it is the ratepayers who have to pay the damages, and it seems to me that a far more salutary course in such circumstances would be the indictment of the delinquents for manslaughter.

About eighteen months ago Sir George Trevelyan, then the Secretary for Scotland, was induced to inquire into the threatened eviction of some crofters at Kinrossie, Perthshire, with the result that the landlords (the Messrs. Nairne) were prevailed upon to withdraw the notices. In answer to Mr. A. C. Morton, Sir George stated in the House of Commons that the matter had been settled, the arrangement being that the crofters should give up some land but retain their cottages and garden ground. Although there may not have been a legally binding agreement, this was looked upon as a permanent settlement; and much indignation is therefore expressed at the announcement which has just been made that the lairds have given notice to one of the crofters and his mother, an old woman of seventy-six, to give up their cottage (built by the woman's late husband) and garden at once. The son, it seems, is a member of the local School Board and the Parish Council, and probably his votes and conduct in these capacities do not meet with the lairds' approval. This, at any rate, is the reason popularly assigned for the eviction; and, if it be true, the Messrs. Nairne will be able to plume themselves upon the accomplishment of a peculiarly mean and shameful act of landlord tyranny and injustice.

The Scots Magazine says, "Fallen Angels" is a very clever, ably-written, ethico-religious work." 5th thousand now ready. 8vo, pp. 260, cloth, 2s. 6d., post free.—GAY & BIRD, 22, Bedford-st., London.

CHRISTMAS CHARITIES.—Charity Bazaars and Committees will hear of something to their advantage by applying to The Normal Powder Syndicate, Ltd., 38 & 39, Parliament-st., Westminster, S.W.

A very good suggestion was made to me the other day for dealing with lady thieves of the Castle type. It is that, if kleptomaniacs are suffered to be at large, it should only be on their relatives becoming sureties for their good behaviour. For the protection of the community thieves and lunatics are placed under restraint. It is, therefore, illogical to leave a thief at large on the ground that she (or he) is also a lunatic. The interest of society requires that a kleptomaniac should be placed under restraint, just as much as a homicidal maniac. There would be, however, no objection to leaving such a maniac at large, if those who desired her (or his) freedom would undertake to indemnify any party who might suffer by her idiosyncrasy. Such an arrangement would be perfectly fair to the relatives, who could then take their choice between letting the afflicted party go to a criminal lunatic asylum, or continuing to enjoy her society—at their own risk.

I have not seen the report of the case, but a correspondent tells me that, simultaneously with the conviction of Mrs. Castle, a shop-lifting case was tried before Mr. Plowden, in which a husband and wife were jointly charged, and in this case the wife, apparently to her own astonishment, was discharged, on the ground that she was presumed by law to have acted under the influence of her husband. The husband was, in due course, convicted and sentenced. Considering that in the Castle case the husband was living with his wife, in a room which was literally packed with the proceeds of his wife's larcenies, I should have thought that the legal presumption of the husband's complicity would have been even stronger in this instance than in the other; and the different result arrived at in the two cases only makes it more clear that there is one law in this country for rich Americans and another for poor Englishmen. Is there any reason why, if the wife is a kleptomaniac, she should be less under the influence of her husband than if she were sane? If there is, every male thief would do well to insure against the risks of his profession by providing himself with a kleptomaniac wife.

In reference to the remarks made in last week's TRUTH as to the statistics of infanticide by "overlaying," a gentleman who claims to have made a study of the subject tells me that in London there are about 800 deaths per annum from this cause; in Liverpool over 200; and in the whole of the United Kingdom about 3,000. To these figures have to be added the deaths of a considerable number of diseased infants, who are more or less suffocated, but whose deaths are certified as arising from some specific complaint. "Probably," says my informant, "one is within the mark in saying that 4,000 babies are thus killed annually, and at least 3,000 of these are victims of murder or manslaughter—murder where the deed is intentionally done, manslaughter where it arises from drunken carelessness." These are ugly facts, if facts they be, and I suspect that there is not much exaggeration about them. What does the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children say on the subject?

Frauds by professional men seem to have been unfortunately common in Scotland during the past few months; and in almost every instance the offender has managed to escape from justice. In connection with the recent disappearance of Mr. Arthur Sturrock, a lawyer and banker at Kilmarnock, who is alleged to have swindled his clients to the tune of from £40,000 to £60,000, the Glasgow Daily Mail accuses the authorities of "wilfully and of purpose" permitting the offender to slip through their fingers. This is a grave charge, but I hear from a local correspondent that it is regarded as true in Kilmarnock, and that the absconding criminal is believed to owe his good fortune in getting away to the social position and rank of his family and friends. I trust, however, that the authorities will yet be able to dispel these pernicious notions by bringing back Sturrock and placing him in the dock.

In the last year of his late Majesty, King William IV., an Act was passed making it illegal, under a penalty of £50 for each offence, to publish any advertisement, or other notice, relating to the drawing in a foreign lottery, or the sale of tickets for such a lottery. Is not this Act still in force? Its operation was temporarily restricted by a statute of 8 and 9 Victoria, which granted relief to newspaper proprietors in respect of actions commenced before the passing of that Act, but, so far as I can learn, the original statute of William IV. remains in force to the present day. I call attention to the matter, because it has lately become the practice of provincial newspapers to publish advertisements of the Hamburg lotteries, and not only to publish the advertisements, but to stimulate the gambling propensities of their readers by editorial references to the lotteries. There seems a chance here for Mr. Hawke and the Anti-Gambling crusaders to do a really good and useful stroke of business.

For the present, the lines of the Anti-Gambling League can scarcely be said to have fallen in pleasant places, and their recent abortive effort to interfere with the renewal of the licence to Alexandra Park for its racing meetings may possibly help to convince some of the less bigoted of their supporters that their crusade against the liberty of the subject will never be popular with the average common-sense Briton. The League does, in fact, "protest too much," and like all thick-and-thin partisans ruins its own case by trying to over-prove it. Racing undoubtedly has its shady side, and weak-minded or unprincipled characters form a large portion of its following; but all unprejudiced men see that the evil is not one to be put right by any amount of grandmotherly legislation.

In response to inquiries from various parts of the country as to where it is that J.P.s have been in the habit of charging fees for witnessing statutory declarations, I think I may say, without any breach of confidence, that these fee-pocketing unpaid ones are to be found in the county of Cornwall. As the county is of some extent, I would recommend any one in search of the wrong-doers to make a start in the neighbourhood of Newquay. In saying this, however, I must not be taken to suggest that the thing has never been done elsewhere.

RIVIERA.—Magnificent Building Sites at Beaulieu, facing the sea, to be Sold.—Apply, TERSLING, Mentone; KURZ, Agent, Beaulieu; SHERRY, Raymond-buildings, W.C.

Apropos of J.P.'s and statutory declarations, there is another point worthy of notice. Such declarations are chargeable with a stamp duty of 2s. each; but I have it on the authority of a notary public in the North of England that in practice declarations made before magistrates are never stamped at all, and a clerk in the Inland Revenue Office has stated that he has never even seen one of the forms of declaration under the Act of William IV. It is so novel, if not unprecedented, to discover any source of revenue which has escaped the eagle eye of Somerset House, that I feel sure that after this allusion to the matter very few declarations will be allowed to go unstamped in future.

There was an acrimonious dispute between the Lincoln Magistrates and Judge Shortt on Monday week concerning the use of the Sessions House. His Honour had appointed that date for the monthly sitting of the County Court, but on his arrival he found the Magistrates already in possession of the Sessions House for the adjourned hearing of some cruelty case. Their worships refused to budge, and his Honour refused to sit elsewhere, the upshot being that the whole of the County Court business was adjourned till December 7. As there were 120 plaints, in addition to forty judgment summonses, entered for hearing, the adjournment must mean loss and inconvenience to some hundreds of litigants, witnesses, and lawyers; and for this the Justices are to blame. It could only have been by inexcusable bungling that their special sitting clashed with the County Court, which is always fixed some time beforehand.

Last week a man named Phillips, of Union-street, Stonehouse, was sued in the Totnes County Court by Lord Churston for damage done by posting handbills on gates and fences. Judge Edge, who tried the case, gave judgment for £2. 2s. and costs, and remarked that if any other similar case was brought before him he should award "exemplary damages." This is the man Phillips, calling himself an "Australian herbalist," whose objectionable advertisements, and still more objectionable methods of disseminating them, were noticed in TRUTH in August last, and great credit is due to Lord Churston for the trouble he has taken in bringing the man to justice as well as to the Judge for the timely warning he gave to advertisers of this class. A gentleman living near Torquay tells me that the roads in that neighbourhood are polluted in all directions by offensive advertisements of one kind or another. Are the Devonshire police still unaware of the terms of the Indecent Advertisements Act?

A very lame and impotent verdict was returned at an inquest at Barry the other day respecting the death of a boy of fifteen named Britton. His body was found in the bulkhead wing space of the ballast tank of a steamer which was being repaired in Barry Graving Dock; and the evidence showed that the poor lad was almost continuously employed there for nearly thirty-four hours between Sunday night and Tuesday morning; that, thoroughly worn out, he fell asleep at his work; and that, nobody knowing (or troubling to see) what had become of him, the manhole doors were closed, and he met a horrible death by drowning. So little impression did this tragic story make upon the jury that they contented themselves with a verdict of "accidentally drowned," and an expression of opinion that the deceased was employed for an excessive number of hours. It was said that the foremen were not aware he had been at work so long; but it is nonsense to suppose that a youth of fifteen would slave away for thirty-four hours at a stretch of his own accord. Somebody caused him to do so, and thereby caused his death, and it was the duty of the jury to bring home the responsibility for what happened to the right party or parties.

At Ramsgate a few weeks ago the County Court Judge refused to make a committal order against a certain Captain Crawshaw, described as a fashionably-attired individual, and a member of a family of millionaire coalowners, who had run up a bill of £35 with a poor lodging-house keeper. In commenting on the case, I mentioned that his Honour had the reputation of exercising his power of committal readily enough against people of humble position and limited means. He gave a remarkable proof of this at his Court at Folkestone last week. There were fourteen judgment summonses, but none of the defendants could claim to be connected with millionaires, or appeared in Court arrayed like a person of wealth and fashion. The majority of them, indeed, were only labourers, and all were poor; and so in the short space of eighteen minutes the judge disposed of the whole fourteen, no fewer than twelve being committed to prison. It is incredible that proper evidence as to the means of each of these unfortunate men can have been given in the time his Honour allotted to the business; but that is apparently a matter of no importance where really poor debtors are concerned.

The Rector of Headley and his parishioners appear to have a very cool method of disposing of other people's rights and privileges. On the road from Leatherhead to this village there is an obstruction to vehicular traffic consisting of some gates across the highway. As the outcome of some negotiations with representatives of Headley the owner of these gates has consented to their removal if a public right-of-way across another portion of his property is given up. This right-of-way is mainly, or entirely, in the parish of Leatherhead, while the gates are in the parish of Headley; but the inhabitants of the latter place do not seem to have regarded these facts as any bar to their title to enter into such a bargain, and at a meeting last week, with the Rector in the chair, they resolved that the arrangement "be accepted." I imagine, however, that the inhabitants of Leatherhead and the general public also will have something to say before their right-of-way is thus abolished for the benefit of Headley.

In my Legal Pillory this week a correspondent has supplied a couple of cases from Swansea which, though somewhat out of the ordinary run of those I give in this column, nevertheless afford an interesting object-lesson in Justices' justice. The law with regard to the sale of loaves by weight is, of course, designed for the protection of the whole community, but if any distinction at all is made in dealing with offenders, surely it should be in the direction of punishing most severely a tradesman on whom the poor rely for the full measure of their daily bread. The Swansea Solons, however, take the opposite view, and fine the baker whose trade is with well-to-do people twice as heavily as the baker whose business is done among the poorer classes. As to the rest of the following list, the contrast between the pecuniary penalties on the one side for brutal assaults, and those on the other side for vagrancy, poaching, and petty larceny, speaks for itself. Although the newspaper report says nothing on the point, I shall possibly be told that the prisoner at Liverpool Assizes was an old offender; but even if he was, five years' penal servitude was an excessive, not to say ferocious, sentence:—

Doncaster County Police-court. James Cain, charged with assaulting his wife. He went home the worse for drink, struck his wife and knocked her down, and kicked her while she was on the ground. A few days before he had given her two black eyes, and she asked for a separation order on account of his persistent cruelty, but the Bench refused it. Fined 40s. including costs and bound over.

Bradford Borough Police-court. William Hainsworth, a powerful-looking fellow, charged with assaulting his wife. He gripped her by the throat, threw her down and jumped on her, twice repeating this treatment, and in addition striking her on the head with a bottle. She was in a delicate state of health. Fined 10s. and costs and bound over.

Southampton Police-court. Before Mr. G. P. Perkins and other Justices. Francis Applen, convicted of assaulting Emily Scott, a woman with whom he cohabited. He struck her a heavy blow on the forehead with a poker, inflicting a wound which necessitated her detention in the infirmary for several days. There was a long list of previous convictions. Fined £2 and costs.

Derby Borough Police-court. Before the Mayor and other magistrates. Isaac Brindley, convicted of assaulting Elizabeth Orme. She interfered for the protection of another woman whom defendant was assaulting, whereupon he struck her violent blows on each eye and in the mouth, and kicked her. Her injuries had to be treated at the infirmary. Fined 20s. and costs.

Hull Police court. Before the Stipendiary. James Meir, convicted of assaulting Tom Harland. The magistrate said the facts disclosed a very serious and cowardly assault, which was absolutely unprovoked. Fined 40s. and costs.

Doncaster County Police-court. C. Wastnedge, charged with trespassing in pursuit of game. Fined 40s. and costs.

Bervie Police-court. Before Provost Gibb. Henry Wood and George Grant pleaded guilty to a breach of the peace. Wood fined £1 and bound over, Grant fined £3.

Stone Police-court. Before Messrs. R. P. Copeland, J. Bourne, W. Kirkham, and W. Thompson. Samuel Grattage, George Moore, George Cooper, and John Cooper, charged under the Poaching Prevention Act with being found in possession of seven rabbits, two nets, &c. Fined £5 each and costs; in default, two months each.

Hastings Borough Police-court. Before Alderman Bradman and Councillor Huggett. Thomas Deadman and Louis Alfred Dunk, lads, charged with being in possession of some empty beer bottles, supposed to have been stolen. It was alleged that the bottles were taken from the back premises of an hotel. Dunk, fourteen days; Deadman, seven days.

Darlington County Police-court. John Green, charged with trespassing in pursuit of game. The prosecutor asked the Bench to be lenient. Fined £2 and costs.

Driffield Police-court. Henry Levitt, charged with stealing one onion. One month.

Long Ashton Police-court. Before Messrs. A. Gibbs, E. J. Swann, C. Hill, F. Weatherly, J. Bourne, and Major Thorne. Frederick Howell, charged with poaching. Three months.

Wimborne Petty Sessions. Before Colonel Churchill, Major-General Truell, and other justices. Harry Jenkins, convicted of an aggravated assault upon his wife. Although the woman was enceinte, defendant struck her several blows with his fist, knocked her down, and afterwards turned her out of the house for the night. He had previously ill-treated her. Fined £1 and 8s. costs, and ordered to pay his wife 6s. a week.

Lichfield City Police-court. Before Messrs. A. C. Lomax and T. Walmsley, Michael Toatland, charged with assaulting Jane Warwick, a widow, with whom he lodged. He knocked her down and kicked her, giving her two black eyes. He had assaulted her several times before. Fined £1. 1s. 6d., including costs.

Liverpool Assizes. Before Mr. Justice Bruce. Richard Jones, found guilty of robbing Griffith George Owen, of 2s. He was acquitted on a charge of using personal violence. Five years.

Swansea Police-court. Before Mr. J. Coke Fowler and other Justices. Henrietta White, summoned for selling bread otherwise than by weight. A loaf was found to be 2 oz. 10 drms. short of 2 lb.; but defendant said it was sold at a halfpenny under its proper price on that account. Defendant, whose business is among middle-class people, was fined 20s. Josiah Williams, whose business is in a very poor neighbourhood, was summoned for a similar offence, a half-quartern loaf proving to be 4 oz. short of its proper weight. He was fined 10s.

Peterborough Police-court. Before Lieut.-Col. Strong, Messrs. J. H. Beeby, W. Beaver, W. E. Welby, W. R. Cliffe, J. T. Miller, and Rev. W. Hopkinson. Thomas Bawber, charged with sleeping out. Twenty-one days. William Rogers, and Samuel Travis, charged with wandering abroad without having any visible means of subsistence. Twenty-one days each.

Keswick Police-court. Before Messrs. J. J. Spedding, R. D. Marshall, J. Langham, and T. Carrick. William Watson, labourer, Keswick, charged with vagrancy by sleeping out. Fourteen days.

What next? At Hull Police-court last week, a working glazier named Bennett was fined 5s., including costs, for cutting a pane of glass upon his own premises on the Lord's Day. This seems to be a new departure in Sabbatarianism, for there is a broad distinction between a man opening a shop, or otherwise carrying on his trade in public on a Sunday, and his doing work privately in his own house. In the latter case, the enforcement of the Act amounts to as gross and intolerable an interference with the liberty of the subject as could well be conceived. I suppose that under the Act, as thus interpreted, people can be fined for writing letters on Sunday in their own studies or parlours, and I tremble to think of the quantity of fines which I have myself incurred at different times by inditing paragraphs for TRUTH on the Sabbath Day, as, I regret to say, I have sometimes done during the last twenty years. It stands to reason that such a law can only be enforced by the most detestable system of espionage, and it would be interesting to know how the police who gave evidence against the defendant in the above case came to see him cutting the pane of glass, and who set them on thus to spy on a man's actions in his own house. We hear a vast outcry about State interference with private individuals in matters where large numbers desire such interference. Is there a single rational being who considers that in a nominally free country, freedom of conscience and individual liberty should be infringed to the extent shown in this case at Hull?

That a prisoner should be kept in gaol for five months awaiting his trial is a scandal to the administration of justice which I thought was no longer possible. It is what happened, however, in the case of a man who was convicted at Exeter Assizes last week on a charge of stealing a letter—a crime which the Judge considered would be sufficiently punished by four months' hard labour. Quarter Sessions were held a week or two after the accused was committed by the magistrates, but owing to a stupid provision in the Act with regard to such offences against the Post Office, he could only be tried at Assizes, and so, as he was unable to procure bail, he had to undergo the five months' preliminary imprisonment. Yet, while a Court of Quarter Sessions is debarred from dealing with the simple theft of a letter, it has jurisdiction in the gravest offences, short of murder, against the person. Could anything be more absurd?

Should the fact that a man has been a poacher deprive him of the redress which he would otherwise obtain for an illegal seizure of his property? I can understand game-preserving magistrates answering the question in the affirmative, but it is certainly astonishing to find a County Court Judge doing so. This is what Judge Steavenson practically did at Whitehaven last week, when one Robinson, who had been convicted of poaching, sued the prosecuting game preserver for the return or the value of a rabbit-net which had been seized and detained. His Honour admitted that the Act under which the poaching prosecution took place did not allow of the forfeiture of the net, and that he was accordingly bound to give judgment for the plaintiff. He did so, however, by assessing the value of the net at 1d., ordering the defendant to pay that amount into Court, or, as an alternative, to give up the net, and depriving the plaintiff of costs. He further directed that this judgment should not take effect for six years, his object being, he said, to give the plaintiff "time for repentance, and to turn his attention to earning an honest living." What had Judge Steavenson to do with the fact that the man was (or had been) a poacher? His duty was to give him the full redress to which he was legally entitled for the wrongful seizure of his property, and to deliver such a judgment as he did was to abuse the power with which he is entrusted.

Among the cases down for trial at Glamorganshire Assizes last week was one in which Mrs. Edwards, the wife of a clergyman, living near Bridgend, was charged with ill-treating her child aged two and a half years. In defiance of the direction they received from Mr. Justice Mathew, and much to the astonishment of everybody who heard or read the evidence when the accused was before the magistrates, the Grand Jury threw out the bill. I am credibly informed that they did this after taking a vote on the question, and that the reason which the majority urged for ignoring the bill was, in effect, that they should give the woman another chance. If that is so, the Grand Jury were guilty of a scandalous violation of their duty, and it is a pity the matter was not brought to the notice of the Judge. Their function is simply to say whether there is or is not a primâ facie case against a prisoner; and to allow any other consideration to enter into their decision is utterly wrong and indefensible.

On two or three occasions I have referred to a charge of assault which a girl named Newman preferred against Dr. Joseph Dawson Crawford, of Liverpool, and which was dismissed by the Birkdale Bench, with the object (as Mr. Justice Cave has since said) of "hushing up the affair." Last August Newman brought an action for damages against Crawford at Liverpool Assizes, but, unfortunately, the jury were unable to agree to a verdict. The action was re-entered for trial at the Assizes last week, but it did not come into court, and I am told that in the Cause list it was marked "settled." The terms of the settlement have not found their way into the local papers, though, considering the nature of the case and the position the defendant occupies, it is certainly desirable that the facts should be made known.

Apropos of Messrs. Howard & Co., of 611, Chiswick High-road, the Chief Constable of a provincial town has handed me a batch of correspondence showing the way firms of this character do business. A new feature in one of the cases to which these papers refer, is that when a servant girl, who had been saddled with a Bible, on the instalment system by the usual method, attempted to get out of her bargain, a letter was written to her, purporting to have come from the female tout who had booked the order. The said female writes thus—regardless of punctuation:—

> DEAR MADAM,—you did not ought to have been surprised to have bible when I told you that I would bring it myself sometime that afternoon you know you are getting me into serious trouble and I am stopped from doing any more buisness (sic) until this is cleared up why dont you be a girl to your word and keep the Book the subscriptions are very easy if I hear of any more about this I shall have to come from London with secatary (sic) which will make a lot of trouble for you. . . . .

The girl did not pay up, and the lady did not come up from London with the "secatary." Then Howard & Co. try the old trick of the bogus County Court notice. What an empty attempt of intimidation this is may be judged from the fact that, in three successive months, they send three of these notices as each fresh instalment becomes due, notifying each time that proceedings will be taken without further notice, unless the amount due is paid by a specified date. The amount, so far as I have heard, has never been paid, and apparently Messrs. Howard & Co. thought it prudent to avoid any further steps. Possibly this result may have been brought about by the fact that the Chief Constable of the town had himself, a few months previously, written to the firm, stating that he had had complaints about their canvassers. I can only say again that it is a great pity that the police do not have power to stop the operations of these canvassers altogether.

Evidence continues to accumulate from all quarters of the swindling character of the "grandfather's clock" trade carried on by the man, Reeves, and others, from Norwich or Boston. In cases in which the clock has been sent, it seems always to have proved a worthless bargain, one victim having had to spend 19s. 6d. on it before the works would move at all. In cases where the clock has not been sent, the inference, so far as Reeves's intentions go, is to much the same effect. A clergyman who had seen Reeves's advertisement wrote offering to pay for carriage and packing if the clock were sent on approval, and to buy it if it answered to the advertiser's description. This offer was not good enough, and Reeves declined it. It is a pity that all would-be possessors of grandfather's clocks have not been equally cautious.

If you want to entirely Furnish your House or select any article of Furniture or Carpet, &c., send for HEWETSONS' Illustrated Priced Catalogue.—HEWETSONS, Tottenham Court-road, London.

The trade in bogus second-hand plated goods, about which a good deal has been said at different times in TRUTH, seems to be extensively combined with a similar trade in shoddy furs. Here is an example of the sort of advertisement by which this business is run, this particular extract being from the Western Morning News—for these people look for their victims in all parts of the kingdom:—

SEALSKIN CAPE. — Lady offers exquisite SEALSKIN CAPE, measures 4 yards round, richly satin lined, finest quality, perfectly new, and faultless Paris model; immediate cash required; accept £5, worth 20 guineas; muff to match, 12s. 6d. Bolanski, 52, Hugh-street, Pimlico, London.

52, Hugh-street, Pimlico, is one of the addresses from which the shoddy plated goods business used to be worked, and I said a good deal about a lady hailing from that address in my articles on the plated goods swindle two or three years ago. A lady who had the goods "on appro." found that the "exquisite sealskin cape" was in reality what is known as "electric seal," a trade name for rabbit-skin dyed to resemble seal. So far from being cheap, the price asked, £5, is considerably more than the market value of the article offered. Those, therefore, who see fur goods advertised in this way will do well to take professional opinion upon them before purchasing.

Reference has been made in TRUTH before now to a usury shop carried on at 1, Bedford Circus, Exeter, under the name of "Gordon & Gordon." A standing advertisement of this establishment states that £3 will be lent for 4s., or £10 for 13s. 4d.; but that this is a mere trap is pretty clearly shown by the subsequent terms of the advertisement, which state that the £3 is to be repayable by twenty weekly instalments of 4s., or the £10 by twenty repayments of 13s. 4d. In other words, the borrower of £10 for twenty weeks has to pay £13. 6s. 8d. by weekly instalments. The rate of interest per annum which this transaction represents is something enormous, but even this is insufficient to satisfy the rapacity of the blood-sucker who runs this place. A working-man, after being laid up by an illness, borrowed £10 of "Gordon & Gordon" some few months back, and found, after foolishly signing a paper without reading it, that he had to pay back a total of £15. 9s. What rate of interest per annum this represents on instalments of 13s. 4d. per week, I should be sorry to state, but it must be a good many hundreds per cent. This particular business at Exeter used to be run under the name of "Fielding." The name of "Gordon & Gordon" was adopted a few months ago. Whether Isaac Gordon has anything to do with it, I cannot say, though it is difficult to understand how any-body whose name was not Gordon should adopt for the purpose of the money-lending business a name of such evil repute.

The individual who calls himself "Edwards & Co.," of 17, Sackville-street, seems lately to have been discharging a regular broadside of circulars at officers of H.M. Navy, offering, in his enthusiasm for the Naval Service, to advance them almost any amount without security. It may interest "Edwards & Co." to know that a considerable proportion of his circulars have come back to TRUTH office from the different ships which have been favoured with them. Fortunately, Naval officers are under less temptation than Army men to raise the wind by selling themselves to the Shylocks of the West End, and long may they continue so!

The truth seems to be that the "fraternity" burst into activity all round at this time of year—probably in anticipation of the "festive season" and the little bills which accompany the festivities. There is a usurer's tout in business in Piccadilly under the name of "James Wilton." His circulars have been returned to this office by the dozen during the last week, and I should imagine that they have been sent out by the ton. A specially strong complaint about them is made to me by one of the Oxford Heads of Houses. If we cannot put a stop to the circular nuisance altogether, might we not enact that there should be a close season for money-lenders and a few others of the more obnoxious touts?

A lady living in the West End begs me to "expose" the gang now carrying on the rubber-stamp trick at Torquay under the name of "Truscott & Co." My dear Madam, if exposure in TRUTH would stop this or any other swindle, all the "Truscotts" in the trade would have retired from business years ago. Such people look for their victims among those who do not read TRUTH, and they are assisted by obliging newspaper proprietors who persist in publishing their advertisements, regardless of anything TRUTH may say. It was only on October 8 that I pointed out that "Truscott & Co." were carrying on the business hitherto associated with the name of "Paynter & Co.," of the same town, and I mentioned at the same time that, under pressure, Truscott had in one instance disgorged his ill-gotten gains. Everybody, therefore, who reads TRUTH is already forewarned and forearmed.

I have been asked to express an opinion on the following advertisement and upon the article advertised:—

THE "SUN"
INCANDESCENT GAS LIGHT
IS ACKNOWLEDGED BY EVERYONE WHO HAS SEEN IT TO BE BY FAR THE BEST AND MOST PERFECT
INCANDESCENT GAS LIGHT
EVER INTRODUCED.

NO MANTLE REQUIRED!

NO CHIMNEY REQUIRED!

NO SMELL. NO SMOKE.
NO DANGER.

It can be instantly attached to any ordinary gas bracket or chandelier by anyone, and is equally suitable for private houses, shops, factories, warehouses, halls, hotels, &c., &c.

Having been asked the question, I must say that the above eulogy does not convey a very accurate idea of the article. The contrivance, which is sold at 3s. 9d., is a small paraffin lamp, attachable to the side of a gas jet, and so arranged as to combine the flame of the lamp with that of the gas. It is, therefore, not an incandescent lamp at all, and it strikes me as highly dangerous; while any one who would consider it "suitable" to attach to his chandeliers or gas-brackets must be a person of singular taste. As the thing is made and sold at Liverpool, and orders are solicited by post, I strongly advise an inspection before purchase.

Apparently one of the chief results of the idiotic "Made in Germany" Act is to render importers of foreign goods specially anxious to pass themselves off as British manufacturers. Here is a good example:—The label round a match-box, extensively sold in London and the provinces, bears a sort of trade-mark in the shape of a sailor's head, with the legend "England's Heroes," and the following inscription in red and black letters:—

MANUFACTURED BY MARTIN HARRIS & CO., LTD., STRATFORD, LONDON, E.
Support English Workpeople only by using English-made matches.

This covers three sides of the box. The fourth is covered by a piece of sanded paper to strike the matches on. Remove this paper and you find underneath the further still more interesting notification:—

"PRINTED IN GERMANY."

That is how you "support English workpeople only."

One of the letters in which Mr. "J. R. S. Gaskell" (whose real name will be remembered by many of my readers) solicits orders for a Royal pedigree has been sent to me by a gentleman to whom it was addressed, with an inquiry as to the writer's bona fides. In his letter Gaskell thinks, but is not quite sure, that he can trace the gentleman's descent from the Kings of Scotland, and from a hint which he drops, I gather that the recipient of the proposal contemplates suing Gaskell for libelling him by suggesting that he is of such disreputable origin. As to Mr. Gaskell's bona fides, I cannot say anything; but from what I am told, I believe there is no obstacle in the way of tracing any of our pedigrees back to Royal ancestors. For reasons which there is no necessity to go into, the greater part of the population, if they only knew it, have a drop or two of Royal blood somewhere in them, though respect for the memory of their ancestors may make them reluctant to blazon the fact abroad.

Mr. R. L. C. Morrison, of Greenhill-avenue, Tenby, writes with reference to a paragraph in last week's TRUTH about himself, that he is at a loss to understand my remarks, as he has issued none of the circulars there mentioned since February last, when attention was called to them in TRUTH. On looking further into this matter, I find that I have done Mr. Morrison an injustice, and that the circular I referred to was actually sent out in January last, though for some reason it was only brought under my notice a fortnight ago. Mr. Morrison is, therefore, entitled to full credit for having seen that the circular was open to objection, and having promptly discontinued it. And I hope I am also entitled to some credit for having brought him to this conclusion.

No. I draw the line at the following question. Up to a point I do not mind drawing upon my vast stores of information for the benefit of readers of TRUTH who desire enlightenment; but I do not happen to know the number of acres of land in Yorkshire, and I have not time just at present to count the letters in the Bible:—

Will you kindly answer through your "Answers to Correspondents" whether there are more acres of land in the county of Yorkshire than there are letters in the Bible? Please give figures to "OXFORD."

The Ladies' Dress Association, Limited, a year or two ago removed from Jermyn-street to New Bond-street, very much against the wish of a good many shareholders. The results, as set forth in a report just issued, are highly interesting. The report states that a large number of new customers have been obtained at Bond-street, but, unfortunately, most of the old customers have disappeared. Consequently, the returns have fallen off, until the Directors have come to the conclusion that the concern had better be wound up. The accounts appended to this report show that the Association started its last financial year with a debit balance of £10,724, and that this has increased during the year to £14,108. The most promising assets in hand appear to be £100 odd in Consols, and £600 odd in New Zealand stock, and I should certainly think that the shareholders would do well to secure this modest sum for themselves, if they can, while it remains intact.

A sort of Trade Union of our Liberal Peers seems to have been formed to look after the £70,000 which is divided amongst them whenever the Party is in office, and in consideration of which they are prepared to remain Liberal, in order to prevent the Party from becoming a social Alsatia, or a danger to all those privileges and abuses that Radicals would sweep away. Never does one of these Peers shed the light of his eloquence upon a meeting without bewailing that a Peer is no longer the Party leader, and expressing his hope that we shall again recur to this dispensation. A week ago there was a meeting in Bucks of some Liberal Association. It will be remembered that not long ago a certain "Earl of Buckinghamshire" recanted the error of his ways and joined the Liberal Party. Very few had ever heard of this Earl's existence, but we were called upon to rejoice over this important addition to our forces. At once the Earl was rewarded by being appointed a Lord-in-Waiting, with a salary of £700 per annum for doing nothing. This practical Peer attended the Liberal meeting in Bucks, and the grateful creature began, in the usual Peer way, to deplore the change in the Leadership. No one is a prophet in his own land, and the Earl of Buckinghamshire is not one in Buckinghamshire. His observations were met with loud cries of "Oh, oh!" amid which the Lord-in-Waiting subsided.

SCOTT ADIE, 115, Regent-st., London, for Shooting Suits, Golf Suits, Travelling Coats, Inverness Capes, Carriage Rugs, Shawls Mauds, hand-knit Hose, Scotch Cheviots, and Harris Homespuns

Intending purchasers of American Organs should inspect the new models which Messrs. METZLER & CO., Great Marlborough-street, have just received from the factory of Mason & Hamlin.

A correspondent reminds me that the catalogue that I gave the other day did not exhaust the list of the perquisites of Liberal Peers under the late Government. To the items I gave there has to be added yet another sum of £2,000, paid to Lord Breadalbane, as Lord High Commissioner of the Church of Scotland—this bringing the total up to about £70,000.

The War Office proposes, the House of Commons disposes. If Lord Lansdowne and Mr. Brodrick think we are going to vote £5,000,000 for coaling stations next year because we voted that sum for ships last year they are counting without their host. It is time to stop this Box and Cox policy of Imperial defence. The War Office has quite enough to do with its own affairs without suggesting expenditure which the Admiralty has never asked for, and does not want. As in 1805, so now, the country looks to its Navy for defence, and it is the business of the Admiralty, not of the War Office, to provide for this.

The Italian Government has most wisely recognised the absolute independence of Ethiopia, and further agreed that, until the definite delimitation between its African Colony and Ethiopia, any territory that it may not wish to occupy will revert to Ethiopia. I congratulate the Abyssinians on having by force of arms secured their independence. If Italy is wise, it will reduce the area of its territory on the Red Sea to one port, and make that a free port.

One of the pleas put forward by our Government for its Soudan raid was that it was designed to aid Italy in her war against Abyssinia. We had, with that benevolence which characterises our dealings with property that does not belong to us, made over to Italy Kassala, as its occupation was believed to be likely to aid her in her military operations against Abyssinia. I presume that this town will now be evacuated by Italy. What, then, is to become of it? Are we to send troops to garrison it? Surely we might learn a lesson from Italy, and ourselves enter into a treaty with the ruler of the Soudan, recognising its independence, and establishing friendly commercial relations with him. This has never even been attempted. Because the Egyptians once occupied the Soudan, and, as Gordon said, made it a "hell on earth," we have treated it as belonging de jure to Egypt, and as ours because Egypt is ours, though what advantage we hope to derive from possessing a desert, with a few uncultivated oases in it, no one has ever explained.

THE LONDON HOSPITAL, E., APPEALS FOR SUBSCRIPTIONS. This Hospital for Men, Women, and Children, is the great General Hospital for the toiling poor of East London, & help is sorely needed

On all statements that I see in the newspapers in regard to matters outside the "four seas," my belief is becoming less and less. Last week we were informed by one or two veracious organs of public credulity that an arrangement was under consideration by the Great Powers, according to which each Power was to appoint one of the Turkish Ministers, and, in consideration of the Sultan agreeing to hand all authority over to this menagerie, the Powers were to guarantee a Turkish loan of five millions. I am told that this wondrous scheme was hatched in the Ottoman Bank, and launched as a trial balloon. But the Bank itself would do well, instead of furnishing schemes for the better government of Turkey, to amend its own ways. It took the lead not long ago in a huge speculation in South African mining securities, which ought to have been entirely outside its functions.

I am not a Crusader. I do not, like Mr. George Russell, wish to take action to establish the Christian religion in Constantinople any more than I would have us seek politically to establish it through the length and breadth of our Indian Empire. What I want is that we should give over consinging to permanent misgovernment the races subject to the Turk in the Balkan Peninsula and Asia Minor for some fancied advantage to ourselves. It is admitted at present, that we could not single-handed, and with Continental Europe against us, engage in a crusade for this purpose, and that, owing to a variety of circumstances, Russia is the only Power through which the salvation of these races can be worked out. If Lord Salisbury frankly accepts this view, then by all means let us leave his Government to carry it out. If not, let us agitate against him.

Zeal is always commendable, although it has become a proverb that excessive zeal is apt to be compromising. The business of a London correspondent of a provincial newspaper is to provide news, but the correspondent of the Western Morning News not only provides it but makes it. The public, he says, is soon to be placed in possession of the history of the quarrel between Lord Rosebery and Sir William Harcourt, as the entire correspondence relating to this quarrel, which extended over the whole period of Lord Rosebery's Leadership, is to be published. The correspondent is not at liberty to reveal its exact nature, but he vouchsafes the statement that there is a rod in pickle for Sir William which will make his chance of continuing to lead the Liberal Party improbable.

I think that the correspondent would have some difficulty in revealing the nature of this extensive correspondence, for the very simple reason that it does not exist. As I have already stated, the entire correspondence consists of (1) a letter written after the election of the new Parliament, by Lord Rosebery to one of his late colleagues, a copy of which was, I believe, forwarded by Lord Rosebery himself to Sir William, after it had, by his request, been shown to the other members of the defunct Cabinet, and (2) Sir William's reply. In Lord Rosebery's letter he is understood to have declined to have any further political connection with the Leader of the Opposition in the House of Commons, although alleging no reasons for this decision. I never heard that there was any particular secret made of the matter, and certainly a very large number of members of the House of Commons have been long aware of what had taken place. How this is likely to render the continuance of Sir William as Leader of the Liberal Party improbable I entirely fail to understand, unless his autocratic dismissal from the post of Liberal Leader in the House of Commons, without even consulting his late colleagues as to this momentous step, is to be deemed a ground for his dismissal by the Liberal Party from its Leadership. Obviously, the declaration that Lord Rosebery would have no further political connection with Sir William was tantamount to his dismissal from the Leadership in the Commons, so long as Lord Rosebery was the titular Leader of the Party, for how possibly could it be supposed that the one could remain Party Leader and the other Commons Leader, if the first declined all political connection with the second? If the letter did not mean this, it is for Lord Rosebery to explain what it did mean.

I cannot vouch for the truth of the following, but I am told that, when Sir John Willoughby received an intimation that he had forfeited his commission for having taken part in the Transvaal raid, he wrote a letter to the War Office, in which he said that, for the first time, an officer had been dismissed from the Queen's Service for having carried out the wishes of his superiors, and that whilst, so far as regarded himself, he should have had to resign his commission, as he was engaged in business matters to which he wished to devote himself exclusively, he yet felt it his duty to state that he had informed the officers engaged in the raid who were his subordinates, that it had been undertaken with the approval of the authorities. I presume that Sir John will be one of the witnesses before the Parliamentary Committee; if so, and if he really did write any such letter, his explanation of it will be interesting.

For Dr. Jameson I have somewhat of a weakness. He has always seemed to me an honest, dunderheaded, Dugald Dalgety, thoroughly loyal to the hand that fed him. I, therefore, am sorry to see in the newspapers that he has undergone an operation, and if, really, his health is seriously endangered by confinement after it, he ought to be released. As for the other Raid prisoners, who, we are told, are suffering from want of exercise, I see no reason why they should not, like many other prisoners, be furnished with an opportunity for exercise, if they think that this will conduce to their well-being; but to talk of their being let out of prison because they do not find themselves so comfortable there as outside is nonsense. Of course they do not; if they did, where would have been the point of imprisoning them?

At it again, as I anticipated when I heard that we were soon to have Mr. Rhodes with us. That great patriot has, according to the veracious scribes who have fulfilled their mission in Rhodesia by keeping his name well before the public, taken part with Lord Grey and Mr. Colenbrander in some meetings with the natives. We are now told by the newspapers that have taken up his cause here that he has "been the man in the gap," and that "in spite of official lukewarmness and the hostility of powerful enemies, he has wrested as from the fire the raw material of what will one day be a great province," and that this "is in itself sufficient to ensure the implacable hostility of the Little Englander;" but "he has been placed in power by a force even stronger than that of Sovereigns or Governments—the force of necessity." Well, well!

A correspondent writes from Capetown:—

We are desirous here to know what is intended to be done if Mr. Rhodes is proved before the British Parliamentary Committee to have provided, with other Company financiers, the means to invade the Transvaal. You English must not make the mistake of supposing that the ridiculous telegrams that you get from South Africa, and which are published in your newspapers, represent public opinion. Opinion here is entirely adverse to Mr. Rhodes, except with those who have made money, or who hope to make money, by his speculations. The Dutch population of the Cape is not hostile to the British Empire, but it consists of men of the old Puritan type, and they are with President Kruger, because they consider that the raid on the Transvaal was a disgrace to everybody concerned in it. If Mr. Rhodes is found guilty, they insist that the British Government shall take some action. If it does not, British rule will be regarded as synonymous with protection to evil-doers in high places. We, as you know, have already had a Committee, and no one reading the evidence placed before it can doubt that Mr. Rhodes was the prime mover in the raid.

We also want to know what is to be done about the Chartered Company. We were not asked our opinion when the Charter was given to it. But we think that, if the Company abused the Charter, and made it serve as a means to attack a neighbouring State, it ought to be set aside, or, anyhow, that all Sovereign power should be taken from the Company. Rhodesia is a fever-infested country, where Europeans will never be able to settle. Paying gold is a myth. Reef gold has never proved a paying speculation, except in the rarest instances. Even supposing the railroad through Rhodesia were made, how would this help the mines, almost all of which are situated at an enormous distance from the line of railroad? Everything connected with Rhodesia has been humbug. Young sprigs of your aristocracy came out to prospect for mines, their expenses being paid by syndicates. They lived gloriously, quaffing the best brands of champagne. Some of them got concessions and claims, and a few of these were brought out in London as companies. Now most of the sprigs have left for other parts. There are not now above 2,000 Europeans in the whole of Rhodesia, and most of these are whites who either cannot get away, or who make a scanty living by selling spirituous liquors, when they are not drinking them. The rinderpest has destroyed all the cattle; the natives are not really subdued. The Administration, with the armed force that it will be necessary to have to maintain order, will cost £100,000 at the very least. The interest on the debentures of the Company will amount to £50,000. These two items will never be covered by revenue. The country cannot be made a paying concern. The costs of administration cannot be covered. This we know, and for this reason we are not going to take it over as a gift. If you like to allow a Company, with Dukes at its head, to fool credulous people out of their money, and to spend this money in keeping up a financial farce, do so. That is your affair, not ours. But we demand that, if there be evidence to show that Rhodes and the Company were concerned in a raid which has put back the clock in South Africa for many a year, the Imperial Government shall take over all administration of Rhodesia. It may either pay itself, or make the Company pay in consideration of the commercial advantages that it obtained through its Charter, but which events have proved to be, as we all expected here, worthless. Rhodes and his friends did their utmost to make us believe that they were acting with the concurrence and connivance of Mr. Chamberlain. They went about after the failure saying that he must take care, or they would split on him. All this, I dare say, was bluff, for this has been their chief stock-in-trade. But if they and their Company are not made responsible for all responsibility that can be affixed on them, every one here will be inclined to think that, in some way or other, they have the Imperial authorities in their power, and can blackmail them by threats of disclosures.

This is all very well, but the Cape Colony is the predominant partner in South Africa, and should declare its willingness to take over Rhodesia. The Charter practically gave the Chartered Company certain rights in regard to land and minerals in that country, on condition that it paid all administrative expenses. The Cape Colony should undertake administration, leaving to the Company its land and mineral rights so long as it paid into the Cape Treasury the cost of administration. I believe these rights to be absolutely worthless, but evidently the shareholders of the Company do not, otherwise they would not retain their shares when they might sell them at 100 per cent. premium. They, therefore, could not complain of any such arrangement, for commercially their position would not be changed. As regards Mr. Chamberlain's complicity, I do not believe in it. I should say that he would be the very last man to put himself in the hands of Mr. Rhodes; nor do I precisely see what advantage he would have expected to derive by pulling the chestnuts out of the fire for him. I understand that Mr. Stead is about to publish a Christmas number, "proving" that Mr. Rhodes is the most virtuous of patriots, and Mr. Chamberlain the Archfiend, who pushed him into an enterprise and then deserted him. But Mr. Stead is avowedly an ardent admirer of Mr. Rhodes, and, of course, his pamphlet will necessarily be an ex parte statement based on a foregone conclusion drawn up by a clever journalist. I trust that he will not fail to let us know what Miss Julia Spook thinks of the whole matter.

---

The New Silk Waistcoatings for Gentlemen's Evening Dress and Morning Wear can now be seen at Ulster House, Conduit-street, W.

SCRUTATOR.

THE DEMOCRATIC MOTOR-CAR.

THE Unionist Leaders are, one after another, thanking Heaven that the destinies of the country have been entrusted to their immaculate hands, and that the Radicals are but a shattered remnant; indeed, if these Heaven-sent Ministers are not prepared to recognise that all is for the best in the best of worlds, it is because their Parliamentary majority is so large that, like an over-inflated balloon, it may one day burst. Unfortunately, they are strong, and we are weak; but let us hope that things will now mend.

They will not, unless Radicals gain experience by adverse fortune. If they repeat the errors of the past, these errors will produce the same results. When the Liberal Unionists left the Liberal Party, I rejoiced. In the main they represented the old Whig element, and when they found that they were no longer the dominant factor in the Party, they gravitated to the Conservatives, with whom their views had for long been more in harmony than with the Radicals. The only seceder whom I regretted to lose was Mr. Chamberlain, because he was really a Radical, and is not only an able debater, but a man of resource and action. Relieved from the paralyzing dead-weight of these Whigs, I hoped that a stalwart Radical policy would become that of the Party. Alas! I was disappointed. No sooner had Mr. Gladstone withdrawn from the Leadership than we found that the drift was backwards. The Whig Rump that still adhered to the Party managed to get the upper hand in its councils, and this Rump became our masters. All who refused to bow down before it were dubbed traitors, and the Party fell into the hands of a band seeking to retain office by the very simple expedient of either toning down, or acting counter to, every principle that had been supposed to form a portion of the Radical creed. Occasionally some of these principles were trotted out in orations, but all idea of acting on them was put aside. We know to what this led: to a more crushing defeat than has been inflicted on any Party during the present century.

This Whig Rump is now discredited, and for the nonce it is relegated to a back seat; but it has been scotched, not killed. It still exists, and it has not yet abjured the hope of being able once more to bring us under subjection to it. Its members would have us believe that the Liberal Party is in the dust because it has been too Radical, and that the only way to achieve a triumph at the next General Election is to place ourselves under the guidance of the Rump. Rather than such a barren triumph, I should prefer defeat. But I entirely deny that the course which these gentlemen suggest would be crowned with success. When first I sought the suffrages of my fellow-citizens, Lord Palmerston was Prime Minister. Artizans and labourers were without votes. On all domestic issues Lord Palmerston was a Conservative, and a much less advanced Conservative than are those who profess this faith to-day. Abroad he was fond of meddling, and he had formed a sort of alliance with the Liberals in every Continental country. His aim was to grant as little reform as he possibly could at home, and yet to pass as a Liberal by supporting all Liberal movements abroad. In regard to the abolition of Church rates, the only domestic reform that was before the country, Lord Palmerston, although declaring on all occasions that he wished to put an end to them, took very good care not to do so, lest he should be forced into further reforms. The Government was essentially aristocratic. Who were to be Ministers, and what these Ministers were to do, were decided in London salons. Against all this, Mr. Bright and other Radicals vainly protested. The two Parties had very little to distinguish them one from the other. Radicals regarded both as the common enemy. Our Whig Rump would, if it could, bring us back to those days. But the electorate is very different now from what it then was. The Liberal Party has now to look for support to the masses. The moneyed classes have gone over to the Conservatives; so have the "respectabilities," as they are called, under which term is included every snob who looks up to all whom he considers socially above him, and looks down on those he deems socially below him. Aristocracy, plutocracy, and snobocracy have joined hands against us. So long as we do not frankly throw ourselves on the masses, show them that there is a difference in acts as well as in words between us and the Conservatives, there is little probability of our ever obtaining a Parliamentary majority, unless it be owing to the faults of our opponents, in which case even with a majority we shall be powerless. The Whig remnant that still clings to us is a curse to us. It makes all true Radicals suspicious of us. They prefer the genuine and honest Conservative to the Conservative masquerading in Liberal garb—in words, Radical; in action, Tory.

The present Conservative Government has a majority of about 150 in Parliament, or, excluding the Irish, its majority is a good deal over 200. Wisely, from its standpoint, it diverts attention from domestic reforms by a militant and aggressive policy abroad. At home, its main object is to rob the many for the few. Last year it was the turn of the landlords to be given our goods; next year it is to be the turn of the Church of England. Sir William Harcourt's increase of the death dues has given the Government many millions to play with. The Unionists regard these millions as booty that has fallen into their hands. Their only trouble is as to its apportionment.

Now, I would ask any sane Radical fairly to consider what would be the result of the Liberal Party, as at present constituted, winning the next General Election. We should, it is true, be saved from open robbery for a brief period. But a Liberal Administration would be stale-mated in all legislative progress by the Lords. Once again, we should plough the sands of the seashore, until this wondrous folly had so outraged all men of sense, that we should find ourselves discredited and again in a minority. We have about forty Peers who vouchsafe their support to us, so long as we eschew all drastic Democratic legislation. These, as before, we should reward by distributing about £70,000 per annum amongst them. A certain number of wealthy men, who had contributed to the Party chest, would be made Peers or Baronets; a certain number of editors and wirepullers would be made Knights; a certain number of persons would be made Magistrates; a certain number of lawyers would get Judgeships and other legal pickings; and a certain number of ladies would obtain tickets for the Royal Enclosure at Ascot. But how would this advance Democracy?

It cannot be too often repeated that Mr. Gladstone closed his great patriotic career by a speech in which he declared that, although he had an assured majority in the House of Commons, he was powerless, because of the House of Lords; and, further, that he offered to remain in public life if a dissolution was assented to, and the question put to the constituencies whether the country would any longer submit to so degrading a servitude. Had this course been taken, the Liberal Party, freed from aristocratic trammels, would now have been in power. Until it will face this issue it must either be out of office, or, if in office, remain powerless for good. This is why I would have this made the one issue, all else being set aside until this reform is carried. If the Lords are minded to meet in their chamber, and to indulge in twaddling orations, by all means let them, provided that this twaddle does not prevent a Bill passed by the House of Commons becoming law during the Session in which it has been passed. Some Radicals may be anxious for one thing, others for another thing. But is it not idle folly for Radicals to dispute amongst themselves on this or that, so long as neither this nor that can become law? If the Radicals throughout the country are really in earnest, they will declare, by means of their Associations, that a change in the composition of the Legislature must be our battle cry, and that all who decline to fight for what is our irreducible minimum, be they Peers or be they Commoners, will do well to withdraw from the Liberal Party.

This revolution—for a revolution, I admit, it is—never will be accomplished unless all Radicals are not only in earnest, but subordinate for the moment all other issues to this one. Some Radicals are for one reform, some for another. But is it not silly folly to dispute what the Party ought to do on a variety of issues, so long as it is powerless to do anything? The House of Lords is the key of the enemy's position. If we destroy it, then we can hope for Democratic legislation; then alone will self-government be a reality both in the Legislature and in the Executive. Raze the fortress of privilege to the ground, or convert it into a ruin in which a few crows croak, but can do no more, and we shall have struck a death-blow to our opponents, from which they never will recover.

I know that it is said that all this endeavour to alter our legislative institutions is not in accordance with the spirit of modern Democracy, which should concern itself alone with those social problems that would secure to labour in farm and factory the means to emancipate itself from grinding, grovelling, and degrading poverty. A few days ago I was looking at a motor car stuck fast in the street. There was not enough motive power to turn its wheels. Of what use was this car? What would have been thought if the car had stuck fast, not only because its motive power was defective, but because a number of persons were using their strength to act as a drag on the wheels; and if it had been explained that these persons were possessed of an hereditary right to perform this silly work, and that they were paid for it by the owners of motor cars? This is really the case with our Legislature. If the Democratic car is to move onwards, not only must it have sufficient motive power, but its motor must not be at the mercy of men who have a right to hang on to its wheels. If we do not recognise this, we are either the veriest of humbugs or the dullest of fools.

"SOLDIER AN' SAILOR TOO."

In his latest volume of Barrack Room Ballads, published in "The Seven Seas," Mr. Rudyard Kipling sings of the virtues of "'Er Majesty's Jolly—soldier an' sailor too;" and the poet's tribute to this hero is entirely in accordance with the public sentiment in regard to the Royal Marines.

An' after I met 'im all over the world, a-doin' all kinds of things,
Like landin' 'isself with a Gatlin' gun to talk to them 'eathen kings;
'E sleeps in an 'ammick instead of a cot, an' 'e drills with the deck on a slew,
An' 'e sweats like a Jolly—'Er Majesty's Jolly—soldier an' sailor too!
For there isn't a job on the top o' the earth the beggar don't know, nor do—
You can leave 'im at night on a bald man's 'ead, to paddle 'is own canoe—
'E's a sort of a bloomin' cosmopolouse—soldier an' sailor too.

If anybody had asked me my opinion about the Marines, I should have endeavoured to say something to very much the same effect in my own feeble language. In fact, the Marines present themselves to me as the type of what a British Army should be—always ready to go anywhere and do anything, per mare, per terram. It is a pity we cannot limit ourselves to an Army of "'Er Majesty's Jollies," who would be quite capable of defending the Empire wherever or whenever it might be in danger, and would at the same time be quite useless for purposes of aggressive warfare.

Whatever may be the opinion of the public, however, or the opinion of a poet like Mr. Kipling, the merits of the Marines and their value as a fighting force have never received any adequate official recognition from the rulers of the Army and the Navy. From the time when the "Maritime Regiment" was first raised, under that martial and patriotic monarch King Charles the Second, down to the present moment, the Marines have been systematically slighted, and relegated to a subordinate and inferior position by the side of the Army and the Navy. Instead of being honoured as "soldier and sailor too," the Marine has been treated as a sort of maid-of-all-work in the Service, to be always kept at the hardest and dirtiest work, to be awarded the maximum of kicks and the minimum of half-pence, and to be snubbed where others are favoured with honours and rewards. The other day we were celebrating the Battle of Trafalgar. Who has ever heard or thought of the Marines in connection with that epoch-making event? Yet the Marines furnished to Nelson's fleet ninety officers and about 3,600 men, one-sixth of the total force engaged; and, what is more to the point, they numbered one-fifth of the total killed and wounded. And how were their services on this occasion recognised? By conferring the brevet rank of Major upon the Captain of Marines of the Victory. Amid all the honour and glory which followed the greatest naval victory in English history, that was the sole mark of official favour bestowed upon the Marines. And this is a fairly representative instance of the manner in which the force has been treated throughout recent Naval history.

The case of Major Brittan, fully described in TRUTH a fortnight ago, is the latest example of the attitude of the Admiralty towards the Marines, and as bad an example as can be found. It is in this light that I desire to press the case upon the attention of the public. The crime of Major Brittan, the crime for which he has been summarily deprived—without trial or opportunity of defence — of his appointment at Plymouth, and banished to a foreign station, is that he dared on two occasions to urge that the dignity, rights, and responsibilities of officers of Marines should be enhanced in certain particulars. He was guilty of no irregularity in so doing. On the first occasion he laid his complaint before the First Lord in accordance with the rules and traditions of the Service. On the second occasion he spoke at a Service Club, temperately and discreetly, in the course of a discussion in which all ranks and branches of the Service were taking part, and all sorts of views were being expressed. The changes which he advocated have been on many occasions mooted in Parliament and the Press, and, as regards one of them, a half-hearted declaration in favour of it has been made in Parliament by a former First Lord. Nor can it be said that, in making these suggestions in the way he did, Major Brittan was exclusively agitating on behalf of his own class, for the case which he made out can be rested quite as much upon public as upon professional interests. The iniquitous and arbitrary method by which the Admiralty have marked their resentment of Major Brittan's efforts is at once a matchless example of the abuse of official power from purely vindictive motives, and of the determination of the present rulers of the Navy to "keep down" the Marines by every means at their disposal.

It is too early, as yet, to predict what may be the upshot of this disgraceful proceeding, so far as Major Brittan himself is concerned. But, whatever the result to that officer, his experience ought to bring home to all who take an interest in the Navy the necessity for those reforms, the advocacy of which has cost him so dear. These reforms are so simple and reasonable that a civilian will find it difficult to understand the wrath which they have inspired in the august bosoms of "My Lords." One of them is that when an officer or man of the Royal Marines is tried by a Naval court-martial, an officer of the Marines shall be a member of the Court In the case of a charge against an officer, this is nothing more than a claim to a modified instalment of the right of every subject to be tried by his peers. In the case of a charge against an N.C.O. or private, it merely means that the officers to whom the prisoner is subject shall not be excluded from a voice upon his trial. It must obviously tend to impair the dignity of officers of Marines, and to weaken their authority over their own men, if the moment they embark they are subjected to the stigma of being disqualified to administer justice, and are required to leave any charge which they may prefer against their men to be dealt with exclusively by officers of a different branch of the Service. The whole case is aggravated by the fact that martial law forms a part of the study of Marine officers, and not of that of Naval officers; while on shore, a Marine officer is competent to sit on any court-martial—even that of a soldier—and only incurs his disqualification when he embarks. The present state of things is so indefensible that Lord George Hamilton, when at the Admiralty, expressed his disapproval of it in Parliament, but he had at the same time to admit that his Naval colleagues were of a different opinion—a clear proof, if proof were needed, that the prejudice of Naval officers, and that alone, stands in the way of this just and reasonable reform.

Again, a still heavier indignity is imposed on the Marines by the regulations which prevent a Marine officer taking command of a combined force of seamen and marines on shore, even when his relative seniority would entitle him to it. He may be specially ordered to take

SPA WINTER SEASON.—Balmy climate. Only 12 hrs. from London. Cercle des Etrangers, with every Monte Carlo attraction, always open. Hotel tariff from 10fr. per diem. Address, Jules Crehay, Sec.

BORWICK'S BAKING POWDER. Pure & wholesome, assists digestion.
BORWICK'S BAKING POWDER. Guaranteed to be free from alum.
BORWICK'S BAKING POWDER. It has the largest sale in the world.

such command, but he has no right to it; and, so far as I can see, the effect of the present regulations is that a Lieutenant-Colonel of Marines, landed with a mixed force for operations on shore, would, in the ordinary course of things, be under the command of the youngest midshipman of his ship, should that youth be landed at the same time in command of a naval contingent. This is not only an indignity, but it is downright folly. The Marines are specially trained for service on land, and whatever necessity there may be for subordinating them to the naval executive on board ship, common sense suggests that when land operations have to be undertaken the work should be entrusted to officers specially qualified for it. Imagine a rule providing that when a military force is embarked on one of H.M. ships, the officer commanding the troops should also have the right to take command of the ship, if his relative rank entitled him to that position. Such an anomaly would not be more absurd than the present regulations in regard to the position of Marine officers in operations on shore.

There are various minor grievances which came under notice in the discussion at the United Service Institution which led to Major Brittan's downfall, notably certain marked discrepancies between the pay and allowances of Marine officers and their comrades of corresponding rank in the Army and Navy, but the foregoing are the most conspicuous, and serve best to illustrate the true character of the Admiralty attack on this officer. It cannot possibly be suggested by any disinterested party that, in advocating the removal of such anomalies and disabilities, either in his official representations to the First Lord or in his remarks during the discussion at the United Service Institution, Major Brittan was guilty of anything in the nature of insubordination. The head and front of his offending is that the reforms he suggested are distasteful to the senior officers of the Navy, and specially offensive to the dominant clique at Whitehall. That a mere Major of Marines—albeit an officer of eighteen years' exemplary record, popular with his own comrades, and highly valued by all under whom he has served should dare to suggest any single step which would elevate the position of the Marines in relation to Naval officers, is in the eyes of the ruling party an outrage on constituted authority. The mere fact of the Lords of the Admiralty taking this view, and enforcing it by an arbitrary and vindictive punishment is the best proof of the justice of Major Brittan's contentions, and of the necessity for radical changes, not merely in the relation of the Marines with their Naval comrades, but also with the Admiralty itself. At the root of every grievance of which the Marines complain lies the inadequate representation of their Corps at headquarters. Without any disparagement to the officer at present filling that post, a Deputy-Adjutant-General of Marines at the Admiralty is in no position to take up a strong stand on any question affecting the interests of his department, and it is only in the natural course of things that he should become, as he has become, a mere passive instrument in the hands of My Lords. My own opinion is that an officer of Marines should have a seat on the Board of Admiralty, and that his presence there would be of great service to the public as well as to his own Corps. At any rate, whenever the War Office and the Admiralty are turned inside out, as they are bound to be before many more years are past, the Marines should, as a matter of course, receive a direct representation on the body which controls the Navy. In the meantime, the man who must be looked to for the redress of their grievances is the First Lord himself. Mr. Goschen can carry out all the reforms that have been suggested above, and can even right the personal wrong that has been done to Major Brittan, if he chooses to assert himself. The question now is whether he will do so, or whether he will content himself, like Lord George Hamilton, with an indolent confession that he appreciates the justice of the case for the Marines, but is not prepared to do justice at the cost of a conflict with his Naval colleagues.

HOLLOWAY SANATORIUM AGAIN.

It must not be supposed from the fact that several months have elapsed without any reference in these columns to the Holloway Sanatorium, that the scandals connected with the management of that institution are exhausted. Anybody who forms such a delusion may be quickly undeceived by reference to the last Annual Report of the Lunacy Commissioners, which has just been issued as a Parliamentary Blue Book. Several pages of the report are devoted to the inquiry which the Commissioners undertook about a year ago into the TRUTH allegations respecting the management of the Holloway Sanatorium. This inquiry was discussed very fully in TRUTH when the result of it was made known. There is some further correspondence between the Commissioners and the Sanatorium Committee given in the Commissioners' Report, and it is worthy of attention; but for the moment its interest is entirely overshadowed by the extraordinary story the Commissioners go on to tell of the very latest of the Holloway Sanatorium scandals. Here is the story.

It appears that in 1892 a female patient was "sent out on trial," which I take to be a description of the boarding-out system that has been so much in favour with the Managers of the Sanatorium. In April, 1893, this patient died, but the fact was not discovered by the Sanatorium authorities. A year later, April, 1894, the name of this patient was included in the annual statutory returns of the Sanatorium authorities to the Lunacy Commissioners, and was accompanied by a full and detailed description of the then condition of the patient, who, in point of fact, although the Sanatorium authorities were not aware of it, had then been in her grave for twelve months. The Commissioners quote from the report of the Sanatorium authorities on this patient such expressions as that she was "melancholic, believes she has ruined the world," was sparely nourished, no physical sign of disease, and still of unsound mind, and a proper person to be detained under care and treatment." All this, mind, is an official report made to the Lunacy Commissioners under the provisions of an Act of Parliament, and the patient thus reported upon had died somewhere outside the Sanatorium about twelve months previously. A year later, April, 1895, and two years after the same patient's death, her name was brought before the Committee of the Sanatorium for an extension of her leave of absence, which leave was solemnly granted. Not till August, 1895, do the Sanatorium authorities seem to have become aware that the woman was dead. They then, as in duty bound, sent notice to the Lunacy Commissioners, and the result was that inquiries were made which elicited the above facts. The Commissioners remark:—

CYCLING SUITS are a speciality at Ulster House, Conduit-street, London, W., where Ulsters, Overcoats, and Capes are kept ready for immediate use.

These facts were considered by us to be so serious, especially in their relation to the "special reports and certificates" for the patients generally, that we felt that we had no alternative but to place them before the Solicitor to the Treasury. After careful consideration, however, he was of opinion that the statements in the Report, although evidence of great carelessness, were not "wilful misstatements" within the meaning of the Lunacy Act, 1890, and did not, therefore, afford ground for prosecution.

All the facts, however, were at once laid before the Sanatorium Committee by our Board, and a strong letter of remonstrance was addressed to the Superintendent, from both of whom we received such explanations and apologies as were possible. The Committee subsequently made very proper special regulations, which will, we hope, render the repetition of such an occurrence impossible.

The first reflection which occurs upon the foregoing remarks is that the decision of the Solicitor to the Treasury seems to reduce the provisions of the Lunacy Act to a mere dead letter. If the officials responsible to the Lunacy Commissioners for all the patients in an Asylum can deliberately trump up a report, giving a detailed description of a patient who has been dead for a full twelve months, and if the rendering of such a report to the Commissioners, does not amount to a "wilful misstatement" which can be treated as a penal offence, it is difficult to see under what circumstances such an offence could be committed. The report was a misstatement, and a misstatement of the grossest kind—in fact, an absolute invention of the doctor who wrote it. It must have been wilful, because a man cannot sit down and write a detailed description of the present condition of a patient who died twelve months ago, except with a deliberate intention to deceive. If I were to write a paragraph for publication in TRUTH, stating that I had seen Queen Anne riding in Hyde Park on a bicycle, and that her Majesty showed no physical sign of disease, no one, I take it, would question that this was a wilful misstatement on my part, because it could not possibly be an accidental mistake. Not a bit less wilful is the statement in this report of the Holloway Sanatorium to the Lunacy Commissioners. And the Commissioners showed that they took that view of it by laying the circumstances before the Solicitor to the Treasury. If deliberate fabrications of this kind can be introduced into official reports with impunity, there is clearly no security for the accuracy of any statements which may be presented to the Lunacy Commissioners under the Act.

What, however, is to my mind of more consequence still is the additional evidence thus offered of the utter recklessness which has for so long characterised the management of the Holloway Sanatorium. In former articles in TRUTH I have multiplied instances of carelessness almost ad infinitum, but I cannot remember one of them which reveals more strikingly than this, the frame of mind in which Dr. Philipps and his assistants have been in the habit of going about the discharge of their duties. I take it that the return in which this romantic fiction occurred was signed by the Superintendent of the Sanatorium. Possibly the details respecting the different patients may have been compiled by an assistant medical officer, but at least Dr. Philipps must be held accountable for the absolute ignorance thus revealed respecting the condition of one of the patients on whom he professed to be reporting. He does not know, or his assistants do not know, and apparently none of them care, whether the patient is alive or dead; and in this state of blissful ignorance they cook up or put their name to a purely imaginative description of the patient's condition, purporting to be the result of the personal observations of one or other of them upon the woman. And this is the way in which returns to the Lunacy Commissioners have been compiled at the Holloway Sanatorium. I would ask any impartial reader, in view of such a revelation, what possible value can be attached to any statement emanating from Dr. Philipps, or any one under his command?

Again, what an interesting side-light we have here upon the amount of supervision that has been exercised over the out-patients of the Holloway Sanatorium. This is one of the subjects on which a good deal has been said in TRUTH. My readers may remember some of the evidence given as to the neglected condition of boarded-out patients, and their practical freedom from all supervision and control on the part of the Sanatorium authorities. Nothing, however, that has yet come to light gives so clearly an insight into the true state of the case as this incident reported by the Lunacy Commissioners. Here we have a patient who is actually dead for two years before the Superintendent of the Sanatorium becomes aware of the fact, and to save themselves the trouble of ascertaining for themselves how this patient is getting on, the officials of the institution actually fabricate from their own imaginations a graphic description of her condition for the benefit of the Lunacy Commissioners. Nor does it end with the officials. The very Committee of the Sanatorium, the body that has presumed to tell me that I have done the Institution a great injustice, and which has pronounced its solemn absolution on Dr. Philipps for all the sins imputed to him in TRUTH, knows so little about the condition of the boarded-out patients, that it actually grants an extension of leave to one of them two years after she has been laid in her grave.

The Lunacy Commissioners are men of sanguine disposition. Notwithstanding all that they have seen by their own inquiries into the various scandals at this institution, notwithstanding the strong censure which their last committee passed upon the Superintendent, they still "hope" that by reason of special regulations which the Sanatorium Committee have recently made, the repetition of such an occurrence will be rendered impossible. Being myself of a less sanguine disposition,

I do not share this hope, and I shall be much surprised if it is shared by the public. Occurrences such as that above described, and many other of the occurrences which have happened at the Holloway Sanatorium, are not to be suppressed by any rules or regulations that can be put on paper. When an official in a responsible position can laugh at an Act of Parliament and trifle with the public authority appointed to carry the Act out, he is not likely to show much more respect for any rules that may be formed by the committee of amiable gentlemen who imagine that they govern Holloway Sanatorium. Rules and regulations, whether made by Parliament or by a private committee, are worth nothing if you have no sense of honour and personal responsibility among those who are charged with carrying them out. It is the conspicuous absence of these qualities among the executive officials at the Holloway Sanatorium that has been at the root of all that has gone wrong there during the last ten years, down to the bogus report on which the Lunacy Commissioners vainly endeavoured to induce the Treasury to base a criminal prosecution. Neither is it likely, after the success with which the Superintendent has managed to keep his place in the face of scandal after scandal of a similar character to the above, that any material change will ever occur in the principles or the spirit in which the Sanatorium is directed, so long as this gentleman retains his position.

"THE WHITE ELEPHANT" AT THE COMEDY.

"If Pot says so, Pot lies," was all that Dr. Johnson could be heard to mutter when told of the solitary admirer of his tragedy. Now Pot was a critic, and Pot had professed to think that "Irene" was the first masterpiece of the ages—an opinion from which, as the Doctor foresaw, the ages have dissented. I am sure, or at all events I hope, that Mr. Carton and Mr. Charles Hawtrey would be of like words and mind with the lexicographer, if I professed to rejoice with them that did rejoice (tumultuously) over the former's piece at the latter's theatre on Thursday night; but, as it happens, I have no intention of professing anything of the kind. "A White Elephant" is not a masterpiece—is, indeed, not even a very good thing of its kind. There are good things in it: observation, some witty lines, and an adroit handling of the characters, while the "confounded imbroglio" which one of its characters complained of, if intricate, is also ingenious. But the conclusion of the whole matter is wrong somehow and disappointing. It is not the "complete thing" which Hazlitt's companion called the fight between Bill Neate and the Gasman. For one thing, its vitality is not sustained. The motive of a farce may be old, but, from the time the curtain rises until the curtain's lamented fall, it must be a career of vivacity, or age can wither that farce, and will; and Mr. Carton's farce, unhappily, like Talleyrand, suffers from an intermittent action of the heart. One applauded this and that, and laughed here, and again there, on Thursday night, but the fun and life were not kept up. The farce is at its best in the last act, which, as a distinguished critic has remarked, is rather too late in the play to save it. Vivacity reserved to the end will not animate the whole, or one's impression of the whole, like the omnipresent savour of onion "in the capacious salad bowl." One misses the onion—that is the truth. Again, Mr. Carton has mingled his farce with comedy, as a sect which Mr. Weller eyed with disaffection used to combine woodcuts with moral instruction. The sect in question flourished for a time on the mixture, but a play thus concocted appeals to different, scarcely to congruous, appetites. There is an inconsonancy and the inconsonancy is emphasised by the conduct of two of the actors playing comedy, and excellent comedy—to the farce of their fellows.

But all this is reviewing "at lairge," as the Scotch Laird swore; let us get on to our Elephant. Mr. Ogden was a tea merchant, and possessed (1) a smart wife—the eponymous White Elephant—the daughter of a hundred Earls—Miss Compton. He had also, among other things, (2) a daughter of his own, Miss Nina Boucicault; (3) a country house; (4) a town house, with capital oak furniture in the hall; (5) a sister, a maiden lady no longer young, but kittenish, if one may speak so of a maiden lady no longer young; (6) a confidential clerk, a detestable person but an able, and of an extreme intelligence and sharpness of countenance, only rivalled in the butler of a very distinguished and dear Statesman, and (7)—a Past. The tea merchant is played a great deal too well for his deserts and too delicately for the piece by Mr. Charles Brookfield. Now, Lady Gwendoline, the smart wife—and a lady entirely, amiable, well bred, and stupid—had a cousin, Mr. Stacey Gillam, without whom "no divorce case was complete"; while the daughter, Miss Boucicault, had a subterranean fiancé, whose suit as that of the "lurking" son of a gentleman who had been preferred to himself by the voice of local liberalism, Mr. Ogden discouraged. The town house, to complete this list of attributes, possessed a housekeeper, formerly a servant in Lady Gwendoline's family, and represented to something like perfection by Mrs. Charles Calvert. It is love that makes the play go round, so Miss Ogden determined to elope with her young man, when, as a natural consequence, her aunt, the tea merchant's sister, arranged to surrender her fair self to the honourable protection of Sir ——'s butler at the same hour. Lady Gwendoline was made the confidante of the first couple, at whose wedding she benevolently promised to assist, unknown to the tea-man; but, fortunately for the third act, the other pair excluded her from their confidence. On the day appointed for these elopements enter Mr. Stacey Gillam, alias Mr. Charles Hawtrey, a guest under sired of Ogden, but his wife's true ally and kinsman, and Mr. Somebody or Other, Ogden's uncle, bearing on his person such undeniable gout and such a knowledge of cattle-breeding as adds new laurels to the distinguished clan of Kemble. Lady Gwendoline had, of course, to get to town that night or break her word to her stepdaughter, while as for the intellectual head clerk, "faith unfaithful kept him falsely true," like Lancelot; he had to make the same journey, or else be untrue to his employer's sister, and merely faithful, instead, to his employer. They both naturally sought the man of the world's advice, Mr. Stacey's to wit, than whom where could they have found a better? Unfortunately they both told their tale in terms ambiguous. The butler borrowed his £5, the necessary sinews of elopement, easily enough; Lady Gwendoline readily, though not as readily, obtained her cousin's promise to squire her up to town, but—and here perhaps is the best instance of Mr. Carton's ingenious play-craft—Mr. Gillam was left persuaded to the deadly view that they meant to elope with one another. It would be rank ingratitude to reveal the natural consequences. How Mr. Stacey, drugging Uncle Kemble, gets to London and Mr. Ogden's house with his fair charge—the first innocent perhaps, the moralist will note with a sigh, who had ever travelled clandestinely under that sinner's escort; how Mr. Ogden comes back from his political meeting with his father-in-law, Eric Lewis—an excellent study in polite selfishness—to find his wife and daughter flown, and a quite idiotic though graceful explanation from his Gwendoline, and then starts with his noble relative in pursuit of her ladyship and Stacey; how, meanwhile, the sister Ogden-that-was and her husband (who, though on pleasure bent, had as frugal a mind as Mrs. Gilpin) sought a free breakfast table chez Mr. Ogden's housekeeper; and how they all met in the Ogden town house to the graduated horror of the housekeeper—is not all this to be seen at the Comedy Theatre? One must add, however, that Mr. Ogden's Past and Mr. Gillam's fiancée, as coincidences would have it, were none other than one and the same person. When this lady walked on under a strong, but not perhaps convincing, American accent about the end of the piece, she was received with enthusiasm, and deserved it, since, off the stage, she is Miss Lottie Venne. Miss Venne is always a welcome apparition. As for Lady Gwendoline and her Ogden, Miss Compton and Mr. Brookfield were either too good or too bad for the piece. Thackeray, somewhere, fancifully comparing the great novelists to boys in a public school, in which he himself, so he said, was a junior boy, says of Laurence Sterne that he is at once so naughty and so talented that he deserves a gold medal and a whipping. Mr. Brookfield seems to me to deserve both. His Ogden is a delicate and delightful bit of acting; the walk, the voice, the phrases approach perfection, but they belong to some distinguished Parliamentary barrister, not to the tea-merchant of farce. Miss Compton plays the good-natured, well-bred woman of the world, as she exists in the world. She simply is Lady Gwendoline, although there are some absurd little solecisms in her speech for which the author, not she, is probably responsible. Her final "g's" are orthodox in their omission; but when, to take a tiny instance parenthetically, did you ever hear such a woman say "I beg pardon" for "I beg

His / Your / Her / Their } Pardon"?

Still, Lady Gwendoline is pure comedy. Mr. Hawtrey is more frankly farcical, though one fears that the reason may not please him. There is a crude remark of Mark Twain's about a class whom it would be flattery "to call immoral." I would not confess to harbouring any sentiment so crude about Mr. Hawtrey, who remains the most fascinating of comedians; but if Mr. Gillam designs to remain a person without whom no divorce case is complete, he really must—well, take care of his figure. To be sure, George IV. was a Fat Adonis, but the principle is a wrong one.

It will be seen, in a word, that one regards the new piece at the Comedy as a mixture. The White Elephant, take it as a whole, is a deserving animal, but its knee does tend to go "out," like that of his Lordship, Lady Gwendolen's papa. There are pearls in it; but, like those "Orient pearls at random strung," which Dickens was asked to criticise, there is "too much string."

NOTES FROM PARIS.

THE ROYAL ELOPEMENT.

DONA ELVIRA'S elopement was the most natural thing in the world. She inherited the flush of high adventurous spirits and romantic hopefulness in which her father and mother were twenty-six years ago. They then believed they were going to win back the crown of Spain, and were plunging into the Basque enterprise that so nearly enabled them to succeed. The first wife of Carlos was, like the rest of her family, under the illusion that France was about to restore to her uncle, the Comte de Chambord, the throne his grandfather lost. Elvira was born at Geneva in 1871, between two adventurous journeys of Carlos and Margarita into the north of Spain. That capital of Calvinism was then filled with French and Spanish Legitimists, elated with the Royalism of the Versailles Assembly, and the difficulties in which Don Amadeo found himself at Madrid. The romantic Princess was the third of five children, four of whom were girls. She had reached, for a Bourbon, the very advanced age of twenty-three when Carlos made a love match in marrying Bertha de Rohan. It was selfish of a widower to bring in a young and handsome wife among four mature daughters, who could not hope to be mated suitably to their high rank as they were without large dowries. They saw Carlos the slave of Doña Bertha. He was master of the great fortune he inherited from his mother, the Archduchess Beatrice, and his aunt, the Comtesse de Chambord. The fortune of their mother was also considerable in the hands of one person, but what was it among five? It came partly from her mother, the Duchess of Palma (a daughter of the very romantic Duchesse de Berry), and from the Comte de Chambord. Consequently, Elvira's heritage of money was slender. But the heritage of inclinations was a fatality. She had to live in luxury and idleness at Venice, Viareggio—an Italian Arcachon—and Rome, where she was under the wing of the Princess Camillo Massimo and the Archduchess Alix. Her great occupations were music—which is so enervating when practised in an amateurish way—and reading old family records and correspondence.

An ancestress who stirred her imagination was the Duchesse de Berry. This Princess, when the mother of two children almost in their teens, and engaged in arousing Royal sentiments in La Vendée to civil war heat was seriously engaged in an amourette. She subsequently was able, when the consequences of this affair were undeniable, to get a Sicilian diplomat, Count Lucchesi Palli, to come forward as their author. He was far from Royal, but was not a low fellow. The daughter, born when the Duchess was in the Château de Blaye, with General Bugeaud as her gaoler, was, on growing up, married to the Duca della Grazia, and became mother of the Princess Massimo aforesaid, whose husband claims descent from Fabius Cunctator.

Doña Elvira had intended editing memoirs left by her mother, justifying the romantic adventures of the Duchesse de Berry. The Princess was in a dangerous state of mind when Don Carlos, wishing to redecorate his Venetian palace, summoned there a Roman painter, Focchi. Given age, heredity, and romantic bent, a love affair was inevitable. Focchi, it appears, is a handsome man of thirty-five. His having a wife and children is a detail which a George Sand or a mediæval Court of Love would not have taken into account. The Princess became a prey to gloom, and showed other signs of unhappiness. But the cause of her depression was not at once suspected. When it was, she was sent to Rome, but did not recover there. Her state did not improve at Viareggio, where she stayed at the villa of her uncle, the Duke of Parma. The 60,000 francs (not 300,000 francs), that she took when she had arranged to run away to France, were her own. There was great chuckling among the Orleanists when the news of her elopement was made public. Their papers gave it as "sure to be denied." Don Carlos has done what was best under the circumstances, in writing a letter to his "children," by which he means the French and Spanish Legitimists, to announce "the death of an unfortunate soul." His letter is dictated, one can see, by strong feeling. It aims at no literary effect, but, having the terse eloquence of emotion, and being in good form, is literary, nevertheless. What a strange thing human nature is! There is not an Orleans Prince who would not have done better than Carlos for four motherless daughters, the eldest of whom is now twenty-eight. And still there is not one of them who could dip his pen in his heart's blood, as Carlos has done, to write a letter, noble in tone, without a flat word, or the slightest offence against delicate taste or parental feeling.

On the Continent great latitude is allowed to married or widowed Princesses. I have spoken of the Duchesse de Berry. She so looked and behaved that every man she talked to fancied she would be an easy conquest. The late Queen Christina fell in love with Muñoz before she was a widow, and, when a widow, had him cooped up in her palace. She just missed eloping before she was married to Ferdinand VII. Victor Emmanuel exiled a widowed member of the Sardinian Royal family from Turin, because she had a weakness for the brother of a Genoese pharmaceutical chemist. It was not long after the deaths of the Queen-mother, Queen Adelaide, and the King's brothers, whose medicines were compounded by the Genoese. The exile, however, outlived the disgrace. The Princesse Mathilde married at a Paris mairie the late M. Poquelin, a painter of enamelled porcelain. As Society was not obliged to take official notice of the marriage, it did not object. He continued to keep up a house of his own, and played the part, not of husband, but empressé and discreetly devoted friend of the Princess. Mme. Renan thought the arrangement ideal, as the artist was rich, gentlemanly, and not an old man.

A curious arrangement was entered into in our time by the Sovereigns of a great German State remarkable for their high tone and religious feeling. The husband had married entirely for State reasons, for he was deeply in love with a very high-born lady, but not his equal. He esteemed the wife he took, but felt that any warmer feeling than friendship was impossible. Divorce would have shut her out from the high station she had hoped to fill, and would not have enabled him to marry according to his wishes. A separation of which the public was to know nothing was agreed upon. All the convenances were to be observed. The loved lady died. Her illustrious lover fell back on the friendship of an unambitious, unaffected, and good-looking fräulein. His wife sought the friendship of a Frenchman of distinguished education, whom she named her librarian. She wore black clothes for some years in private after his death. The next friend was her reader, also a Frenchman. He had literary tastes, and has written a life and personal recollections of his patroness. They are to appear when she is dead.

Cardinal Hohenlohe's family are disappointed at his having bequeathed all his fortune to his secretary. This lucky person is a cleric. The Villa d'Este, where the Cardinal lived rent free, will be tenantless. Its owner, the Archduke Francis Ferdinand, intends never to go there as long as there is an Italian Court at the Quirinal. The Villa d'Este afforded Mansard and Le Nôtre ideas for the Château of Versailles. Cardinal Hohenlohe could only occupy a wing. This villa was built by the Cardinal Ferrara, well known in French history for the missions he accomplished in France. One was to obtain the hand of Renée of France for the Duke of Ferrara. He crowded his villa with busts and statues taken from the adjacent Villa of Hadrian. Michael Angelo called the Fountain of Pegasus "the Queen of Fountains." It is crumbling away, for the Cardinal was too impatient to let it be made in marble. He created a fund to keep up the villa and gardens. The avaricious Duke Hercules III. of Modena got hold of this capital. He sent part of the statues to Modena and sold the others to England. The sulphurous waters near the villa were prescribed for the Archduke Francis Ferdinand. He refused to take them there, and had them bottled and sent on to him to Austria.

The coming Sarah Bernhardt festival will more than console the actress for the ruffling neglect she met with at Versailles when she went there to recite before the Czar and Czarina. Versailles was not built for monster fin de siècle fetes. And yet it is such a palace of big distances that an army of servants is wanted to prevent confusion. Mme. Sarah Bernhardt found nobody to receive her. She expected that some grand member of the President's household would be in waiting where she was to alight. She had no idea where she was to dress. When an usher was found, he could not tell her. In running about to see, she fell in with her rival, Réjane, who was just as much at sea. Danseuses in their every-day clothes were practising their steps to keep themselves warm until a porte-danseuse could find their dressing room. These hitches surmounted, the stage queens found that every one neglected them. Réjane, however, forgave the Presidential Party. She understood that a real Empress of Russia was, under the circumstances, more interesting than she or Mme. Bernhardt could be. So she kept her head, was mistress of all her resources, and scored a great success. The more famous actress was too much ruffled to be at her best. Feeling this, and annoyed at seeing all eyes turned on Czar and Czarina, she only recited Sully-Prudhomme's verses. When she was to advance a second time to recite Victor Hugo's she was not to be found. Towards the close of the entertainment the Czar expressed a gracious wish to compliment her. A plausible fib was invented to excuse her absence. She had gone back to Paris. But as time pressed for the Imperial pair to depart for Chalons, they had no opportunity to know this. They still believe she lost her way in a labyrinth of stairs and passages.

I rather like the idea of the Poets at the Sarah Bernhardt festival feeding her nostrils with more delicate incense than they burned before the august Russian idols. As there was a medal minted in honour of Czar and Czarina, so another, not less valuable, will be struck in honour of the theatrical queen. Roty, the sculptor, is charged to execute the model. Mme. Bernhardt will participate with the Poets in the festival. She will come forward in a series of characters in which she was at her best, leading off with Zanetto in Coppée's "Un Passant." As Zanetto, she was exquisite. It was her first success, and I dare say the one that best pleased her. She owed nothing to the ignorance or lion-hunting instincts of audiences, to ovation committees, impresarios, puffs, and Press "suggestion." I never cared much for her in her subsequent "creations," save in "L'Étrangère." Her triumphs at the Français, as Mrs. Clarkson in that play, were a good deal due to her thin figure and the straight folds of her dress. Full busts and dome-shaped petticoats were fashionable from the time the Prince Imperial was expected, in 1855, almost to the fall of the Empire. The dressmaker of a slender dame used at least two sheets of wadding and a quantity of horsehair each time she made her a modish dress. This artificial fulness ended by palling on the eye. People were sick of it. Sarah Bernhardt came forward with clinging clothes when the reaction was at its height. She was the first to drape as with a winding-sheet. Her manner of dressing delighted. What delighted more was that the line of beauty was neither in her body nor her clothes, but in her motions. They contrasted harmoniously with the straight lines of her skirts—and with the magnificent fleshiness of Mlle. Croizette, who played as Duchesse de Septmonts in "L'Étrangère." Each actress set off the other. Croizette took people by storm, Sarah by insinuating feline graces. She is not good in violent effects, and overdoes langour, but is always marvellous as a courtesan or intrigante.

LETTER FROM THE LINKMAN.

DEAR LADY BETTY,—It is announced this week that a National Railway Museum is to be founded. There is much that may be said in favour of the scheme. There is considerably more, however, that may be said in favour of founding another museum, which would be immeasurably valuable to the end of time.

Certain instruments called the "Animatographe" and the "Cinématographe" have recently been devised which reproduce incidents precisely as they occur. At one of the music-halls, for instance, the recent coronation of the Czar is reproduced, the action being throughout accurate in every detail. The apparatus used resembles a dark lantern, but the slides are composed of a combination of numerous instantaneous photographs of the incident. The result of this contrivance is that an occurrence, however long it may last, or however complicated it is, may be reproduced an indefinite number of times precisely as it took place. It will be apparent to all that a museum containing a collection of slides which faithfully record and reproduce the most important events would have unusual historical value. Had the "Animatographe" or the "Cinématographe" been invented in the reign of Charles the Second, and had a national collection of slides been commenced then, we could now have reproduced for our benefit scenes from the Great Plague, the Great Fire of London, the Executions of Catholics, the Battle of Blenheim, the Battle of Trafalgar, and the Battle of Waterloo, all of which would be very valuable; for they would enable us not only to understand those events better than we do, but they would give us pictures of the customs and costumes of those times which could be relied upon.

In a few months from now the Queen will probably visit Westminster Abbey in state to be present at a thanksgiving service to commemorate the fact that her Majesty has reigned a longer period than any other British Sovereign. The Queen will be surrounded on that occasion by most of those who are making the history of the period, the names of several of whom will be remembered during many generations. Such an incident deserves to become the commencement of the Animatographe Museum. It is possible that Mr. Gladstone will again make a memorable speech, and it is unnecessary to say that an exact reproduction of that celebrated orator as he is addressing a public meeting would greatly interest vast numbers of those who are to come after us. It would indeed be difficult to over-estimate the value of such a museum, and it is to be hoped that, now that the obvious suggestion has been made, some will come forward who, either by their energetic co-operation, their perseverance, or by pecuniary assistance, will succeed in founding the Animatographe Museum.

There are some who will argue that the instrument is not yet sufficiently perfected for such a museum to be founded. The answer to this is simple. No doubt important improvements will be discovered, but, as it is, the results are sufficiently clear to reproduce incidents, and, meanwhile, historical events are occurring which, if not recorded by the "Animatographe," will be lost to posterity in the best form which they can be handed down for the moment.

Another possible development of the "Animatographe" does not seem to have been thought of. Why should not a Company be established to supply instruments and slides at a subscription of, say, ten guineas a year? Thus a subscriber in a country house would receive slides daily or weekly of the principal incidents which have recently occurred throughout the world, and by merely passing these through the instrument he could reproduce the incidents precisely as they had happened. "Animatographe" reproductions of the Armenian massacres would have horrified the whole of Europe. "Animatographe" reproductions of incidents which have occurred in the Matabele war might have had considerable influence upon public opinion; and clandestinely taken "Animatographe" photographs of work at certain Mashonaland gold mines might save speculators large sums of money. Indeed, if carefully managed, the Animatographe might easily be made to compete seriously with the illustrated papers, unless the proprietor of one of them adopts the idea, and adds this instrument for the use of those subscribers who are rich enough to afford it.

* * * * *

The letter "R" appears to have an unfortunate influence upon South Africa, for that country has suffered terribly through Rhodes, raiders, and rinderpest.

* * * * *

It was announced in these columns several months ago that Mr. Henry Austin Lee had been appointed to succeed the late Sir Joseph Crowe as Commercial Attaché for Europe to reside at Paris. For some inexplicable reason the appointment was not gazetted until Tuesday last. The long delay in doing that encouraged certain writers to contradict "officially" the statement made in TRUTH.

Another announcement made in these columns some weeks ago was also contradicted—and has also been verified. It was stated that the winter exhibition of the Royal Academy would consist exclusively, or almost exclusively, of works by the late Lord Leighton. That this is to be, was officially announced on Friday. It is true that when the announcement was made in these columns Mr. Poynter had not yet been elected President of the Royal Academy, and the Academicians had not themselves decided what the winter exhibition should consist of. That has nothing to do with the matter. The old journalism was the journalism of the day before; modern journalism was the journalism of the day after; and the "new journalism" is journalism several months in advance.

* * * * *

Many will regret to hear of the death of Sir Benjamin Richardson, which occurred suddenly at his house in Manchester-square on Sunday morning. The late Sir Benjamin was a well-known physician, who possessed considerable literary talent. About twenty years ago his description of "Hygeia," an imaginary City of Health, created a great stir, and there is no doubt that it much helped the hygienic movement which is now occasionally pushed to extremes in certain directions. The description was particularly fascinating, and resembled in some ways the imaginary productions of Jules Verne. There is this in the present generation which is especially curious: a quarter of a century ago men and women were retrospective readers; they read the celebrated works of those who had come before them, and were almost as well acquainted with those things which had attracted attention in the previous generation as those were who formed part of it. The men and women of to-day appear to have no time to read anything but newspapers and the latest book of the hour; their ignorance of the works, plays, music, and events of a quarter of a century before is amazing. This reflection occurred to me when remembering the excitement caused by Dr. Richardson's description of Hygeia, and comparing that with the almost complete ignorance of it shown by the majority of even the well informed who belong to the generation of to-day.

The late Lady Huntingtower, who died on Friday, was the mother of the present Lord Dysart. In the early eighties Lady Huntingtower entertained much in London, and, being witty, very amiable, and not worldly, she soon became a general favourite.

* * * * * *

I have been asked to call attention to the "Children's Happy Evenings Association," an admirable institution which was founded seven years ago for the purpose of bringing to the children of the poor some of the pleasures which help to make the young life of the children of the rich so delightful. The Association, which began its good work in a small way, has prospered so well and has become so popular, that over six thousand children are entertained every week at thirty-five centres, and many more wish eagerly to have the same advantages extended to them. We are entering the children's month, and it is to be hoped that, if for no better reason, for the great affection the prosperous have for their own children, they will help to give a little pleasure to those of the poor. Lady Jeune, Lady Cadogan, Lady Jersey, and the Sub-Dean of the Chapels Royal have written to the papers a joint letter, appealing for assistance for the Association, and they hope that for so good a purpose many will send small offerings to Miss Edith Heather-Bigg, the Honorary Secretary, 14, Radnor-place, Hyde Park, or to Sir Herbert Stephen, the Honorary Treasurer, 4, Paper-buildings, Temple.—Believe me to be, very truly yours, MARMADUKE.

Every requirement for Furnishing tastefully at least expense is amply illustrated in the Galleries and Catalogues of HAMPTON & SONS, Furnishers & Decorators, Pall-Mall East, S.W.

SPORTING NOTES.

WRITING a fortnight ago about the weights for the Derby Cup, which had just been published, I expressed the opinion that this race "will be a good thing for Ghislaine if she runs." Ghislaine started at 16 to 1, and was beaten by a short head, but it was impossible to fancy her after the wretched manner in which she had run at Liverpool. It is a pity that the French mare had not been kept for her Derby engagement, but Lord W. Beresford's stud does not seem to be cleverly managed, and it is difficult to understand the object of starting both Ghislaine and Diakka at Derby. Winkfield's Pride started a great favourite, and he ran well, considering his weight. Birch-rod is a very unlucky mare, for she was shut in hopelessly, and all her jockey's efforts to get through were unavailing. La Sagesse was very much fancied just at the last, as she was supposed to have come on a good deal since the Cambridgeshire, and she ran well in that race for a long way.

The most notable feature in the Ascot November entries is the success of the three-year-old stakes for 1898. The Prince of Wales's Stakes has risen from forty-six and forty-nine entries to sixty-six, and the Ascot Derby from thirty-five this year, and the same number for next year, to fifty-one. On the other hand, there is a slight decline in the New Stakes entry, which, however, numbers 116, and all the leading owners have subscribed to the race. The fact is, that the value of the New Stakes and of the Coventry Stakes ought to be considerably increased, and this will have to be done if these races are to hold their own. When there is a stake of £5,000 at Sandown Park in July, non-betting owners will not care to run their horses for a race of less than £2,000 in June. Each of these stakes should have £2,000 added money, and the sweepstakes should be of £25 each, £10 forfeit if declared by the last Tuesday in March. The Biennial of 1897-98 has obtained seventy-nine entries, as against eighty-two for this year and seventy-one for last year. It is a race of £10 each, with £500 added, and in this case, too, the added money should be doubled and the sweepstakes changed to £20 each, £10 forfeit if declared by the last Tuesday in March in each year of running. The New Biennial (1897-98) has obtained forty-one entries, which is about the average number of late years. No fewer than thirty of the animals engaged in this race are yearlings, and among the eleven two-year-olds are Hellebore, Eager, Flying Colours, Sandia, Sauce Tartare, Canonbury, Lady Frivoles, Melfitana, and Perseat. There are seventy-seven entries for the Hardwicke Stakes, three-fourths of which are yearlings. Not a single four-year-old has been engaged, and only six three-year-olds, including Bay Ronald, Gallinco, Melange, Roquebrune, and South Australian. Neither Persimmon, Labrador, nor Canterbury Pilgrim has been engaged. Of the two-year-olds in this race the most notable are Brigg, Cortegar, Glencally, Smean, and Crestfallen. Considering that this is the richest race of the year for four-year-olds and upwards (except the Ascot Cup), it is in the highest degree unsatisfactory that no four-year-olds should have been entered and so few three-year-olds, while none of the crack two-year-olds of the season have been engaged. Of course, as I have before pointed out, the wind has been taken out of the sails of this race by the £10,000 stake at the Newmarket First July Meeting, and if that event were not in existence no doubt another score of two-year-olds would have been entered here. The fact is that the conditions of the race must be changed unless it is to sink into contempt. The added money should be doubled (£4,000 instead of £2,000), and the sweepstakes should be £50 each, £30 forfeit if declared in the January before running, or £10 only if declared twelve months before running.

The two-year-old events at Epsom, which also closed the other day, have done astonishingly well, considering the miserably meagre amounts which are given to these races, and indeed it is most discreditable that the Stewards of the Jockey Club do not insist upon a definite sum being added. I hear Epsom is the richest meeting in the country after Ascot, and it is managed with flea-skinning parsimony in this important department. Three events have just closed for next year's meetings, to which £900 is nominally added. The amounts which will be really drawn from the fund for these races is, however, only £325, the rest being contributed by the owners by means of entrances.

There are thirteen subscribers to the Prince of Wales's Post Sweepstakes at Goodwood (1898), which race will be worth £2,600. The Prince of Wales has engaged his foal Sandringham, own brother to Persimmon; while Lord Rosebery has a half sister to Ladas, by Sheen; and one of Sir B. Maple's is a filly by Orme out of the famous Corrie Roy.

Two stakes at Baden Baden close on Tuesday next, which I strongly recommend to the notice of owners, not merely on account of their value and very fair pecuniary conditions, but also because it does not usually take a flyer of the higher class to win at German meetings. A horse which would be Gulliver in Brobdingnag at Newmarket becomes transformed into Gulliver in Lilliput at Iffezheim. The Baden Grand Prize of £5,000 (besides a gold cup, value about £500, given by the Grand Duke) is a weight-for-age stake, with penalties and allowances, for now yearlings and upwards, to be run in August, 1898, the distance being one mile and a half. The Iffezheim Foal Stakes, of £4,000 and a piece of plate, is a race for now foals, to run at three years old, the distance being one mile and a half, with penalties and maiden and breeding allowances. There are generous bonuses for the breeders of first and second and third horses. The Baden Grand Prize will be, as a matter of fact, the richest race run in Europe during 1898 for five-year-olds and upwards.

The Stewards of the Jockey Club must have felt depressed when they considered the financial result of their £10,000 races. The Princess of Wales's Stakes cost the Newmarket Fund £1,994, and £2,377 had to be drawn for the Jockey Club Stakes. It is probable that there will be a still larger deficit over these two events next year. The fact is that they would obtain just as large subscriptions, and would excite quite as much interest if they were stakes of £5,000 each, of which sum not less than £4,000 should go to the winner.

Messrs. Tattersall's winter sales at Newmarket are to be held on Tuesday, December 8, and the three following days. The catalogues are already full. Some good bargains have been picked up at all these sales. The great catch there last year was Quarrel (who was then known as Tarrare), who was bought for Lord Rosebery for 670 gs., and he has since won the Royal Hunt Cup, and several other valuable races.

When writing last week about Silvio, I stated that he never won a race after the St. Leger, which was a mistake. I had intended to say that Silvio never won an important race. As a three-year-old he was beaten by Springfield for the Champion Stakes, and as a four-year-old he had no chance with Verneuil in the Ascot Cup, while as a five-year-old Isonomy defeated him for the Vase at Ascot, and Chippendale beat him for the Hardwicke Stakes. He was defeated also for the Stockbridge Cup, and for the Bunbury Stakes at Newmarket, Phœnix being his conqueror on the last occasion. Silvio ought to have won the Hardwicke Stakes, and there was a secret history of that race, as he was really defeated because Archer had deeply offended Fordham, who rode Lancastrian, and he so managed matters that J. Osborne got first run with Chippendale, who afterwards won the Cesarewitch. The Sporting Times is of the opinion that Silvio "did some of his best work" after his Leger victory; but the fact is that when crediting him with having defeated Petrarch, Verneuil, and Hampton at Newmarket, it is absolutely necessary to bear in mind that the running of those horses was sometimes decidedly eccentric. The Sporting Times is correct in considering the Vase form with Isonomy as Silvio's best running, for he was giving 7 lb. to Mr. Gretton's steed, who was then regarded as a mere handicap horse, for odds of 9 to 4 were actually betted on Silvio. Isonomy had commenced the season by being defeated for the Newmarket Handicap by the American horse Parole, who in the following week won the City and Suburban and the Metropolitan. Isonomy ran a lazy race for the Vase, and Cannon had to rouse him; but this did him good, and two days later he simply walked in for the Gold Cup.

The Midland Counties Handicap at Warwick this afternoon will probably be won by the Duke of Westminster's hitherto disappointing colt Rampion, who most assuredly ought to have carried off the Duke of York Handicap at Kempton Park. Easter Gift, who won this race last year, is decidedly well in; and Palace Gate will have an opportunity of showing whether her friends were justified in asserting that she ought to have won the Liverpool Cup.

Twenty two-year-olds have been left in for the Lancashire Nursery of £500 at Manchester to-morrow, and History or Palm Oil ought to win. There are seventeen acceptances for the Lancashire Handicap of £1,000 on Friday, and Easter Gift is again leniently treated; but St. Jarlath should be able to win this race, for which Yorker will probably be a hot favourite.

A large number of important races at Sandown Park close on Tuesday next, including the Sandringham Foal Stakes of £2,000 for now foals, to run as three-year-olds. The conditions of this event are nonsensical, as there is far too much cutting up, only £1,500 being given to the owner of the winner, unless he happens to be also the nominator (i.e., breeder), in which case he would get £1,750. There is also the Sandown Foal Stakes of £2,000, an event with similar conditions, but to be run in October instead of June. The great race, however, is the Century Stakes of £10,000 for now foals and yearlings, to run at four and five year old, in April, 1900. The distance is two miles, and if the "executive" obtain 250 entries for so heavy a subscription race over this distance I shall be vastly surprised. It would have been much wiser to have made the course one mile and a half. The conditions are very fair, and if such a race can succeed at all this one certainly ought to; but among the comparatively few old horses now in training how very few have any pretensions to stay two miles.

Last year there were sixteen runners for the Manchester Handicap and in 1894 twenty started, but on the present occasion there are positively only fourteen acceptances. Dinna Forget and Winkfield's Pride are both overweighted, and the Derby running of the Cambridgeshire winner was not encouraging, as he was backed in earnest there, and here the course might be too far for him.

Spook is fancied at Newmarket, but he does not look like beating Bowline at the weights. Chit Chat is the nominal favourite, but the early betting on such events is all moonshine, and no sane person will invest a sixpence on the race until the numbers are up. Chit Chat means Laodamia at an impossible weight, nor do I see how this animal is to beat Telescope, who is thrown in. At Doncaster Telescope finished in front of Chit Chat, having 9 lb. the worst of the weights. Now the three-year-old has to give Mr. Singer's horse 10 lb., and this great difference ought to make it a certainty that Telescope will prove the better of the pair, even allowing that Chit Chat was not ridden out in the Great Yorkshire Handicap. Telescope's form has undoubtedly been very bad since he astonished every one by running second to Sir Visto for the St. Leger, but he certainly has a great chance in this race, for "class" is not prominently represented, and he has a ridiculous weight. Swaledale has won a number of races in moderate company. Dunrobin has long been talked of as a likely animal to win a good handicap, and he has certainly tried the patience of his friends very highly. The French horse, Epicharis, has shown good form and he is sure to stay the distance. If this animal is backed in a genuine way at the finish he will be very near winning, and I certainly do not believe that Chit Chat could give him 6 lb. Phœbus Apollo can have no chance on his recent running. There will be no really reliable betting on this event until the numbers are up, and it is usually a most disastrous race for backers.

Mr. Lehmann is in America. He crossed before the McKinley tariff imposed a duty on foreign oarsmen. The Press has turned its attention to the history of his life. The New York Herald has discovered that "he is the best man of his type in England—that is a type of amateur who, after taking his University degree, maintains himself by coaching College crews. He is a professional coach." This is the consequence of having entertained the Oxford crew in training and built Fieldhead, his house at Bourne End, to accommodate an eight. The ingenious biographer may rest assured that he is utterly wrong. The gentleman pro. is not known in rowing, and no one is ever paid a farthing for coaching an amateur crew. Mr. Lehmann, strange as it may seem, does not get a cent. for crossing the Atlantic. In old days professional watermen used to coach College crews at Oxford. But the old order is long since changed. To a certain extent it is gratifying to find our superiority in rowing so far recognised that the American Universities have had to become our pupils instead of our mentors. At the same time, many would prefer that we should keep our style to ourselves. The two American eights, Cornell and Yale, have shown the perfection to which a wrong style can be brought. The same perfection with the long stroke rowed at Henley would be certain to take the Grand to America. Unless Mr. Lehmann's powers as a coach have been belied, he has brought that event within a very measurable distance. When America triumphs at Henley, his services will not be forgotten—by British oarsmen, at all events. How far they will be grateful to him is another question. In the meantime, it may be as well to say that there is no foundation for the rumour that Mr. Trevor Jones, the other Cambridge coach, is going over to teach Yale. Cambridge University is not a universal coach provider.

The finish at Cambridge of the Colquhoun Sculls was very exciting, Gould, who alone had intended to meet Guinness, just beating Howell, who had only recently taken to sculling. The latter spurted marvellously in the long reach, and finished with great strength. The trial eights have been shifted about in a peculiar way. The apparent object seems to have been to give a number of men a trial which they did not require. However, they are settling down at last, and yet their composition does not give satisfaction. For some strange reason Barber, the Third Trinity stroke, has not been given a trial. Last year my Cambridge correspondent called attention to his merits. This year there is a strongly expressed feeling at the University that he should be given a trial. There is plenty of time to put things straight, but if the Light Blues muddle away their chances of success at Putney there will be a bigger row than there was a few years ago. However, this is not likely to happen, as the President is keenly alive to his onerous duties. The Oxford trials are very fair, and one or two men are promising, more especially Harrington, of Exeter, a heavy weight, who is well worth looking after.

The Rugby team at Cambridge is a very hot one, and will on its present form beat Oxford. The Light Blues never gave Blackheath, on the Rectory Field, a single chance from start to finish. Bell and Jacobs simply played with Cattell and Livesey at half, and gave their three-quarters innumerable chances. The Blackheath defence was good, Bond and Russell doing a lot of work, and saving frequently just on the goal line. The home forwards screwed well, and if they had broken up and dribbled away they would have gained a lot of ground. But they stood and looked at the 'Varsity halves picking up the ball. Latter and Fegan muddled the ball frequently at three-quarters, and the outsides passed even worse than they did last year. In fact, Blackheath makes no attempt to learn to pass. To turn to the Cambridge team. The forwards approach the best modern type to a great extent. They do not, like the Welsh men, leave all the passing to the outsides. They play with the outsides. They are always on the ball, tackle well, and every man knows what to do with the ball when he gets it. In fact, their passing was one of the features of the game. They dribbled well, too, and gave evidence of being able to shove, but they could not screw a bit, and again and again let their opponents wheel them. However, they quickly got round and saved themselves. The outsides were well together, and gave a really good example of the passing game, the chief feature being the way in which the wings passed inside when nearing the touch line. Mackie saved any rushes and fed his wing well, while Pilkington ran well and never lost his head. Their place-kicking was weak. The Dark Blues did not do very brilliantly against the Harlequins, who started off without Wells, as he lost his train. It is a pity that the ground at Richmond is so heavy. The result is that the club outsides scarcely get a good chance. Richmond put a very strong team in the field against the Scottish, who showed admirable defence, but the Richmond outsides, with the two Biggs playing, had the pull of them. The Scotchmen were beaten, and on form the winners should beat Blackheath. The Old Merchant Taylors were so upset by scoring three times in the first twenty minutes against the Old Edwardians, that they did nothing afterwards. However, they managed to win. Amongst schools the Haileybury team is very highly spoken of, the three-quarters being particularly good. But their forwards are scarcely heavy enough, and this may account for the fact that Dulwich just beat them after a very close game.

Those whose lot is cast in athletics will be thankful to Mr. A. J. Balfour, M.P., for his speech at Edinburgh in opening a bazaar to raise funds to provide a suitable cricket and football ground for the University. He scoffed at those who regarded athletics as a parasite on education, and maintained that a suitable opportunity and provision for athletic sports were not luxuries but necessaries for University life. It is just as well that the relations of sports to education should be clearly understood. So many people imagine that everybody at a University worships the athlete only. Naturally he is better known than the man who only reads for his degree. Every

THE SANITARY ENGINEERING CO. (Carter Bros.), 65, Victoria-st., Westminster, for making Sanitary Surveys in London or country.

CHINA AND GLASS. — Messrs. GOODE, Artists and Designers, solicit an inspection of their collection in their recently-extended South Audley-street premises, now by far the largest and most important in Europe. Messrs. Goode guarantee the excellence of all their productions, and invite a comparison of their prices with those of any co-operative stores.

Undergraduate can understand a good bat, but few appreciate a Senior Wrangler. Edinburgh badly needs a sports field. The University is not nearly so closely in touch with Oxford or Cambridge as Dublin, whom the Light Blues meet both in cricket and football. No doubt this will be remedied in a few years.

Oxford is again agitating for the abolition of the hammer in the sports. Certainly a good opportunity presents itself, for Cambridge is suggesting that the event shall now be contested under the rules of the Amateur Athletic Association instead of the peculiar conditions that have always been applied to the inter-University event. Hitherto one argument has been that in abolishing the event a long list of historic records are at once buried. It is a flimsy argument, for the records are, excepting Hale's, very poor. If the event is contested under new rules, the old records are buried in just the same way. At the same time, the attitude of Oxford is not consistent. While there is a winning hammer thrower in residence the Dark Blues do not press a change which a large number of people would welcome. In the Oxford freshmen's sports the only good times were done by Thomas and Munro in the hundred and quarter.

The appeal of the Reading F.C., which had been suspended owing to Mr. Bourke's having brought a so-called Holloway College team to play it, resulted in a heavier fine, but the suspension was withdrawn. The club admitted it was wrong and probably Mr. Bourke will reconsider his position, having regard to the facts that have been brought to light. It is said that the Association is angry with Mr. Jackson because he did not ask leave for his teams to play the Universities. I intimated a few weeks since that the question would be tested in this way. The defence is understood to be that the Universities are not affiliated clubs, and certainly the Association will do itself no good if it interferes with them. While on the subject of University Association football it is as well to point out that the practice of members of a University team giving their services to other teams during term is not to be commended. For instance, Burnup, the Cambridge Captain, and Alexander, go to play for the Corinthians when the University has a match on. In no other sport would this be tolerated. Imagine Bell, the Rugby Captain, trotting off to play for Blackheath, or even Burnup batting for Kent when there was a match at Fenner's. If Association football is worth a blue, then the team must be regularly supported.

The price of crack league players is going up. Everton have offered West Bromwich £500 for a back, and the offer has been refused, while £250 has been paid for a reserve centre forward because there are so few in the market. As for minor deals, they are of daily occurrence. These heavy prices make one realise that there is quite a market in human flesh. It is a modified form of slave trading. In the league matches Bolton accomplished a fine performance in beating Preston on the losers' ground. G. O. Smith, the Old Carthusian, played a remarkable game for the old boys against the Old Westminsters. His side won by six goals to four, and he scored each goal and hands and offside prevented him adding two more when he had sent the ball into the net. His play was all the more wonderful, for he was not well backed up by the other forwards.

Where one person went five years ago ten now go to the Stanley Cycling Show at the Agricultural Hall. In the form of the bicycle there appears to be a temporary finality, but in minor matters there are important novelties. There is a white metal which will not rust, and an apparatus to bring a bicycle to a standstill without compelling the rider to get off. This will be invaluable in traffic, and should be detachable. There is also a new band-brake.

Mortlock's China and Glass Business, Oxford-st., has entered its 150th year, being founded by John Mortlock in 1746. It is carried on by John George Mortlock, the great-great-grandson of the founder, who solicits patronage and recommendation.

MAMMON.

From MOSES MOSS to BENJAMIN BOSS.

Sunday.

MY DEAR BEN,—Sensational movements have taken place during the past week in the Kaffir Circus, and the latter has therefore to an unusual extent influenced the rest of the markets. It looked at one time as if a complete collapse in South African shares was coming about, and there were again indications of that same mysterious selling from Paris, which has for some time been upsetting all calculations. Then came a sudden rally, and the improvement has continued ever since. It has indeed been

A Week of Drastic Changes.

Now that it is possible to lift the veil which has for some time hung around the market position in South Africans, there is no longer any difficulty in explaining the malaise from which we have been suffering. The affairs of two dealers in the South African market have for some time given rise to apprehensions. Both had amassed considerable fortunes during the time of the South African boom, one being credited with having at one time been possessed of £400,000, the other of £150,000. The amounts which both were to the bad this week were comparatively moderate; but while the more important and more popular member of the "House" was helped over, the other was "hammered." Their positions chiefly in connection with the special settlement in the Transvaal Gold Mining Estates have, however, already been taken over by some of the large financial houses. Nor was this trouble responsible for all our recent calamities. It is no longer a secret now that most of the large blocks, which have of late been thrown on the market from Paris, were held by the near relative of a leading financial house, who has now and then distinguished himself by reckless plunging. He seems to have held an enormous load of South African shares, and, although very wealthy, was finally obliged to let go. His losses are estimated at a million and a half sterling, yet it must not be understood that he has absolutely come to grief, as he appears to be still a rich man. For market purposes, however, he has at present disappeared from the scene, the last of his account having been closed on Wednesday. The initiated began to buy on Thursday, and an important recovery is now marked all round, which is expected to make further progress after the settlement. These events fully bear out the views which I have repeatedly expressed, that the intrinsic position of the Transvaal mining industry was satisfactory, and that the depression was merely due to market movements brought about by a speculative collapse. The "Bear" account which had accumulated remains, however, and the incident on Friday on the Paris Bourse, when false rumours were spread that Baron Alphonse de Rothschild, the head of the great firm in France, had died suddenly, shows to what shifts the ursine operators are reduced. West Australian gold mines have also been depressed in sympathy with the Kaffir Circus, and at one time the "Bears" seemed to have it all their own way; but with the recovery in South Africans this section also rallied under the lead of a sharp rise in the West Australian Exploring and Finance group. Home Rails had been temporarily affected by nervousness concerning the Mining Market, and also by absurd anticipations that the Bank rate might be raised, of which there was absolutely no chance. They have now braced up again, and look like going better, traffics remaining on a very large scale. Foreigners have also been firm, and South Americans are the turn harder. The only weak spot is curiously enough the American market, in which realisations and "Bear" pressure have caused a moderate setback. The position in the United States is however so promising, that a great improvement cannot fail to come about. The Industrial department has shown great strength, the issue of Bovril, Limited, more especially, causing much activity. The flotation of this new Company has, as far as I am able to judge, proved a great success.

Home Rails.

A temporary setback was caused in Home Railway stocks by anxiety in connection with the collapse in South African mines. Then, again, there are always some quidnuncs who are prophesying dearer money, and who actually predicted an advance in the Bank rate last Thursday. These prophets were evidently altogether ignorant of the position, as by the rise in the American exchange all prospects of gold shipments to New York have disappeared, while money is so cheap in Paris that many financial operations are carried out there instead of in London. There is a small demand for gold for Russia, which has, however, been satisfied in the open market, and apart from the requirements of the Stock Exchange in connection with the present settlement, nothing is known of any special demand for gold upon the Bank of England. When the mistake was discovered an improvement took place all round the market, which has not, however, been altogether maintained in the case of the Heavy division, which has been somewhat affected by the fears of a rise in wages and of shorter hours to be conceded to the employés. For the week, therefore, a fractional decline is shown, which has also extended to Great Northern Deferred and South Western stocks. The Southern Passenger stocks have again been bought by investors, who are attracted by the excellent takes, and Brighton "A" have moved up to 181 on very encouraging advices with regard to the Brighton season. Dover "A," after a relapse, are also firmer. The position of the South-Eastern Company is indeed a most promising one, and not only has this line of late shown exceptional elasticity in traffics, but further progressive measures are now announced, so that it is evident that a great change for the better has taken place in the management since the Watkin régime passed away. In the ensuing session of Parliament the Board propose to ask for further powers, which cannot fail to benefit both the Company and the travelling public. Amongst the measures that are proposed are the widening on the north side of the viaduct running for somewhat over a mile from London Bridge towards New Cross, and the construction of another line a little below Corbet-lane, gradually ascending until it crosses the East London Railway, passing over the riverside goods line of the Brighton Company, and then joining the present South-Eastern line at Ralt-street, which is close to New Cross. The projected extensions will give the South-Eastern Company two complete sets of rails instead of only one independent line. By another widening of the same line the Company will be able to make provision for some of the up morning trains, which stand idle during the day, until they are required for the late afternoon and evening traffic; and when the widened line from Cannon-street is completed, trains on their arrival in the morning will be shunted direct on to the sidings until they are again required. There is no doubt that the great facilities and quicker service which the South-Eastern will thus be able to provide will be highly appreciated by travellers over the line. The traffic to Tunbridge Wells and Hastings is also to be expedited, and there is little doubt that these progressive measures will find their expression in increased dividends. Great Easterns, after reacting, have advanced to 107⅜, and Chatham Ordinary have also come into favour at 18⅛. The tendency has, however, been strongest in the Scotch section, in which best part of the recent relapse was at one time recovered, Caledonian Deferred Ordinary (Coras) touching 60½, and North British Deferred 48⅝. A reaction has since set in on renewed rumours of labour troubles. Advices with regard to Scotch trade, however, continue most favourable, and large traffic increases of the leading lines are anticipated; while, on the other hand, there is every indication that any serious labour difficulties will be avoided. There is, in fact, no reason why Coras should not rise to 65, and North British Deferred to 55. The opening of a portion of the East and West Coast Railway from Lincoln, tapping the coal district of Chesterfield, was one of the features of the week, and it is hoped that the Great Eastern will benefit thereby.

Notice to Connoisseurs of Fine Dry Champagne.—Périnet & Fils' Cuvée Réservée, Extra See, is in magnificent condition, at Hotel Cecil, Hotel Savoy, Midland Grand Hotel, Spiers & Pond's Hotels and Buffets, and most leading Hotels & Restaurants.

The Metropolitan District Bill.

It is satisfactory to find that Mr. J. S. Forbes, the Chairman of the Metropolitan District Company, and his co-Directors have sufficiently recognised the importance of the proposed deep-level electric scheme, as to smooth over minor difficulties and proceed with the Bill in Parliament, the official notice having appeared in the Press. The Bill authorises "the construction of a railway or subway, commencing in the parish of St. Mary Abbott's, Kensington, in the county of London, by a junction with the Earl's Court and Mansion House line of the Metropolitan District Railway, at a point 50 yards or thereabouts, measured along that line in a north-easterly direction from the eastern face of the bridge carrying Knaresborough-place over that line, and terminating in the parish of Holy Trinity-the-Less, in the City of London, under the Mansion House station of the above-mentioned railway, at a point 16 yards or thereabouts measured in a westerly direction along the line of that railway from the eastern end of that station." It is not necessary for me to enter into further particulars, as the Bill is based upon Sir Benjamin Baker's report, which I have already fully discussed; but I may add that power is also taken to enable the District Railway to work its existing lines by means of electricity. I may further mention that the Whitechapel and Bow Railway Bill, which is also advertised, should prove of advantage to the District Company, if proceeded with. It provides for a line to be constructed from the District Railway at St. Mary's Station, Whitechapel, to the London and Tilbury Railway close to Bromley. The local traffic which may be expected from this thickly-populated district should greatly benefit the District Company; and although an independent Company has initiated the project, it is believed that people largely interested in Districts are at the back of it. Thus District stockholders have a brighter future to look forward to, and it is not surprising that upon the publication of the scheme a sharp rise to 29 took place, reacting again slightly. But the present is a comparatively low price, when it is considered that the quotation quite recently advanced to 35 when the new scheme was first mooted; while now it is certain to be carried out as the Bill is not likely to meet with any serious opposition. As there is a considerable "Bear" account, a further improvement in Districts is looked for; and a favourable sign is also a rise in the Five per Cent. District Extension Prefs. to 100½.

The Yankee Market.

Although advices from the United States continue most satisfactory as regards the revival in trade and industry, a moderate reaction in the active list of American Rails has to be recorded under the lead of Grangers. It appears that shipments of grain have fallen off somewhat, owing to the desire of farmers to await still higher prices; and this has temporarily caused a decrease in traffics. But the railroads are certain to participate to a considerable extent in the revival which is now in progress; and the fact that factories are opening and working full time, that the reduced stocks are being replenished, that gold is no longer being hoarded but is gradually reaching the banks, while money is becoming quite easy, will not fail to influence the carrying business. It always takes some time before traffics really show the effect of a revival in trade, but in a few weeks' time there should be ample signs of such. As regards the Tariff Bill which will have to be introduced, there are welcome indications that a compromise will be effected between the Republicans and the Sound-money Democrats; so that only a moderate advance in duties, sufficient for revenue purposes, will be enacted. Then the currency question will have to be dealt with, and from all accounts there is a strong determination to grapple with this, and to introduce suitable reforms. In the meantime, although the New York exchange has advanced, there is no prospect of any gold shipments from the States to Europe. The pause in grain shipments is only temporary, and a resumption of the grain movement would, in fact, suffice to prevent gold shipments for some time to come. In the meantime, the position of the New York Associated Banks has again improved, the last statement showing an increase in the deposits of 21,937,000 dols. Upon the whole, any one buying Milwaukee, Louisville, Atchison Prefs., Denvers, Union Pacifics, Southern Ordinary, and Norfolk Prefs. on reactions is pretty certain to make good profits. I should also think that the very low-priced Texas "B" would have a chance again, as in the many consolidations which will yet have to be effected the Alabama, New Orleans, and Texas Road should find some suitable place, and any one picking up Texas "B" at about ¼ cannot go far wrong. In order to show at a glance the changes which have taken place during the week, I give herewith the following comparative table:—

—	Price Jan. 2, 1896.	High'st in 1896.	Low'st in 1896.	Nov. 13.	Nov. 23.
Atchison	14½	18 3/16	9	16⅝	15⅜
Do. Five per Cent. Pref.	22	23⅞	14⅜	26⅞	24⅝
Canadian Pacific	51¾	65⅛	51	60½	58¾
Central Pacific	15½	17½	13	17⅝	16½
Denver	12⅜	14 11/16	10	13⅝	12¾
Do. Pref.	42¾	51⅞	37¼	47	45⅞
Erie	14⅛	16⅛	11¼	17¼	16⅜
Do. First Pref.	23	42	22⅞	38¾	37¾
Lake Shore	144	155	138	156	155
Louisville	44⅝	56¾	38⅞	53	51⅛
Milwaukee	69⅛	81⅝	61¾	80	77¾
Mis., Kan., and Texas	11¼	13 13/16	8⅞	14⅞	14
Norfolk Pref.	8	16¾	10⅛	19⅝	18⅜
Nor. Pacific Pref.	12½	23⅛	14	27⅞	25¾
New York Central	98	101⅞	90¼	99¼	98
Ontario	13¼	16½	11¼	16¾	16
Reading	2	13 15/16	3⅛	15¾	15⅝
Southern Ordy.	8¾	11⅛	6⅝	11¾	10⅝
Do. Pref.	26½	34⅜	16⅜	33⅛	30⅛
Union Pacific	4⅛	9¾	3⅛	11⅝	10⅛
Wabash Pref.	15¾	20 3/16	12	18¾	17¼

American Railroad bonds have been pretty largely dealt in, and are again meeting with favour on the part of investors. There has been a fair inquiry for Alabama Midland First Gold bonds, and the First Terminal Gold bonds of the Baltimore and Ohio, the latter recovering to 93, at which they are still very cheap. In reply to a number of inquiries as regards the selection of bonds for investors for investment, I refer my readers to the selection given in reply to "E.M." under "Banks, Trusts, and Financial," and to "Bristol Reader" under "American and Foreign Rails." Canadian Pacifics have declined in sympathy with the American Market, and Grand Trunks have also fallen slightly; but these are probably only temporary movements.

Foreigners and South Americans.

The Paris Bourse has of late been so completely under the influence of the South African collapse that a much better tone is expected to prevail now that the affairs of the large French operator already referred to have been settled. Another favourable factor has been the conclusion of peace between Italy and Abyssinia, which has put up the price of Italians to 90⅛. Turks, too, have hardened, and, although no one believes in the Sultan's promises of reforms, it is recognised that he is doing his best to prevent any further outbreaks just now. Spanish are still suffering from the uncertainty as regards Cuban affairs. The internal loan has been an exceptional success, and thus the evil day is once more staved off, while a considerable "Bear" account is one of the market influences. Ottoman Banks are slightly firmer, chiefly on the recovery in South Africans. South Americans have moved irregularly, but Argentine Government stocks are slightly firmer on the action of the Argentine Senate, which has adopted ex-President Pellegrini's motion in favour of the adoption of measures for assuring the integral service of the debt from 1897. Dr. Romero, the Minister of Finance, declares that the country will not be able to undertake the full service of the integral debt, and it is now expected that if this motion is proceeded with Dr. Romero will resign. At all events, the unification scheme will evidently be shelved for some time to come. Affairs in Brazil are still in an unsatisfactory state, but the bonds have recovered slightly. Uruguay bonds are slightly easier, the Old Loan at 47⅜, the New Loan at 64; while Mexican Sixes are well maintained. Colombians receded to 19½, and recovered to 21½ on the announcement that the proposed settlement is now being discussed by the Colombian Legislature. Costa Rica "A" and "B" have also given way, in the absence of any steps taken by that disreputable Republic for purging itself of default.

Sharp Fluctuations in the Kaffir Circus.

I entered a protest last week against the wholesale throwing away of South African mining and land shares, and I warned holders of such shares not to play into the hands of the "Bears." I also strongly advised purchases on the reaction in a number of shares, either for new investment, or for averaging holdings; and any one who on Wednesday, when my letter was published, followed my advice, will have reason to be satisfied, for on Thursday the recovery commenced, and prices are now from ten to thirty per cent. higher than they were during the scare which then prevailed. Now that the accounts of the two members of the Stock Exchange, who were in trouble, have been closed, and the affairs of the great Paris speculator are settled, we may look for better times, always provided that no fresh accident should occur. But I wish to again explain that the position of the mining industry of the Transvaal is better than it has been for a long time, and that apart from some scarcity of water, which will however pass away in the near future as the rainy season is due, there is nothing to account for the present low level of prices but the unfortunate market position. But after the gigantic shake-out which has taken place during the last few months, and which has culminated during the past week, the market is now considered by good judges as in a thoroughly sound position. I have also been greatly pleased to find from numerous inquiries, which have reached me last week, that my readers are adopting the very wise course of averaging their holdings. I advise such a policy obviously only where investors can take up their shares and pay for them, as the speculative running of mining shares should under all circumstances be avoided. A great deal has been said as to the great South African financiers not supporting their particular groups. This may have been the case with the great houses which are controlling the Consolidated Goldfields and the Rand Mines, while in the case of East Rands the proposed objectionable arrangement with the H.F. Syndicate has partly caused the slump. But from positive proof which I have seen, it cannot be maintained that either the Barnato group or the Robinson group have not been supported. It is true that when the huge blocks of shares from Paris were thrown upon the market prices were temporarily allowed to drop; but as soon as there was an indication that this stream of selling had ceased, steps were taken to help the market. There is yet an event to come off, which may temporarily affect the market, viz., the official presentation of the claim by the Transvaal Government for an indemnity on account of the Jameson raid. As it has to come, I should say that the sooner it is made the better; and I am, therefore, glad to learn on good authority that this indemnity claim will be made within the next few days. The amount to be claimed will not be a million sterling, neither will it be as small as has been suggested in some quarters. It will consist of real outlay only, and will be comparatively moderate; but ten thousand horses will not draw the figure from me. I suppose that the claim will be put forward to the British Government, and that the promoters of the raid will eventually pay it. At all events, there is no wish on the part of the Transvaal Government to cause any political friction, and all that has been said of late on this head may be dismissed as unfounded. Finally, the position may be summed up as follows:—There is plenty of native labour now available, and, in fact, starving Kaffirs are arriving at Johannesburg from the north of the Transvaal and from elsewhere, the rinderpest and the scarcity of mealies being the cause of their destitution. Then, again, the Sunday labour question has been settled satisfactorily, and new stamps are going up in all directions. Thus, in the near future we shall see a great expansion on the Rand, and an increasing output. When these visible signs of returning prosperity appear, holders of South African shares will be glad to have stuck to them. Concerning the new Chartered issue, it remains to be seen how many shares the shareholders will apply for; and as the result is about to be announced, I will not prophesy. Of the shares which I mentioned last week as very promising at the reduced prices, which should be bought to average, Langlaagte Estate declined during the slump to 4, and have since recovered to $4\frac{3}{8}$; New Primrose dropped to 4, and now stand at $4\frac{3}{8}$; Glencairn, which had fallen to 2, are now up again at $2\frac{7}{16}$; City and Suburban are now quoted $3\frac{7}{8}$, after touching $3\frac{3}{8}$; Robinson are up at $8\frac{1}{4}$, after touching $8\frac{1}{16}$; Johnnies Consols fell to 2, and are up at $2\frac{9}{16}$; Barnato Consols declined to $1\frac{7}{16}$, and recovered to $1\frac{7}{8}$; Buffelsdoorn touched $1\frac{9}{16}$, and recovered to 2; Henderson's Estates fell to $1\frac{7}{16}$, and recovered to $1\frac{5}{8}$; Lydenburg Estates, after touching $1\frac{1}{16}$, are up at $1\frac{3}{16}$; Knights fell to $4\frac{3}{8}$, and are up again at $4\frac{3}{4}$; Randfontein fell to $1\frac{3}{4}$, and are now $2\frac{3}{8}$; and so on. Modderfontein "B" have been somewhat firmer at about 1 to $1\frac{1}{16}$ on the further list of assays which has come to hand from the property, which is distinctly better than the previous ones. At a depth of 20 ft. in No. 2 shaft the reef, 6 in. wide, assayed 1 oz. 11 dwt. per ton. At the depth of 40 ft. the reef, 12 in. in width, assayed 1 oz. 3 dwt. to the ton, and other samples assayed from 19 dwt. to 1 oz. 19 dwt. per ton, only two samples assaying as low as 4 dwt. and 5 dwt. 12 gr. As the annual report showed much lower assays, this new development throws quite a different light upon the Modderfontein Extension property, and when it is considered that the price has stood at $4\frac{15}{16}$ in 1895, when the value of the mine was not yet proved, it would appear probable that in the present recovery these shares should go very much higher. Glynn's Lydenburg Company reports improved assays, but the working capital appears to be exhausted. A correspondent writes to point out that the Directors of Westralia and Randt, Limited, are issuing advanced prospectuses in which they ask for further capital at par, while volunteering the statement that in a few days they will make a public issue at 5s. per share premium. My correspondent wants to know whether I consider it right that the prospectus should bear at its head the fact that a dividend of 50 per cent. was declared on October 12, when only a scrip dividend was actually distributed. I agree with my correspondent that the Directors should state frankly that this was a scrip and not a cash dividend. This concern appears to be affiliated with the West Australian Minerals and Finance Company, which is also dealing in scrip dividends. Puffs are being circulated of the Kruger Syndicate, and endeavours are made to place shares at £3 each. To those who contemplate buying these shares I give Punch's advice to those about to marry—Don't. Woodstock (Transvaal) at $1\frac{1}{4}$ deserve attention. The circular recently issued, of which I gave particulars last week, has, as was to be anticipated, created a very favourable impression, and the mine will enter the list with large crushings early next year, and doubtless prove a dividend-payer. A fresh strike of high-grade ore in the Sheba is also promising for the Woodstock. Diamond shares have not been affected to the same extent as gold shares, and De Beers, after declining, have recovered to $29\frac{1}{4}$, while New Jagersfontein are quoted $10\frac{7}{8}$. New Bultfontein have recovered to $1\frac{3}{4}$.

Golden West Australia.

This has also been an eventful week for West Australian gold mines from the market point of view. I have for some time drawn attention to the "Bear" raids which have been made on various properties, and to the absurd articles running down West Australian gold mines published in some of my contemporaries, and which doubtless brought about some selling on the part of real holders, while assisting the ursine party. The same tactics were again apparent at the commencement of the week, and every effort was made to depress prices in sympathy with the slump in South Africans. But a smart recovery has since taken place, and the tone of the market is distinctly better. A determined "Bear" raid was made upon the West Australian Exploring and Finance and London and Globe Finance group, with the result that at one time the shares of the two parent companies fell to $3\frac{1}{2}$, while Lake View Consols were sold down to $5\frac{1}{2}$. Those in control of the group at first gave the "Bears" plenty of rope, and then they proceeded to punish them. The issue of a circular of the two Companies to the shareholders explaining their very satisfactory position, sufficed to put up West Australian Exploring and Finance to $4\frac{1}{4}$, and London and Globe to $4\frac{5}{16}$, while Lake View Consols recovered to 8. I may extract from the circular the statement that, as both Companies had large transactions in the shares of the Lake View Consols, Limited, and the Stock Exchange Committee have delayed the special settlement in these shares until December 2 (by which time the last of the Colonial certificates will have arrived in this country), the Directors will close the books for this year on December 31, instead of November 30, in order to bring all these operations into the accounts for the current year, to which they belong. In the meantime, the Directors give an estimate of the results achieved, which are eminently satisfactory. They state that the assets of the Companies will not fall short, if anything, of one million sterling each, or five times the capital of the respective corporations. The Directors also make a most favourable statement as regards Lake View Consols, which they calculate are worth £10 per share alone on the value of the ore already in sight, which is estimated at £3,000,000 sterling. Particulars of fourteen assays made by Mr. Callahan, the superintendent, are given, ranging from 1 oz. 12 dwt. to 25 oz. 6 dwt.; while Mr. Charles Kaufman, the consulting engineer, states that these assays, which average somewhere about 9 oz. to the ton, are not from selected ore but from bulk samples and mill tests. By the way, so much has recently been said by biassed critics on the possibility that the West Australian gold reefs may not go down, that recent developments with reference to the Lake View are of special interest. Mr. Charles Kaufman, the consulting engineer of the Company, undeterred by these pessimistic utterances, made arrangements to obtain machinery for sinking down to 1,500 ft. So far they have sunk 25 ft. below the recent workings, and the first result of this policy is most promising, as conveyed by a cablegram just received from Mr. Callahan, the engineer in charge of the mine, who states that in No. 2 shaft, 25 ft. below the 200-ft. level—which is called the sulphide zone—he has struck the reef, which has an average value of 35 oz. to the ton, the average width of the reef there being 8 ft. In addition, Mr. Callahan cables that he has discovered a large percentage of tellurium, which gives 39 per cent. of gold. Further information is to hand that the 20 stamps of the new mill will be ready for crushing within sixty days, and I understand that the output will then be so much increased that a yield of £25,000 per month will regularly be obtained, to be increased to £50,000 a month when the further twenty stamps are erected. As additional water is procured, and Mr. Charles Kaufman says that there is no difficulty in obtaining it from the lake, additional stamps will be erected, and those who ought to know say that the output in the near future will exceed Scottish Widows' Fund Life Assurance Society.—Special Notice.—Participating Assurances effected before the 31st December, 1896, will rank for Six Full Years' Bonus Additions at the next Periodical Division of Profits. To secure this advantage application should be made to any of the offices or agencies of the Society without delay.—London: 28, Cornhill, E.C., & 5, Waterloo-place, S.W.

that of any mine in any country. This important news should not only bring about a further rise in Lake View Consols, but should affect West Australians generally most favourably, as it points to altogether unhoped-for developments in the Hannan's goldfield, at all events, at further depth. The London and Globe Finance circular also announces that proposals for the consolidation of the West Australian Exploring and Finance and the London and Globe Finance Corporations will be submitted at the meeting, and that it is proposed the consolidated Company shall bear the title of the London and Globe Finance Corporation, which, the circular adds, will become an issuing house second to none in the City of London. In reply to some inquiries with regard to this proposed consolidation, I may mention that the profits of both Companies for the first year of their existence have been the same, within £1,000 of each other. The capitals of both corporations are £200,000 each, out of which both have 195,000 Ordinary shares of £1 each. The London and Globe Finance has, in addition, £5,000 in 100,000 Deferred shares of 1s. each, while the West Australian Exploring and Finance has £5,000 in 5,000 Deferred shares of £1 each. When the amalgamation is carried out, it is proposed to split the 5,000 Deferred shares of £1 each of the West Australian Exploring and Finance into 100,000 shares of 1s. each, so that both will be on the same basis. With reference to these Deferred shares, I shall be able to give some further information in next week's issue. Austin Friars Syndicate £1 shares have recovered to $1\frac{3}{4}$. I understand that the position of these shares is also very strong, as they have benefited equally with the other parent Companies of this group, and at the present price they are considered, by those best able to judge, an excellent purchase. The "Bear" attack was simultaneously made upon the other shares of the group, all of which have, however, now recovered, Mainland Consols being quoted $1\frac{7}{8}$, Paddington Consols $1\frac{3}{16}$, &c. A desperate raid was also executed against West Australian Goldfields, and although they are now firmer at 6, this is still an exceedingly low price. Hampton Plains, after touching lower prices, are quoted $3\frac{1}{4}$, which is equally low; and any one picking up these shares at anything like the present quotations will do well with them. The low-priced shares have not been so much affected by the "Bear" raid, but they are nevertheless worthy of attention; thus, for instance, Cue No. 1 at $\frac{1}{2}$, White Feather Reward at $1\frac{1}{2}$, Great Boulder Main Reef at $1\frac{1}{2}$, Mawson's Reward at $\frac{15}{16}$, Florence at $\frac{13}{16}$, Robinson at $\frac{3}{4}$, East Murchison United at $\frac{13}{16}$, and Mount Margaret at $1\frac{3}{8}$ are all worth picking up. A group which has of late also suffered from "Bear" attacks, but which is likely to show a considerable rally in the near future, is that of the West Australian Joint Stock Trust. I understand that this parent Company has made such excellent profits that another interim dividend of 100 per cent. will be declared almost immediately on the Ordinary shares, which stand at only 2 premium, after having touched 4 premium, and are therefore good for a considerable rise, this being the fourth quarterly dividend at the rate of 100 per cent. per annum, so that the whole of the paid-up capital is returned. The Founders' shares some time ago stood at £60, and are now quoted only 35-40; but these will also receive a considerable distribution, and are therefore likely to go ahead again, especially as the large sum of £200,000 has been placed to reserve, in addition to these dividends. The establishment of such a reserve fund is doubtless very satisfactory, and I hear that it is intended to build this up still further. Affiliated with this Company is also the West Australian Loan and General Finance Corporation, the Ordinary shares of which stand at 1 premium. In reply to a correspondent who had inquired about an undesirable Company with a similar title, I should like herewith to point out that this is not the same Company. On the contrary, as it works hand-in-hand with the West Australian Joint Stock Trust, it may be expected to produce similar excellent returns. A number of crushings have come to hand from the West Australian Goldfields, which I herewith give in tabular form:—

	Tons of Ore Crushed.	Oz. of Gold.	Assay of Tailings per Ton.
Mainland Consols ...	236	1,050	5 dwt.
East Murchison United ...	447	827	—
Consolidated Murchison ...	587	202	—
Great Boulder Main Reef ...	206	310	26 ,,
North Boulder	105	238	14 ,,
Burbank's North	100	190	—
Menzies Mining and Exploration (Menzies O'Driscoll) ...	150	153	10 ,,

It will be seen that the East Murchison United crushing has been very satisfactory, both as regards quantity and yield, and this will evidently be one of the more important West Australian mines. The Great Boulder Main Reef crushing is also satisfactory, more especially as 26 dwts. per ton is left in the tailings. The crushing of the Menzies Mining and Exploration (Menzies O'Driscoll) is fairly satisfactory, but this will evidently be a low-grade mine. The same applies with additional force to the Consolidated Murchison, the yield of which is very low. The Mainland Consols crushing is in every respect satisfactory, the yield being nearly $4\frac{1}{2}$ oz. per ton. The Burbank's North crushing, at the rate of 38 dwts. per ton is also favourable, and advices from this property are encouraging. This trial crushing was only from the lode in the upper levels above 45 ft., and it is reported that the lode in the lower levels near Burbank's boundary dips north and grows richer. These shares at $\frac{1}{16}$ premium, and Burbank's Consols at par, are worth picking up; and Burbank's Birthday Gift are also a good purchase. Some dealings have taken place in Rome Consolidated Mines, which have improved to 11s., as the new work of development—which has recently been started under the advice of Professor Nicholas, F.G.S.—is stated to be very promising; while fresh discoveries in other parts of the mine are being foreshadowed. It is very much to be regretted that the Coolgardie Mint and Iron King is not proceeding with crushings. They have at last screwed out a small crushing of 60 tons, and seem to be chiefly occupied with disputes. Surely there must be some way of settling these, and of going ahead with the work! The shareholders ought to bestir themselves, and look into affairs. From the report of the statutory meeting of the Great Boulder Junction Reefs, it appears that up to the present time only 10s. per share has been called up, and that there is no probability of the balance uncalled being required for some time to come. The Company is now in legal possession of the property, which comprises thirty-nine acres, and development work is proceeding vigorously under the superintendence of Mr. Zebina Lane. The completion of the railway to Kalgoorlie will, of course, greatly favour this mine, as it reduces the cost of the transport of machinery, &c. These shares, now quoted about $\frac{3}{4}$, are, under the circumstances, likely to come into favour. Great Boulder Proprietary have fluctuated somewhat, but are again firmer at $6\frac{5}{16}$. I am not generally on the side of the "Bears," who usually fully deserve what they get; but the rig in Lady Hampton Consolidated is too outrageous, these shares having been run up to as high as £300 against the dealers who have taken liberties with them. The Committee of the Stock Exchange have now postponed the special settlement under December 28. Lady Shenton are comparatively firm at 2, while Lady Loch have receded to $1\frac{1}{2}$. Ivanhoe, on the other hand, are firm at $9\frac{7}{8}$. Some time ago I urged the West Australian Government to make arrangements for officially collecting the monthly results of the crushings on the goldfields, and then to announce them officially with the totals through the Agent-General here. So far nothing appears to have been done; but it is now stated that a bureau will be established by a combination of West Australian Companies to furnish these particulars and other information concerning the goldfields. It is a great pity that the West Australian Government has not thought fit to undertake this matter;

CHAMPAGNE.—PÉRINET & FILS' Cuvée Réservée. Vintages 1884, 1887, and 1889, are of unrivalled quality and highly recommended for present consumption. Of all Wine Merchants.

but I still hope that the Minister of Mines will do his best to accomplish this very desirable object.

Indian, New Zealand, and Other Mines.

A better tone has prevailed in the Indian section notwithstanding the surrounding weakness, and Mysore Gold have improved to $7\frac{5}{8}$, while Ooregum Ordinary are firmer at $2\frac{13}{16}$, and Coromandel have hardened to $2\frac{1}{8}$. Goldfields of Mysore, too, have come into some demand, being quoted 20s. 6d.; but the sale of a portion of the property should justify a much higher price. Nundydroog, Mysore Wynaad, and Mysore West are easier. Amongst Australian shares other than West Australian, Broken Hill Proprietary have improved to 51s.; but Aladdin's Lamp are easier at $2\frac{1}{2}$, and Wentworth are weak at $\frac{9}{16}$. Amongst Charters Towers shares Brilliant and St. George have declined; while, on the other hand, Croydon Mines are firm, Croydon Consols having improved to 10s. 6d. to 10s. 9d. The 1s. dividend will be declared in a few days. North Croydon Consols are in good demand at 3s. 6d. In New Zealand shares an improvement has taken place in Taitapu on the satisfactory statements at the meeting, the quotation now being 3. At the meeting of shareholders of the Taitapu Gold Estates on Friday last very satisfactory statements were made by Mr. Roland G. Hill, the Chairman of the Company. Mr. Hill stated that some very favourable arrangements have been made with certain powerful Syndicates and Exploration Companies to explore the properties of the Company at their own expense and to pay something considerable for the privilege of doing so. These Companies have already located a number of claims, on which they are bound under their agreement to spend a certain sum of money monthly in developing. On the Golden Ridge, the Company's own proprietary claim, good work has been done, and certificates of assay are wonderfully rich. For instance, 1 cwt. assayed by Johnson, Matthey, & Co., yielded as much as 109 oz. of gold, another $\frac{3}{4}$ cwt. yielded 70 oz.; $\frac{1}{2}$ cwt. returned 23 oz., and so on. A 20-stamp battery is now on the way out, and provision has been made for a further twenty stamps to be erected. The great bulk of the gold-bearing formation on the estate lies between the Paturan River and the Big River, covering an area of 43,000 acres, all of which is considered to be auriferous. The Chairman also stated that he had inspected over 1,200 reefs in New South Wales, Victoria, and Western Australia, and in no case did he come across such a rich, strong, and extensive shot of gold, in a reef situated in favourable country, which has not been of a permanent character. Should the Taitapu Goldfield prove of a permanent character, as is foreshadowed by the experts, the price of Taitapu Estate shares would experience a most important advance upon the present quotation of 3 per £1 share. There has also been an improvement in Komata Reefs, Woodstock, and Hauraki; but Consolidated Goldfields are lower. With reference to the Royal Standard Mine, which I mentioned last week as having been privately subscribed, I may give here some further particulars. The capital is £200,000 in £1 shares, of which 50,000 shares are available for providing a working capital of £50,000. The Royal Standard Special Claim, which has been acquired by the Company, is situated in the Hauraki Goldfields, and consists of 100 acres. The prospectus states that the property is traversed by two very large and important reefs, while another valuable reef has been partly opened up. Assay reports of six sealed samples contained an average of $1\frac{1}{2}$ oz. per ton, while another batch of samples yielded from 2 oz. to 13 oz. of gold per ton. The natural facilities in water power and fuel are very highly spoken of by the experts. In the general foreign section there has been a rise in Montana and Linares; but Burma Ruby, Banner Gold, and La Yesca are lower. Copper shares have been quiet, but steady, Rio Tinto being quoted $25\frac{3}{16}$. Grand Central have improved to $2\frac{1}{2}$ on influential purchases. Some transactions have taken place in the Cripple Creek Gold and Exploration, Limited, a Company which owns mining claims and concessions in the Cripple Creek district, more especially two valuable claims known as the California Lode and the Oregon Lode. Upon these favourable reports have been made by well-known experts, and as the Cripple Creek district has of late come very much to the front, it is probable that these properties will also give a good account of themselves. The capital of the Company only amounts to £50,000 in 5s. shares.

New Enterprises and Issues.

The prospectuses of the following new Companies and issues have been placed before the public during the week:—

Bovril (British, Foreign, and Colonial), Limited.—With a capital of £2,000,000 in £1 shares, divided into 500,000 Five and a Half per Cent. Cumulative Preference shares (preferential as to capital as well as dividend in priority to the Ordinary and Deferred shares); 750,000 Seven per Cent. Ordinary shares (preferential as to dividend in priority to the Deferred shares); and 750,000 Deferred shares. This Company has been formed to acquire the whole assets of Bovril, Limited, manufacturers of food specialities and the well-known fluid beef, Bovril.

This is an issue that is likely to go well with the public. The Company take over the whole of the assets of Bovril, Limited, an enterprise of world-wide reputation. The business during the past few years has annually increased, and the profits for the year ending June last amounted to the sum of £88,789, and from the progressive results, and the daily increasing business, it is anticipated that the net profit for the first year of the new Company will at the present rate of increase approximate the sum of £150,000. It is also proposed to push forward the foreign and Colonial trade, as well as to increase the number of agents in this country, by which means a large addition to the present returns may be looked for. It is further proposed to sell portions of the rights to subsidiary Companies for operations abroad, a substantial offer having already been received, which is now under consideration. The parent Company, however, propose reserving the sole right of manufacture. This will, of course, mean a further increase in the revenue of the Company, besides the sums that will have to be paid for the concessions. While the Ordinary and Preferred shares will undoubtedly form a steady investment, the Deferred shares are more speculative, but will, if the anticipations of the prospectus are realised, receive very substantial dividends.

The Anglo-Swedish Steel Tube Company, Limited.—This Company has been formed for the purpose of acquiring, working, and extending the tube-making business of Messrs. Smallwood & Co., of River-street, Birmingham. The capital is fixed at £75,000, in shares of £1 each. The present issue is of 60,000 shares at par.

Fisher & Company, Limited.—Lloyds Bank, Limited, is authorised to offer for subscription £100,000 Four per Cent. Debenture stock of this Company at the price of £104 per cent. The stock will be secured by a first mortgage of the freehold property of the Company, and a floating first charge on the undertaking and general assets of the Company. The share capital is £120,000, divided into 6,000 Five per Cent. Preference, and 6,000 Ordinary shares of £10 each, the whole of which are retained by the vendors.

The Savoy Palace of Varieties, Dublin, Limited.—For the purpose of acquiring the property formerly known as the Grafton Theatre, together with the licensed premises adjoining, situate in South Anne-street, Dublin, this Company has been formed with a capital of £60,000, in shares of £1 each. It is proposed to convert the property into a large and commodious theatre of varieties.

Triticine, Limited.—This Company has been formed to acquire the undertaking of Messrs. Harry Goodall & Sons, millers, of Castleford Mills, Castleford, Yorkshire, with the business of "Triticine" food in connection therewith. The capital is £100,000, in £1 shares.

The commodity dealt in by this firm is a food called "Triticine." The prospectus states that it has earned a wide reputation, but I must confess I have not heard of it before, and, considering the enormous competition for this description of article, I cannot advise an investment in this concern.

Australasian Gold and Finance Corporation, Limited.—Formed with a capital of £200,000 in £1 shares, this Company proposes to carry on the ordinary business of a financial, mining and industrial organisation, more particularly in connection with the Australasian Colonies.

As I have before stated, the number of Companies carrying on this kind of business is so large that I cannot consider the prospects of this venture at all promising. The prospectus contains a list of quotations of the shares of various similar Companies, which have been much earlier in the field and with which this new concern cannot expect to compete, and I cannot, moreover, compliment the compiler of this list upon his accuracy, as he returns the Founders' shares of one of these Companies at nearly ten times their present value.

The Metropolitan Industrial Dwellings Company, Limited.—Messrs. Barclay & Co., Limited, invite subscriptions to 20,000 Preference shares of £5 each.

Torrington and Okehampton Railway Company.—This Company has been formed to construct and work a railway about twenty miles long, from Torrington Station, on the North Devon line of the South-Western Railway, to the junction with the main line of that railway, near Okehampton Station. Issue of £250,000 in 25,000 shares of £10 each.

The Sheffield District Railway.—This issue is for the purpose of making a short line of nine and a half miles in length to run from Brighton in Derbyshire to Attercliffe, Sheffield, by which a new and independent access will be created for the Great Northern, Great Eastern, and Lancashire and East Coast Railways to the City of Sheffield. The capital is £400,000, in 40,000 shares of £10 each.

Bellevue Proprietary, Limited.—With a capital of £160,000 in £1 shares, of which 40,000 shares are to be reserved for working capital, this Company proposes to acquire the "Bellevue" and "Isidore" claims, containing about 41 acres, situate at Mount Sir Samuel, in Western Australia.

My Letter Box.

I am once again obliged to remind my readers that I can only reply to communications which are accompanied by the names and addresses of the writers, not, of course, for publication, but as a token of good faith. All anonymous letters will be consigned to the waste-paper basket. Some delay must necessarily occur in answering questions which entail special inquiries, and it is, as a rule, not possible to attend in the current issues to communications which arrive after Friday. My correspondents will also greatly simplify my task by reading my weekly letters carefully through, as these frequently contain remarks on the very subjects on which information is sought. I again repeat that I can accept no fees for replies in "My Letter Box," and that I cannot undertake to answer by letter or telegram. I must also absolutely refuse to execute any orders for stocks or shares, or to act as an intermediary in any way. It is necessary to number the different stocks on which information is sought. The following are replies to inquiries from various correspondents:—

Government, &c., Bonds.

R. N. F.—You had better await developments with regard to the unification scheme. At present a dispute is going on in the Argentine Chambers. E. M. L.—No reason to sell these Argentine Railway Government Guaranteed bonds; they will move up with the rest of these stocks.

Banks, Trusts, and Financial.

Manor, Cardiff; A.A., Nelson; E. E. B., Camberwell.—You cannot be regular readers of TRUTH, or else you would know that I have repeatedly criticised "Our Own Investment System" of Douglas, Hungerford, and Williams. You should deal through a member of the Stock Exchange. E. M.—You cannot do better than invest the £6,000 safely and profitably in gilt-edged American Railroad bonds, of which I gave a list last week, and I herewith repeat same:—New York and Putnam Four per Cent. bonds at 108, yielding £3. 15s. per cent.; Alabama Midland First Five per Cent. Mortgage bonds at 96, yielding £5. 7s. 6d. per cent.; Northern Pacific Four per Cent. Prior Lien bonds at 88, yielding £4. 15s. per cent.; Baltimore and Ohio Five per Cent. Sterling bonds at 95, yielding £5. 9s. per cent.; Pittsburg, Cleveland, and Toledo First Mortgage Six per Cent. bonds at 105, yielding £5. 17s. per cent.; Detroit, Grand Haven, and Milwaukee Consolidated Six per Cent. bonds at 86, yielding £7. 12s. 6d. per cent.; and Lynn and Boston Five per Cent. First Mortgage Gold bonds at 102½ x.d., yielding £5 per cent. An average return of about £5. 8s. per cent. could thus be secured; and to these bonds you might add the Six per Cent. First Mortgage debentures of the Mexican Cotton Estates of Tlahualilo at par. J. G. H.—This is an insurance office under the guise of a friendly society; but I do not consider that it offers the guarantees which can be obtained from English life offices, and I advise you to have nothing to do with it. W. S., Leicester.—This is one of the wealthiest American offices; but, of course, it is a question for your own self whether you will insure in an American or an English life office. F. S., Manchester.—Have nothing to do with outside concerns of this class, but deal only through a member of the Stock Exchange. Captain D. S.—I do not think that the outside broker in question will let the matter go into court, but you ought to immediately employ a solicitor, and I have at your request forwarded in your envelope the name of a smart firm of City solicitors, who will also advise you with reference to your other queries. M. G.—As requested, I have forwarded in your envelope the name of a smart firm of City solicitors. Progress.—I really cannot advise you as to the raising of capital in this manner. Neither can I place you in communication with a financier. Bruaich, Glasgow.—One of the wealthiest American life offices; but in the case of the policy in question you must be quite sure that you do not default, as otherwise you will forfeit your payments. The policies are right enough, but in that case I believe there is no surrender value.

Home Rails.

F. Q., Liverpool.—The South-Eastern is undoubtedly one of the most progressive lines; see remarks under that head. Dover "A" is a good purchase. Southerner.—Yes, Coras are a good purchase. There seems to be very little fear of labour troubles coming to a head in Glasgow. Correspondent.—I have dealt with your argument under Home Rails; but I do not agree with you. On their present position I consider Dover "A" far preferable to Great Eastern.

American and Foreign Rails.

A. B., Huddersfield.—Your securities are well selected. The American Railroad bonds and stocks are well secured, and you should hold all, as they are likely to improve. W. L., Abingdon.—You should certainly hold your Baltimore and Ohio South Western Gold bonds; they will recover to your purchase price again. No reason to sell the other American Railroad stocks now. C. E. B.—1. This Argentine Railway is doing well, and there is a prospect of the Preference shares receiving a gradually rising dividend. 2. No option but to hold. Verax.—Yes. Doubtful.—All your American and South American stocks should be held for a rise. Even as regards the Brazilian Railway Debentures (5 and 6) negotiations are going on which may result in some satisfactory arrangement. C. L., Manchester.—You should certainly hold Ontario and Missouri, Kansas and Texas. Both are likely to further improve. J. N.—I do not think there is any such fear. E. I. R. C.—Although you have a mixed lot of American Railroad stocks and bonds, I advise you to hold all for an improvement, which cannot fail to come about if you have patience. W. H. N.—Baltimore and Ohio Four and a Half per Cent. Terminal bonds are now quoted 90-93, and are steadily recovering. The position of this bond is a good one, and you should hold for a marked recovery. R. T. E.—Yes; Texas "B" should also come to the front again. They are greatly neglected, and are now obtainable at about ¼, at which they should be picked up. Bristol Reader.—The sum of money in question might well be spread over the following securities, which will yield an average return of about £5. 8s. per cent.:—New York and Putnam Four per Cent. bonds at 108, yielding £3. 15s. per cent.; Lynn and Boston Five per Cent. First Mortgage Gold bonds at 102½ x.d., yielding £5. per cent.; Northern Pacific Four per Cent. Prior Lien bonds at 88, yielding £4. 15s. per cent.; Alabama Midland First Five per Cent. Mortgage bonds at 96, yielding £5. 7s. 6d. per cent.; Baltimore and Ohio Five per Cent. Sterling bonds at 95, yielding £5. 9s. per cent.; Pittsburg, Cleveland, and Toledo First Mortgage Six per Cent. bonds at 105, yielding £5. 17s. per cent.; and Detroit, Grand Haven, and Milwaukee Consolidated Six per Cent. bonds at 86, yielding £7. 12s. 6d. per cent. Sigma.—You are right. There is a distinct difference between an outside broker who allows his clients to deal on the tape with him at a cover and the syndicate touts of the "Tarrant" type. But I do not think that you will get any change out of the former. It is true that your risk is limited; but they generally manage to run you off before you can obtain a profit, if not the first time then the second time; and although it is somewhat difficult to obtain your profit (if made), they soon let you know when your cover is gone.

Mining Shares.

Miss S.—1. It would be preferable that the syndicate should take the new Chartered shares, as that is likely to work the market. 2. Doubtful. 3. Johnnies at the present low price should certainly be held. No option but to hold Nos. 4 to 6. Peter.—1. No, there is no mysterious trouble to come out in South Africa, and, now that the clouds are clearing off the Kaffir Circus, you may safely buy 1,000 Johnnies, as you propose. 2. Opportunities in the South African market are at present exceptional, and I do not think so much of the Chinese loan. Telepathy.—No, I do not advise the cycle shares Nos. 1 or 2; Gladiators and Swifts are preferable. No temptation to buy the West Australian shares Nos. 3-5, least of all the latter (Sam's Wealth of Nations), against which I have always warned my readers. The concern has now come to the end of its tether. J. M.—Certainly hold Johannesburg Consols. They are now recovering from the slump. Medicus.—Certainly you must exchange your Barnato Bank shares for Johannesburg Cons. Investment, which are now quoted 2½, and are likely to further recover to a very considerable extent. For eight Bank shares five Johnnies are given. Asculap.—Yes, these shares are a fair mining risk. They are £1 shares, fully paid. H. R. R.—No catch; you had better make your selection from my remarks under "The Kaffir Circus." R. D. R.—I cannot recommend individual stockbrokers as a matter of principle. Neither can I reply by letter. Y. F.—1. The Golden River Quesnelle is a promising mine, and the shares should be held for a rise. 2. I do not think much of the London and British Columbia Company. 3. Certainly hold Randfontein for an important rise, and buy more to average, if you can afford to take the shares up. Droylig.—Yes, hold Langlaagte Star for a recovery. I do not think much of the Tararu Creek Gold Mining Company. Memo.—No reason to sell now. Dolphin.—Yes, New Crœsus should be held for an improvement. This is the time to average if you can afford to do so. East Somerset.—All your mining shares should be held. They should go much higher in the recovery which has commenced. You should ignore the publication in question; it is quite irresponsible. H. T.—Hold New Primrose, and buy more to average if you can afford to take them up. Shahgeton.—I am afraid that the advent of better times must be awaited before any such development can take place. H. T. B. and R. P.—The conduct of the Directors in the Abercorn Reef and Umtoli Companies in suing for the recovery of the calls after forfeiture of the shares is disgraceful. Why do not the shareholders combine and turn them out, so as to save what is left? W. C., Lewes.—Hold Nos. 1-3, Langlaagte Block "B," New Crœsus, Knights, and Randfontein for a rise, and buy more to average if you can afford to do so. No. 4 you should simply hold. Interested.—Hold all your Mining shares Nos. 1-6, and average Nos. 4 (Lydenburg Estates) and 6 (Langlaagte Block "B"). Svenir.—Mainland Consols are doing excellently, and you should hold for a rise. Spartan.—How could you buy Cons. Goldfields at £12. 10s. contrary to all my warnings? At present hold for a recovery. Francis.—1. In such cases it is usually advisable to join the reconstruction and sell after, as otherwise your shares are forfeited. 2. Very speculative. 3. A further rise in Croydon Consols is anticipated. 4. Yes, when the depression in the South African market comes to an end. Transvaal.—You are quite right, this is the time to average, and you should certainly hold all your shares Nos. 1 to 11. Those which are best to average are Barnato Consols (1), Buffelsdoorn (3), Glencairn (5), Hendersons (6), Johannesburg Investment (7), Langlaagte Royal (8), Lydenburg Estates (9), New Primrose (10), and Randfontein (11). Outsider.—You will change your opinion very soon. J. McI.—I do not think that the West Australian Mines Nos. 1—3 are particularly promising. You can do better by following the advice given in my letter under "Golden West Australia." Still Hopeful.—These shares have declined in sympathy with the general depression in South Africans. At present you should hold for a recovery. Vara.—I am afraid you cannot resist the calls; but you should certainly insist upon information from the Secretary of the Diamondfontein Estates. H. M.—The circular in question was not enclosed in your letter. What did it refer to? J. L. M.—I suppose that the New Primrose will pay the next dividend at the end of December. Flat Broke.—With the exception of Nos. 7-9 your shares are promising enough, and, as a recovery is now in progress, you had better hold. The document is returned. Sailor.—No option but to hold for a recovery, which is already in progress. Oxon.—The Lake View special settlement is to take place early in December. I am glad you have done so well on my advice. Mine.—I do not recommend purchase of any of the low-priced shares Nos. 1-6. You can do better by following the advice given under "Golden West Australia." You might take in the daily financial papers or the Citizen (weekly). I am glad to hear that you are doing so well in Croydon Consols and North Croydon Consols on my advice. Mysore.—Yes, you might sell the Debenture stocks and bonds in question, and average your South Africans (Randfontein, Langlaagte Estate, New Primrose, Glencairn, and Buffelsdoorn). No reason to sell Croydon Consols yet. Nemo, Newmarket.—Yes, Hannan's Props. should be averaged; but I do not think so much of the others. You can do better in the shares mentioned in my letter under "Golden West Australia." Hold Nos. 1-5. British Dominions.—I expressed an unfavourable opinion of the British Dominions Exploration Company at the outset. If matters are as you state the subscriptions ought to be returned. If you will send stamped and addressed envelope I will forward name of a smart City solicitor. Nutcracker.—Not amongst the better class West Australians, and at present no option but to hold. Pantile.—Nos. 1-3, 7, 8-10, are well selected West Australians. I do not like No. 4, 5, or 6. Trilby.—1. Hold Randfontein for a rise, and buy more to average. 2. Yes. Condor.—Why do you not write to the London agents for information. Solicitous.—On a "Bear" attack London and Globe Finance dropped to 3½, but are up again at 4⅞. Hold by all means. There is every prospect of a good profit. No option but to wait about the Railway stock. Mallow.—1. Yes, you ought to average both New Crœsus and Randfontein. Duballow.—I have never held a favourable view of the Hall Mines. Zeta.—1. There was a speculative collapse which has brought the shares down. Hold after the heavy fall. T. E. P. Co.—There is no option but to hold the Mining shares now that the slump is over. Why did you not work with the committee of the Beaconsfield Diamond Mine? George.—The only reason is the general slump. Hold. H. C. C.—You bought Sam's Wealth of Nations entirely against my advice. I do not see how I can help you now. D. J. A.—If the subscription to the West Australian Mine Owners' Exploration, Limited, was so small as you state the Directors had no business to go to allotment. You should insist upon this. Meirion.—1. No option but to hold. 2. Randfontein should be held for a rise, and you might buy more to average. 3. A fair mining risk. Bootle.—The Randfontein has distributed a large bonus in Porges Randfontein shares only a month ago. Carlo.—I think you might distribute the £2,000 over Croydon Consols, Aladdin's Lamp, West Australian Joint Stock Trust, and London and Globe Finance, all dividend paying. I do not like your West Australian selection at all. W. A. M.—You have no option but to exchange your Barnato Banks for Johnnies. Valentine.—No option but to hold Nos. 1 and 3, but I never recommended them, and have always warned my readers against Sam's Wealth of Nations (2), now brought up for want of capital. Leicester.—No option but to hold. Mock.—1. Yes, hold Hannan's Props., and buy more to average. 2. A fair Indian mine, but no catch. Viking.—You will be quite right to buy Randfonteins. No doubt the Robinson Banking Corporation, of Princes-street, London, E.C., will let you have distinctive reports of the two Companies. Lindum.—1. I have always warned my readers against Tetuans. 2. Yes, hold Burbank's Birthday Gift. 3. A fair purchase. 4. A fair mining risk. 5. Cue I. yes, not the others. 6. No catch. Tent.—No option but to hold. Exeter.—All your West Australians, Nos. 1 to 3, should be held for a rise; they are well selected. Hold also Nos. 4 and 7. I do not like No. 5, and do not advise purchases of No. 6. A. B. C.—My opinion is favourable. Guidance.—No option but to hold all your Mining shares, Nos. 1 to 9, for an improvement. I cannot tell you about the dividends. The shares to be averaged are mentioned in my letter under "Golden West Australia." Mary L.—Yes, West Australian Joint Stock Trust shares are good to hold.

Industrial Shares.

Jai-Pur.—I do not like this brewery, but there is no fresh news. O. C.—I do not advise investment in the Motor-car Companies which are at present being started; see remarks in last week's issue. H. H., Tiverton.—I do not see how I can help you in the matter, and perhaps it would be best to close with this offer. Garryowen.—A fair investment, but I would not buy just now. Amongst cycle shares, Gladiators and Bagots are the best purchase at present. G. T. F., Interested.—Before I can reply to your queries you must send your full name and address in token of good faith, but not necessarily for publication. Kildare St. Club.—Very speculative. Rustic.—1. It is impossible to tell when the dividend on City of London Electric Lighting Ordinary will be announced; they do not look very promising just now. 2. Hold for a recovery. 3. The dividend is a good one, but the shares are also quite high enough. Markato.—The shares mentioned by you are speculative industrial investments of fair promise. The shares No. 3 are not on the market. Britannia.—1. A promising cycle investment. 2. Likely to recover; hold. Shaky.—I am sorry that I cannot help you to dispose of your cycle patent. A. S., Highbury.—Most of your shares Nos. 1 to 5 were not bought on my recommendation; but, upon the whole, I think you will do well to keep them, as the prices are likely to recover. Proconsul.—1. Yes, the Bovril Company is likely to do well, and you should apply for the shares. For choice, the Deferred are likely to see the highest premium. 2. Amongst Cycle shares, Gladiator Ordinary at ⅛—¼ premium, Swift at $\frac{1}{16}$ premium, and Bagots at 1 premium are preferable.

Mixed Investments.

Staploe.—I should think that you had better buy American Railroad bonds, of which I gave a list in last week's issue. This would certainly be a safe way of profitably investing from two to three thousand pounds. As regards the Simmer and Jack Mine, the shares are certainly very cheap, and worth buying. Ereuneter.—1. These Brewery Debenture stocks are at present very high. 2. Not tempting. 3. Yes; Swift Cycle shares at the present quotation of ⅛ premium are very promising. Jack.—No reason to sell any of your stocks Nos. 1 to 6 now. H. W. N., Derby.—I do not think much of your Mining shares Nos. 1 and 2. Neither do I care much for the Industrials Nos. 3 to 6, none of which are of my recommendation. Debonnaire.—A very fair investment for £4,000, which you should hold. Paris.—1. Argentines are not expected to advance at present until something is done with reference to the unification scheme. 2. Yes, Johannesburg Consolidated Investment are an excellent investment at the present low price. 3. Possibly, as banks generally are doing well. 4. No. 5. I do not advise this form of Companies. Sca.—No option but to hold all your shares Nos. 1 to 9 for an improvement. Stuart.—Hold all your shares for a rise. Industrious, Manchester.—Yes, the Uruguay Three and a Half per Cent Loan is a good purchase. In view of the war in Cuba, the position of the United Railways of Havana is too much involved. Fritz.—A purchase of Nigel (1) and of Grand Trunk Four per Cent. debentures (3) would be promising; but I do not like Nos. 2 and 4. Speculator, Dublin.—A. I have no doubt that Argentine Northern Central Government Mortgage bonds will improve with other Argentine Government stocks. B. I have no information about these stores. M. S. H.—1. Yes, I should prefer Dover "A" as an investment. 2. A good American Railroad bond. 3. These stand at 102-106, and should be held. 4. I have not much of an opinion of this Brazilian Railway Debenture stock. 5. The new Uruguay Five per Cent. Loan is, if anything, better than the old loan, and is quoted 64. Greeshop.—1. The Lady Bess (W.A.) is not yet proved, and I do not advise a purchase. 2. No; I do not advise a purchase of Chartered shares, and have never done so. In fact, I recommended selling ever since they were about 9 and they now stand at about 2. 3. Yes; the new Bovril Company is very promising, and you cannot do any harm in applying for these; the best chance of a big profit is in the Deferred shares. 4. No; I do not like Starley Brothers and Westwood at all. 5. Swift Cycle shares should be held for a rise. 6. Hold Bagots; they are now at 1 premium, and likely to go better. 7. Yes. Torquay.—A dollar bond is payable as to principal and interest in dollars, and there is a slight advantage in the yield owing to the difference in the exchange. The Nobel Dynamite Trust does not pay interim dividends. Nemo, Upper Norwood.—Yes; I should certainly advise purchase of Randfontein (5) in the first instance, and also of No. 1. Instead of buying the others, you can do better by following the recommendations in my letter under the "Kaffir Circus" and "Golden West Australia." Albion.—It is quite right that brokers through whom you resell what you have bought do not charge a second commission, whether this is done the same day or not, as long as it is effected in the same account. The Brewery debentures are now quoted 113, and I see no reason why you should not take your profit. Harrod's Stores are a good investment; but you will do even better by putting your money into Paquin, Limited, about which, living in Paris as you do, you should know everything. Americans are likely to go much better, and you should certainly not sell now. I do not recommend Eastern Bank shares, and there is no such bank as you mention in South Africa. Chance.—I do not advise purchase of Colonial Government bonds at present prices. If you want to purchase Home Railway stocks I should think that Brighton "A," Dover "A," Caledonian Deferred, and North British Deferred would be the best to buy. R. W. Piccadilly.—This Argentine Railway bond should improve in the near future; and New Crœsus are so cheap that a purchase could not hurt you. Hall.—I do not advise purchase of Manchester Ship Canal Debenture stock or of the Midland Railway of Western Australia First debentures; but I think the £1,000 could be invested with better advantage in the gilt-edged American Railroad bonds mentioned under "American and Foreign Rails" in reply to "Bristol Reader." F. P. H.—The shares in the Investment Company might be held for the present, and there is no reason for selling the Brewery stocks. Clanry Newry.—The South African shares should come right in time, and you should sell the Cycle shares when you see a good profit. D. C. P.—1. Instead of buying these West Australian shares you can do better by following the advice given in my letter. 2. If you have a profit you might sell. 3. I must refer you to my letter. H.L.N.—1. Certainly; why do you not buy American Railroad bonds from my list? 2. A fair investment. 3 and 4. No catch. 6. Yes, Mexican Cotton Estates of Tlahualilo Six per Cent. debentures are a very good investment. 7. A fair Industrial risk. 8. I do not like these. 9. Speculative, but promising. Rio.—1. I do not think it advisable to sell the Industrial shares now. 2. South Africans are likely to recover again, and you should hold. 3. Certainly hold your American Brewery shares. Screen.—1. No reason to sell Bank shares now, these institutions are doing well. 2. Yes. 3. A fair investment; but speculative, as all publishing Companies are. 4. You should again average Randfontein, which are improving. Walmer.—No; I have always expressed an unfavourable opinion of Qu'Appelle Long Lake Sakatchevan bonds, and do so still even at this price. 2. A fair industrial investment, but I do not advocate purchase of the Ordinary. 3. No; leave Salt Union alone. 5. No. 6. No. Club.—1. The speculator who controlled the shares has come to grief, but the enterprise is stated to have done well. Hold. 2. I do not advise the investment. Be careful not to be caught in the motor-car craze at the present moment. Steel.—1. Hold the American Rails. 2. I do not consider the Brush Electric Company promising. 3. Hold. 4. No catch. Wilts.—1. Yes, hold New Primrose and Glencairns, and buy more to average. 2. Yes, you might average now West Australian Share Corporation. 3. Gladiators and Bagots are a good purchase, and amongst the general Industrial section more particularly the new Bovril Deferred.

Various Investments.

Consols, after declining to 110, have recovered to $110\frac{3}{4}$ for the account; and a good deal of quiet investment buying has again taken place in other gilt-edged securities, including American Railroad bonds. Silver is practically unchanged at 30d., and Rupee Paper has given way to $62\frac{1}{2}$. All the talk of gold shipments to India has, however, so far come to naught, and as further withdrawals of gold for the United States are altogether stopped by the rise in the American exchange, money is distinctly easier. In Cycle shares a moderate business is passing, but changes are unimportant. Dunlop Deferred are quoted $1\frac{3}{8}$, the Ordinary $1\frac{3}{16}$, Humber Extensions $1\frac{3}{8}$. Singer Cycles are the turn firmer at 1, and Cycle Components are quoted $3\frac{7}{8}$. The fact that the Singer Cycle Company, on which the proprietors guaranteed a profit for the first year of £55,000, shows an actual profit of £79,000, and pays a 10 per cent. dividend, should be encouraging to investors in Companies with which Mr. E. T. Hooley is connected. In Gladiators dealings are taking place at $\frac{1}{8}$ to $\frac{3}{16}$ premium, while Bagots have advanced to 1 premium. $\frac{1}{16}$ is still the quotation of Swift Cycles. The Stanley Show, which has just been opened, shows an unusual absence of startling noveltics, and it is evident that some kind of finality has at present been reached in the matter of cycling inventions. This should be favourable for the existing Companies, and amongst these especially for those who are manufacturing articles of well-established reputation, such as the Dunlop Pneumatic Tyre Company, the Gladiator Cycle, the Humber, the Swift, and the Bagot Pneumatic Tyre. The event of the week in the Industrial department is the issue of the new Bovril Company, which has, I understand, been very favourably received. Old Bovril shares are very strong at $5\frac{1}{4}$. Dealings are already reported in the new Bovril shares, the Ordinary being quoted $\frac{1}{8}$ premium, the Deferred about $\frac{1}{8}$ premium, and the Preferred $\frac{1}{16}$ premium. I hear that the issue of Paquin, Limited, has been largely over-subscribed. The Ordinary are quoted at $\frac{1}{4}$ premium, the Prefs. at $\frac{1}{2}$ premium. In Brewery shares, Allsopp Ordinary are easier at 168, but Guinness remain at 440; while American Brewery shares are inactive. At the Nitrate Railway meeting long explanations were furnished by the chairman, Mr. R. Harvey, which dispelled some of the charges which had been brought. It is satisfactory to find that the Board have themselves proposed that a committee be appointed to confer with the Directors as to the past administration of the Company and its present position and prospects, this committee to have power to appoint expert assistance, and to have access to all the books and documents of the Company. It may now be hoped that good will come of the agitation which has of late arisen. A correspondent sends me circulars, which are being distributed wholesale by Mr. W. Haynes Gibbs, hon. secretary of the Incorporated Association of Her Majesty's Warrant Holders, Limited, 119, Pall Mall, London, S.W., in which he gives particulars of an amalgamation of Callard, Stewart, & Watt, Limited, bread and biscuit bakers, &c., and recommends the shares as a good investment, as the Company almost guarantees $5\frac{1}{2}$ per cent. My correspondent would like to know what commission Mr. Haynes Gibbs is going to get for his trouble in circularising his warrant-holders!—Your affectionate Uncle, MOSES.

All Rights Reserved.]

QUEER STORY.

BOY'S LOVE.

Of the thousand and one touching scenes that are enacted in Merrie England every day, I suppose that we Lunacy Commissioners come across as many as most. And I doubt not that if any man, who has served the Government in this capacity, were to relate the more striking of his experiences, in a sympathetic manner, he would command a large circle of interested readers, and would surely draw tears from even the least emotional among them. I do not, however, remember that any Lunacy Commissioner ever has published such a volume; and I suppose the reason is not far to seek. A constant course of practical routine, of dry statistics and calculations, of what I may call the work-a-day business of lunacy, unfits a man to regard these experiences from an emotional or pathetic aspect, and tends to make him employ his leisure thoughts upon subjects as far as possible removed from those of the shop. While, even if it were otherwise, the obligations of professional secrecy would be a formidable barrier to the successful treatment of such a theme.

At times, however, a case arises attended with features that cannot fail to excite strong feeling in the most hardened professional bosom. It is a case of this nature that I now set myself to relate; and I do so the more readily because there is no fear, in the present instance, of my causing pain or distress to any person concerned. If, therefore, I shield myself under cover of misleading names and dates, it is rather as a conventional formality than as a precaution that is in any degree requisite.

At a distance of time—which I will call five years ago—my business duties took me to inspect a well-known asylum in the West of England. Dr. X., the head of the establishment, was an old and valued friend of mine, and I was pleased that my apportionment of circuit should happen to include his institution. A Lunacy Commissioner's visits are not always pleasant to himself. He is by no means invariably welcomed by the heads of asylums, and when he has to find fault—as find fault he often must—they frequently retaliate upon him by all sorts of petty impertinences. But, of course, I had nothing of the kind to expect at Dr. X.'s asylum, not merely because he was a personal friend, but also because he fulfilled his duties to all his subordinates and patients with a considerate thoroughness that, in his case, rendered our periodical visitations a sheer formality. That Commissioner must have been captious indeed who could find faults to gird at in Dr. X.'s institution. I have known many excellent heads of asylums who do their work conscientiously and well, but never one who took more personal part and interest in the management of his patients. His system was one of wise and consistent kindness, and he saw that his staff of nurses and attendants conformed to it. I do not say that he never had recourse to severity. In his, as in all asylums, there were some cases in which severity alone was possible; but he made these cases very much the exception. It was, he said, his settled conviction that, in nine cases out of ten, kindness answered the best.

Without offering any opinion upon this principle as one of general application, I may assert that my friend effected at least as many cures as any of his contemporary experts, and that he made the sad lot of his incurables—who were, of course, the great majority—more tolerable and comfortable than it could have been in any other asylum. I think that the claims of these poor creatures are often lost sight of, and that whereas the curative treatment of the curable is always being pressed forward, the palliative treatment of the incurable remains very much at a standstill. There is a prevalent notion that if you give food, and clothes, and lodging to an incurable lunatic, that if you provide him with a few stereotyped amusements and occupations, that if you guard him against harming himself or others, you are doing all that is possible to alleviate his lot. But I am sure that this is a mistake. There may be—there are—those whose insanity makes them insensible of any comforts save the most material. But there are also those—and they no small proportion—who are intensely susceptible of a higher kindness and a loftier consideration; men hungry for sympathy, yearning for comprehension; men in whom their disordered intelligence diverts, but never dries up, the stream of human affection, and who, having this affection judiciously fostered, instead of discouraged, receive an unspeakable mitigation of their sufferings.

I do not say that this is always possible. But I know that it is often so, and that it is attended with happy results. My friend Dr. X. has proved it conclusively, and in his asylum far fewer cases of hopeless misery among the incurables are to be met with than in any other of the same size. I only hope that his system may spread; that the rule of stern repression in asylums may become less the rule; that the larger and kindlier spirit, to which the present age is moving, may extend itself further into our treatment of lunatics. In other departments of medical skill; in prison management; in dealings with the outcast and unfortunate; in the relations of employers and employed; drastic measures have long been replaced by gentler and more conciliatory methods. In our asylums, too, this wholesome change has been in part affected. But I long to see what is now in part become entire; to live till the day when the dry pack and the padded room shall be nearly as obsolete as the stocks or the pillory—obsolete, not at the risk of giving frenzied madmen a dangerous freedom, but because a better, a more considerate, system shall have made these frenzied cases almost non-existent.

On this particular occasion of my visit to Dr. X., I arrived at the asylum overnight, and my friend hospitably put me up. Next morning, after breakfast, I strolled round, accompanied by Dr. X., on a tour of inspection, knowing, however, very well that it was simply a pro formâ affair, and that I should find everything about the asylum in a satisfactory and efficient state. On previous visits, I had noticed how much Dr. X. had done to make his patients calm and contented, by humouring their many foibles; and on this occasion I was more than ever struck by the careful, discriminating way in which this system was being carried out, and by the favourable results which evidently arose from it. No doubt, a man devoid of unusually sound judgment would soon find himself in difficulties, if he adopted such a system. But Dr. X.'s judgment was so reliable, his shrewdness so keen, his sympathy so remarkably in touch with his patients, that he knew just where to apply, and just where to avoid, his plan of humouring, and it was seldom, indeed, that the event proved him to have been injudicious.

It was a fine August morning, and most of the patients were out in the beautiful grounds attached to the asylum. I knew many of them, from previous visits, and not a few came up and welcomed me with effusive cordiality. They seemed pleased, also, to see the Doctor, and I thought that some of them regarded him with quite affectionate eyes. This, in itself, spoke volumes for the success of his régime—for that the head of a large asylum has gained the love of his unhappy patients is the most convincing proof of his efficiency that could possibly be adduced.

Most of the unfortunate men were strolling about in an aimless way; a few were walking fast, as if their life depended on their covering five miles in the hour; a few others were gardening; and some few were sitting on the seats. But it is to one patient only that I wish to draw particular attention. He was in a retired corner of the grounds, quite by himself. The nook in which he had ensconced himself was very picturesque and charming. It was an opening in the midst of shrubs, some score of yards square, laid out in an old-fashioned border, rich with a mixed profusion of old-world flowers. At the back grew tall hollyhocks, sun-flowers, golden-rod, and evening primrose; and in the front, the lowlier, but not less lovely, darlings of a by-gone age. I am a herbaceous enthusiast myself—a floral antiquarian—a botanical tory; and I noted, with delight, that all my favourites were represented. Yes, here they all were. Columbine, Sweet-William, Mary-bud, Canterbury-bell, fritillary, London pride, Solomon's Seal, white and yellow alison, or, as the cottagers more prettily call it, garden-gate; and creeping-jennie, and bachelors' buttons. Aye, and those dear, delicious herbs, recalling the fragrant memories of my sunny childhood, balm, and marjoram, and lemon-leaf, and old-man, or boy's love, as village maidens would ather know it.

And on his knees, weeding the border, pausing ever and anon to survey his labours with a proud and tender glance, I saw the gardener of this fairy plot. How lovingly his eye lingered on the flowers; what fond delight beamed in his approving smile! It was not till we had stood watching him for some minutes that he became aware of our presence. Then he looked up.

"Well, Doctor," he exclaimed, "and how do you think my garden shows to-day?"

"Beautiful! Beautiful, my dear sir!"

The poor fellow's eyes sparkled with pleasure at that.

"I am glad you think so," he said. "She is coming this afternoon, you know."

"Ah! So she is," replied my kind-hearted companion, nodding.

"And she is sure to be pleased with my flowers—she must be pleased—eh, Doctor?" inquired the patient, eagerly and anxiously.

"Not a doubt of it. It is a foregone conclusion."

The unhappy man heaved a deep sigh of contentment and relief.

"Thank God for that, Doctor. I have arranged them just as she likes them—haven't I? And there is plenty of boy's love—isn't there? She has always been so fond of boy's love. Ah! Doctor, boy's love is a rare plant to last."

"To be sure it is."

"Yes; nothing can kill it when once it has taken root. Heat won't kill it. Frost won't kill it. Wet won't kill it. Drought won't kill it. Weeds won't kill it. Neglect won't kill it. After a hard winter, Doctor, when every other plant in the border has been killed, I've known boy's love to be the only one left standing. How lonely, how desolate it looked next spring. But it seemed proud of its endurance, too. A true perennial!"

He sighed, murmured something that I could not catch, and applied himself again to his weeding. The Doctor and I passed on to another part of the grounds.

"Poor fellow!" said my companion, as we walked away. "The old story—a disappointment in love."

"I guessed something of the sort. What were the particulars?"

"Nothing out of the common. Some girl, to whom he was deeply attached, threw him over and married another man. He is peculiarly sensitive, and his reason gave way under the shock."

"He seems happy enough now."

"Yes. Very different from what he was when he first came here. He was then one of our worst and most melancholy cases. It was only by accident that I found out the means to make him happy and contented."

"How was that?"

"One day the head gardener came and complained to me about him. It appeared that he had taken a spade from one of the tool-sheds and started digging up the turf of a small lawn, in that very corner where we have just left him. I went to stop him in his work of destruction. I found two of the attendants already dragging him away by force, and the patient struggling, protesting, swearing in the most frenzied manner. I bade them let him go, and asked him what he wished to do, and why he had been digging up the turf. He explained his object to me in a torrent of eager words. He asked my leave to execute it with painful anxiety and excitement.

"He said that her garden—the little garden which she so dearly loved—had all been turfed over and spoiled. That the old-fashioned border, which had always been her favourite, was entirely done away with. And now she might come back any day—and what would she think? What would she feel? He knew exactly how the border had run; in what way it had been planted. Might he not be allowed to cut it out again as it was? To replant it with all the flowers and herbs which she had loved so well? He pleaded so pathetically, that I could not find it in my heart to refuse him. I gave him leave. I told the gardener to supply him with all the tools, the plants and seeds, that he might ask for. The poor fellow seized my hand and kissed it in passionate gratitude. Then he took up his spade and set to work at once. The result of his efforts is what you have just seen."

"Poor creature! Poor, faithful creature," I murmured.

"I dare say you noticed that little rustic summer-house," the doctor continued. "He built that, too—exactly like her summer-house, which (so he fancied) had been pulled down. On fine days, he is happy gardening; on wet days, he is happy sitting in that summer-house, looking at his border. He is always expecting her. Of course, she never comes; but he is always expecting, therefore always happy. Indeed, I have known many, many sane people who find far less pleasure in their life than he," added the good doctor, with a sigh.

And then we went on to talk of other matters.

* * * * *

In a round of absorbing duties and visits, I soon forgot the episode of this poor patient and his little garden; and it might, by this time, have slipped from my memory altogether, if it had not been recalled to me a year or two later by a rather remarkable occurrence.

In the course of my annual holiday, I happened to pay a brief visit to some old friends—whom I had not seen for quite a dozen years—at their home in Wiltshire. The father of the family had been a college chum of mine, and during his lifetime, I had been to see him tolerably often. But after his death, my visits to his family became less frequent, and at last ceased altogether; not owing to any difference or coldness, or, indeed, from any purpose or design; but simply because domestic and business ties happened to draw us in opposite directions.

When, however, during my holiday, I found myself staying within a few miles of the place to which my old friend's widow and daughters had moved, I took the opportunity to call upon them and resume our acquaintance. They were pleased to see me, and pressed me to spend a few days under their roof—an invitation which I readily accepted. Only two of the daughters were then at home, May, the youngest, a pretty and vivacious girl of eighteen; and the eldest, Helen, a widow of six month's standing, who had returned to her mother's roof upon the death of her husband. When I had last seen Helen, she was about the same age as May was now, and equally bright and vivacious. It seemed to me, therefore, very strange and sad to see her in widow's weeds, and to note the melancholy sorrow all too evident in that once lively, girlish face. I naturally assigned this melancholy to grief for her dead husband; not knowing, then, that her union with him had been unfortunate, and that his death had come to her as a welcome relief. However, in the course of my visit, my eyes were opened to the real secret of her grief.

I remember the occasion well. On the first morning of my visit, I rose early and took a stroll round the garden while the dew of the summer dawn was still white upon the grass. I had not expected to find anyone about at such an hour, except, possibly, the gardener, and I felt some suprise, when, in a remote corner of the garden, farthest from the house, I came upon Helen. She wore a holland apron and gardening gloves, and was busy snipping off the dead flowers in a long border with a pair of scissors.

She started at the sound of my footsteps on the gravel; then came forward and offered me her hand.

"You are busy betimes," I said.

"Yes," she answered. "I do not sleep well, and gardening is the occupation that I love best. I am often here earlier than this. This is my own particular little garden. No one else is allowed to touch it. How do you like it?"

"It is quite a little fairy-land," I said, as I looked around me.

Then something seemed suddenly to strike me. I had seen this tiny floral paradise before. Yes! yes! That rustic summer-house; that line of rose-trees; that long, old-fashioned border, full of hollyhocks, and golden rod, and pinks, and columbine, and balm, and boy's love—yes; I had surely seen it before! And then I remembered where. A sudden sense of interest, of excitement, of eager curiosity, made my heart throb.

"You—you—are fond of these old-fashioned flowers?" I asked her, looking down into her face.

"I love them. I care for no others."

She spoke almost passionately.

"And I love them, too," I said, still regarding her attentively. "Partly for themselves; more for their associations."

She trembled, and turned away her face.

"Ah, God!" she murmured, in a low voice. "Their associations!"

Then she exclaimed, with quick, nervous energy:

"Mr. Lascelles, you have heard? You know? Some one has told you?"

"No," I answered, "no one has told me. But I think I can guess. Shall I try?"

"If you like," she replied, her voice sinking to a whisper.

"I think it all began with the growth of a boy's love," I said.

Her face flushed crimson on the instant. A violent tremor shook her frame. She clasped her hands in a tense, excited gesture.

"You—you—have been told!" she gasped. "This is no—no—guess-work."

"I have been told nothing," I repeated. (I never stopped to consider the wisdom or the kindness of speaking out. I was acting under an impulse which entirely controlled me.) "But I have seen something, and have drawn my conclusions."

"After having once used 'CEREBOS' I cannot endure the common table salt. Cerebos is so dainty, so fine, so dry, and never goes lumpy." All the best Grocers and Stores keep it. In large tins, 6d. and 1s.

"Have seen something? What? Where? I do not understand. Explain!"

"A little garden, the counterpart of this. That same summer-house filled up the corner. The rose-trees ran just so, and along one side there stretched a border of exactly that size and shape—full of the same dear, old-world plants. There they grew—the hollyhocks; the golden rod; the creeping-jennie; the columbine; the sweet-william; the Canterbury-bell. But the gardener's favourite, above them all, the plant which he loved and prized the most was—boy's love."

She stared at me with a dazed, bewildered air. Her eyes were fixed on mine. But she did not speak.

"Every day," I went on, "when it was fine, he weeded and tended his plants; and when it was wet, he sat in his summer-house and watched them. His one thought was that they might be trim and ready against the arrival of—some one; some one whom he always expected; some one who never came."

She put her hands to her face. She uttered one low, gasping cry.

"You—you—have—seen—him."

Then she tottered, fell forward, and if I had not caught her in my arms, would have lain prone and fainting on the gravel.

* * * * *

The last scene of my story was enacted a week later. With the consent, and, indeed, with the approval of Dr. X., it was arranged that I should take Helen over to the asylum, and that she should be allowed to see her faithful gardener, who had been waiting for her so long. I was present at the interview. I shall not easily forget it.

When he saw Helen, he started. He turned very pale. He trembled all over. Then he shaded his eyes with his hand, and half-closed them, like one coming out of darkness into a strong light.

"How do you find your garden?" he asked her, in an uncertain, wavering voice.

"George! George!" was all she could find to say; but in her utterance of the name throbbed a world of pathos.

"After you went," he continued, still speaking in a low and dreamy tone, "ruthless hands made havoc of your garden. But I restored it just as it was—just as you—had—had loved it. I renewed the border myself. I replanted all your favourites as they had been before. And I said to myself that, when you came back, you should never know the difference. Was I right, Helen? Do—you—see—any—change?"

For answer, she stretched out both her hands to him. He took them eagerly, yet tenderly. It seemed to me that his eyes were less hazy now; that they had grown more used to the strong light.

He loosed one of her hands, still retaining the other, stooped down, picked a spray of boy's love, and handed it to her.

She took it and placed it in the bosom of her dress. He uttered a joyous cry, and bending forward, clasped her in his arms. I caught a glimpse of his face at that supreme moment. I needed no better assurance. I saw, in an instant, that what I had scarcely dared to hope had come about—that Helen and daylight were restored to him together.

MUSIC.

THE LAMOUREUX FESTIVAL.

M. LAMOUREUX last week brought his band from Paris, bombarded London with half a dozen concerts, and called it a "Lamoureux Festival." People have varied ideas of what a "musical festival" consists. Some think it means a week of oratorios, Masses, and Stabat Maters sung by provincial choirs. My musical critic labours under the impression that it implies a special fee of (as he suggests) twenty guineas per diem, plus travelling and hotel expenses; and he is immensely sarcastic at the idea that anything at Queen's Hall can rightly be described as a "musical festival" at all. He believes there is also a "festival" at Canterbury which has mostly to do with cricket, and one at the other Archiepiscopal city of York which has to do with church choirs. But both are intimately connected with "special" fees and hotel expenses, whereas he now hears of neither, although last week the day and night celebrations in which Mr. Robert Newman revelled, almost implied the necessity of his taking up his quarters temporarily at the Langham.

M. Lamoureux's own notion of a "festival" was the production of certain flimsicalities of modern musical France, interspersed with much Beethoven and Wagner. If now I may judge from some of the examples of modern French music produced at Queen's Hall last week, the Frenchman of to-day, like the Englishman of the last generation, would seem to take his pleasures sadly. The music, when it left the well-beaten French track of muted violins, cymbals, and harp, and developed a "programme," was usually of a most lugubrious character. M. Dubois, for example, in "Frithiof" depicts the enforced separation of two lovers, the lady being afterwards married to a king thrice her age, whereupon the hero, partly by accident, partly in revenge, sets the local temple on fire. M. Vincent D'Indy, in his "Enchanted Forest," tries to describe in the orchestra the adventures of a knight, who, after successfully evading the wiles of certain forest elves, drinks some enchanted water which sends him to sleep for a prolonged period. Sceptical stipendiary magistracy was obviously unknown in that enchanted forest, or the water might have been tested for its alcoholic strength. M. Chevillard did not disclose the particular story of his "Symphonic Poem," which some have imagined is a love idyll, while others affect to believe that it deals with the wanderings of a prophet in a desert. "Programme" music, indeed, is apt to be extremely disappointing unless the composer betrays the secret of his plot. M. Chevillard is M. Lamoureux's son-in-law, which partly accounts for the production of his "Symphonic Poem" in a country that has plenty of mediocrity of its own. M. Bourgault-Ducoudray in his "Rapsodie Cambodgienne" has sought to describe the overflowing of a Nile-like Cambodian river for the purpose of irrigation, though how on earth this sort of thing can be illustrated in a modern orchestra is not at all clear. All these compositions are more or less to pattern, and, in fact, the style of modern French music shows little or no diversity. The best production of the week was the Symphony in D minor of the late César Franck, which is extremely ingenious and effective, though a good deal more German than French.

The Lamoureux audiences, except on Saturday afternoon, were not large. On Tuesday and Thursday afternoons it is true the 5s. gallery was filled, mainly by ladies, for men on weekday afternoons have other business to attend to. But even in the evenings the stalls showed many empty benches, and Mr. Robert Newman has now to consider whether the high prices he has adopted can be maintained. A Richter, we know, can do it; but then he does not offer up the sacrifice six times in a week. Indeed, although the experiment has twice been tried, it is obvious that people will not pay 12s. 6d. to hear M. Lamoureux, while Mr. Wood plays to shilling and Mr. Randegger to sixpenny audiences. In Paris, I believe, M. Lamoureux charges 4 francs, or little more than three shillings, for his best seats, and he gives his French friends far better concerts, including choral works, full programmes of the music of Berlioz, and performances by eminent soloists, M. Paderewski taking part in two of the Parisian concerts last season. In London there are no soloists, and the tickets run up to 12s. 6d. each. Why London should always be expected to pay so much higher prices than any other city for an almost exactly similar entertainment is not exactly obvious.

The Lamoureux orchestra has, however, won a well-deserved artistic success, and for much the same reason as the Colonne band did earlier in the autumn. To compare the French orchestras with the bands which Richter, Mottl, and Levi conduct in London would be utterly unmeaning and illogical. The Frenchmen come here after an enormous number of rehearsals in their native land. Their chief merit is a species of military precision and that ensemble which is to be gained only by frequent rehearsal and long practice together. The performance, when once it is perfected, rarely or never varies. The reading of a symphony this year will be practically the same as its interpretation next season. The same points will be made, the same details observed. Richter and other imported German conductors are granted only a couple of London rehearsals with a resident orchestra, but they manage to bring out effects in some instances just as well, in others worse, and in many cases even better, while they show a degree of individuality and intellectual variety which are wholly absent from the French concerts. The Parisian wood wind is extremely good, but the brass is coarse, and the violins—perhaps because they are playing to the low pitch—entirely lack the resonance of the Richter or the Crystal Palace fiddles. Despite the beautiful rendering of the "Eroica," of the "Parsifal" prelude, and of certain French works, there was nothing during the whole Lamoureux week equal to the Richter reading a short time ago of Tschaikowski's "Symphonie Pathétique" or of Beethoven's Choral symphony. On the other hand, M. Lamoureux showed that he is one of the few Frenchmen who have a genuine grasp of the Wagnerian ideas. M. Lamoureux proposes to return with his band in May. He will do well then to produce some more important French works than he has yet tried, and also to bring his prices down to a reasonable figure.

It is said that nearly 20,000 persons attended musical entertainments of various sorts last Saturday, but the biggest audience was drawn by Madame Patti, who, in luxuriant voice, then gave her only concert this season at the Albert Hall. Mr. Percy Harrison was the speculator, and he must have rubbed his hands at the balance-sheet. Madame Patti sang no fewer than seven times, including "Tacea la notte" from "Trovatore," Mozart's "Voi che sapete," the Gounod-Bach's "Ave Maria," and a group of popular ballads, before, after many recalls, she appeared in her carriage cloak as a strong hint of immediate departure. The songstress is remaining in London for a few days, but she will not sing in public again this year.

The concert which marked the twenty-fifth anniversary of the Royal Amateur Orchestral Society was almost a private gathering. It was a smoking concert, attended, of course, exclusively by men, and both the Prince of Wales and the Duke of Edinburgh made speeches, which (musical critics not, as a rule, being shorthand writers) have been reported according to the taste and fancy of the hearers. No one, however, was more amused than the Prince of Wales himself at the slip which his Royal Highness made, in referring to the Royal Amateurs as "The Royal Agricultural Society." But his reference, as a sign of the advance of musical taste, to the enormous number of concerts now given weekly in London (this week they are at the rate of seven per diem), was very warmly cheered.

Mr. George Cottle (or Lansdowne Cottell) despite much that has been said about him and his London Conservatoire of Music by various correspondents in TRUTH during the past few weeks, seems to be emulating the sagacious attitude of Brer Fox in the story-book, who "lay low and said nuffin." So certain steps are, I learn, to be adopted in the hope of loosening his tongue. One of those who have paid Mr. Cottell money proposes to demand it back, and, on refusal, to place Mr. Cottell in such a position that he will be able to tell his own story in the witness-box. Meanwhile my reference from the Cottell prospectus to Mr. Blumenthal as one of the teachers of the pianoforte at this precious "Conservatoire," has brought me a very proper letter from the well-known composer, Mr. Jacques Blumenthal. It is, of course, possible that the "Mr. Blumenthal" of Porchester-road may be another gentleman; or, like the "Charles Long, Secretary," he may be altogether a myth. But in either case, the only Mr. Blumenthal known in musical life, and to the "Musical Directory," writes me as follows from the Hotel Bristol, Cannes:—

> I have just seen the article in your issue of November 12, in which you mention my name as being printed in the list of teachers at Mr. Cottell's Conservatoire of Music. Will you allow me to say I had never heard of Mr. Cottell before reading about him in TRUTH, and I have certainly never given to him, nor to anybody on his behalf, authority to use my name in reference to his Conservatoire.

Perhaps now I shall hear from M. Riviere, Mr. Plowitz (Cavour), Mr. Jewson, Mr. Maycock, Mr. T. Harper, Dr. J. M. Bentley, and others mentioned in Mr. Cottell's "List of Professors;" and more particularly from Mrs. Ronalds, Lord Carrington, Lord Battersea, Sir N. de Rothschild, Lady Carrington, the Duchess of Wellington, the Countess of Strafford, Canon Harford, Sir W. T. Marriott, Lady Altman, Lady Miles, Lady Jane Kenny-Herbert (to say nothing of Messrs. Riley & Sons of the "Birmingham & Midland Districts Branch"), whose names, announced in various ways in the most recently issued prospectus, undoubtedly form an incentive to join the "Conservatoire." These ladies and gentlemen, who have hitherto kept a silence which may be misunderstood, will doubtless be glad to explain the exact extent of their connection with Mr. Cottell's Conservatoire, concerning which a tolerably full account was published in TRUTH of November 12.

The British printer has much to answer for. Every one, of course, has heard of Berlioz's "L'Enfance du Christ." In M. Lamoureux's first programme it was printed "L'Enfant du Christ." When Mr. Robert Newman read it, I am told the telephone wires nearly melted.

The great tenor, Signor Campanini, who has had a long illness, has just passed away at his house at Parma at the age of 51. Twenty years or more ago Signor Italo Campanini was considered one of the greatest tenors in Europe, and as the original Don José here in "Carmen," Faust in Boito's "Mefistofele," and Sir Kenneth in Balfe's "Talisman," he won a high reputation; being then somewhat prematurely hailed as the legitimate successor of Mario and Giuglini. When he made his début at Drury Lane in 1872 he, indeed, had a beautiful voice and was an interesting actor, but throatiness and the American climate ruined his once noble organ, so that when he returned to England a year or two ago he was little better than a wreck of his former self. He was, however, a careful man, and I understand left a considerable fortune.

Mr. Sims Reeves in a letter to the evening papers on Monday, denied that he is ill, and declared that South Africa had added years to his life. He, however, was certainly unable to appear at Queen's Hall on Sunday week, and again last Saturday. Some people have, by the way, questioned my statement that the grand old tenor is in his seventy-ninth year. This is not surprising, as the vocalist himself is doubtful on the point. In "The Life of Sims Reeves Written by Himself" (London: Simpkin Marshall & Co., 1888), page 15, he says, "I was born October 21, 1821, at Shooters' Hill. My father was a musician." In "My Jubilee," by J. Sims Reeves (Simpkin Marshall & Co., 1889), he says in December, 1839, "I had just entered upon my eighteenth year," which would make 1822 the year of his birth. The following certificate, however, speaks for itself:—

Page 241, No 1,925, Baptism solemnised in the Parish of Woolwich in the County of Kent in the year 1818:—

When baptised.	Child's Christian Name.	Parents' Names.	Abode.	Qualification or profession.	By whom the ceremony was performed.
1818, Oct. 25 born Sep. 26	John, son of	John and Rosina Reeves	Newrd.	Musician in the Royal Artillery.	H. Fraser

It struck me that perhaps there might be another son of "John Reeves," who died, the name being afterwards given to a younger son. I have, therefore, had the register searched till the end of 1823. The only children, however, are Mary Jane, daughter of John and Rosina

Reeves, born July 31, 1816; John, of same parents (the present vocalist), born September 26, 1818; William Henry, of same parents, born January 3, 1821; and Harriett, of same parents, October 20, 1822. The extra name "Sims" is, I believe, an artistic flourish. Young Reeves' name appears as a treble (his father was bass) in the chorus at a concert given at the Royal Artillery Chapel, Woolwich, December 23, 1834. That, as a bridegroom of twelve months and a happy father, he in his seventy-eighth year made a successful début as a tenor vocalist in South Africa, beyond doubt constitutes a record. That (whether owing to matrimony, matured paternity, or South Africa, or a combination of all three) many years may really be added to his life, we will all sincerely hope.

GIRLS' GOSSIP.

DEAREST AMY,—We went to the Grafton Gallery, as I told you we meant to do, and spent a couple of delightful hours among the miniatures. Daylight should be chosen for this. When the gas is lighted there are dazzling reflets which make it difficult to see well. This is the first Exhibition of the Society of Miniaturists, which was founded in May, 1895, under the Presidentship of Lord Ronald Gower. The Loan Collection is, of course, the most interesting section. There are numerous Cosways, with their marvellous flesh tints and speaking, almost living, eyes. Case E, lent by Baroness Burdett-Coutts, is one of the most interesting. The first of these is a miniature of her sister, Mrs. Trevanion, which bears a striking likeness to herself. Among Bone's Enamels, in the same case, is a fascinating likeness of Mary Queen of Scots; one, very much the reverse of fascinating, of Prince Charles Edward, and a very disillusionising portrait of Sir Francis Chantrey, the sculptor. A rosy-cheeked child in a pretty velvet frock is now the unfortunate Empress of Mexico, distraught and world-weary.

The beautiful Gunnings always disappoint me. The type of loveliness seems to have altered since their time. No doubt there is a fashion in that as in all things else. Lord Byron's mother interested us. She was not beautiful, perhaps not even pretty, but her expression was both sweet and bright. John Horne Tooke, M.P., "divine, philologist, and political writer," looks it all. I should not have enjoyed a tête-à-tête with that gentleman. On the reverse of Lady Charlotte Murray's miniature is Beethoven's monogram, set in brilliants. Count D'Orsay and Lady Blessington are appropriately near each other in the case lent by Mr. Whitehead. Charles Dickens, by an unknown artist, is delightful. He is Arthur Pendennis as well as himself. The Ancaster ivory box is lent by Lady Ancaster. It contains several family miniatures by Cosway, some of the finest specimens of his work. They are set in gold and enamel. Several other miniatures are set in pearls and some in brilliants.

The modern miniatures, together with some of past generations, are on the walls. R. Curzon Poultney has scarcely done justice to the beauty of Lady Essex, Lady Annesley, Lady Londonderry, and Lady Ormonde. Miss H. Meyers represents Mrs. Pat Campbell as frightened to death over something, and wearing a startling look of terror.

Bee was sadly disillusioned by a portrait of Hamlet, fat and greedy looking, with several chins. Soper's "Première Danseuse," in enamel on gold, shows the dancer within a space measuring about an inch and a half by an inch. But still more wonderful, in this particular, is the set exhibited by Mr. A. Chantrey Corbould. A pack of hounds and their huntsman are depicted streaming along on a surface of about a square inch and a half. On a flattened bullet is painted a landscape with windmill in the distance and a cow in the foreground. The Brighton coach and team of six horses are painted on a space of two inches by one and a half; and on the top of a soda-water cork is a horse's head and shoulders, evidently a portrait.

The Hon. Mrs. Norman Grosvenor shows a beautifully finished miniature, executed by herself, of Lady Morpeth.

The Duke of Cambridge has lent a frame of five Cosways, including miniatures of George IV. and William IV.

I saw a truly delicious evening cloak in a West End shop window yesterday. It was pale green cloth, very long, and bordered with ermine down the front. It had a collar of the fur, of course. I believe I saw an evening gown with huge paniers in the same window, but it was only a fleeting glimpse I had from a hansom, so I cannot be sure. The paniers are not unpicturesque when well arranged and not too large—and don't they make the waist look small? "Why, considerable," as Laurel would say.

Miss Lottie Venne makes a delightful American in "A White Elephant" at the Comedy. The way she holds out a little black-gloved hand and says "Shake!" is quite lovely. Her audacious colour-scheme, including the Red Elphberg hair and a bright scarlet velvet gown, answers admirably, by the way.

The sweetly pretty frock Miss Nina Boucicault wears in the first act has made Bee and Clare both long for one like it. It is made of pink chiffon, and falls in soft folds with no horrid stiffening or arbitrarily managed flutes or anything. Are you not tired of having your skirts stiffened? I have struck at last, and most peremptorily decline even a single inch of horsehair.

I suppose, in the days of Gretna Green the mantua makers used to compose "Elopement Costumes" just as often as the orthodox bridal white. If not, they missed a chance that their successors of the present moment would not let slip. The costume in which Miss Boucicault elopes—"bolts" she calls it—is quite too sweet. It is mauve cloth with touches of chinchilla about the coat, and a toque of mauve velvet with a chinchilla brim. It is neat, business-like, smart, and most becoming.

Miss Compton's teagown, of the palest pinkish mauve, is also very covetable, as well as her ulster of box cloth with its beaver collar.

I see that the papers say the farce is badly constructed. Well, dear, we must all be badly constructed too, for we laughed more than we have done for a long time over it. How can Mr. Kemble manage to keep up that snore without choking?

Poor old St. George's! It has been so long the Temple of Hymen, and has grown so tired of the overwhelmingly numerous weddings of the last twelve months that it tried hard to cremate itself last week. Without its tower it looks very dissipated and unkempt. It is curious that it should have suffered disaster contemporaneously with the removal of Hanover Chapel in Regent-street, is it not?

And was it not fortunate that the registers were not destroyed?

I see that Paquin is being turned into a Company, and is about to open a branch in Dover-street. I was so surprised to find, in reading the prospectus, that the firm is only six years old. It has come to the front most wonderfully in that short time. For a gown, mantle, or bonnet to be signed "Paquin" is a guarantee of good style and smartness. Our London modistes delight in securing Paquin models, and pay huge sums for them. This, let me tell you, is the best criterion of success in the great world of chiffons. Richard says that the new Company is making liberal arrangements for the staff to take shares, so as to give them an interest in the concern. This answered splendidly in another great Paris house.

BUSVINE'S New Styles of Ladies' Fur-trimmed Cloth Jackets are separately designed and specially modelled to suit each particular figure.—Sketches by post, 4, Brook-street, W. "But so far from being modelled on similar lines, no two bear, to the initiated eye, any but the slightest general resemblance to each other."—Daily Telegraph.

FASHIONS UP TO DATE.—An elegant and svelte figure is produced by the easy and perfect-fitting anatomical corset shaped by the experts, Mesdames SYKES, JOSEPHINE, & Co., Anatomical Corsetières, 280, Regent-street, Oxford-circus, London, W.

I enjoyed myself very much on Friday morning on the stage of the Lyceum Theatre at the sixth annual meeting of the Theatrical Ladies' Guild, a society that has grown into a most valuable and beneficent organisation. There was an enormous attendance of members, the immense stage being filled with rows four deep of visitors, and the stalls were half full as well. The centre of the stage was left free, in order that the occupants of the latter might be able to see the proceedings.

Miss Fanny Brough, President, and Mrs. C. L. Carson, Hon. Sec. and Foundress of the Guild, occupied seats behind a most business-like table, covered with formidable documents. In a comfortable chair hard by sat Miss Ellen Terry, with a great basket of chrysanthemums for company. "Imogen" had promised to give away the prizes, and she looked charming in her quiet black gown, with its soft, cream-coloured front, and a black hat that hid too much of her face from the eager spectators. When Miss Brough commenced proceedings with the one word, "Ladies!" she pronounced it with such remarkable energy that every one burst out laughing. She was looking very jolly in a grey tailor-made, with a red tie, red hat, and cocks' feathers. She begged of the speakers to be brief, and was herself a pattern of succinctness. Mrs. Carson then read a most satisfactory report, detailing the work done through the year, and the number of persons practically helped in various ways. The agreeable fact of a substantial balance at the bank was also noted, and, only for the pathetic sadness of the Hon. Sec.'s voice when referring to two fatal cases that had occurred in the hospital, the whole report would have been rose-coloured. The usual votes of thanks all round were proposed and seconded, the speeches being short and to the purpose. Mrs. Theodore Wright spoke alliteratively of the "brand-new Bee babies" for whom the fairy godmothers worked, and Miss Vane Featherston referred to the poor dressers and cleaners who had to stand all the evening after a hard day's work, and were often obliged to trudge home at night for want of the money to pay their fare. The babies of these poor souls would fare hardly if it were not for the kindly offices of the Guild. Mrs. A. Drinkwater told us about a box that had been started by Mrs. Carson to receive the penny fines imposed upon members who talked scandal. That box pined away, and died for want of nutriment. Only one miserable little penny was found inside it. Mrs. Albert Barker spoke of the kind-heartedness of the Country Bees, who give an afternoon in every week to the work of the Guild, though often tired enough with long journeys and much packing and unpacking. Miss Kate James mentioned that some of the most beautiful of the sewing was done by "dear old Mrs. Brough," grandmother of the President, and ninety-three years of age. Mrs. Clement Scott, replying to Mrs. Oscar Beringer's speech, in proposing a vote of thanks to the Press, was very bright and amusing. She spoke of the value of a little compliment and flattery in encouraging one's work, and described the English system of journalism as the most upright, honourable, and admirable in the world. A funny story was told by Mrs. Gordon Ascher about the father of one of the "Guild babies" who, in writing to announce its arrival, concluded by generously sending his love to all the ladies on the Committee. Miss Annie Hughes and Miss Gertrude Kingston were both eloquent in their praise of the hon. sec., who calmly ignored all laudation, her whole charitable soul being bent on the determination to give 400 Christmas dinners to the poor souls who need them. Directly she had expressed this wish, Miss Ellen Terry passed her a slip of paper promising £10, Lady Cook sent another promising ten guineas, and Mrs. Beerbohm Tree a third, offering £5.

It was a pleasure to see the hearty way in which Miss Terry entered upon the business of giving the prizes. She prefaced it by a little speech in which she congratulated the Guild on its splendid work as detailed in the report, "so prettily read by Mrs. Carson that she could get an engagement at the Lyceum any day," and envied the workers one and all. She herself was ashamed of having done no sewing, but would try to be better in future. She wished she might have had a badge herself, but felt great pleasure in being asked to give them away. This she proceeded at once to do, and when a recipient was found to be hemmed in at the back, Miss Terry impulsively crossed the stage with her peculiarly graceful swiftness and soon extricated her. Miss Fanny Brough, in returning thanks to Sir Henry Irving, said, "We all love him!" upon which Ellen Terry significantly remarked "Ahem!" making everybody laugh, and soon after the formal proceedings were over. A very informal crush of members round the President's table followed, in the midst of which we found our way to "the front" again, after gazing at the scenery on that historic stage.

I have received the following chatty letter from Frances, who is, as usual at this time of year, at Brighton:—

DEAREST MADGE,—I have delayed writing you from my ever-favourite Brighton until our winter season had really thoroughly commenced. Not only has it now begun, but we are, as a matter of fact, well into the very middle of it. At first it looked as though we were going to be disappointed once again, but I am thankful to say that the clouds have rolled by, and all here is bright sunshine, not only socially, but atmospherically, for though we do occasionally have dull days, of late we have been most fortunate in the weather. I read in the papers the other day that you Londoners had occasionally one and a-half to two hours sunshine during the day. Here we generally get it for at least six hours daily.

The hotels at the moment are crowded out, especially the Métropole, which is still the favourite, though both the Norfolk and Bedford hold their own with their own.

Taking a walk on the King's-road you would not think that cycling was less popular with Society as some people say it is; but, then—don't be cross—our bikers are not your bikers. Londoners who used to do the Park only played at the game of cycling. Our bikers go in for long country rides, and not merely content themselves with what I may call the swagger part of the amusement. Talking of cycling, the question of cycling dress is to us an all-important one. I looked in at Busvine's, when in London the other day, and saw their specialties in this direction. They are really cycling habits, and, being Busvine's habits, I need not say anything more about them. They set as well on a bicycle as their safety habits do on a horse, but there is, fortunately, a little more of them. One constantly gets off a bicycle, not so off a horse. We have, however, our local bicycle costumiers in Messrs. Barrance & Ford, who have hit off the happy medium of providing one with a costume that is most convenient and suitable and neat for bicycling in, and yet, at the same time, not unsuitable or inconvenient or conspicuous to walk in. We went out, by the way, on our bikes some ten miles to meet the motor cars on their journey to Brighton, but the less said about that well-advertised fiasco the better. Some day we shall doubtless have horseless conveyances, but before they become really popular they will have to be very different vehicles from those that honoured us with their presence.

The best piece of local news is, that we have a new regiment stationed here, and it is already exceptionally popular in the town with all classes; and so it should be, as it is, to a great extent, in fact, as well as in name, a Sussex regiment. It glories, too, in a really first-class band, which plays three mornings a week on the lawn at Hove, thus giving an excuse for us to show off our own new autumn costumes, and also an opportunity to criticise those of others, especially those of our dearest friends. But besides the regimental band, amusements are well provided for us. Mellison's skating rink is open, and on Saturdays he has the Guards and other bands down from London to enliven the proceedings. Concerts are numerous, and so are balls to be. The theatre always has an attractive London company, sometimes two, one in the afternoon and one in the evening. And as to fancy fairs and bazaars, well—at Brighton they are always with us. We are just in the midst of one on behalf of the Brighton Church Schools; but the attraction in this direction is to be an Exhibition and Sale of Irish Industrial Manufactures, which is to be opened by the Duchess of Connaught on Thursday, December 10. Judging from the list of patrons and the enthusiastic manner in which it is being worked, the exhibition ought to be a great success.

Then, last, but not least, the Brighton Harriers have taken a fresh lease of life, under the new mastership of Mr. Howard Welch, who is evidently determined to show good sport. Not altogether a bad programme, is it? But this will be considerably added to, provided two "ifs" behave as they should behave. The one is mine, the other is Charlie's. Mine is "if" the weather will only keep fine and bright. Charlie's is "if" the mining market will only pull itself together, and show a little more life and go. I know the value of my "if," so far as the success of the season is concerned. Charlie, however, says it is not "in it" with his. I, of course, must take his word for this, as, unfortunately, or, perhaps, fortunately, I know nothing about such a market as the mining market—the only market we have down here being for the sale of fruit, flowers, and vegetables.

It has been remarked over and over again that, for Autumn and Winter wear, a lady never looks better and more suitably clad than in a Redfern Gown. Messrs. REDFERN'S New Models are now ready. Inspection invited.—26, Conduit-street, W.

Will write again soon.—Yours affectionately, FRANCES.

Here are two nice recipes. Pheasant livers with fine herbs are a delicious breakfast dish :—

Take half a dozen fresh livers, wash and remove the gall, dry them in a cloth, season with pepper, and toss them in a little flour; fry a chopped shallot in a sautépan with a piece of butter, then put in the livers and sauté them quickly, putting them into a gill of hot brown sauce as they are done; add a tablespoonful of chopped parsley, a sprig of chopped thyme, and a squeeze of lemon juice. Stick a dish with a border of triangular-shaped pieces of fried bread, using a little white of egg and flour to make them adhere, put the livers in the centre and serve very hot.

Game soup à l'Imperial is really excellent :—

Remove the fillets and scrape the flesh from the bones of 2 or 3 old birds, either pheasants, partridges, or grouse; chop the bones, and put them on the stove in a stewpan well covered with stock or water; add a bacon bone, an onion, and a carrot; bring them to the boil, and allow them to simmer for five or six hours. Then strain the stock, and remove every particle of grease. Pass the meat from the legs of the birds, with the trimmings of the breasts, through the mincing-machine, and put it into a stewpan with the whites of 2 or 3 eggs, and half a pint of cold water. Mix thoroughly, add the stock, and stir until boiling; add 4 or 5 peppercorns, a blade of mace and a bouquet of herbs. Allow the soup to simmer for an hour, then strain through a cloth. Meanwhile the fillets of the birds must be made into forcemeat, by pounding it in a mortar, adding a tablespoonful of cold, stiff bread sauce, 1 oz. of butter, and an egg; season with salt and pepper, rub through a wire sieve, then mould into small quenelles with two teaspoons, blanch them in the oven in a little stock, drain on a cloth, and add them to the soup, with the boiled carrot, cut into rings, at the moment of serving.

Ever, dear, your loving cousin, MADGE.

CIGARES DE JOY cure ASTHMA.

CIGARES DE JOY (Joy's Cigarettes) afford immediate relief in cases of ASTHMA, WHEEZING, and CHRONIC BRONCHITIS. Appreciated by Physicians and sufferers all over the world. Easy to use, certain in effect, and harmless in action, they are recommended for use by young and old. May be had of all Chemists and Stores in Boxes of 35 at 2/6, or post free from WILCOX & Co., 83, Mortimer St., London, W.

WHY DRINK INFERIOR TEA?
UNITED KINGDOM TEA COMPANY'S TEAS
DIRECT FROM THE GROWERS.
1/-, 1/3, 1/4, 1/6, 1/7, 1/9, & 2/- per lb., DELIVERED CARRIAGE PAID.
Write for Samples sent free, taste them, and judge for yourselves. Amazing superiority in Quality! Great Economy in prices.
Offices: 21, MINCING LANE, LONDON, E.C.

THE NEW CROWN VIOLET.

AN EXQUISITE PERFUME.
In Crown Stoppered Bottles only.

"The Delicious Essence of the Violet itself, distilled from the fragrant Violet Gardens of the sunny Riviera."

SOLD EVERYWHERE.
The Crown Perfumery Co.,
177, NEW BOND STREET, W.

ACCIDENTS OF TRAVEL.
ACCIDENTS RIDING, DRIVING, SHOOTING, CYCLING, FISHING, SKATING, &c.
ACCIDENTS OF ALL KINDS.
INSURED AGAINST BY THE
RAILWAY PASSENGERS' ASSURANCE CO.
64, CORNHILL, LONDON. A. VIAN, Secretary.

By Special Appointment to H.R.H. the Prince of Wales.

PHILIP MORRIS & CO., LTD.,
22, NEW BOND STREET, W.
Importers of Havana Cigars.
Manufacturers of the celebrated "BOND STREET"
CORK TIPPED CIGARETTES.
Hussars, 15s. Blues, 10s. Cambridge, 8s. Derby, 7s. Per 100.
As supplied to the Royal Family, leading West End Clubs & Military Messes.

HAMPTON & SONS

Prepare, free of charge, competitive estimates for every description of Sanitary, Building, Electrical DECORATIVE and FURNISHING WORK in best manner, at least outlay.

PALL MALL EAST, S.W.
Works: Belvedere-road, S.E.

See HAMPTON & SONS' CATALOGUES.

GAIETY RESTAURANT, STRAND.

LUNCHEONS (HOT and COLD)—At Popular Prices, in BUFFET and RESTAURANT (on 1st floor). Also Chops, Steaks, Joints, Entrées, etc., in the GRILL ROOM.
AFTERNOON TEA—Consisting of Tea or Coffee, Cut Bread and Butter, Jam, Cake, Pastry, ad lib., at 1/- per head; served from 4 till 6 in RESTAURANT (1st floor).
DINNERS IN RESTAURANT—From 5.30 till 9 at Fixed Prices (3/6 and 5/-) and à la Carte. In this room the Viennese Band performs from 6 till 8. Smoking after 7.45.
American Bar. The GRILL ROOM is open till 12.30.
Private Dining Room for Large and Small Parties.
SPIERS & POND, Ltd. Proprietors.

Warner's Safe Cure.

FOR
KIDNEY and LIVER TROUBLES, GENERAL DEBILITY.

NEVER FAILS.

2/9 and 4/6 per bottle, of Chemists and Dealers.

Send to H. H. WARNER & CO., Ltd., 86, Clerkenwell-road, London, E.C. for Treatment and Diet Pamphlet.

MELLIN'S FOOD

For INFANTS and INVALIDS.

MELLIN'S FOOD

when prepared is similar to Breast Milk.

Samples post free from

Mellin's Food Works, Peckham, S.E.

Established 1670.

GOLDSMITHS.
DIAMOND MOUNTERS

Streeter & Co. Limited.

18, NEW BOND STREET, LONDON, W.

Established 1670.

JEWELLERS.
LAPIDARIES.

Hunting Brooch in Diamonds, £12.

White and Black Pearl and Diamond Trefoil Brooch, £40.

Diamond Star, £30.

Turquoise and Diamond Heart and Tie Brooch, £17.

Stag Brooch in Diamonds, £15.

Opal and Diamond Brooch, £8.

Opal and Diamond Trefoil Brooch, £12

Pomeranian Brooch in Diamonds, £17.

Pug Brooch, £18.

Horse and Jockey Brooch in Diamonds, £25. (Owner's Colours Enamelled to order.)

Hackney Brooch in Diamonds, £25.

Donkey Brooch in Diamonds, £18.

CHRISTMAS GIFTS

Pearl and Diamond Fly Pin Brooch, £5.

Gem Links or Waistcoat Buttons.

Catseye and Diamond Cluster Bracelet, £52. 10s.

Snipe Brooch, £15.

Woodcock in Diamonds, £30.

Turquoise and Diamond Heart & Tie Bracelet, £35

CHATTO & WINDUS'S NEW BOOKS

LEONARD MERRICK'S New Novel, CYNTHIA: a Daughter of the Philistines, is now ready, in two vols., at every Library.

THE CHARM, and other Drawing-room Plays. By WALTER BESANT and WALTER POLLOCK. With 50 Illustrations. Crown 8vo, cloth, gilt edges, 6s.

THE ROYAL CHRISTOPHER. By JUSTIN HUNTLY McCARTHY, Author of "A London Legend," &c. Crown 8vo, cloth, 3s. 6d.

"'Tis a breezy yarn, which boys are sure to enjoy."—Pall Mall Gazette.

DIARY OF A CITIZEN OF PARIS DURING "THE TERROR." By EDMOND BIRÉ. With 21 Photogravures. 2 vols. demy 8vo, cloth, 21s.

"The volumes give a life-like, breathing picture of the most grotesquely terrible epoch in the history of modern times. . . . M. Biré has given us a work which we should receive with gratitude. It is scholarly without being pedantic; it is picturesque without being inaccurate. It can be consulted as a text-book and read as a romance."—Pall Mall Gazette.

THE WOMAN IN WHITE. By WILKIE COLLINS. LIBRARY EDITION, set in handsome new type. With Portrait. Crown 8vo, cloth, 3s. 6d.

BARKER'S LUCK. By BRET HARTE. With 39 Illustrations. Crown 8vo, cloth, 3s. 6d.

"The story is told in Bret Harte's crispest style, and makes healthy and entertaining reading."—Scotsman.

A CAPFUL O' NAILS: a North-Country Story. By D. CHRISTIE MURRAY, Author of "Joseph's Coat." Crown 8vo, cloth, 3s. 6d.

"Mr. Christie Murray's new book is one which will certainly add to his already great popularity. It is written at once with sympathy and knowledge. . . . Altogether, 'A Capful o' Nails' is a clever and an impressive book."—New Saturday.

MARRIED OR SINGLE? By B. M. CROKER. Author of "A Family Likeness." Crown 8vo, cloth, 3s. 6d.

IN THE KINGDOM OF KERRY. By B. M. CROKER, Author of "Diana Barrington," &c. Crown 8vo, cloth, 3s. 6d.

"A fascinating volume of short stories, slight and simple in point of plot, admirable in style. Mrs. Croker writes with sympathy, knowledge, and conviction; and this, her latest effort, will add to a reputation that is already well advanced."—Vanity Fair.

REVENGE! By ROBERT BARR, Author of "A Woman Intervenes," &c. With 12 Illustrations. Crown 8vo, cloth, 6s.

"Mr. Barr seems to have studied the art of the thrilling story until he can tell it without a superfluous word."—Daily Chronicle.

Completion of the Library Edition of CHARLES READE'S NOVELS.

A New Collected Library Edition, complete in Seventeen Volumes, set in handsome New Type, Printed on Laid Paper, and elegantly bound in cloth, 3s. 6d. each.

1. PEG WOFFINGTON; and CHRISTIE JOHNSTONE.
2. HARD CASH.
3. THE CLOISTER AND THE HEARTH.
4. 'IT IS NEVER TOO LATE TO MEND.'
5. THE COURSE OF TRUE LOVE NEVER DID RUN SMOOTH; and SINGLEHEART AND DOUBLEFACE.
6. THE AUTOBIOGRAPHY OF A THIEF; JACK OF ALL TRADES; A HERO AND A MARTYR; and THE WANDERING HEIR.
7. LOVE ME LITTLE, LOVE ME LONG.
8. THE DOUBLE MARRIAGE.
9. GRIFFITH GAUNT.
10. FOUL PLAY.
11. PUT YOURSELF IN HIS PLACE.
12. A TERRIBLE TEMPTATION.
13. A SIMPLETON.
14. A WOMAN-HATER.
15. THE JILT, and other Stories; and GOOD STORIES OF MAN AND OTHER ANIMALS.
16. A PERILOUS SECRET.
17. READIANA; and BIBLE CHARACTERS.

London: CHATTO & WINDUS, 111, St. Martin's-lane, W.C.

ON THE STŒCHIOLOGICAL CURE OF

CONSUMPTION,

ASTHMA, BRONCHITIS, AND LUNG COMPLAINTS.

By JOHN FRANCIS CHURCHILL, M.D.

One Shilling, Post Free.

T. BURLEIGH, LATE DAVID STOTT, 370, OXFORD STREET.

BICYCLE GYMKHANA and MUSICAL RIDES, by Major WALTER WINGFIELD, the Inventor of Lawn Tennis, with Diagrams and Instructions how to Arrange and Practice them.—To be obtained from the Author, 100, Buckingham Palace-road, London, and all Booksellers, price 5s. net.

RICHARD BENTLEY & SON'S LIST

NEW WORKS NOW READY.

JUST PUBLISHED.

AUSTRALIAN WRITERS: Lindsay Gordon, Rolf Boldrewood, Marcus Clarke, Tasma, Mrs. Campbell Praed, Ada Cambridge, Henry Kingsley. By J. F. DESMOND BYRNE. In 1 vol. crown 8vo, 6s.

JUST PUBLISHED.

THE AUTOBIOGRAPHY OF KARL VON DITTERSDORF. Dictated to his Son, and Rendered into English by ARTHUR D. COLERIDGE. In 1 vol. crown 8vo, 7s. 6d.

"Dittersdorf, probably the first violinist of his day, was the friend of Gluck and an intimate of Haydn. . . . . The glimpses of Court life at Vienna under the reign of the father and brother of Marie Antoinette are delightful."—Pall Mall Gazette.

JUST PUBLISHED.

ON SOUTHERN ENGLISH ROADS. By JAMES JOHN HISSEY, Author of "A Tour in a Phaeton," &c. With Illustrations. In 1 vol. demy 8vo, 16s.

EDITED BY CAPTAIN CASTLE.

THE JERNINGHAM LETTERS (1780-1833). Edited, with Notes, by EGERTON CASTLE, M.A., F.S.A. With Portraits and other Illustrations. In 2 vols. crown 8vo, 24s.

BY SIR F. MONTEFIORE, BART.

THE PRINCESS DE LAMBALLE. By Sir FRANCIS MONTEFIORE. In 1 vol. crown 4to, with numerous Portraits and other Illustrations, 12s. 6d.

TWO NEW NOVELS.

THE BACKSLIDER. By CONSTANCE SMITH, Author of "The Repentance of Paul Wentworth." In 2 vols. crown 8vo, 12s.

THE MISTRESS OF BRAE FARM. By ROSA N. CAREY, Author of "Not Like other Girls," &c. In 1 vol. crown 8vo, 6s. Forming the latest Addition to the Series of BENTLEY'S FAVOURITE NOVELS.

London: RICHARD BENTLEY & SON, NEW BURLINGTON STREET, Publishers in Ordinary to Her Majesty the Queen.

A. & C. BLACK.

A MAN OF HONOUR. By H. C. IRWIN. Crown 8vo, cloth, price 6s.

THE LIFEGUARDSMAN: A Novel. Adapted from Schimmel's "De Kaptein van de Lijfegarde." Crown 8vo, cloth, price 6s.

THE STORY OF MAURICE LESTRANGE. By G. W. T. OMOND. Crown 8vo, cloth, price 6s.

MRS. FINCH-BRASSEY. By Mrs. ANDREW DEAN, Author of "The Grasshoppers," "A Woman with a Future," &c. Third Edition. Crown 8vo, cloth, price 3s. 6d.

A JAPANESE MARRIAGE. By DOUGLAS SLADEN, Author of "Brittany for Britons," &c. Crown 8vo, paper boards, price 2s.; also in cloth, price 2s. 6d.

THE LAST TOUCHES. By Mrs. W. K. CLIFFORD. Third Edition. Crown 8vo, paper covers, price 2s.

AN ODD SITUATION. By STANLEY WATERLOO. With an Introduction by Sir Walter Besant. Crown 8vo, paper covers, price 2s. 6d.; cloth, price 3s. 6d.

A KENTUCKY COLONEL. By OPIE READ. Crown 8vo, paper covers, price 2s. 6d.; or in cloth, price 3s. 6d.

STORIES FROM WAVERLEY. By Mrs. BARTON. Second Series. Fcap. 8vo, price 2s. 6d.

London: A. & C. BLACK, Soho-square.

COMPLETION OF THE

BADMINTON LIBRARY

Of Sports and Pastimes,

EDITED BY THE

DUKE OF BEAUFORT, K.G.,

Assisted by ALFRED E. T. WATSON.

The BADMINTON LIBRARY covers the whole ground of Sport, in 28 vols., price 10s. 6d. each.

CONCLUDING VOLUME NOW READY.

THE POETRY OF SPORT.

Selected by HEDLEY PEEK, with a Chapter on CLASSICAL ALLUSIONS to SPORT by ANDREW LANG, and a SPECIAL PREFACE to the BADMINTON LIBRARY by A. E. T. WATSON.

With 106 Illustrations by A. THORBURN, LUCIEN DAVIS, C. E. BROCK, &c. Crown 8vo., 10s. 6d.

ARCHERY. By C. J. LONGMAN, Col. H. WALROND, &c. 195 Illustrations and 2 Maps.

ATHLETICS AND FOOTBALL. By MONTAGUE SHEARMAN. 51 Illustrations.

BIG GAME SHOOTING. By C. PHILLIPS-WOLLEY, &c.
Vol. I. AFRICA and AMERICA. 77 Illustrations.
Vol. II. EUROPE, ASIA, and the ARCTIC REGIONS. 73 Illustrations.

BILLIARDS. By Major W. BROADFOOT, R.E. 29 Illustrations and numerous Diagrams.

BOATING. By W. B. WOODGATE. 49 Illustrations.

COURSING AND FALCONRY. By HARDING COX and the Hon. GERALD LASCELLES. 76 Illustrations.

CRICKET. By A. G. STEEL and the Hon. R. H. LYTTELTON. 64 Illustrations.

CYCLING. By the Earl of ALBEMARLE and G. LACY HILLIER. 59 Illustrations.

DANCING. By Mrs. LILLY GROVE, F.R.G.S., &c. 131 Illustrations.

DRIVING. By the DUKE OF BEAUFORT. 65 Illustrations.

FENCING, BOXING, AND WRESTLING. By WALTER H. POLLOCK, F. C. GROVE, C. PREVOST, &c. 42 Illustrations.

FISHING. By H. CHOLMONDELEY-PENNELL.
Vol. I. SALMON, TROUT, and GRAYLING. 158 Illustrations.
Vol. II. PIKE and other COARSE FISH. 132 Illustrations.

GOLF. By HORACE HUTCHINSON, the Right Hon. A. J. BALFOUR, M.P., &c. 89 Illustrations.

HUNTING. By the DUKE OF BEAUFORT, K.G., and MOWBRAY MORRIS. 53 Illustrations.

MOUNTAINEERING. By C. T. DENT, SIR W. M. CONWAY, &c. 108 Illustrations.

RACING AND STEEPLE-CHASING. By the Earl of SUFFOLK and BERKSHIRE, W. G. CRAVEN, &c. 58 Illustrations.

RIDING AND POLO. By ROBERT WEIR, J. MORAY BROWN, &c. 59 Illustrations.

SEA-FISHING. By JOHN BICKERDYKE, W. SENIOR, Sir H. W. GORE BOOTH, Bart., and A. C. HARMSWORTH. 197 Illustrations.

SHOOTING. By Lord WALSINGHAM and Sir RALPH PAYNE-GALLWEY, Bart.
Vol. I. FIELD and COVERT. 105 Illustrations.
Vol. II. MOOR and MARSH. 65 Illustrations.

SKATING, CURLING, TOBOGGANING, &c. By J. M. HEATHCOTE, C. G. TEBBUTT, &c. 284 Illustrations.

SWIMMING. By ARCHIBALD SINCLAIR and WILLIAM HENRY. 119 Illustrations.

TENNIS, LAWN-TENNIS, RACKETS, AND FIVES. By J. M. and C. G. HEATHCOTE, &c. 79 Illustrations.

YACHTING. By Lord BRASSEY, the Earl of ONSLOW, &c.
Vol. I. CRUISING, CONSTRUCTION, RACING RULES, &c. 114 Illustrations.
Vol. II. YACHTING in AMERICA and the COLONIES, RACING, &c. 195 Illustrations.

LONGMANS, GREEN, & Co., London, New York, and Bombay.

MUDIE'S SELECT LIBRARY.

CHRISTMAS PRESENTS & SCHOOL PRIZES.

A LARGE COLLECTION of SUITABLE BOOKS in LEATHER BINDINGS is kept in STOCK in the SHOW ROOMS.

A full and REVISED CLASSIFIED CATALOGUE sent post-free on application.

A SELECTION of GOOD EDITIONS of FRENCH and GERMAN STANDARD AUTHORS in LEATHER BINDINGS is also kept in STOCK.

A POPULAR CHRISTMAS PRESENT IS A SUBSCRIPTION TO THE LIBRARY.

TERMS ON APPLICATION.

MUDIE'S SELECT LIBRARY, LIMITED, 30 to 34, New Oxford-street, London.

241, Brompton-road, S.W.; and 48, Queen Victoria-street, E.C.; and at Barton Arcade, Manchester.

MR. WM. HEINEMANN'S PUBLICATIONS

Gold Medal, London, 1896.

MEISSONIER: His Life and His Art. By VALLERY C. O. GREARD. Translated by Lady MARY LOYD and Miss FLORENCE SIMMONDS. With 38 Full-page Plates in Colour and Photogravure, and 200 Text Illustrations, £1 16s. net.

Also an EDITION DE LUXE, printed on Japanese vellum, limited to 150 numbered and signed copies, with a duplicate set of the Photogravure Plates on India paper in a separate portfolio. £6. 6s. net.

THE CASTLES OF ENGLAND: Their Story and STRUCTURE. By Sir JAMES D. MACKENZIE, Bart. Dedicated by permission to Her Majesty the Queen. With 40 Full-page Plates, 160 Text Illustrations, and many Plans. In 2 vols. imperial 8vo. Price to Subscribers, £3. 3s. net.

UNDERCURRENTS OF THE SECOND EMPIRE. By ALBERT D. VANDAM, Author of "An Englishman in Paris." 1 vol. demy 8vo, 7s. 6d. net.

THE ST. JAMES'S GAZETTE.—"Contains some excellent stories. There are anecdotes on every page and a dull chapter is not to be found in the book, which is very lively reading throughout."

TIMBUCTOO THE MYSTERIOUS. By FELIX DUBOIS. With 153 Illustrations from Photographs and Drawings made on the spot, and eleven Maps and Plans. 1 vol. 12s. 6d.

THE PALL MALL GAZETTE.—"The excellence of the narrative, the style, the information, and the illustrations make this the most important book of travel that has appeared for many a day."

LETTERS OF A COUNTRY VICAR. By YVES LE QUERDEC. 1 vol. crown 8vo, 5s.

CARDINAL MANNING. By FRANCIS DE PRESSENSÉ. 1 vol. crown 8vo, 5s.

THE LIFE OF NELSON. By ROBERT SOUTHEY. With an Introduction, Notes, and Appendices by DAVID HANNAY, and Portraits of Nelson after Hoppner, and of Lady Hamilton after Romney. 1 vol. crown 8vo, 6s.

THE SKETCH.—"Mr. Heinemann deserves our thanks for giving us incomparably the best edition ever put upon the market. Mr. Hannay has surpassed himself, and has produced a Southey which every book lover must buy."

A BOOK OF SCOUNDRELS. By CHARLES WHIBLEY. With a cover designed by Mr. Whistler. 1 vol. with a frontispiece, 7s. 6d.

THE ST. JAMES'S GAZETTE.—"It must be frankly admitted that these portraits have a fascination—a 'fascination de diablerie.' Mr. Whibley knows his scoundrels well, and looks upon them with the eye of a keen critic of men."

FICTION.

THE NOVEL OF THE MUTINY.

ON THE FACE OF THE WATERS. By FLORA ANNIE STEEL, Author of "The Potter's Thumb." 1 vol. 6s. [Second Edition.

THE PALL MALL GAZETTE.—"Mrs. Steel has beaten Mr. Kipling on his own ground, India. She has written a fine novel. There is no need to tell a story which all men and women who love their country and her honour should read for themselves before the mouth is out. Books like this are so rare that it is difficult to welcome them too warmly."

A NEW THREE-VOLUME NOVEL.

LIFE THE ACCUSER. By EMMA BROOKE, Author of "A Superfluous Woman." 3 vols. 15s. net.

THE DAILY CHRONICLE.—"Miss Brooke has given us a story in which our interest grows, becomes absorbing, and is fast held until the last word upon the last page."

HENRY JAMES'S NEW NOVEL.

THE OTHER HOUSE. By HENRY JAMES. 2 vols. 10s. net.

THE TIMES.—"Mr. Henry James is not an author who usually keeps a reviewer sitting up to unnatural hours, but in 'The Other House' he has achieved this degree of absorbing interest. He has a story to tell, and how well he tells it! He has wonderfully surpassed himself."

A NEW NOVEL BY M. HAMILTON.

McLEOD OF THE CAMERONS. By M. HAMILTON, Author of "A Self-Denying Ordinance, &c." 1 vol. 6s.

BY A NEW WRITER.

CHUN-TI-KUNG: His Life and Adventures. By CLAUDE REES. 1 vol. 6s.

THE SCOTSMAN.—"Mr. Rees has lifted the veil of mystery that overhangs social life in the East in a way not to be looked for in a book of travel."

PERCY WHITE'S NEW NOVEL.

ANDRIA. By PERCY WHITE, Author of "Mr. Bailey-Martin." 1 vol. 6s.

THE DAILY TELEGRAPH.—"Cannot fail to secure the sincerest admiration. Sparkles with brilliant metaphor and trenchant epigram."

An Illustrated List of Mr. Heinemann's Announcements on application.

London: WM. HEINEMANN, 21, Bedford-street, W.C.

SMITH, ELDER, & CO.'s NEW BOOKS

"A notable and very brilliant work of genius."—THE SPEAKER.

With Eight Full-page Illustrations, crown 8vo, 6s.

RODNEY STONE.

By A. CONAN DOYLE,

Author of "MICAH CLARKE," "THE WHITE COMPANY," &c.

From the Times.—"'Rodney Stone' is, in our judgment, distinctly the best of Dr. Conan Doyle's novels. . . . There are few descriptions in fiction that can vie with that race upon the Brighton road."

RODNEY STONE. By A. CONAN DOYLE.

With 8 Full-page Illustrations, crown 8vo, 6s.

From the Daily Telegraph.—"Dr. Conan Doyle has written a wonderful book in this his latest contribution to the new romance. The story goes so gallantly from start to finish that we are fairly startled out of our fin de siècle indifference, and carried along in breathless excitement to learn the fate of the boy-hero and the inimitable dandy."

RODNEY STONE. By A. CONAN DOYLE.

With 8 Full-page Illustrations, crown 8vo, 6s.

In a few days. With 2 Portraits. Demy 8vo, 16s.

THE LIFE AND LETTERS of SIR CHARLES HALLÉ. Being an Autobiography (1819-1860), with Correspondence and Diaries. Edited by his Son, C. E. HALLÉ, and his daughter, MARIE HALLÉ.

PREHISTORIC MAN and BEAST. By the Rev. H. N. HUTCHINSON, Author of "Extinct Monsters," "Creatures of Other Days," &c. With a Preface by Sir HENRY HOWORTH, M.P., F.R.S., and 10 Full-page Illustrations, small demy 8vo, 10s. 6d.

NOTICE.—A SECOND PRINTING of Volume I. of the NEW EDITION of THE COMPLETE WORKS OF ROBERT BROWNING, in 2 vols. large crown 8vo, with Portraits, 15s., is now ready. A SECOND PRINTING of Volume II. will be ready on November 28.

"An edition which in every point of excellence will satisfy the most fastidious taste."—The Scotsman.

THE CORNHILL MAGAZINE.

NEW AND ENLARGED SERIES. ONE SHILLING MONTHLY.

Edited by J. ST. LOE STRACHEY.

CONTENTS OF THE DECEMBER NUMBER.

THE GREATEST OF ANNIVERSARIES—December 25th. By the Rev. H. C. BEECHING.
SAINT EDWARD THE CONFESSOR. By the Bishop of PETERBOROUGH.
GEORGE THE THIRD. By GOLDWIN SMITH, D.C.L.
THE BLACK DOGS AND THE THUMBLESS HAND. By ANDREW LANG.
BEAU BRUMMELL. By A. F. SHAND.
DUELS OF ALL NATIONS. I. The Duel of the Period in France. By JAMES PEMBERTON-GRUND.
THE MOON-STRICKEN. By BERNARD E. J. CAPES.
A FATAL MISTAKE. By S. T. HEARD.
PAGES FROM A PRIVATE DIARY.
CLARISSA FURIOSA. Chapters XLV. to the End. By W. E. NORRIS.

London: SMITH, ELDER, & CO., 15, Waterloo-place.

KEGAN PAUL, TRENCH, TRÜBNER & CO. Ltd.

ILLUSTRATED BY CECIL ALDIN.

EVERY-DAY CHARACTERS.

By WINTHROP MACKWORTH PRAED.

Profusely Illustrated by Cecil Aldin, with a specially designed Cover in Colours. Crown 4to. 6s.

By LAURENCE HOUSMAN.

ALL FELLOWS: SEVEN LEGENDS OF LOWER REDEMPTION, WITH INSETS IN VERSE. By Laurence Housman. With Illustrations, and Title Page and Cover specially designed by the Author. Imperial 16mo. 6s.

By SIR EDWIN ARNOLD.

THE CHAURAPANCHASIKA: AN INDIAN LOVE LAMENT. Sir Edwin Arnold, K.C.I.E., C.S.I. Royal oblong 8vo. 10s. 6d.

ADDRESSES TO THE STUDENTS OF THE ROYAL ACADEMY. By the late Lord LEIGHTON, P.R.A. Demy 8vo, 7s. 6d.

MEDITERRANEAN WINTER RESORTS. By E. A. REYNOLDS-BALL, B.A. (Oxon), F.R.G.S. Third Edition, enlarged and in great part re-written. With new Map and Plans. Small crown 8vo, 5s.

"One of the best guide books in existence."—Queen.

EGYPT AS A WINTER RESORT. By F. M. SANDWITH, F.R.G.S., Formerly Vice-Director of the Sanitary Department of Egypt. Crown 8vo, 3s. 6d.

PATERNOSTER HOUSE, Charing Cross-road, London.

DIGBY, LONG, & CO.'S NEW LIST.

NEW NOVEL BY J. E. MUDDOCK.

1. WITHOUT FAITH OR FEAR: The Story of a Soul. By the Author of "Stripped of the Tinsel," &c. Cr. 8vo, cloth, 6s. Second Edition.

NEW NOVEL BY MRS. ALICE M. DIEHL.

2. A WOMAN'S CROSS. Crown 8vo, cloth, 6s. Second Edition.

"Far above the average of modern novels, and should undoubtedly be inquired for—and read."—St. James's Budget.

NEW NOVEL BY THE PRINCESS DE BOURG.

3. THE AMERICAN HEIRESS. Crown 8vo, cloth, 6s.

Published simultaneously in London and New York.

 In these vivid, bright, and eloquent pages we have in Kitty Fauntleroy a picture of the native American girl at her best; and how very charming she is!

NEW NOVEL BY KATHLEEN BEHENNA.

4. SIDARTHA. Crown 8vo, cloth, 6s.

 The interest intensifies with each successive chapter, and is finally wrought up to an overpowering climax. It is quite impossible, once begun, to lay down this fascinating novel unfinished.

NEW NOVEL BY ALBERT HARDY.

5. A CROWN OF GOLD. Frontispiece by Author. Crown 8vo, cloth, 6s.

 The story takes a strong hold on the reader, and it has no lack of sentiment and humour. It is highly dramatic.

NEW SENSATIONAL NOVEL BY FERGUS HUME.

6. A MARRIAGE MYSTERY. By the Author of "The Mystery of a Hansom Cab," &c. Crown 8vo, pictorial cloth, 3s. 6d. [Just out.

NEW BOOK BY MRS. E. LYNN LINTON.

7. 'TWIXT CUP AND LIP. Crown 8vo, cloth, 3s. 6d. Second Edition.

NEW STORY BY EDWIN PALLANDER.

8. ACROSS THE ZODIAC. A Story of Adventure. In pictorial cloth, with a Frontispiece. Crown 8vo, 3s. 6d. [Just Out.

 The interest intensifies from page to page, and holds the reader spellbound until the very last line. The closing catastrophe is probably the most daring and splendid achievement yet made in fiction of this class.

SENSATIONAL NOVEL BY DR. GORDON STABLES.

9. THE ROSE OF ALLANDALE. Crown 8vo, cloth, 3s. 6d.

"The plot is developed with remarkable skill, and the interest is sustained without a break."—Aberdeen Press.

NEW NOVEL OF CLERICAL LIFE.

10. A MAN AMONGST MEN. By FRED. HOLMES, M.A. Crown 8vo, cloth, 3s. 6d.

 The work is remarkable for its many daring questionings.

NEW WORK BY CAROLINE GEAREY.

11. TWO FRENCH QUEENS: Elizabeth of Valois—Marguerite of Valois. By the Author of "Three Empresses," &c. With portraits. Crown 8vo, cloth, 6s.

NEW HUMOROUS BOOK BY W. CARTER PLATTS.

12. THE TUTTLEBURY TALES. By the Angling Editor of the Yorkshire Weekly Post. Crown 8vo, pictorial cloth, 2s. 6d.

"Brimful of exuberant humour."—Scotsman. "There is a laugh on every page."—Yorkshire Post.

 Send for Complete Lists of Autumn Books.

DIGBY, LONG, & CO., Publishers, 18, Bouverie-street, London, E.C.

BLACKWOOD'S MAGAZINE,

No. 974.—DECEMBER 1896.—2s. 6d.

CONTENTS.

DARIEL: A ROMANCE OF SURREY. BY R. D. BLACKMORE. CHAPS. VIII.-XI.
THE ARMY MEDICAL DEPARTMENT.
THE MAN AT AMNAT. BY WALTER B. HARRIS.
THE GUNPOWDER PLOT.
SECRET SOCIETIES IN CHINA.
A NEW BOY IN FICTION.
THE FOLK WHOSE VOICE WE HEAR. BY EDWARD A. IRVING.
BY THE AURELIAN WALL. BY BLISS CARMAN.
A RAID AMONG BOOKS.
THE EASTERN QUESTION.
THE PRESIDENTIAL ELECTION AS I SAW IT. BY G. W. STEEVENS.

WILLIAM BLACKWOOD & SONS, EDINBURGH & LONDON.

FIVE STRIKING NOVELS

LATELY PUBLISHED BY

A. D. INNES & CO.

BY E. F. BENSON.

LIMITATIONS. Crown 8vo, cloth, 6s.

"Mr. Benson has written an interesting and truly human book. His range is much wider than it was, his character-drawing has gained in depth, delicacy, and precision, while the sparkling dialogue which we enjoyed in 'Dodo' has lost none of its old brilliancy."—Daily Telegraph.

BY ROMA WHITE.

A STOLEN MASK. Crown 8vo, cloth, 6s.

"It is well and tersely written. It is thoroughly original, and is peopled by fresh and novel characters. We have rarely met a new novelist of so much promise and performance, nor a tale which can be more confidently recommended."—Times.

BY FRANCIS GRIBBLE.

THE LOWER LIFE. A Story of the Stock Exchange. Crown 8vo, cloth, 6s.

"The Stock Exchange is the villain of the story, and a mighty villain it is. . . . The romantic elements of fiction are most cunningly introduced. . . . the Author of 'The Lower Life' has accomplished the first purpose of a novelist in writing a most entertaining story."—The Referee.

By NELLIE K. BLISSETT.

THE WISDOM OF THE SIMPLE. Crown 8vo, cloth, 6s.

"An original and very clever story, the satire light yet trenchant, and the characters drawn by keen and graphic touches. There can be no doubt as to the ability and charm of Miss Blissett's book."—Pall Mall Gazette.

By W. L. ALDEN.

THE MYSTERY OF ELIAS C. ROEBUCK. Crown 8vo, cloth, 6s.

"They are brimful of bubbling whimsical humour. 'The Man who was Emperor' is simply the most refreshing liar you meet out of real life."—Pall Mall Gazette.

London: A. D. INNES & CO., 31 and 32, Bedford-street, Strand.

THE CHRISTMAS NUMBER of the PALL MALL MAGAZINE.

READY THIS DAY.

Price ONE SHILLING net.

The successive SEPTEMBER, OCTOBER, and NOVEMBER issues of this Magazine have each gone out of print within a short time after publication. It may confidently be predicted that a like result will attend the issue of the Christmas (December) Number. The PALL MALL MAGAZINE has attained an extraordinary popularity among all sections of readers, and has maintained its position as the finest of English Magazines by a judicious and lavish expenditure in securing the highest standard of literary and artistic excellence.

SOME OF THE CONTENTS.

SILVER "NEFS" (Personally revised by H.R.H. the DUKE OF SAXE-COBURG-GOTHA).

An account descriptive of the famous quaint collection of Silver Ships of the 16th and 17th centuries, preserved at Clarence House, St. James's. The article has been written and illustrated with the sanction and under the direction of His Royal Highness.

CONSTANTINOPLE: THE QUEEN OF CITIES (in Colours). An article upon Constantinople, a city upon which all Europe now gazes with absorbing interest. The life in the city is vividly described, and the movements of the surging crowds thronging its bazaars are portrayed by a series of brilliant illustrations full of the colour characterising the Near East.

ST. IVES, by ROBERT LOUIS STEVENSON. Rarely has a story been so exquisitely illustrated as "St. Ives" in the pages of any Magazine.

ANGELS UNAWARES, by MARION ELLISTON. A story of great pathos of a heralding angel's visit to earth on Christmas Eve, and of its consequent blessings.

MATHURIN: a Sinner of Pontiac, by GILBERT PARKER. A touching story of the Province of Quebec in the last century.

LETTERS FROM PARIS DURING THE FRENCH REVOLUTION. By the first DUCHESS of SUTHERLAND. An important contribution to the pages of European history. The letters are now for the first time published.

Profusely Illustrated by the Leading Artists.

Publishing and Editorial Offices: 18, Charing Cross-road, London, W.C.

STERILITY IN WOMEN: Its Causes and Curative Treatment. By J. B. RYLEY, M.D., M.R.C.S., London. An Illustrated Edition of this Work is now ready. Price 3s. 6d.; post free, 3s. 8d.
London: HENRY RENSHAW, 356, Strand.

Messrs. METHUEN'S NEW NOVELS

BY THE AUTHOR OF "THE WAGES OF SIN."

The Carissima. BY LUCAS MALET. THIRD EDITION.

"A fine and brilliant story."—Westminster Gazette.
"The interest is intense."—Pall Mall Gazette.

BY THE SAME AUTHOR.

The Wages of Sin. By LUCAS MALET. Crown 8vo, 6s.

A Child of the Jago. By ARTHUR MORRISON, Author of "Tales of Mean Streets," Crown 8vo, 6s.

"Since Daniel Defoe no such consummate master of realistic fiction has arisen among us as Mr. Arthur Morrison. . . . . A tremendously powerful dramatic presentation of human life. . . . . Nothing shows the power of Mr. Morrison's genius more than his enabling us to understand and sympathise with people whose lines are outside the pale of morality. . . . . Hardly any praise could be too much for the imaginative power and artistic perfection and beauty of this picture. . . . . There is all Defoe's fidelity of realistic detail suffused with the light and warmth of a genius higher and purer than Defoe's. The work abounds with humour, and there is a pathos, too, in some scenes which verges on the awful."—Scotsman.

In the Great Deep. TALES OF THE SEA. By J. A. BARRY, Author of "Steve Brown's Bunyip." Crown 8vo, 6s.

"As good as one could wish."—Manchester Guardian.
"A good book which we strongly recommend to all who relish sea stories."—St. James's Gazette.
"Fresh as a breath of sea air."—Nottingham Guardian.
"Good reading, fresh, and vigorous."—Daily Chronicle.

Denounced. By J. BLOUNDELLE BURTON, Author of "In the Day of Adversity," &c. Crown 8vo, 6s.

"It contains all that we ask for in this class of romance—action, adventure, and excitement, told in clear, good English."—Army and Navy Gazette.
"A stirring romance."—St. James's Budget.
"An able romance, full of colour."—Glasgow Herald.

The Daughter of Alouette. A STORY OF LIFE AMONG THE AMERICAN INDIANS. By MARY A. OWEN. Crown 8vo, 6s.

"Vivid and picturesque."—Vanity Fair.
"Full of quiet and penetrating humour; one of the best books of the season."—Westminster Gazette.
"A very charming story, fresh and unconventional."—Glasgow Herald.
"The atmosphere is refreshingly new."—Daily Mail.

Captain Jacobus. By L. COPE CORNFORD. Illustrated. Crown 8vo, 6s.

"The story is exceedingly well told."—Scotsman.
"The adventures are described with graphic power,"—Manchester Guardian.
"The period is admirably realised. Captain Jacobus is a strong character. The most striking aspect of the novel is its exquisite writing."—Black and White.

The Spirit of Storm. By RONALD ROSS, Author of "The Child of Ocean." Crown 8vo, 6s.

"The episode of the tornado is indescribable as a nightmare, yet powerfully impressive. The ship is as horribly attractive as that of Coleridge's 'Ancient Mariner.'"—N.B. Daily Mail.

The Sign of the Spider. A STORY OF SOUTH AFRICA. By BERTRAM MITFORD. Illustrated. Crown 8vo, 3s. 6d.

"The story bristles with incident.—The terrific episode of the spider is narrated with extraordinary force."—Daily Telegraph.
"The tale is one of thrilling adventure."—Scotsman.
"An absorbing romance."—N.B. Daily Mail.

The Squire of Wandales. By A. SHIELD. Crown 8vo, 3s. 6d.

Monologues of the Dead. By G. W. STEEVENS. Fcap. 8vo, 3s. 6d.

A Series of Soliloquies in which famous men of antiquity—Julius Cæsar, Nero, Alcibiades, &c.—attempt to express themselves in the modes of thought and language of to-day.

The Sin of Angels. By the Author of "A Vicar's Wife." Crown 8vo, 3s. 6d.

 Messrs. Methuen's Catalogue and Book Gazette sent to any address.

METHUEN & CO., 36, Essex-street, W.C.

Seventh Edition, Revised, Cloth; 1s. 6d.; Paper, 1s.

THE DIETETIC CURE OF OBESITY (FOODS FOR THE FAT). By N. E. YORKE-DAVIES, L.R.Coll.Phys.Lond., &c.

CONTENTS:—Part I.—What Constitutes Robust Health? Evils of Corpulency; The Cause of Weak Heart; Diet—A safe and permanent cure; Quack Medicines or Drugs, permanently injurious or fatal in; Food Required, Amount of; Food, Its Use and Ultimate Elimination; Fat, Its Use in the Body; Over-eating, Evils of; Food in its relation to Work; Exercise; Stimulants in Corpulency; Water, Aërated Drinks, &c. Part II.—Dietetics of Obesity.

OPINIONS OF THE PRESS.

"This work deserves careful study."—Queen.
"The only safe and permanent cure of obesity."—Western Gazette.
"The best work on corpulency that has ever been written."—Evening News.

LONDON: CHATTO & WINDUS, 214, PICCADILLY.

HOSPITALS & APPEALS.

A NATIONAL WORK.

CHURCH OF ENGLAND

Waifs & Strays Society

Patron - HER MAJESTY THE QUEEN.

OVER 2,400 ORPHANS AND DESTITUTE CHILDREN IN THE HOMES.

Debt of £3,500 on the General Fund.

CONTRIBUTIONS EARNESTLY SOLICITED.

E. DE M. RUDOLF, Secretary.

Church House, Dean's Yard, Westminster, S.W.
Cheques should be crossed "Lloyd's Bank, Limited, 16, St. James's-street, S.W.," and made payable to E. DE M. RUDOLF.

WHY WINTER'S WANT calls for WINTER'S WORK on the part of

ST. GILES' CHRISTIAN MISSION.

Because for 36 years past the Sickly and Destitute, the Hungry and Helpless, have, in large numbers, sought and received our aid.

Because to so many of the Deserving Poor Winter and Want come hand in hand.

Unrelieved their sufferings are piteous! We seek to distribute Food. Firing, Blankets, and Clothing. Your Financial Support earnestly solicited!!

Treasurer, F. A. BEVAN, Esq., 54, Lombard-street, E.C.
Superintendent, WILLIAM WHEATLEY, 4, Ampton-street, Regent-square, London, W.C.

Cheques and Postal Orders may be crossed "Messrs. BARCLAY & CO., Limited."

HOSPITAL FOR CONSUMPTION AND DISEASES OF THE CHEST, BROMPTON.

FUNDS are URGENTLY REQUIRED for the SUPPORT of this Unendowed Charity.

There are now 321 Beds in the two Buildings. Annual Expenses over £24,000, towards which the only fixed income is about £5,000.

WILLIAM H. THEOBALD, Sec.

GREAT NORTHERN CENTRAL HOSPITAL.
VERY POOR, FREE, and UNENDOWED.

The only Hospital available for a population of one million.
An urgent APPEAL is made for FUNDS to support the work of relieving 1,200 In-patients and 30,000 Out-patients annually.
Holloway, N. L. H. GLENTON KERR, Secretary.

THE EARLSWOOD ASYLUM FOR IDIOTS.

About 150 AFFLICTED CASES, from all parts of the United Kingdom, are now seeking admission.
FUNDS URGENTLY NEEDED to maintain the Elected Patients now under care and training in the Institution.
Cases on payments regulated by the Board received as soon as approved.
JAMES DOWNING, Secretary.
Offices—36, King William-street, London Bridge, E.C.

CANCER WARDS of the MIDDLESEX HOSPITAL.—35 beds devoted to Hopeless Incurable Cases.

A FUND of £12,000 is being raised for the purpose of erecting a separate BUILDING for the accommodation of the FEMALE CANCER PATIENTS hitherto located in the hospital, an improvement which is urgently demanded on the ground of the health, comfort, and convenience of the patients. Towards the cost of the new building the sum of £9,000 has been paid or promised, and an URGENT APPEAL is now made for the balance of £3,000 still required. Patients are admitted without letters or any recommendation, save that of necessity, and are permitted to remain until "relieved by art or released by death."—F. CLARE MELHADO, Secretary-Superintendent.

LONDON FEVER HOSPITAL, Liverpool-road, Islington, N.

Patron, H.R.H. the Prince of Wales. President, the Right Hon. Lord Balfour of Burleigh.—For the reception of persons suffering from Infectious Fevers. A fee is charged, but about three-fourths of the cost of each patient is borne by the Hospital. 80,000 sufferers have been treated here since 1802, 800 during the present year. Donors of £10. 10s. or more in one sum are Governors for life. Subscribers of a guinea or upwards for more than a year are Governors as long as they maintain their subscription. Domestic Servants of Governors and certain Employees of subscribing Firms, Clubs, and Hotels are treated free of charge. In time of pressure sufferers cannot be received from places situated outside the metropolitan area except from the households of Governors. The Hospital is in urgent need of additional help, which will be gratefully received by the Secretary, at the Hospital.

W. CHRISTIE (Major), Secretary.

CHARITY ORGANISATION SOCIETY,

15, BUCKINGHAM STREET, ADELPHI, W.C.

The Main Object of the Charity Organisation Society is the Improvement of the Condition of the Poor.

This it endeavours to attain:

1. By bringing about co-operation between the Charities and the Poor Law, and between Charitable persons and agencies of all religious denominations amongst themselves.
2. By spreading sound views on charitable work, and creating a class of almoners to carry them out.
3. By securing due investigation and fitting action in all cases.
4. By repressing mendicity.

C. S. LOCH, Secretary.

AMUSEMENTS.

ST. JAMES'S HALL.
SARASATE CONCERTS.
Under the direction of Mr. N. Vert.
THIRD and LAST CONCERT, MONDAY NEXT, November 30, at 3.
Solo Piano, Dr. Otto Neitzel.
Bechstein Grand Pianoforte. Tickets, 10s. 6d., 5s., 3s., 2s., and 1s., of the usual Agents; Robert Newman's Box-office, Queen's Hall; Tree, St. James's Hall and 304, Regent-street; and of N. Vert, 6, Cork-street, W.

HAYMARKET THEATRE.
TO-NIGHT and EVERY EVENING, at 8.30,
UNDER THE RED ROBE.
MATINEES EVERY WEDNESDAY and SATURDAY, at 2.30.

THE ANNUAL WINTER EXHIBITION of PICTURES and WATER COLOUR DRAWINGS by Artists of the British and Foreign Schools is NOW OPEN, at THOMAS McLEAN'S GALLERY, 7, Haymarket. Admission, 1s., including Catalogue.

SPORTING SKETCHES by FRED HALL and LEGHE SUTHERS, and some OIL PAINTINGS by FRED HALL, at ROBT. DUNTHORNE'S, The Rembrandt Head Gallery, Vigo-street, W.

NIAGARA. SKATING.
The First GRAND CARNIVAL will take place on FRIDAY, December 11.
RESTAURANT NOW OPEN for LUNCHEON and DINNERS.

NATIONAL SKATING PALACE,
ARGYLL STREET, W.
TIMES OF SESSIONS.
10.30 a.m. to 1 p.m. 3/-
3 p.m. to 6 p.m. 5/-
7.30 p.m. to 11 p.m. 3/-
PALACE CLUB (Sundays only), Subscription £3. 3s.
HOCKEY on THURSDAY EVENING NEXT (November 26).

PRINCE'S SKATING CLUB.
HYDE PARK, KNIGHTSBRIDGE.
The LARGEST and FINEST SHEET of ICE in LONDON.
For particulars of Membership apply to the Secretary, Prince's Skating Club, Knightsbridge, S.W.

OIL PAINTING.
PORTRAITS, LANDSCAPES, &c., faithfully REPRODUCED.
For terms, address K. M. C., Grove House, Helston, Cornwall.

TO INVALIDS.—A LIST of MEDICAL MEN, in all parts, willing to RECEIVE RESIDENT PATIENTS, giving full particulars and terms, sent Gratis. The List includes Private Asylums, &c. Schools also recommended—Address, Mr. G. B. STOCKER, 8, Lancaster-place, Strand, W.C.

GROSVENOR GARDENS.—A MANSION TO BE LET or SOLD. Unexceptionable position, lately most tastefully re-decorated throughout. The spacious reception rooms, consisting of drawing-room (panelled in silk), boudoir, dining-room and library, large room on ground floor, suitable for billiard or ball-room, eleven bedrooms, two dressing-rooms, two bath-rooms, splendid offices, hot and cold water, speaking tubes and bells fitted throughout. Sanitary arrangement under the latest improvements.—Apply for full particulars and orders to view, THE LADIES' AGENCY for Apartments and Houses, 83, Ebury-street, S.W.

WANTED for a year, a Furnished HOUSE, containing 7 or 8 bedrooms, in, or near the neighbourhood of Belgravia. Exceptional tenant. 5 guineas a week.—Apply, with full particulars, to THE BELGRAVE LADIES' AGENCY, 83, Ebury-street, S.W.

TO BE LET, for six months. A handsomely Furnished FIRST FLOOR FLAT, in Princes Mansions, Victoria-street, 5 guineas a week. Worth 9 guineas. Owner must go abroad.—Apply at once to THE BELGRAVE LADIES' AGENCY, 83, Ebury-street, S.W.

JAPAN, CHINA, CANADIAN PACIFIC ROUTE, viâ New York, Montreal, Vancouver. Only line running through trains, Atlantic to Pacific, under one management. Largest, fastest, only twin-screw steamers on Pacific. Leave England thrice weekly; Vancouver, tri-weekly.
ROUND THE WORLD, £115.
CANADA, UNITED STATES.—Cheap through tickets by fast trains. For berths or descriptive pamphlets apply, CANADIAN PACIFIC RAILWAY, 67-8, King William-street, London Bridge, or 30, Cockspur-street, Charing Cross.
N.B.—Allan, American, Anchor, Beaver, Cunard, Dominion, and White Star Agency.

ORIENT COMPANY'S YACHTING CRUISES,
by the Steamships "LUSITANIA," 3,877 tons register, and "GARONNE," 3,876 tons register, from LONDON, as under:—
For TENERIFFE, the WEST INDIA ISLANDS, BERMUDA, &c.
Leaving January 13, returning March 16.
For MOROCCO, SICILY, PALESTINE, and EGYPT.
Leaving February 17, returning April 15.
For SOUTH of SPAIN, GREECE, CONSTANTINOPLE, &c.
Leaving March 31, returning May 17.
For PORTUGAL, MOROCCO, CORSICA, ITALY, and SICILY.
Leaving April 21, returning May 21.
String band, electric light, electric bells, hot and cold baths, high-class cuisine.
Managers, { F. GREEN & CO. / ANDERSON, ANDERSON, & CO. } Head Offices: Fenchurch-avenue.
For passage apply to the latter firm at 5, Fenchurch-avenue, London, E.C.; or to the West End Branch Office, 16, Cockspur-street, S.W.

WINTER IN THE WEST INDIES
SPECIAL TOURS, 65 days for £65.
By magnificent vessels of the
ROYAL MAIL STEAM PACKET COMPANY.
For particulars apply, 18, Moorgate-street; or, 29, Cockspur-street (West-end), London.

PRINCE LINE.—EGYPT and the HOLY LAND.
CHEAP ROUND TOURS a SPECIALITY.
RIVER PLATE DIRECT (not calling at Brazilian Ports).
MADEIRA and the CANARY ISLANDS.
GIBRALTAR, TUNIS, MALTA.
Superior Services. Fares extremely moderate. High-class Cuisine.
Luxurious saloons and cabins, promenade decks, all amidships.
Head office:—JAMES KNOTT, Newcastle-on-Tyne.

AMUSEMENTS.

LYCEUM.—CYMBELINE, EVERY NIGHT, at 8, till December 11 (except Wednesdays, December 2 and 9, and Saturday, December 5). Henry Irving, Miss Ellen Terry, Mr. Frank Cooper, and Miss Genevieve Ward.
MATINEES, December 2, 5, 9, 12, 16.
THE BELLS, December, 5, 12, 14, 15.
RICHARD III., December 19. First time under this management.
Box-office (Mr. J. Hurst) open 10 to 5, and 7.30 to 10. Seats also booked by letter or telegram.

GAIETY.—Lessee and Manager, GEORGE EDWARDES.—ANOTHER GAIETY SUCCESS.—EVERY EVENING, at 8.15, a New Musical Play, in Two Acts, entitled MY GIRL, by James T. Tanner, Music by Osmond Carr, Lyrics by Adrian Ross. Box-office open daily from 10 till 6. MATINEE Saturday Next, at 2.30.

ADELPHI THEATRE.—A. & S. GATTI, Sole Proprietors and Managers.—TO-NIGHT, at 8 o'clock, BOYS TOGETHER. William Terriss and Miss Millward; Mr. W. L. Abingdon, Mr. C. W. Somerset, Mr. Luigi Lablache, Mr. Mackintosh, Mr. J. D. Beveridge, Mr. Oscar Adye, and Mr. Harry Nicholls; Miss Nesbitt, Miss Kate Kearney, Miss Alice Kingsley, &c.

SAVOY.—Every Evening, at 8.30, and Every Saturday Afternoon, at 2.30, THE MIKADO, by W. S. Gilbert and Arthur Sullivan. At 7.50, WEATHER OR NO. Box-office 9 a.m. to 11 p.m.—R. D'OYLY CARTE, Proprietor and Manager.

CRITERION THEATRE.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. CHARLES WYNDHAM.—Every Evening, at 8.30, ROSEMARY, by Louis N. Parker and Murray Carson. Mr. CHARLES WYNDHAM, Miss MARY MOORE, and the Criterion Company. MATINEE EVERY SATURDAY, at 2.30. NEXT WEDNESDAY MATINEE, Dec. 2, on which date there will be no evening performance.

DALY'S THEATRE.—Sole Lessee and Manager, Mr. AUGUSTIN DALY.—EVERY EVENING, and SATURDAY MATINEE. Mr. George Edwardes's Company in THE GEISHA. The book by Owen Hall. Lyrics by Harry Greenbank. Music by Sydney Jones.

COURT THEATRE.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. ARTHUR CHUDLEIGH.—At 9, THE BELLE OF CAIRO, by Messrs. Cecil Raleigh and Kinsey Peile, in which Miss May Yohé will appear. At 8.15, NUMBER ONE ROUND THE CORNER. Doors open 7.45. Box-office 10 to 10. Telephone No. 3,031. MATINEE SATURDAY NEXT, at 3. Doors open 2.30.

ST. JAMES'S.—THE PRISONER OF ZENDA.
LAST FOUR PERFORMANCES. At 8.15.
Box-office open daily 10 to 10.
LAST MATINEE of THE PRISONER OF ZENDA, SATURDAY NEXT, November 28, at 2.
Sole Lessee and Manager, Mr. GEORGE ALEXANDER.
ST. JAMES'S THEATRE.

ROYALTY THEATRE.—HIS LITTLE DODGE, at 9.
By Justin Huntly McCarthy.
Lessee, Miss Kate Santley. Telephone 3,855.
Mr. GEORGE ALEXANDER'S SEASON.
Preceded, at 8.30, by IN AND OUT OF A PUNT.
MATINEE EVERY SATURDAY, at 3.
Box-office (Mr. Horne) 10 to 5. ROYALTY.

COMEDY.—Sole Manager, Mr. CHARLES HAWTREY.
EVERY EVENING, at 8.45, an original Farce, in Three Acts, by R. C. Carton entitled
A WHITE ELEPHANT.
Mr. Charles Hawtrey, Messrs. Charles Brookfield, Henry Kemble, Eric Lewis, W. T. Lovell, Cecil Ramsay, William F. Hawtrey; Miss Compton, Miss Nina Boucicault, Miss Mansfield, Miss Nina Cadiz, Mrs. Charles Calvert, and Miss Lottie Venne.
Preceded, at 8, by A WHITE STOCKING, by Edward Ferris and Arthur Stuart.
MATINEE SATURDAY NEXT, at 2.30.
Box-office open 10 to 10. COMEDY.

VAUDEVILLE.—A. & S. GATTI, Sole Lessees and Managers. EVERY EVENING, at 9, A NIGHT OUT. Preceded, at 8.15, by ROUND A TREE. MATINEE EVERY WEDNESDAY, at 3. Doors open 7.45. Box-office open 10 to 10.

ALHAMBRA.—TO-NIGHT, Two New Grand Ballets, RIP VAN WINKLE and DONNYBROOK. Grand VARIETIES. Prices, 6d. to £3. 3s. Open 7.30. ALFRED MOUL, General Manager.

EMPIRE THEATRE.—EVERY EVENING, the New Grand Ballet, MONTE CRISTO. Great success. LUMIERE'S CINEMATOGRAPHE. Grand VARIETY ENTERTAINMENT. Doors open at 7.30.

PALACE, Shaftesbury-avenue.—The HANDSOMEST THEATRE in EUROPE. The finest Variety Entertainment in London, including the NEW SERIES OF TABLEAUX VIVANTS. Full Licence. Prices from 6d. Doors open 7.30.—Manager, Mr. CHARLES MORTON.

LONDON PAVILION.—TREMENDOUS PROGRAMME. Exclusive engagement of Sandow. Return of Dan Leno. EVERY EVENING, Dan Leno, Vesta Victoria, Eugene Stratton, Lillian Alexander, Herbert Campbell, Maggie Duggan, George Robey, The Brothers Rixford, Fish and Warren, Robert Arnold, Minnie Duncan, Texerkansas, Walter Stockwell, Lady Mansel, the Great Selbini Troupe, Lily Landon, W. P. Dempsey, Jessie Lindsay, Athas and Collins, Walter Munroe, The Avolos, George Beauchamp, Laura Lyle, Will Evans, Marie Free, Arthur Rigby, Lucretia, Jessie Albini, and Sandow. Prices from 1s. to £3. 3s. Doors open at 7.30. Box-office open from 11 to 5.

TIVOLI, Strand, London.—The Greatest Combination of Talent in London.—Open EVERY EVENING, at 7.45, and SATURDAY MATINEE, at 2.30, with a STAR PROGRAMME, embracing every Artiste of note.—Manager, Mr. VERNON DOWSETT.

MADAME TUSSAUD'S EXHIBITION, Baker-street Station.—Grand Ecclesiastical Tableau, His Grace the Archbishop of Canterbury (Dr. Temple, D.D.), &c., &c. The celebrated Roumanian Orchestra. Afternoon and Evening. Admission, 1s. Open from 10 a.m. till 10 p.m.

"TRUTH" HOTEL LIST.

BONCHURCH HOTEL, Bonchurch, Isle of Wight, one mile from Ventnor Station.
A comfortable, quiet, and most beautifully-situated Hotel. Pretty garden. Good sea view.
H. RIBBANDS, Proprietor.

BOSCOMBE, Bournemouth.—THE CHINE HOTEL. Under new management.
Magnificent sea views. Moderate charges. Book East Station.
Miss BARNETT (late of the Inns of Court Hotel), Manageress.

BOURNEMOUTH.—HIGHCLIFFE HOTEL (first-class). Unrivalled position, West Cliff, full south. Splendid sea view. Most comfortable. Electric light. Table d'hôte (separate tables). Supplies from own Alderney Dairy Farm. Telephone 27.
JOHN KILNER, Proprietor.

BOURNEMOUTH.—HOTEL MONT DORE.—South aspect, 150 rooms, electric light throughout, passenger lift, first-class cuisine, winter garden and lounge, covered tennis court. Turkish, sea-water, and medicated Baths. The Hotel is within two minutes' walk of the Golf Links.—For tariff, address W. KNEESE, Manager.

BRIGHTON.—BEDFORD HOTEL.—Old-established. Unequalled in situation; opposite West Pier. Spacious coffee and reading rooms; sea-water service; unequalled cuisine; great variety of excellent wines. Moderate tariff. Electric light in all rooms.
GEO. HECKFORD, Manager.

BRIGHTON.—GRAND HOTEL.
Centre of Sea Front. Electric Light throughout.
NEW LIFT TO ALL FLOORS.
For Illustrated Tariff apply to A. D. HOOK, Manager.

FOLKESTONE.—BATES' HOTEL, West Cliff Gardens, and LONGFORD PRIVATE HOTEL, The Lees. Oldest established and most select Family Hotels in Folkestone. Reduced terms during Winter and Spring months. Pension (new Coffee-room) at Bates' Hotel.—G. L. HART, Proprietor. Sanitation Certified.

FOLKESTONE.—WEST CLIFF HOTEL (180 Apartments). Stands in own private grounds of 2½ acres, facing the sea. All latest sanitary improvements. Excellent cuisine and wines. Table d'hôte at 7 p.m., separate tables.—For tariff please address The PROPRIETOR.

GRAND CANARY.—THE METROPOLE.
Newest and best Hotel.
Delightful position, fronting the sea.
Terms most moderate.

JERSEY.—The GRAND HOTEL is charmingly situated, facing the sea, with full south aspect, and sheltered from the north and easterly winds. Every home comfort and liberal management.—For terms apply to D. DE LEIDI, Manager.

MADEIRA.—REID'S HOTELS.
3½ days from England. Splendid situation. Large Gardens. Tennis Courts.
Billiards. Sea Bathing. Modern Sanitation. All Steamers met.
Pamphlet free, of F. PASSMORE, 124, Cheapside, E.C.

MALVERN—One of the most charming places for the Holidays.—The IMPERIAL HOTEL occupies the best position, and receives visitors en pension. The golf-links (18 holes) are one of the best in England. Capital stabling for hunters. Droitwich Brine, Turkish and large Swimming Bath in separate buildings. For tariff, apply to the Proprietor and Manager. F. MOERSCHELL.

TORQUAY.—IMPERIAL HOTEL.—Under entirely New Management. New sanitary arrangements throughout. It is the largest and best-situated Hotel in Torquay, and the best winter residence on the South Coast. Visitors received en pension or à la carte. Terms moderate.
F. FISCHER, Manager.

TUNBRIDGE WELLS.—WELLINGTON HOTEL, Mount Ephraim. Under the distinguished patronage of his Grace the late Duke of Wellington, K.G., the leading nobility and gentry, &c. 422 ft. above sea level, south aspect; elegantly furnished; piano in every sitting-room. Cuisine. English and French. Electric light throughout.—BRABY, Proprietor.

HANS CRESCENT HOTEL

HANS CRESCENT, BELGRAVIA, LONDON, S.W.
Within three minutes' walk of the Albert Gate Entrance to Hyde Park and Tattersall's.

THIS FAMILY HOTEL is sumptuously Furnished and Appointed, and complete in every detail. There are many self-contained Suites of Apartments, ensuring the utmost privacy (each having a Bathroom), as well as Single Bedrooms.

A HIGH-CLASS RESTAURANT
(à la carte and at fixed prices) is attached to the Hotel for Non-Residents.

RECHERCHE CUISINE.
The splendid COVERED WINTER GARDEN (2,500 square feet in area) forms a charming lounge, an attraction which is not possessed by any other Hotel in London. The entire building is agreeably heated during the winter. Mons. F. Casano's exquisite String Orchestra performs in the Palmery every evening during dinner time. Manager, MONS. C. DIETTE.

AVONDALE RESTAURANT

PICCADILLY (entrance in Dover St.).

Table d'Hote Luncheons and Dinners at Separate Tables.
A la Carte at any Hour.

High-class Service. Unrivalled Cuisine and Cellar. Private Dining Rooms for Luncheons, Dinners, and Meetings.
In the Reception Room there are TEN ELECTROPHONES, by which Visitors can hear, Free of Charge, the Performances at all the Theatres.
Tables and Rooms can be booked by Telegram or Telephone No. 35,322.

A COMPLETE LIST OF

HOTELS OF THE MIDLAND RAILWAY.

London	MIDLAND GRAND (St. Pancras).	Leeds ...	QUEEN'S.
Liverpool...	ADELPHI.	Derby ...	MIDLAND.
Bradford ...	MIDLAND.	Morecambe	MIDLAND.
		Normanton	STATION.

The Favourite Hotels for Tourists, Cyclists, and Pedestrians.

Specialities—Comfort, Good Cuisine, Moderate Charges.

WILLIAM TOWLE, Manager, Chief Office, St. Pancras, N.W.

POSITION UNRIVALLED.

THE LANGHAM HOTEL,

PORTLAND-PLACE, LONDON, W.

Situated in the most fashionable, convenient, and healthy locality. Artesian Well Water. Electric Light throughout. Moderate Tariff.
Table d'Hote 6.30 until 8.15. WALTER GOSDEN, Manager.

INNS OF COURT HOTEL, Holborn.—A first-class Family Hotel, with 200 bedrooms, all modern conveniences. Electric lights, lifts, &c. Banquets arranged. The Central Hall is the finest and the Dining-room the pleasantest in London. Masonic lodge, public meeting rooms, &c. Table d'hôte, 6 to 8, 3s. 6d.—FRANK BLACKLEY, Manager. Inclusive terms from 10s. 6d. per day.

ILFRACOMBE.

The WARMEST WINTER SEASIDE RESORT in England

THE ILFRACOMBE HOTEL.

First-class Return Tickets issued from London (Waterloo), L. and S.W.R., from November to March, including seven days' Bed, Board, and Attendance at the Ilfracombe Hotel, £5. 5s. each, available for one month.
Ask for HOTEL TICKETS, available by all trains. Fast trains leave Waterloo at 11 and 3 o'clock. H. R. GROVER, Manager.

THE HOTEL BELGRAVIA,

VICTORIA STREET, S.W.
(QUITE CLOSE TO VICTORIA STATION).

The Handsomely-furnished Enclosed Suites of this Hotel provide either Temporary or Permanent HOMES WITHOUT A HOUSEHOLD CARE.

TO BE LET BY THE DAY, WEEK, MONTH, OR YEAR. ALSO SINGLE BEDROOMS. ELECTRIC LIGHT. NIGHT PORTER. AMERICAN "OTIS" ELEVATORS.

TABLE D'HOTE AT SEPARATE TABLES OPEN TO NON-RESIDENTS.

EXCELLENT CUISINE. CHOICE WINES.

Telegraphic Address:—"BELGRAVIAN, LONDON." TELEPHONE No. 3083.

HOTELS, &c.

KNOWLE HOTEL,

SIDMOUTH, S. DEVON.

Quite unsurpassed as a Winter Resort. Delightful grounds of 20 acres. Sunshine record highest on the South Coast.
Every luxury. Cuisine excellent. Tariff moderate. Medical baths now open

HASTINGS. Due South, Facing Sea.

QUEEN'S HOTEL,

LARGEST AND BEST APPOINTED.
Sunny, and most sheltered position in Hastings and St. Leonards.
ELECTRIC LIGHT. PASSENGER ELEVATOR.
Moderate Tariff. Hotel Flys attend the trains.
WILLIAM GLADE, Manager.

LOWESTOFT GRAND HOTEL.

Standing in its own grounds. Open all the year round. Special reduced terms until May. Splendid sea fishing.

CONTINENTAL WINTER RESORT, five hours from London.—The magnificent HOTEL DE PUYS, near Dieppe, offers to English families a luxurious home in a mild and sunny climate; English sanitation, sea air, perfect cycling roads; tariff from £2. 10s. a week. Return fare, Friday to Tuesday, first class, 24s.—J. PELLETIER, Manager.

HASTINGS.—ALBANY HOTEL (Robertson-terrace).—Inclusive terms from 2½ gns. upwards. Finest position on the whole sea front. Electric Light everywhere. Lift to all floors. Smoking room and all public rooms face the sea. Billiards. Special Notice! No charge for attendance is made. Visitors can bring their own wines; no corkage is charged.—C. A. SCHWABE, Manager.

WESTON-SUPER-MARE.—"One of the healthiest and most invigorating watering-places in the world."—The GRAND ATLANTIC is the principal and leading Hotel, facing the sea. 130 sumptuously appointed rooms, delightful public rooms, hydraulic lift, every modern comfort. Nearest to Golf Links and Railway Station. "Own model farm."—Apply, Manager. Telegraphic address, "Atlantic." Telephone No. 11.

SALCOMBE, SOUTH DEVON.
THE MARINE HOTEL.
Winter resort, delightful climate. All the comforts of a private house. Terms and particulars on application to Miss JONES, Manageress.

LAS PALMAS. Grand Canary.—SANTA CATALINA HOTEL.—For all particulars apply at London Office, the Canary Islands Company, Limited, 1, Laurence Pountney-hill, E.C. Golf links.

MOTOR CYCLES

OF ALL KINDS.

THE LARGEST CYCLE FACTORY IN THE WORLD.

OVER TWO MILES OF BENCHING.

THE

New Beeston Cycle Co., Ltd.,

COVENTRY.

FARADAY & SON's

Electric Light Fittings

Dining Room Coronæ
Drawing Room Sconces
Counterpoise Pendants
Adjustable Standards
Porch & Loggia Lanterns
Tortoise-shell Shades

ORIGINAL DESIGNS
HIGH-CLASS FINISH

2 & 3
BERNERS ST.
LONDON W.

THE NEW PATENT

"Self-Closing"

BRACELETS.

NEVER SLIP in whatever position placed.
Delightfully flexible and comfortable.
Specially suitable for Presents, as they fit any wrist.

CLOSED

OPEN

Made in plain gold. Also with the pretty and Fashionable Turquoises and Pearls studded all round.
LARGE VARIETY OF PATTERNS.
Sold by all leading Jewellers.
Wholesale only Saunders & Shepherd, London.

For ECZEMA and all Skin Diseases wash with this Soap.

DR MACKENZIE'S ARSENICAL SOAP

Produces a lovely complexion, and cures Spots, Pimples, &c 6d. & 1s.

For ECZEMA and all Skin Diseases wash with this Soap.

DR MACKENZIE'S ARSENICAL SOAP

Produces a lovely complexion, and cures Spots, Pimples, &c. 6d. & 1s.

The most emollient and soothing Toilet Soap in the World for irritable skins. Madame ADELINA PATTI writes from Craig-y-nos Castle:—"I find Dr. Mackenzie's Arsenical Toilet Soap most excellent." Beware of the many imitations. Have Dr. Mackenzie's or none.

Clarke's "Pyramid" Night-Lights.

Single Wicks. In Boxes containing 8 Lights, to burn 9 hours; or 12 Lights, to burn hours.

THE "BURGLAR'S HORROR."

Far, Far and Away the Best.

Should be lighted in a front and back room in every house as soon as it is dark.

N.B.—No paraffin or other dangerous material used in the manufacture. No water required.

"PYRAMID" AND "FAIRY" LIGHTS ARE THE ONLY LIGHTS THAT CAN SAFELY BE BURNED IN LAMPS.

Sold by all respectable Dealers everywhere. Manufactured by CLARKE'S PYRAMID and FAIRY LIGHT CO., Ltd., Cricklewood, London, N.W., where all letters should be addressed.

Double Wicks. In Boxes containing 6 Lights and Glass, to burn 10 hours; or 10 Lights and Glass, to burn 6 hours.

THE

MUNSON

TYPEWRITER.

A WONDERFUL PIECE OF MECHANISM.

Its Chief Points are:

1. Interchangeable Type.
2. Perfect Alignment.
3. Visible Writing.
4. Uniform Impression.
5. Portability (Weight, with Oak Case, 17 lbs.)
6. Noiselessness.
7. Erasing Plate.
8. Universal Keyboard.
9. Interchangeable Parts.
10. Powerful Manifolder.
11. Ribbon Reverses Automatically.
12. Can be Operated in any Position.
13. LOW PRICE.

£18 net complete.

HIGHEST AWARD, CHICAGO, 1893.

Sole Agents for the United Kingdom—

THE NORTH EUROPEAN CYCLE EXPORT COMPANY,

30, Snow Hill, London, E.C.

Dunlop Pneumatic Tyres for Carriages.

Absence of Noise.

Driving on Air Cushions.

Comfort Increased.

Draught Decreased.

In a closed carriage conversation can be carried on in a whisper.

The DUNLOP PNEUMATIC TYRE Co., Ltd.

(Patentees and sole makers of the celebrated Dunlop tyres for cycles).

Telegrams: "AIRINESS." Telephone No. 6,754.

166, Clerkenwell Road, London, E.C.

SHOW ROOMS: 14, REGENT STREET, LONDON, S.W.
WORKS: ALMA STREET, COVENTRY;
BRANCHES: Dublin, Manchester, Birmingham, Nottingham, Glasgow, and Abroad.

FLORILINE

FOR THE TEETH AND BREATH

Is the BEST LIQUID DENTIFRICE in the WORLD.

PREVENTS THE DECAY OF THE TEETH.

Renders the Teeth Pearly White.

IS PERFECTLY HARMLESS AND DELICIOUS TO THE TASTE.

Is Partly Composed of Honey, and Extracts from Sweet Herbs and Plants.

Of all Chemists and Perfumers throughout the World.

2s. 6d. per Bottle.

FLORILINE TOOTH POWDER,

Only put in Glass Jars, Price 1s.

THE MEXICAN HAIR RENEWER

Prevents the Hair from Falling off.

Restores Grey or White Hair to its ORIGINAL COLOUR.

Being delicately perfumed, it leaves no Unpleasant Odour.

IS NOT A DYE.

Should be in every House where a HAIR RENEWER is needed.

ASK YOUR CHEMIST OR HAIRDRESSER FOR

THE MEXICAN HAIR RENEWER.

Price 3s. 6d. per bottle.

HOW MR. HALL CAINE WROTE THE 'MANXMAN.'

"Yes, if the fact is of any consequence, you are very welcome to say that I wrote the 'MANXMAN,' with the SWAN FOUNTAIN PEN It has become quite indispensable to me. I can use it with ease and certainty anywhere and at any time, even in the dark, in bed, and on horseback."

We only require your steel pen to select a pen to suit you.

Complete Illustrated Catalogue sent post free on application to

MABIE, TODD, & BARD,

93, CHEAPSIDE, E.C., or 95a, REGENT-STREET, LONDON, W.

NEW BRANCH, 21, High-street, Kensington, W.

MAPLE & CO

Brass Bedsteads

Brass Bedsteads

THE LARGEST STOCK IN THE WORLD

Thousands of Brass Bedsteads at from

38s 6d to £50

Purchased before recent advances

Buyers effect a great Saving

Brass Bedsteads

Brass Bedsteads

MAPLE & CO

TOTTENHAM COURT ROAD LONDON

CORPULENCE

AND ITS

EFFECTIVE TREATMENT.

CORPULENCE—although, perhaps, not generally so recognised by ladies—is yet an unhealthy condition.

It has hitherto been very difficult to treat without resort to harassing and unpleasant methods, or, worse still, by means highly debilitating and injurious to health.

Corpulence is a disease of assimilation.

It comes, not like dyspepsia, from undigested food, but from food digested in the wrong way.

This ill-digestion produces unhealthy fat, instead of healthy blood and muscles.

Enforced semi-starvation, and the sparing use of liquids and starchy foods, &c., to reduce obesity, is a painful and unsuccessful remedy.

Such a system is, moreover, highly dangerous to the nervous system.

Stout people may eat very little, and yet put on flesh all the time. Such persons have usually a hereditary predisposition to obesity.

An indolent and sluggish habit of the digestive functions, coupled with inactivy of the liver and kidneys, invariably characterises a corpulent tendency.

Fortunately, it is now very easy to correct these conditions, and to do away with this slow, sluggish assimilation.

We can, by the use of Kutnow's Improved Effervescent Carlsbad Powder, set up a brisk, healthy condition of the digestive functions, and stimulate the liver and kidneys to a proper state of activity.

Thus the corpulent, by the aid of Kutnow's Powder, may nourish the active functions of the body, and work off surplus fat and other adipose matter by a healthy method.

The drowsy and indolent habit of the system will thus vanish, and give place to renewed healthy activity.

Kutnow's Powder sweeps away the surplus products of digestion before they have time to do mischief.

It imparts to the corpulent, from the very first dose, a sensation of freedom, activity, and vigour.

The effect of Kutnow's Powder on superfluous fat is speedy, safe, and continuous. There is none of the debilitating effects which the use of most other remedies involve.

Even before the obesity itself is removed, the languor and discomfort, the hot, tired feelings of the patient, are immediately corrected.

A trial sample of Kutnow's Powder suffices to convince of its palatability and merits, and its continued use will not fail to accomplish the desired end.

All the advantages of the most celebrated mineral water springs, in the treatment of obesity, are possessed in a far greater degree by Kutnow's Powder.

Kutnow's is a perfectly innocuous and restorative treatment, incapable of harm in the most delicate cases at any age of either sex.

Kutnow's Powder is taken in water—an effervescent, cooling, palatable drink, acting forthwith as a natural lubricant of the digestive functions and alimentary tract.

The treatment by Kutnow's Powder does not interfere in any way with the usual habits of the patient.

Kutnow's Powder is prescribed and recommended by eminent medical men everywhere.

Kutnow's has been PRESCRIBED to MEMBERS of the ROYAL FAMILY.

All the leading Medical Journals endorse the merits of Kutnow's Powder.

Kutnow's Powder is not a secret or patent medicine. Doctors know the formula.

Kutnow's Powder is produced by the ingenious expedient of desiccating the salts which contain the active principle of the mineral water, and combining them with effervescents.

Thus it is by the genial aid of Kutnow's Powder the recalcitrant liver can be brought to its proper usefulness.

Aiding Digestion and dispersing acid dyspepsia.
Banishing the miseries of constipation, gout, and rheumatism.
Giving back the clear skin, the bright eye, and the alert gait of health.

When you buy "Kutnow's" at the chemists, see that the registered autograph facsimile signature, "S. Kutnow & Co.," and the trade mark, "Hirschensprung, or Deer Leap," is on the label and out carton.

From MISS CISSIE LOFTUS.

"Your Improved Effervescent Carlsbad Powder seems to me a very recommendable preparation."

MADAME LA COMTESSE IDA MARCHETTI DE MONTESTRUTTO, Champs Elysée, Paris, highly recommends Kutnow's Improved Effervescent Carlsbad Powder.

From MR. WILLIAM TERRISS, the popular Actor.

"I have much pleasure in giving you a hearty recommendation, for, whenever I feel run down from overwork, a dose of your Carlsbad Powder acts as a corpus redivivus."

A FREE TRIAL.

A FREE TRIAL.—For Seven Days from the date of this paper, Messrs. S. Kutnow, Limited, 66, Holborn Viaduct, London, E.C., will send a Sample of KUTNOW'S POWDER, free and post-paid, to every adult applicant who names TRUTH when writing.

KUTNOW'S Improved Effervescent Carlsbad POWDER may be obtained in capsuled bottles of all Chemists and Medicine Vendors, price 2s. 9d.; or post free (in the United Kingdom) for 3s. from the London Office. See that the Registered Trade Mark, "Hirschensprung or Deer Leep," and the autograph facsimile signature, is on the label and carton. These ensure genuineness. Sole Proprietors: S. KUTNOW & CO., Limited, 66, Holborn Viaduct, London, E.C. New York House: KUTNOW BROTHERS, 52 and 54, Lafayette-place, New York City, U.S.A.

WATER ABSOLUTELY FREE FROM DISEASE GERMS, BY USING THE

BERKEFELD FILTER

FOR THE PRIVATE HOUSE OFFICE, FACTORY, HOTELS RESTAURANTS, CLUBS, &c. &c.

Can be Easily and Cheaply Fixed to the Service-Pipe of any HOUSE having ordinary pressure.

Supplied to H.R.H. the PRINCE OF WALES, DUKE OF WESTMINSTER, K.G., and others too numerous to mention; THE HOUSE OF LORDS, and THE HOUSE OF COMMONS.

In use in all the Principal Hotels. Simple in Construction. Most easily cleaned.

PRICE FOR FILTER AS ABOVE, 42s. SMALLER SIZE, 25s.
For other prices see price-lists.

Offices and Show-Rooms: The BERKEFELD FILTER Co. Ltd. 121, Oxford St., London, W.

NOTE.—Joseph Lunt, B.Sc., F.C.S., British Institute of Preventive Medicine, in his report on the Berkefeld Filter, says, "Exhaustive experiments showed that with London tap-water strongly infected artificially WITH THE TYPHOID BACILLUS, not a single typhoid bacillus was detected IN THE FILTERED WATER for a period of 26 days."

No Country House Should Be Without One.

Ask Your Grocer FOR HELM-COCOA.

CARTER 6A, NEW CAVENDISH ST. PORTLAND PLACE, LONDON.

ONLY ADDRESS OF ORIGINAL CARTER LITERARY MACHINE.

For holding book, lamp, meals, &c., in any position over an easychair, bed, or sofa. Deliciously luxurious. A most useful gift. Prices from 17/6

INVALID FURNITURE. ADJUSTABLE COUCHES and BEDS from £1. 10/-

Bed Lift £3. 10/-	Bed Rests 7/6
Reclining Boards, 25/-	Leg Rests 10/-
Walking Machines	Crutches 10/6
Portable W.C.'s.	Bed Baths 12/6
Electric Bells, Urinals, &c.	Commodes, £1. 5/-
Air & Water Beds.

Carrying Chairs from £1.

Self-Propelling Chairs from £2

Breakfast in Bed Tables from 30/-

BATH CHAIRS FROM £1. 5/-

ILLUSTRATED CATALOGUES POST FREE.

JOHN CARTER, 6a, NEW CAVENDISH ST. Portland-pl. London, W.

BREAKFAST—SUPPER

EPPS'S

GRATEFUL—COMFORTING.

COCOA

BOILING WATER OR MILK.

THREE GOLD MEDALS.

Exquisite Models. Perfect Fit. Guaranteed Wear.

THE Y & N PATENT DIAGONAL SEAM CORSET

Will not split in the Seams nor tear in the Fabric. Made in White, Black, and all the fashionable colours and Shades in Italian Cloth, Satin, and Coutil, 4/11, 5/11, 6/11, 7/11 per pair and upwards.

CAUTION.—Every genuine Y & N Corset is stamped.

Sold by Drapers and Ladies' Outfitters in the United Kingdom and Colonies.

CHRISTMAS PRESENTS AND NEW YEAR'S GIFTS.

RIMMEL'S SATCHETS, 6d., 1/-, 1/6, 2/6, 3/6, 5/-.
Richly mounted and sweetly perfumed.
RIMMEL'S FANCY CASES, 7/6, 10/6, 18/-, 21/-, 30/-, &c.
Containing only the best Perfumes.
RIMMEL'S ARTISTIC EMPIRE FANS, from 5/6 to 20 guineas.
Exquisite designs. Splendid variety.
RIMMEL'S PERFUMED ALMANACK, 6d.
Beautifully illuminated.
RIMMEL'S "EXQUISITE" PERFUME, 5/-, 10/-, 15/-, 21/-, & 30/- per bottle.
A very lasting, concentrated, and extremely fine perfume.
RIMMEL'S "NESSARI" PERFUME, 3/6, 5/-, and 8/6 per bottle.
A sweet and lasting perfume.
RIMMEL'S FRESH VIOLET EXTRACTS, 2/6, 3/6, 5/-, and 8/6 per bottle.
A perfect and most delicate perfume of the Violet.
RIMMEL'S TOILET VINEGAR, 1/-, 2/6, and 5/- per bottle.
A tonic and refreshing Lotion for Toilet and Bath.
RIMMEL'S BEST PERFUMES, in cut-glass bottles, 2/6, 3/6, 5/-, 7/6, 10/-, 12/6, 15/-, and 20/-, forming remarkably handsome Presents.
RIMMEL'S EXTRA-SCENTED SOAPS, 4/6 per box of three tablets.
Highly purified and exquisitely scented.
RIMMEL'S POUDRE de BEAUTÉ, 2/6 per box.
Refined, imperceptible, and adherent Toilet Powder.

To be had at 96, Strand, 180, Regent Street, 64, Cheapside, LONDON; and at 76, King's Road, BRIGHTON. Also at Rimmel's Continental Branches, Paris, Brussels, The Hague, and Florence.

AMERICAN TOOTH CROWN CO.,
24 OLD BOND ST., W.
50 & 52 LUDGATE HILL, E.C.
FOR FIRST CLASS DENTISTRY.

Decayed and broken-down teeth should not be extracted. They can be saved for many years by skilful crowning and filling at moderate and fixed fees. Experts in all methods of dentistry in attendance daily.

Descriptive book post free on Application to the Secretary at either Address.

NO FEE FOR CONSULTATION.

BEST & SAFEST DENTIFRICE SOLD BY ALL CHEMISTS AND PERFUMERS IN ELEGANT CRYSTAL TOILET CASKET PRICE 2/6. ALSO IN PATENT METALLIC BOX PRICE 1/-

PRESERVE YOUR TEETH BY USING THE OS TOOTH BLOCK

Established 20 years.

OVER 3000 TESTIMONIALS.

Time, Trouble, and Expense saved in Households by the use of

Maggi's

CONSOMMÉ. In Gelatine Tubes. Boxes containing 10 Tubes, 1/3; Post Free, 1/10½.

FRENCH SOUPS (33 Varieties). In Packets of 6 Tablets each Packet 1/4; Post Free, 1/7.

THE QUEEN, December 7th, 1895, says:—"The only preserved and condensed Soups that require nothing but a certain proportion of water to produce a bowlful of perfect Consommé."

OF ALL GROCERS AND ITALIAN WAREHOUSEMEN.
AND OF THE SOLE AGENTS—
COSENZA & CO., 95 & 97, Wigmore-st., London, W.,
Where the Consommé and Soups may be tasted daily.
Free Demonstrations in the use of these soups are held frequently, for which cards of invitation will be sent on application to 95, Wigmore-street.

MAYPOLE SOAP

Patd.

FOR HOME DYEING.

Won't Wash Out or Fade

For DYEING SILKS, SATINS, COTTONS, FEATHERS, LACE GOODS, &c., &c.,

Such as Blouses, Dresses, Underlinen, Ribbons, Children's Frocks, Pinafores, Lamp Shades, Silk Scarves, Handkerchiefs, Gentlemen's Shirts, Lace Curtains, Silk Gloves, Stockings, Antimacassars, Toilet Mats, Shawls, &c., &c., &c.

MAYPOLE SOAP (PATD.)

4d. per Tablet. All Colours. Black, 6d. Sold Everywhere.

Sole Proprietors: THE MAYPOLE SOAP SYNDICATE, LIMITED,

98, HIGH HOLBORN, LONDON, W.C.

THE FINEST BREAD
In the World.
AS USED IN THE QUEEN'S HOUSEHOLD.

DR. ANDREW WILSON says:—"This Bread should be eaten by all who are in any way affected by digestive ailments."

"WINDSOR CASTLE, 7th December, 1886.
"DEAR SIR,—Her Royal Highness, Princess Christian, desires me to express to you her very great satisfaction with the MALT BREAD, BISCUITS, and RUSKS provided for her. Her Royal Highness considers them all most excellent.—Yours truly,
"RICHARD TAHOURDIN."

ASK YOUR BAKER FOR
BERMALINE BREAD.
Agents Wanted where not represented.

CLARK'S
SCOTCH TWEEDS
Send for Price List at Once. Any Length Cut.
Patterns sent on approval Post Free, on application to—
CLARK BROS., SCOTCH TWEED MANFCTRS., CALASHIELS, N.B.
Agents Wanted. Please mention this Paper.

ASK FOR
DR. RIDGE'S
The Perfect Food for Children and Invalids.
Patent Cooked FOOD.
CAUTION. All the Genuine Packets and Canisters are enclosed in White Wrappers, the words DR. RIDGES' PATENT COOKED FOOD are printed boldly thereon, so that none need be deceived or mistaken.
PREPARED AT THE ROYAL FOOD MILLS, LONDON, AND SOLD RETAIL BY ALL LEADING CHEMISTS AND GROCERS THROUGHOUT THE KINGDOM.

Hunyadi János
BEST AND SAFEST NATURAL APERIENT.
25 Years Success in the United Kingdom.
Recommended and Prescribed by Medical Men Everywhere.

"HUNYADI JÁNOS has established itself in favour with leading physicians and therapeutists of every country, whose testimonies bear witness to its action as a speedy, sure, and gentle Aperient for ordinary use; it is remarkably and exceptionally uniform in its composition, and free from defects incidental to many other Hungarian Bitter Waters."
—British Medical Journal, Aug 30th, 1884.

PROFESSOR VIRCHOW, the celebrated Berlin Physician, says that "HUNYADI JÁNOS" has always given him prompt and satisfactory results, and he considers it to be "one of the most valuable of the Curative Agents at our disposal."

CAUTION.—Every Bottle bears the Signature of the Proprietor ANDREAS SAXLEHNER.

21/- 21/-
THE "CHELSEA" DINNER SERVICE.
Groups of Flowers in Electric Blue on Ivory Ground.
"Cottage Set," as pattern (50 pieces) 1 1 0
Intermediate Set (70 pieces) 1 17 6
Full Set for 12 persons (108 pieces) 3 3 0
If for the country, 1s. 3d., 2s., & 2s. 6d. extra for package.
DINNER, DESSERT, BREAKFAST, AND TEA SERVICES.
ALFRED B. PEARCE,
39, Ludgate-hill, London.
Established 1760.

THE 'QUEEN' FAN
FIRE-LIGHTING

Lights a clean bright fire in a few minutes without wood. Saves time, labour, worry, and money. Will light 30 fires at the cost of 1d. Blows a dead fire into life at once. Will last a lifetime.
14 Days' Free Trial allowed.
Delivered free in United Kingdom with Japanned Cover, 15/6; with Embossed Brass Cover and Brass Handle, 21/- Please mention this Paper. Full particulars post free from CHERRY TREE MACHINE CO., LTD., CHERRY TREE, BLACKBURN.

GOLD MEDAL
Health Exhibition, London.
BENGER'S
"Retained when all other Foods are rejected. It is invaluable."
—London Medical Record.
FOOD FOR INFANTS,
INVALIDS, AND THE AGED.
BENGER'S FOOD
is sold in Tins by Chemists, &c., everywhere.

LIQUEUR of the GRANDE CHARTREUSE.
This most excellent Liqueur, the great preventive of Indigestion, and almost certain remedy for sea-sickness, can now be had of all Wine Merchants, and at prices much lower than formerly.
Sole Consignee, W. DOYLE, 35, Crutched Friars, London, E.C.

ALFRED CARTER, LIMITED
47, HOLBORN VIADUCT, LONDON, E.C. (ONLY ADDRESS).
INVALIDS' MECHANICAL FURNITURE, BATH CHAIRS, &c.
Maker and Inventor of VIADUCT AMBULANCE LITTER, used all over the World.

BRIGHTON BATH CHAIR.
SPINAL AND BATH CHAIR COMBINED.

WICKER BATH CHAIR.
BATH CHAIR.

PERAMBULATORS.
(New Designs for 1896.)
SELF-PROPELLING AND CARRYING CHAIR COMBINED.

ALFRED CARTER, Ltd., 47, HOLBORN VIADUCT, LONDON.
Illustrated Catalogue Post Free. No connection with any other Firm

THE TWO MOST FASHIONABLE PERFUMES.

MÜLHENS' RHINE VIOLETS

CAUTION.

Owing to the phenomenal success of this popular Scent, some perfumers are offering essences of their own manufacture under the name of 'RHINE VIOLETS.' The public must not be deceived, but insist upon 'MÜLHENS" brand, which is distilled from the flower itself. Don't accept any bottle not bearing Ferd. Mülhens' name. This alone ensures genuineness. Ferd. Mülhens, of Cologne, is the originator of this exquisite perfume, and was the first to introduce it into England.

The Fashionable Press of London are unanimous in praise of it.

Distilled from freshly gathered Rhine Violets.

A VERY ECHO OF NATURE.

3/-, 5/6, 9/-, 20/- per Bottle.

RHINE VIOLET SACHETS, 2/6 each.

RHINE VIOLET SOAP, 2/6 per Tablet, — or — 7/- per Box of 3 Tablets.

MÜLHENS' EAU DE COLOGNE

It is the Best Genuine, Strongest, most Lasting.

Most Refreshing and Invigorating.

SAMPLE BOTTLE post free for 2/6

CAUTION.—Be sure and insist upon MÜLHENS' 4711 BRAND, as inferior makes are sometimes offered. Refuse all substitutes. Of most Dealers in first-class Perfumes.

Case of 6 Bottles sent Carriage Paid for 13s.

4711 Depot: 62, NEW BOND ST., LONDON, W.

SPHAGNOL

ENGLISH PEAT

SMOKELESS AND SANITARY FUEL

Price—1,000 LOGS FOR 20s.

TRUTH says:—"I have burnt the blocks on the top of a coal fire, and I find that the peat seems to act as a smoke consumer."

Send order, or write for leaflet.

Sole Agents—CHAMBERLAIN & CO., 10, HART STREET, BLOOMSBURY, W.C.

(One minute from Mudie's Library).

CORALLINE TOOTH PASTE.

Keeps the Teeth WHITE and SOUND.

A Delicious DENTIFRICE.

ROBERTS & CO.,

Foreign and English Chemists,

LONDON— 76, NEW BOND STREET, W. Post Free, 2/6 PARIS— RUE DE LA PAIX, 5.

Sample Box sent free on receipt of post card.

SEVENTH COMPETITION

A LADIES GOLD WATCH WITH ANY SINGLE INITIAL IN REAL DIAMONDS ON THE BACK

To the competitor whose selection of six most popular Books of English fiction (written during Queen Victoria's Reign), most closely corresponds with the list shown by the majority of votes. Competitors may send as many selections as they wish, but each must be accompanied by the wrapper off either the penny or twopenny tins in which Buttercup Metal Polish is sold by Grocers, Oilmen, &c., and forwarded by December 22nd in an envelope, marked plainly outside, No. 7, to the CHISWICK SOAP CO., Chiswick, London, W., whose decision is final. Result in Daily Graphic, Standard, and Daily Mail of December 30th.

BUTTERCUP METAL POLISH is unsurpassed for imparting a brilliant and lasting polish to BRASS, COPPER, or STEEL, &c.

FOR COMPLAINTS of the STOMACH, LIVER, etc., DRINK

VICHY CELESTINS Spring

Sold by all Chemists, Druggists, and Grocers throughout the Kingdom.

Sole Importers: INGRAM & ROYLE, Ltd., 52, Farringdon Street, LONDON, E.C.

THE HOMACOUSTIC.

WHAT IS THE HOMACOUSTIC?

THE HOMACOUSTIC is a contrivance connected with Speaking Tubes, which entirely supersedes for indoor purposes not only the Telephone, but all other existing arrangements for indoor inter-communication.

THE HOMACOUSTIC

Is Automatic, not Mechanical. Once fixed always in Working Order. Its first cost is its last cost.

WITH THE HOMACOUSTIC

There is no blowing into pipes. The automatic whistle is always in position. One speaks and listens at the same time. The tube is closed when not in actual use. Ordinary speaking tubes can be utilised.

ONE (No. 4) HOMACOUSTIC

Places the speaker in communication with any Number of Rooms

THE HOMACOUSTIC

Is of special value and inestimable convenience not only in business establishments, but in all Private Houses.

The Homacoustic Saves Time, Temper, and Trouble.

For Detailed Particulars, Copies of Testimonials, &c., write to the MANAGER.

THE

Homacoustic Speaking Tube Co.'s

Show Rooms:

6, BRUTON ST., NEW BOND ST., W.

The LIST will open on THURSDAY, November 26, 1896, and close the next day for Town and Country.

The

Sheffield District Railway

Company.

(Incorporated by special Act of Parliament.)

Under powers given by the Act it has been arranged that the line shall be worked by the Lancashire, Derbyshire, and East Coast Railway Company for 50 per cent. of the gross receipts, and the Great Eastern Railway Company are authorised by an agreement which is scheduled to the Act to subscribe for £50,000 of Ordinary Shares.

CAPITAL - - £400,000

In 40,000 Shares of £10 each.

Payable, 10s. per Share - - on Application,
£2 10s. „ - - on Allotment, and the balance as required for the Works, at intervals of not less than two months in calls of not exceeding £2 per Share.

The London and Midland Bank, Limited, of 52 Cornhill, E.C., Sheffield, and Branches, are prepared, as Bankers to the Company, to receive Subscriptions for 35,000 of the above-mentioned Shares (the remaining 5,000 being reserved for the G. E. Railway Co.)

The Four per Cent. Debenture Stock of the Company to the authorised amount of, but not exceeding, £133,330 will hereafter be offered for subscription pro rata amongst the Shareholders of the Company (other than the G. E. Railway Co.) at par. The Four per Cent. Debenture Stock of the L. and D. Railway Co. is now selling at from £120 to £125, that is to say, about 25 per cent. premium.

The Company have power under their Act, subject to the subscription of the prescribed proportion of Capital, to pay interest during construction out of capital at the rate of £3 per cent. per annum upon the amount from time to time paid up on Shares. This power will be exercised. Subscribers may pay in full in advance of calls; such payments will bear interest at the same rate.

DIRECTORS.

EMERSON BAINBRIDGE, Esq., M.P., Nunnery Collieries, Sheffield, and 4 Whitehall-court, S.W. (Chairman of the Lancashire, Derbyshire, and East Coast Railway), Chairman.

Lord Claude Hamilton, St. Ermin's-mansions, S.W. (Chairman of the Great Eastern Railway Company).

ir Ellis Ashmead Bartlett, M.P., 3, Park-place, S.W.

W. Bromley Davenport, Esq., M.P., Capesthorne Hall, Cheshire (Director of the Lancashire, Derbyshire, and East Coast Railway).

Robert A. Hadfield, Esq. (Chairman Hadfield's Steel Foundry Company, Limited, Hecla Works, Sheffield).

Arthur Tredgold Lawson, Esq., Weetwood Grange, Leeds (Director of the Great Eastern Railway Company).

Septimus H. Ward, Esq. (Chairman S. H. Ward and Co., Limited, Sheffield).

BANKERS.

The London and Midland Bank (Limited), 52, Cornhill, E.C., and Branches.

SOLICITORS.

Messrs. Devonshire, Monkland, Davies, and Sanders, 1, Frederick's-place, London, E.C.

Messrs. Busby, Davies, Sanders, and Co., Chesterfield.

ENGINEERS.

Robert Elliott Cooper, Esq., 8, The Sanctuary, Westminster.

John Wilson, Esq., Liverpool-street Station, E.C.

SECRETARY and Temporary Offices.

C. R. Davies, Esq., 48 and 49, Coleman-street, London, E.C.

Prospectuses and forms of application for Shares can be obtained at the Offices either of the Company, or of the Bankers or Solicitors, or from the Brokers of the Company, Messrs James Capel & Company, 31, Throgmorton-street, in London, Messrs. Barber Brothers & Wortley, in Sheffield, and Messrs. Fielder & Abercrombie, in Manchester.

London, November 19, 1896.

PRUDENTIAL ASSURANCE COMPANY, LIMITED.—Holborn Bars, London.

EVERY DESCRIPTION OF LIFE ASSURANCE AND ANNUITY BUSINESS TRANSACTED.
REVERSIONS PURCHASED.

Invested Funds, £25,000,000.

The last Annual Report can be obtained on application to the Secretary.

SPECIAL ADVANTAGES TO PRIVATE INSURERS.

THE IMPERIAL INSURANCE COMPANY, LIMITED. FIRE. Est. 1803, 1, Old Broad-st., E.C., & 22, Pall Mall, S.W. Subd Capital, £1,200,000. Paid-up, £300,000. Total funds, over £1,500,000.—E. COZENS SMITH, Gen. Man.

JOHN SHAW, STOCK & SHARE DEALER.

HEAD OFFICE:—

WARDROBE CHAMBERS, DOCTORS' COMMONS, LONDON, E.C.

BANKERS:—
CAPITAL AND COUNTIES, Ludgate-hill, Long Acre, Piccadilly, and Brighton Branches.
LONDON AND MIDLAND, Newgate-street and Tooley-street Branches.

DIRECT PRIVATE TELEGRAPH WIRE between LONDON and BRIGHTON Offices.

FULL PARTICULARS of SPECIAL ARRANGEMENTS for DEALING sent post free on application.

COVER SYSTEM.—The loss is limited, the profits are unlimited, and there is such an independence in acting that the principle must and does recommend itself to business men—indeed, it is the only method on which they deal—for speculative accounts.

£5 COMMANDS £500 STOCK.
£10 COMMANDS £1,000 STOCK.
£50 COMMANDS £5,000 STOCK.
£500 COMMANDS £50,000 STOCK, and so on in proportion.

NO OTHER LIABILITY WHATEVER.

JOHN SHAW, STOCK AND SHARE DEALER, LONDON, BRIGHTON, MANCHESTER, AND DUBLIN.

THE CAPE COLONISATION COMPANY, LIMITED.

HOW TO MAKE AN INCOME-PAYING HOME.

The object of the above Company is to develop the resources of their estate, consisting of about 12,000 acres, situated in the far-famed Tulbagh district in the Western Province of Cape Colony, about 75 miles distant by rail from Cape Town. They are promoting the establishment of a successful colony. The estate has been surveyed and laid out in blocks of about 40 acres each, a number of which have already been sold. The purchase price of this land this year (with all water facilities) is £12 per acre, threequarters of which can remain bearing interest at six per cent. per annum.

In order to provide for the success of every colonist who has sufficient capital at command to be able to enter into this business, but has no practical knowledge of the work, the company have engaged the services of an efficient manager and a skilled horticulturist; and who will, if desired, plant, cultivate, and attend to the development of each client's farm for one year or more.

Thus any settler, provided he gives ordinary attention to the details of the work this company have undertaken for him, can obtain, under the guidance of a skilled specialist, that practical knowledge which is essential in the working to the best advantage of dairy and fruit farms.

THE CAPE COLONISATION COMPANY, LIMITED.

The Company undertake, if desired, to clear, plant, fence, supervise, and generally manage any holding. They guarantee that 90 per cent. of the trees and vines planted under the supervision of their staff grow to maturity, as specified in the agreement, a copy of which can be obtained on application. The company will manage the estate of any absentee at a charge of £1 a year per acre, and will also undertake to erect on the estate any houses for the residence of a settler, which can be chosen in London before sailing, with estimates given. They further undertake to purchase from a settler, at marketable prices, any approved dairy, farm, and orchard produce.

At the company's headquarters, at Seven Fountains, are the orchard and vineyard belonging to the company, and extensive creameries, packing houses, &c., will be erected as soon as necessary.

Steps are already being taken for the erection of a sugar beet factory, &c., and it is the intention of the company to promote milling and other industries.

THE CAPE COLONISATION COMPANY, LIMITED.

The Company solicit enquiries from families who are seeking a fresh start in life.

Young gentlemen who are looking for an opening in which to make their way.

Farmers who for years have been losing money in this country and would like to start afresh.

Retired members of the Military, Naval, and Civil Services, desiring to increase their incomes.

The delicate (those inclined to bronchial and pulmonary troubles) who need an avenue for making an income in a congenial climate.

The General Manager of the Company is going out at the beginning of October, and will be pleased to have the Company of any one who desires to avail himself of this opportunity of a fresh start in life in a new field.

All are requested to be good enough to place themselves in communication with the Secretary of the Company—from whom full particulars and papers on all points can be obtained. Also the illustrated book on the subject, price 2s., together with a Manual of Practical Orchard Work at the Cape. Published by the Department of Agriculture of the Cape of Good Hope.

3, PANCRAS LANE, QUEEN STREET, LONDON, E.C.,

W. B. COCHRANE & CO.,

STOCK AND SHARE DEALERS.
13 and 14, CORNHILL, LONDON, E.C.
Telegrams: "Reinvest, London."
Bankers: London and Westminster, Lothbury, E.C.

Accounts opened for the Stock Exchange Fortnightly Settlements, and also upon the usual Cover System. Accounts opened for Three-monthly Settlement without Carrying-over Rates being charged.

Prospectus, Monthly Investment Book, Mining List, and Market Reports, with the latest advices, forwarded gratis upon application.

W. B. COCHRANE & CO., 13 and 14, Cornhill, E.C.

BARCLAY & COMPANY, Limited (Gosling's Branch), 19, Fleet-street, E.C.
BARCLAY & COMPANY, Limited, 54, Lombard-street, E.C., and all Branches, INVITE SUBSCRIPTIONS for the undermentioned PREFERENCE SHARES.

THE METROPOLITAN INDUSTRIAL DWELLINGS COMPANY, Limited.

Incorporated under the Companies Acts, whereby the liability of a shareholder is limited to the amount unpaid on his shares.

ISSUE of 20,000 PREFERENCE SHARES of £5 each.

DIRECTORS.

John Tryon, Esq., 1, Stone-buildings, Lincoln's-inn, Chairman.
Robert Charles Ponsonby, Esq., 1, Great George-street, Westminster.
Harold Fisher Smith, Esq., 34, Avenue-road, Regent's Park.

BANKERS.—Messrs. Barclay & Company, Limited (Gosling's Branch), 19, Fleet-street, E.C.

AUDITORS.—Messrs. Tribe, Clarke, Painter, & Co., 19, Coleman-street, E.C.

SECRETARY AND GENERAL MANAGER.—Lindsay S. G. Young, Esq.

REGISTERED OFFICE.—Connaught-mansions, 34, Victoria-street, S.W.

Barclay & Company, Limited, invite Subscriptions for 20,000 4 per Cent. Cumulative Preference Shares of £5 each in the Metropolitan Industrial Dwellings Company, Limited, at the price of £5. 5s. per share, payable:—

£1 on application; £2 on allotment; £2. 5s. one month after allotment.

The Metropolitan Industrial Dwellings Company, Limited was incorporated in the year 1886 for the purpose of providing dwellings for the working and other classes, with a nominal capital of £100,000 in 20,000 shares of £5 each, now fully subscribed and paid up.

The nominal capital of the Company has been recently increased to £200,000 by the creation of the Preference Shares now offered for subscription.

The Company owns the undermentioned property, which has cost it upwards of £196,000, the freeholds and long leaseholds of over 800 years unexpired having cost upwards of £116,000, and the remaining leaseholds upwards of £79,000.

FREEHOLDS.

Holbein House, Sloane-square, S.W.
Holbein-buildings, Sloane-square, S.W.
Victoria House, South Lambeth-road, S.W.

Note.—Holbein House and Holbein-buildings are subject to rent-charges amounting to £815 per annum, terminating in 1985.

LONG LEASEHOLDS.

	Years unexpired.
St. Alban's-buildings, Gray's-inn-road, E.C.	979
Duncan-buildings, Gray's-inn-road, E.C....	880
Royal Mint-square, Cartwright-street, E.	880

OTHER LEASEHOLDS.

Cranbrook-mansions, South Lambeth-road, S.W.	98
Athole-mansions, South Lambeth-road, S.W.	97
Albert-mansions, South Lambeth-road, S.W.	96
Ponsonby-buildings, Blackfriars-road, S.E.	88
Jubilee-buildings, Waterloo-road, S.E.	74
Mowbray-buildings, Red-cross-street, Borough, S.E.... ...	68
Chapter Chambers, Chapter-st., Westminster, S.W.	65

The above properties are of the rental value of upwards of £24,000 per annum.

In respect of leaseholds for less than 100 years, a Redemption Fund is provided out of revenue.

The above properties are subject to mortgages for £91,259.

It is proposed out of the proceeds of the present issue to pay off all these mortgages, with the exception of two affecting Mowbray and Jubilee-buildings, for £8,659 and £6,400 respectively, bearing interest at the respective rates of Three and a Quarter and Four per Cent., and which, being repayable by instalments over a long period, are kept on foot so that they may be gradually paid off out of the moneys from time to time set apart for the purpose of the Leasehold Redemption Fund.

The balance of the proceeds of the present issue remaining after paying off the mortgages above mentioned and expenses of issue will be applied in the purchase or erection of further property.

The Preference Shares will rank in priority to the other shares of the Company, both as to dividend and return of capital, and as the value of the Company's property (after deducting the two mortgages of £8,659 and £6,400, but including the value of the property to be purchased as above-mentioned) will not be less than £200,000, it will be seen the Preference Shares of the Company offer a most desirable investment. The Company has since 1890 regularly paid dividends on its capital at the rate of 5 per cent. per annum, and for the four years prior to that date dividends varying between 4½ and 5 per cent.

The income which will be available for payment of dividends on the Preference Shares, without reckoning the income to arise from the investment of the balance before mentioned of the proceeds of the present issue, is not less than £10,000 per annum, while £4,000 only is required to pay the annual dividend on the Preference Shares.

The Four-and-a-Half per Cent. Non-Cumulative Preference Stock of the Artisans, Labourers, and General Dwellings Company, Limited, stands at 135. The equivalent price for 4 per Cent. Stock would be 120, equal to £6 per £5 share.

Applications for shares should be made upon the form accompanying the prospectus, and forwarded to the Bankers of the Company, together with the amount payable on application.

If no allotment is made, the deposit will be returned without deduction, and where the number of shares allotted is less than the number applied for, the surplus will be credited in reduction of the amount payable on allotment.

Forms of application for shares may be obtained from the Company's Secretary and Bankers.

Copies of the Memorandum and Articles of Association of the Company, and of the resolution creating the Preference Shares, may be inspected at its registered office, Connaught-mansions, 34, Victoria-street, S.W.

November 18th, 1896.

THE

JOHANNESBURG BOARD OF EXECUTORS AND TRUST CO., LIMITED.

HEAD OFFICE.
JOHANNESBURG, S.A.R.

DIRECTORS.

S. B. HARSANT (Chairman).
JNO. S. PARKES (Vice-Chairman).
S. J. WILKS. G. A. JONES. A. FRIEDLANDER.

BANKERS.

THE BANK OF AFRICA, Ltd., 113, Cannon-street, E.C.
CHIEF MANAGER, L. EDWARDS.

LONDON OFFICE.

ST. CLEMENT'S HOUSE, CLEMENT'S-LANE, E.C.
(Telegrams: "ETHIOPIAN," London.)
(Telephone No. 2154, Avenue.)

The above Company beg to advise having opened a London Office at the above address, and invite correspondence. All descriptions of TRUST and AGENCY BUSINESS undertaken either in London or South Africa. Secretaryships of Companies undertaken. Special facilities are obtainable through this Company for the placing of funds in secure and remunerative investments. Advice is given on all classes of South Africa Mining. Real Estate, Mortgage, or other Investments, and proxies are accepted to represent European Shareholders at South African Companies' meetings. This is the oldest and most successful Trust Company in the Transvaal. Reference has been kindly permitted to the Bank of Africa, Ltd., 113, Cannon-street, London, E.C.; and to the Head Office of the London and Lancashire Fire Insurance Company, 45, Dale-street, Liverpool.

The List of Applications will be OPENED on TUESDAY, the 24th NOVEMBER, 1896, and CLOSED on THURSDAY, the 26th NOVEMBER, 1896.

Issue of £120,000 £4 per Cent. Debenture Stock.

FISHER & COMPANY, Limited

(Incorporated under the Companies Acts, 1862 to 1893),
KETTLEBROOK PAPER MILLS, TAMWORTH.

SHARE CAPITAL, £120,000, divided into 6,000 Five per Cent. Preference Shares of £10 each, and 6,000 Ordinary Shares of £10 each. All the Preference and Ordinary Shares are retained by the Vendors.

LLOYDS BANK, LIMITED, is authorised to offer for subscription £100,000 Four per Cent. Debenture Stock of the above Company, at the price of £104 per Cent., being part of the above issue, the remainder being retained by the Vendors.

The Debenture Stock will be secured by a First Mortgage of the Freehold Property of the Company, and by a floating first charge on the undertaking and general assets of the Company, and will be issued in any multiples of £100.

The Debenture Stock Trust Deed will contain, in addition to the usual conditions, a provision that if the Auditors of the Company, at the request of the Trustees, certify that the value of the Company's Assets, including goodwill as a going concern, as stated in the accounts audited by them, is less than 50 per cent. in excess of the amount of the Debenture Stock, the Stockholders may require repayment.

The Debenture Stock will be redeemable at the option of the Company either in the whole or in part, upon the Company giving six calendar months' notice of its intention to redeem. If such notice shall expire before the 1st January, 1916, the redemption price shall be £110 per cent.; if such notice shall expire at any later period the redemption price shall be £105 per cent.

Payments for each £100 of Debenture Stock to be made as follows:—

£14 on application,
£20 on allotment,
£70 on the 31st December, 1896.

£104

The interest will be payable half-yearly on the 1st January and 1st July in each year, and a proportionate part of the first half-year's interest, calculated from the dates of payment of the instalments, will be paid on the 1st January next.

TRUSTEES FOR DEBENTURE STOCKHOLDERS.

Sir Cecil Pery Van Notten Pole, Bart., Todenham, Moreton-in-the-Marsh.
Sampson Samuel Lloyd, Esquire, Janoway Hill, Woking.

SOLICITORS FOR THE TRUSTEES FOR DEBENTURE STOCKHOLDERS.

Wragge & Co., Bennett's Hill, Birmingham.

DIRECTORS.

Mr. Sydney Fisher. | Mr. Henry Fisher.
Mr. William Dobson. | Mr. Fredk. W. Dobson.
Mr. Albert G. Dobson.

BANKERS.

Lloyds Bank, Limited, 72, Lombard-street, London, Tamworth, and other Branches.

SOLICITORS FOR THE COMPANY.

Sanders, Smith, & Parish, Colmore-row, Birmingham.

AUDITORS.

Fisher, Randle, & Fisher, Chartered Accountants, Waterloo-street, Birmingham

SECRETARY.

Albert G. Dobson.

REGISTERED OFFICE.

Kettlebrook Mills, Tamworth.

ABRIDGED PROSPECTUS.

The Company has been formed for the purpose of acquiring the well-known and old-established business of Paper Manufacturers carried on successfully for many years by Messrs. Fisher & Co., at the Kettlebrook Mills, Tamworth.

The purchase price has been fixed by the Vendors at £240,000, payable as to £100,070 in cash, as to £20,000 in Debenture Stock, and as to the balance by the allotment to them of the whole of the Ordinary and Preference Shares except the Seven Ordinary Shares subscribed for by the Subscribers to the Memorandum and Articles of Association of the Company. The Assets taken over by the Company provide a very ample Working Capital.

The Members of the late firm will act as Directors of the Company, and the management of the business will be continued as in the past.

The Freehold Mills, Works, Cottages, Offices, and adjoining Dwelling Houses, Lands, and Properties of the Company, occupying an area of about 60 acres, at Kettlebrook, near Tamworth, with the machinery, plant, and trade utensils, have been valued by Messrs. Fuller, Horsey, Sons, & Cassell, of 11, Billiter-square, London, E.C., on behalf of the Trustees for the Debenture Stockholders, and their Report, which appears in full Prospectus, states that the present fair value as a current going concern of the before described Freehold Paper Mills, Dwelling Houses, &c., together with the fixed plant, machinery, and fixtures, loose tools and utensils, driving belts, rolling stock, &c., is the sum of One hundred and forty-five thousand and thirty-eight pounds (£145,038).

These figures are exclusive of any value for Stock, Stores, Book Debts, Patents, Water Marks, or Goodwill.

The books of the business have been periodically audited by Messrs. Fisher, Randle, & Fisher, Chartered Accountants, Birmingham.

Messrs. Price, Waterhouse, & Co., Chartered Accountants, London, acting on behalf of the Trustees for the Debenture Stockholders, have also made a special investigation of the books of the firm for the five years ending 30th June, 1896, and they, in conjunction with Messrs. Fisher, Randle, & Fisher, have furnished a joint Certificate:—That the Profits of the said business (after providing for depreciation on Buildings, Plant, and Machinery) have been in each year for the past five years to the 30th June, 1896, more than sufficient to have paid the 4 per cent. Interest on a Debenture Issue of £120,000, a dividend of 5 per cent. on an issue of £60,000 Preference Shares, and a dividend of 10 per cent. on an Ordinary Share Capital of £60,000.

Full prospectuses and Forms of Application can be obtained from the Office of the Company, or at the Offices of the Bankers or Solicitors.

November 20th, 1896.

BIRKBECK BANK (Estab. 1851), Southampton-buildings, Chancery-lane, London. Two and a-half per cent. interest allowed on deposits, repayable on demand. Two per cent. on current accounts, on the minimum monthly balances when not below £100.

The BIRKBECK ALMANACK with particulars, post free.

FRANCIS RAVENSCROFT, Manager.

LONDON AND COUNTY ADVANCE AND DISCOUNT COMPANY, Limited.—Cash advanced from £10 to £500, without preliminary fees or deductions for interest, for short or long periods, repayable by easy instalments, at moderate rates, upon approved security. Bills Discounted. Forms free. Offices, 57 and 58, Chancery-lane, W.C.—JOHN STONE, Secretary.

REVERSIONS and LIFE INTERESTS in LANDED or FUNDED PROPERTY or other Securities and Annuities PURCHASED, or Loans or Annuities thereon granted, by the EQUITABLE REVERSIONARY INTEREST SOCIETY, LIMITED, 10, Lancaster-place, Waterloo Bridge, Strand, Established 1835. Capital £500,000. Interest on Loans may be capitalised.

THE STOCK EXCHANGE.

NOTICE.

No Member of the Stock Exchange is allowed to advertise for business purposes, or to issue circulars to persons other than his own principals.

Persons who advertise as Brokers or Share Dealers are not Members of the Stock Exchange, or under the control of the Committee.

A List of Members of the Stock Exchange who are Stock and Share Brokers may be seen at the Bartholomew-lane Entrance to the Bank of England, or obtained on application to

FRANCIS LEVIEN,
Secretary to the Committee of the Stock Exchange.

Committee Room, The Stock Exchange, London, E.C.

The Subscription List will close on Wednesday, the 25th day of November following.

The necessary amount of capital having been already guaranteed, the directors will proceed to allotment immediately upon the closing of the lists. All applicants, however, will receive a strictly pro-rata allotment.

THE SAVOY PALACE of VARIETIES, DUBLIN (Limited).

Incorporated under the Companies Acts, 1862 to 1893, whereby the liability of shareholders is limited.

Share Capital, £60,000, divided into 60,000 shares of £1 each.

ISSUE of 55,000 SHARES, payable 2s. 6d. on application, 7s. 6d. on allotment, and the balance in calls of 2s. 6d. per share monthly. £5,000 will thus be reserved for future issue if necessary for additional working capital.

In addition to the above shares are offered £10,000 of 5 per cent. Floating Mortgage Debentures of £5 each, to be secured by a first charge on the company's property and a general charge on the floating assets of the company, redeemable at 5 per cent. premium by annual equal drawings extending over a period of 10 years from January 1st, 1897, or earlier, at the company's option. Payable £1 on application, £1 on allotment, and £1 per debenture monthly. These debentures will be secured by a trust deed.

DIRECTORS.

Andrew Beattie, Esq., J.P., T.C., Grafton-street, Dublin, Director of Provincial Tramways Company (Limited) and Barnsley Brewery Company (Limited).
Alderman Daniel Burke, 50, Lower Baggot-street, Dublin.
D. C. Mercer, Esq., Copthall House, London, E.C.
Alfred Robyn, Esq., White Lodge, 323, Seven Sisters-road, London, N., Chairman Finsbury Estates Company (Limited).
John G. James, Esq., Royal Agricultural Hall, Islington, London, N.

Bankers—Ulster Bank (Limited), Dublin, Belfast, and Branches; Parr's Bank (Limited), Bartholomew-lane, London, E.C.

Solicitors—Charles Goble Champion, 17, Ironmonger-lane, London, E.C., and Eastbourne; Charles Gamble, 39, Fleet-street, Dublin.

Architects—Bertie Crewe, Esq., Savoy-mansions, London, W.C.; James J. Farrall, Esq., 6, Westmoreland-street, Dublin.

Auditors—Messrs. A. P. Duggan and Co., Chartered Accountants, D'Olier-chambers, Dublin; Messrs. W. Williams and Co., Chartered Accountants, Bush-lane House, Cannon-street, E.C.

Secretary—S. Langston Faddy.

Offices (pro tem.)—Copthall House, Copthall-avenue, London, E.C.; D'Olier-chambers, Dublin.

ABRIDGED PROSPECTUS.

This company has been formed for the purpose of acquiring under exceptionally favourable circumstances the well-known and exceedingly valuable buildings, formerly known as the Grafton Theatre, together with the licensed premises, 32, 33, and 34, South Anne-street, and premises adjoining, in South Anne-street, Dublin, and to convert the same into a large and commodious theatre of varieties. The premises are situated in close contiguity to Grafton-street, the leading thoroughfare in Dublin, in the centre of the city, and are held under leases dated respectively 1st of February, 1868, the 25th of June, 1872, 10th March, 1868. Part of these premises are held for a term of 999 years from 1891, the rest of these premises are held as to part for 35 years from 1884, and as to the remainder for 61 years from 1867; certain negotiations are now pending for the purchase of some of the adjoining premises, towards the purchase-money of which the vendor has agreed to contribute £5,000, and negotiations have also been entered into to extend the two above-mentioned short terms to periods of 250 years each, rendering them practically freehold, subject to a moderate rent, which is substantially only a ground rent.

The new theatre is to replace the old hall. It will be in every respect more commodious than any similar place of amusement in Dublin, and will be upon the most recent improved principles. It will be of fireproof construction throughout (including a fireproof stage curtain), and will be lighted by electricity. The stage will be large enough for the production of ballets and dramatic sketches.

The plans for the re-building have been prepared by Mr. Bertie Crewe and Mr. J. J. Farrall, whose long experience and recognised professional ability fully qualify them to deal with an important undertaking of this description.

The theatre will be of noble dimensions with an imposing frontage in South Anne-street, about 20ft. from Grafton-street, the principle thoroughfare in Dublin. The interior will be handsomely decorated, and the furnishing and upholstering equal to any place of amusement in England. The directors call the attention of investors to the dividend paid by the Star Theatre (Limited), Dublin, which is the largest paid by any variety theatre out of London, also to the dividends and the market price of variety theatres generally, as given below (approximately), which prove them to be the best investment of the day.

Name of Company.	Nominal value of Shares.	Amount paid per Share.	Market value.	Dividends paid.
1. Star, Dublin	£1 0 0	£1 0 0	£1 17 6	17½ p. c.
2. Empire, Cardiff	5 0 0	5 0 0	6 15 0	10 „
3. Empire, Edinburgh	5 0 0	5 0 0	8 1 3	10 „
4. Empire, Glasgow	5 0 0	4 0 0	6 5 0	10 „
5. Empire, Sheffield	5 0 0	5 0 0	8 15 0	10 „

The directors would point out that in addition to the receipts from the theatre itself and bars, an additional source of revenue is derived from the public portion of the licensed premises, to which is attached a full wine and spirit license.

The directors have every reason to believe that the gross income derived will be equal to over 15 per cent. on the entire share capital of the company, after deducting interest on debentures, office working expenses, and placing a substantial amount to the reserve fund.

The directors, themselves practical men, both in catering, victualling, and entertainment business, have secured, for a term of three years, the services of a capable manager (who will hold a substantial interest in the company), under the supervision of Mr. Mercer, who has had several years' experience in theatrical matters.

The purchase price has been fixed by the vendor at £60,000, payable in cash or partly in cash and partly in shares and debentures, at the option of the directors, in consideration of which he undertakes—

1. To re-build and convey to the company the complete buildings, fitted and furnished in accordance with the plans and specification of the company's architects.
2. To pay the architects' fees.
3. To clear the ground-rent from the time of taking possession to the completion of the purchase.
4. To discharge all expenses in connection with the promotion of the company up to allotment.

This will allow £5,000 for working capital. This amount is considered ample for all purposes. Should, however, the necessity arise for further working capital, the sum of £5,000 has been reserved for future issue.

For Contracts, &c., see Full Prospectus.

The memorandum and articles of association and copies of the said agreement, and all other documents, can be inspected by intending subscribers at the office of the solicitors of the company in London and Dublin.

Applications for shares or debentures may be made by letter direct to the Secretary, or on the form below, and forwarded with the deposit to the company's bankers.

In any case where no allotment is made the deposit will be returned in full, and when the number of shares allotted is less than that applied for the surplus will be credited in reduction of the further amounts payable on the shares allotted.

Application will be made to the London and Dublin Stock Exchanges for a settlement in due course.

London, November 21, 1896.

The Subscription Lists will Open on Monday next, the 30th November, and Close at or before Four p.m. on Thursday, 3rd December.

The London and South-Western Railway Company agree to work this railway at 50 per cent. of the gross receipts, after deducting Government Duty as stated in the agreement, and to carry by the Torrington and Okehampton Railway all traffic to or from places south and west of Okehampton, from or to places on the Torrington and Okehampton Railway, or places beyond, as far as, and including Fremington.

TORRINGTON & OKEHAMPTON RAILWAY CO.

Incorporated by the Torrington and Okehampton Railway Act, 1895.

Share capital, £250,000, in 25,000 shares of £10 each.

Borrowing Powers, £83,333.

The liability of the shareholders is limited to the amount of their shares.

ISSUE of £250,000 in 25,000 SHARES of £10 each, payable as follows: 10s. on application; 30s. on allotment; the balance in calls of not more than £2 each, of which due notice will be given, with an interval of not less than three months between each call.

Interest during construction is authorised to be paid at the rate of £3 per cent. per annum, by Section 51 of the Torrington and Okehampton Railway Act, 1895, subject to the provisions contained in that Section, and interest will be paid accordingly.

As soon as £6 per share has been paid up, the shares may, by resolution of the shareholders, be divided into Preferred and Deferred half-shares.

DIRECTORS.

J. B. Barrow, Esq., J.P., Park-avenue, Bedford.
A. G. Duncan, Esq., J.P., Bideford.
R. Dymond, Esq., J.P., Bideford.
J. H. Lockley, Esq., Littleham, Bideford.
G. M. F. Molesworth, Esq., J.P., Westward Ho!
Wilson Hoare, Esq., Commons, Northam.

BANKERS.—Barclay & Company, Limited, Lombard-street, London, E.C.; The Devon and Cornwall Bank, Limited, Plymouth, and all its Branches.

CONSULTING ENGINEER.—Sir Benjamin Baker, K.C.M.G.

ENGINEER.—Jas. T. Jervis, Esq., M.Inst.C.E., 9, Victoria-street, Westminster.

SOLICITORS.—Messrs. Fowler, Perks, & Co., 9, Clement's-lane, London, E.C.; Messrs. Doe & Lawman, Great Torrington and Bideford.

BROKERS.—Messrs. A. S. G. Graves & Co., Cushion-court, Old Broad-street, London, E.C., and Stock Exchange; Messrs. Westlake & Son, George-street-chambers, Plymouth; Messrs. W. Mortimer & Son, 14, Bedford-circus, Exeter.

SECRETARY AND OFFICES.—W. B. Ellis, 28, Victoria-street, Westminster.

ABRIDGED PROSPECTUS.

This Company has been formed to construct and work a railway 20 miles 4 furlongs 2½ chains in length, commencing by a junction with the North Devon Line of the London and South-Western Railway at Torrington Station, and terminating by a junction with the main line of that railway from Exeter to Plymouth and North Cornwall, a short distance from the Okehampton Station, with running powers into the same station, and the use of that and Torrington Stations.

An agreement, which the Directors consider to be favourable to this Company, has been entered into between this Company and the London and South-Western Railway Company, whereby the London and South-Western Railway Company contract that immediately upon the completion and opening of the railway they will efficiently work the railway at a fixed percentage of 50 per cent. of the receipts. The 6th and 8th sections of the working agreement are as follows:—

"6. From and after the completion of the railway, so as to be approved by the Board of Trade and by the engineer of the working Company as fit for opening for public traffic, in conformity with these articles, and subject to the execution and completion of any such additional works as provided in Article 3, the working Company shall exclusively, and in perpetuity, work and equip with all the rolling stock and locomotive power, tools and stores adequate and proper or required by the working Company, and shall exclusively manage, work, man, and maintain the same, and the works and conveniences thereof, including the special works, at their own expense (but subject and without prejudice to the obligation of the owning Company under Article 5), and so as fully and fairly to accommodate and develop the traffic, both local and through, and shall at all times use the railway so as fully and fairly to develop the traffic of the district; and shall at all times carry by the railway all traffic to or from places south and west of Okehampton from or to places on the railway, or places beyond as far as and including Fremington."

"8. The gross amount of all the tolls, fares, rates, and charges from time to time payable in respect of the railway and the traffic thereon and received by the working Company shall be divided between and belong to the two Companies in the following proportions:—

"First.—The working Company shall retain out of such gross amount the Government duty from time to time payable, and such sum or sums as shall be equal to fifty per centum of such gross amount in any half-year after the deduction therefrom of the Government duty.

"Second.—The owning company shall, subject to the payments to be made by them as hereinbefore provided, have the balance of such gross amount, which shall be paid half-yearly to and belong to them each half-year ending, as the case may be, on the 30th day of June and the 31st day of December, and such half-yearly payment shall be made not later than the 1st day of September and the 1st day of March in each year."

The effect of this agreement will be that from the day of the opening of the railway for traffic the Company will be entitled to a net revenue.

The following is believed to be a fair estimate of the earnings of the Company, viz.:—

60,000 passengers		£9,000
Proportion on through passengers and goods from L. and S.W. system (through passengers 120,000)		16,000
20,000 tons of through coal, manure, and goods to and from Okehampton and stations beyond		6,150
15,000 tons of coal, manure, and goods to intermediate stations, including cattle, sheep, and all general goods		3,000
30,000 tons clay, bricks, pottery, &c.		3,500
Parcels		1,500
		£39,150
Less working expenses, 50 per cent.	£19,575
Less Government duty, say	250
		19,825
		£19,325

or over 7½ per cent. on the amount now offered for subscription.

A contract for the construction of the railway has been entered into with Messrs. Topham, Jones, & Railton, a well-known firm of contractors, who are at present constructing railways for the Manchester, Sheffield, and Lincolnshire Railway Company, and also important works for her Majesty's Government.

Application for Shares should be made to the Bankers of the Company, Barclay & Company, Limited, London, or to The Devon and Cornwall Bank, Limited, Plymouth, or any of its branches, on the form enclosed with Prospectus, accompanied by a deposit of 10s. per share. Should no allotment be made, the deposit will be returned in full, and if a less number of shares than are applied for be allotted, the balance of the deposit will be applied towards payment of the amount due on allotment, and any surplus will be repaid.

Interest at the rate of 4 per cent. per annum will be chargeable on calls in arrear, and the full amount can, if desired, be paid on allotment.

Copies of the Act of Parliament, the working agreement with the London and South-Western Railway Company, the contract for construction above referred to, can be seen at the offices of the solicitors, and a contract, dated the 17th day of November, 1896, made between the Company of the one part and C. E. Bott of the other part.

Copies of the Prospectus and Forms of Application for shares may be obtained from the bankers, brokers, and solicitors of the Company, and at the Company's offices.

London, 23rd November, 1896.

A DIVIDEND AT THE RATE OF TEN PER CENT. PER ANNUM GUARANTEED FOR TWO YEARS.

The LISTS will CLOSE on WEDNESDAY, the 25th day of NOVEMBER, 1896, for both town and country.

THE ANGLO-SWEDISH STEEL TUBE COMPANY, LIMITED.

(Incorporated under the Companies Acts, 1862 to 1890.)

Capital £75,000, divided into 75,000 shares of £1 each, 60,000 of which are now offered for subscription at par, the balance of 15,000 being reserved for issue in part payment of the purchase money, payable—

2s. 6d. On application.
7s. 6d. On allotment.
10s. 0d. One month after allotment.
£1

The original proprietor of the business is so fully satisfied as to the future prospects of the undertaking that, in addition to guaranteeing a two years' dividend at the rate of 10 per cent. per annum as above-named, he has agreed to take £15,000 of shares in the Company in part payment of his purchase money.

DIRECTORS.

Col. William Cox (Director of Cox Brothers & Holland, Limited, Birmingham).
W. B. Kirsop, Newcastle-on-Tyne (Northern Manager Raleigh Cycle Company, Limited).
Col. Fred. Hill, Director William Bown, Limited, Cycle Components Manufacturers, Birmingham.
George H. Cammell, J.P., Brookfield Manor, Hathersage, Sheffield.

BANKERS.—Lloyds Bank, Limited, Colmore-row, Birmingham; 222, Strand, London, W.C., and their Branches and Agents.
SOLICITORS.—Walker & Rowe, 8, Bucklersbury, London, E.C.
BROKERS
Birmingham: H. & H. Fitter & Co., 128, Colmore-row.
Manchester: J. C. Brister, 24 to 26, Examiner-buildings.
Liverpool: Hook & Bradshaw, 4, York-buildings, Sweeting-street.
AUDITORS.—Sharp, Parsons, & Co., Chartered Accountants, Birmingham.
SECRETARY (pro tem).—W. H. Sinclair.
REGISTERED OFFICES.—29, River-street, Birmingham.

ABRIDGED PROSPECTUS.

This Company has been formed for the purpose of acquiring, working, and extending the well-known tube making business of Messrs. Smallwood & Co., situate at River-street, Birmingham, together with the freehold properties, works, machinery, plant, and stock-in-trade.

The plant, which, for the most part, has been specially designed and made for the business by the well-known firm of engineers, Messrs. Samuel Fisher & Co., is entirely modern, designed upon the latest improved principles, and specially adapted for the expeditious and economical production of the very best class of tubes.

The Company also acquires 18 freehold dwelling-houses and cottages adjoining the works which return a gross rent of £190 per annum.

The tubes manufactured by the firm have obtained a wide reputation for strength, excellence, and durability.

Under the terms of the agreement the original proprietor, Mr. Smallwood, is bound to erect a new mill upon the Company's property, such works to be built upon the most approved lines, and fully fitted with modern machinery for tube production. The plans for these works have already been approved, and operations are to be at once commenced.

That the business to be acquired is thoroughly sound and capable of great possibilities as a dividend-paying concern may be gathered from the fact that (as appears from the subjoined certificate of Messrs. Sharp, Parsons, & Co., Chartered Accountants, Birmingham) the net profit, before allowance for depreciation of plant, machinery, &c., or any charge for Mr. Smallwood's services as Manager, for the nine months ending 30th September, 1896, amounted to £12,182 6s. 9d., or at the rate of £16,243 2s. 4d. per annum.

120, Colmore-row, Birmingham, 29th October, 1896.

To the Directors of the Anglo-Swedish Steel Tube Co., Limited.

Gentlemen,—We have examined the books of Messrs. A. Smallwood & Co., River-street Works, Birmingham, for the nine months ended 30th September, 1896, and certify that the net profit shown therein amounted for that period to £12,182 6s. 9d., or at the rate of £16,243 2s. 4d. per annum. This is before making any allowance for depreciation of plant, machinery, &c., or any charge for Mr. Smallwood's services as Manager.

(Signed) SHARP, PARSONS, & CO.,
Chartered Accountants.

The enormous appreciation of the shares of tube companies may be seen by a glance at the following table:—

Name of Company.	Class of share.	Amount called up.	Closing Price, Oct. 27. 1896.	Premium.
British Tube Co., Ltd.	£10	£10	£19 10 0	£9 10 0
Climax Weldless Tube Co., Ltd.	£1	£1	£1 15 0	15 0
Perfecta Seamless Tube Co., Ltd.	£1	£1	£1 13 6	13 6
Reliance Tube Co., Ltd. ...	£1	12s. 6d.	£1 5 0	12 6
Rose Tube Co., Ltd.	£1	£1	£1 19 0	19 0
Star Tube Co., Ltd.	£1	8s.	£2 0 0	£1 12 0

The enormous profits realised in the cycle and allied trades are too well known to need comment.

Application for shares should be forwarded to the bankers of the Company, together with the amount of the deposit, payable upon application.

Copies of the prospectus, with forms of application for shares, may be obtained at the offices of the Company, or from their bankers, brokers, or solicitors.

Birmingham, 19th November, 1896.

No.....

THE ANGLO-SWEDISH STEEL TUBE COMPANY, LIMITED.
Incorporated under the Companies Acts, 1862 to 1890.
FORM OF APPLICATION FOR SHARES OF £1 EACH.
Issued at par.

To the Directors of the Anglo-Swedish Steel Tube Company, Limited.

Gentlemen,—Having paid to your bankers, Lloyds Bank, Limited, or their branches or agents, the sum of £..... being a deposit of 2s. 6d. per share on an application for..... shares of £1 each, in the above-named Company, I request you to allot me that number of shares, and I agree to accept the same or any smaller number that may be allotted to me, subject to the Memorandum and Articles of Association, and upon the terms of the prospectus, and I authorise you to place my name on the register of members in respect of the shares so allotted to me, and I agree to pay the further instalments upon such allotted shares as the same shall become due; and I agree with the Company, as trustee for the Directors and other persons liable, to waive notice of any contracts not specifically mentioned in the prospectus, and any claims I may have against them for not more fully complying in the said prospectus with the requirements of sec. 38 of the Companies Act, 1867.

Name (in full) .....
Address .....
.....
Description .....
Date .....1896.
Signature .....

All cheques to be made payable to the bankers.

United States of America.

CITY OF DULUTH, STATE OF MINNESOTA.

Issue of 1,106,000 dols. Five per Cent. Gold Bonds,

In Bonds to Bearer of 1,000 dols. each. Payable July 1st, 1926. Interest Coupons payable half-yearly, 1st January and 1st July in each year.

Both Interest and Principal payable in Gold Coin of the United States of America of the present standard of weight and fineness at the American Exchange National Bank, in the City of New York.

Issue Price 112 per Cent., or $1,120 for each 1,000 dollar Bond. Calculated and payable at Par of Exchange ($4,86.65) or £230. 3s. for each $1,000 Bond.

Payable:—£25 per Bond on Application
50 ,, Allotment
155 3s. ,, 5th January, 1897.
£230 3s.

At the Rate of Exchange herein adopted the Sterling par value of each $1,000 Bond is £205. 9s. 9d.

At the price of issue, and on this basis the Bonds yield, including the redemption of the premium, £4. 5s. 7d. per cent. per annum, payable half-yearly.

The First Coupon for Six Months' Interest will be due 1st July, 1897, but Interest Warrants will be sent to Allottees, payable on the 2nd January, 1897, at the National Bank of Scotland, Nicholas-lane, London, E.C., representing Five per cent. per annum, accrued on the Application and Allotment instalments from their respective due dates.

Messrs. Coates, Son, & Co., will receive applications at their Offices, 99, Gresham-street, London, E.C., for $1,106,000 Five per Cent. Gold Bonds of the City of Duluth as above described.

The Subscription Lists will be opened on Wednesday, the 25th of November, 1896, and will be closed at or before 4 o'clock on Friday, the 27th of November, 1896.

The Bonds are issued by the City of Duluth pursuant to the provisions of an Act entitled "An Act to define the boundaries of and establish a Municipal Government for the City of Duluth," passed by the Legislature of the State of Minnesota, approved March 2nd 1887, and Acts amendatory thereof and supplemental thereto, and to a vote of a majority of the legal voters of the said City, and Ordinances and proceedings of the Common Council of the said City as required by law.

The Bonds are designated "Water and Light Bonds," and are issued for the purpose of providing funds for the erection of a Water Plant to be owned by the City.

Besides forming a part of the bonded indebtedness of the City to which by the terms of the Bond the full faith and credit of the City are pledged for the payment of Principal and Interest, they will have a special lien upon all Water and Light appliances and structures of every kind erected, owned or purchased by the City as provided in the Act and set forth in the Bond.

The general indebtedness of the City in limited by Statute to 5 per cent. of the assessed valuation of the property within the City, but this limitation is exclusive of the special indebtedness of which the present issue forms a part authorised for Water and Light purposes.

The City of Duluth, situated at the head of Lake Superior, is one of the large and rapidly growing Cities of the North-west, and forms one of the most important Ports on the Lake.

The Congress of the United States has recently authorised the Secretary of War to enter into Contracts for the improvement of the harbour and the entrances thereto at a cost not exceeding $3,080,553, in addition to the sums already appropriated for the same purpose.

The Clerk of the City has furnished the following Certificate:—

"City of Duluth, Minnesota,
"October 27th, 1896

"Real Valuation, estimated		$88,500,000
Assessed valuation, 1895		41,013,263
Bonded Debt	$2,042,250
Present Issue, Water Bonds	1,106,000
Total		$3,148,250
Sinking Fund	$47,186.42
Population State Census, 1895		59,396

"There has never been a default in the payment of principal or interest.

"I hereby certify that the above statement is true and correct to the best of my knowledge and belief.

(Signed) "C. E. RICHARDSON,
"City Clerk."

Seal of the City of Duluth

The following figures extracted from a recent publication and confirmed by Cable direct to Messrs. Coates, Son & Co., by Mr. Brace, the Secretary of the Duluth Chamber of Commerce, show the growth of the City and its trade during the past ten years:—

		1885.	1895.
Population		13,355	59,396
Assessed Valuation		$6,515,210	$41,013,263
Arrivals and Departure of Lake Vessels ...		906	12,066
Freight Shipped	tons	655,599	4,110,433
Grain Receipts (Head of Lakes)	bushels	14,869,675	77,428,074
Iron Ore Shipped	tons	255,484	3,177,218
Timber cut	feet	160,000,000	494,500,000

Applications on the form issued with the prospectus, must be accompanied by a Deposit of £25 per Bond on the amount of Bonds applied for, and be forwarded to Messrs. Coates, Son and Co., 99, Gresham-street, London, E.C.

If no allotment is made the deposit will be returned without deduction, and if a partial allotment is made the surplus deposit will be applied towards the amount payable on allotment. In case of default in the payment of any instalment at its due date, all amounts previously paid will be liable to forfeiture. The Instalment due on the 5th January, 1897, may be paid on or after allotment, under discount at the rate of £2 per cent. per annum.

Application will be made in due course for a quotation for the Bonds upon the London Stock Exchange.

Copies of the authorising Acts above referred to can be inspected at the Offices of Messrs. Wilson, Bristows, & Carpmael, 1, Copthall-buildings, E.C.

Prospectuses and Forms of Application may be obtained at the Offices of Messrs. Coates, Son, & Co., 99, Gresham-street, London, E.C.

London, 23rd November, 1896.

THE LISTS WILL OPEN ON THURSDAY, THE 26th NOVEMBER, 1896, AND CLOSE ON THE FOLLOWING DAY

THE FORREST AUSTRALIAN CORPORATION, LIMITED,

INVITE SUBSCRIPTIONS FOR SHARES OF Bellevue Proprietary, Ltd.

(WESTERN AUSTRALIA).

Incorporated under the Companies Acts, 1862 to 1893.

CAPITAL £160,000, in 160,000 Shares of £1 each, 40,000 of which are for Working Capital.

Applications are now invited for 40,000 Shares at par, payable—2s. 6d. on application, 2s. 6d. on allotment, and the balance by calls of not more than 5s., at intervals of not less than one month. Applications for over 18,500 of the Shares uow offered for subscription have already been received from Western Australia, and others are expected. The Directors undertake that not less than 30,000 Shares will be allotted for Working Capital at the first general allotment of Shares.

The right of prior allotment to Forrest Corporation Shareholders is reserved.

DIRECTORS.

H. W. LOWE, 7, East India Avenue, E.C., Director London and Continental Investment Corporation of West Australia, Limited.
JAMES McKILLOP, M.P., Polmont Park, Stirlingshire, and 67, Jermyn-street, S.W., Director James Nimmo & Co., Ltd., Glasgow.
J. C. JESSON, Moorgate Court, E.C., Director Burbank's Birthday Gift Gold Mine, Limited.
W. D. CAIRNEY, 45, West Nile-street, Glasgow, Director United Australian Exploration, Limited.
H. J. ETHERINGTON, Clarendon House, Willesden Lane, N.W., Director Bendigo Goldfields, Limited.

Managers in West Australia.—The Forrest Australian Corporation, Limited, St. George's Terrace, Perth, W.A.

Bankers.

The Commercial Bank of Scotland, Limited, 62, Lombard-street, E.C.; its Head Office, Edinburgh, and Branches in Scotland.

Brokers.—Messrs. Pritchett & Young, Hercules-passage, 54, Threadneedle-street, and Stock Exchange, E.C.

Solicitors.—Messrs. Vallance, Birkbeck, & Barnard, Lombard House, E.C.

Auditors.—Messrs. Monkhouse, Stoneham, & Co., 28 and 29, St. Swithin's Lane, E.C.

Secretary and Offices.—F. L. WILMOT, Finsbury House, E.C.

PROSPECTUS.

This Company has been formed for the purposes indicated in its Memorandum of Association, and in pursuance thereof will acquire certain Western Australian mining leases or claims known as the "Bellevue" and "Isidore," containing about 41 acres, situate at Mount Sir Samuel, one of the newer gold mining districts north of Lawlers.

The Forrest Australian Corporation, Limited, who make the issue, have, since their incorporation in May last, in conjunction with Messrs. Forrest & Co., of Perth, examined a large number of mining propositions, and though not anxious to invite subscriptions at the present period, the Corporation did not feel justified in declining the above property in the face of the four extremely favourable Reports, including that of Mr. F. H. Backhouse, hereinafter referred to, and more particularly as it was intimated to them that a large part of the present issue, if made, would be taken up in the Colony itself.

Full copies of the Reports accompany the Prospectus, and point to the Bellevue lease as of very exceptional value.

From the Report of Mr. J. M. Rogers, M.E. (Hampton Trust, Limited), dated 17th August, 1896, confirmed by Mr. F. H. Backhouse (West Australian Gold Fields, Limited), after personal examination, it appears that on the Bellevue lease a shaft has been sunk 52 feet to fresh water, and drives north and south on the course of the lode put in at this depth, that the reef is nine feet wide, and is traceable through the entire length of the Lease (13 acres), and that there is another reef which should junction in depth with the main lode before referred to, and further increase the value. Mr. Rogers further states that after thoroughly sampling the main lode its fair average value is 4 oz. 18 dwt. per ton, and that in the winze sunk 13 feet at the bottom of the north drive, and therefore the deepest part of the Mine, the stone is still improving and going close to 20 oz. per ton. He also says of the main lode:—

"It is the finest looking reef I have yet seen in Western Australia, not equalled in any part of the world I have seen for gold bearing. . . . In my opinion the reef is a permanent one, and will in depth open out into a splendid body of rich stone. . . . . I can thoroughly recommend this property. . . . I cannot speak too highly of it."

The above strong opinion is, as before stated, absolutely confirmed by Mr. F. H. Backhouse.

Mr. Glanville, M.E., says:—

"Having had 34 years' mining experience I can recommend this property as being one of the best that has come under my notice."

Mr. Bizant, M.E., says:—

"Of the (about) 150 samples taken by me from all parts of the lode, not in one instance have I obtained less than four ounces per ton, and I can safely say that 60 per cent. of my samples average over eight ounces per ton. These samples were taken by me in a thoroughly practical manner, namely, by boring in the lode from two to five feet in depth. . . . During my 30 years' mining experience in every part of Australia, I have not seen anything to approach this mine for richness or quantity of ore. . . . There is every facility at hand for working the mine, fresh water is obtainable in abundance, and timber suitable for mining purposes and fuel is in great quantity."

With regard to the Isidore property, Mr. Bizant states that:—

"It is developing satisfactorily, although not quite so rich as the Bellevue."

Having received the above Reports, the Forrest Corporation then instructed their own Mining representative (Mr. T. B. Birkbeck) to examine the property, and have received the following cable Report, dated 15th October, 1896;—

"Have examined as requested. I can strongly recommend Bellevue. Have driven upon the vein a distance of 130 feet. Ore in sight amounts to 5,000 tons. Assay value 3½ to 4 ounces per ton. Quite satisfied good mine."

A careful perusal of the full Reports appended hereto is recommended, and having regard to the statements therein, as to the abundance of ore, water, and timber, and to the ability of the Forrest Corporation to put a competent staff on the Mines at once, there appears to be no reason why this property should not be making regular and good returns within a reasonable time. The crushing plant has already been ordered.

The large applications for Shares in this Company already received and still being received from the Colony seem to show that the favourable opinion of the Directors of the Company and the Forrest Australian Corporation, Limited, as to the value of the property has received confirmation of a most convincing nature.

The Forrest Australian Corporation, Limited, who pay all the expenses up to allotment (except the Company's legal expenses); have fixed the purchase price at £120,000, payable £110,000 in fully paid-up Shares of the Company and £10,000 in cash.

The following Contracts have been made:—(1) dated 28th August, 1896, between Messrs. S. P. & I. S. Emanuel, of Perth, W.A., and the Forrest Australian Corporation, Limited, for the acquisition of the property; and (2) dated 24th November, 1896, between the Corporation and E. E. Collins, as trustee for this Company, for the re-sale thereof at a profit.

Besides the above there are other Contracts, to which the Company is not a party, with reference to subscriptions to its Capital. Applicants for Shares can have further information as to the dates, parties, and contents of these; but, in any case, will be considered to have had, for all purposes, full notice thereof, and to have waived any fuller compliance with Section 38 of "The Companies' Act, 1867."

Copies of the above Contracts (1) and (2) and the Memorandum and Articles of Association can be seen by intending subscribers, who are deemed to have notice of the contents thereof, at the Offices of the Company's Solicitors.

Messrs. Lowe & McKillop are Directors of the Forrest Australian Corporation, Limited.

Applications for Shares should be made on the accompanying form and forwarded to the Company's Bankers with a remittance for the amount payable on application. If the number of Shares allotted be less than that applied for the surplus will be credited towards the amount payable on allotment and any balance returned.

Prospectuses and Application Forms may be obtained from the Bankers and at the Offices of the Company.

London, 24th November, 1896.

The Subscription List is Now Open, and closes on or before Wednesday, the 25th November, 1896, for Town, and on or before Thursday, the 26th November, 1896, for Country. One-third of the Debentures and one-third of each class of Shares will be reserved for the Shareholders in the Old Company (Bovril, Limited), provided application is made on the special forms supplied to them for this purpose.
Thereafter, as far as possible, a PREFERENTIAL ALLOTMENT will be made to all Wholesale and Retail Dealers in the Company's Products.

BOVRIL (British, Foreign, and Colonial), LIM.

Incorporated under the Companies Acts, 1862 to 1893.

SHARE CAPITAL - - £2,000,000,

Divided into 2,000,000 Shares of £1 each, as follows:—

500,000 5½ per Cent. Cumulative Preference Shares (Preferential as to Capital as well as Dividend in priority to the Ordinary and Deferred Shares)	£500,000
750,000 7 per Cent. Ordinary Shares (Preferential as to Dividend in priority to the Deferred Shares)	£750,000
750,000 Deferred Shares	£750,000
2,000,000	£2,000,000

DEBENTURE STOCK.

Issue of £500,000 4½ per Cent. Debenture Stock, to be issued and transferable in amounts of £10 and multiples thereof, redeemable at the option of the Company, at £105 per cent. upon giving six months' notice.

The Debenture Stock will constitute a first charge on the undertaking of the Company and will be secured by a Trust Deed.

The Interest will be payable half-yearly on the 30th day of June, and the 31st day of December, the first proportionate payment to be made on the 30th day of June next.

Issue payable:—	Per Share.	Debenture Stock.
On Application	5s.	25 per Cent.
On Allotment	5s.	25 ,,
On 19th December, 1896	10s.	50 ,,

Trustees for Debenture Stockholders.
His Grace The Duke of Somerset.
The Right Hon. Earl de la Warr.

Directors.
The Rt. Honble. Lord Playfair, G.C.B., LL.D., Chairman (Chairman of Bovril, Limited).
J. Lawson Johnston, Vice-Chairman (Vice-Chairman of Bovril, Limited).
Viscount Duncannon, C.B. (Director of London, Brighton, and South Coast Railway).
Sir Edmund Commerell, V.C., G.C.B., Admiral of the Fleet.
Frederick Gordon (Chairman Gordon Hotels, Limited).
Robert Farquharson, M.D., M.P. (Director of Bovril, Limited).
G. Lawson Johnston (of Bovril, Limited).
Andrew Walker, Managing Director (Managing Director of Bovril, Limited).

Bankers.
Lloyds Bank, Limited, 222, Strand, London, and any other Branches.

Brokers.
London: George Whitehead & Chown, 23, Bucklersbury, E.C.
Edinburgh: A. H. Robertson & Seater, 31, St. Andrew's-square.
Glasgow: Donald & Co., 104, West George-street.
Dublin: Daniel D. Bulger, College Green.
Liverpool: Hook & Bradshaw, 4, York-buildings.
Manchester: Staveacre & Walton, Haworth's-buildings, Cross-street.
Oldham: John Hood, 42, Clegg-street.
Preston: Arthur Westworth, 129a, Fisher-gate.
Birmingham: W. & F. Cuthbert, 79, Colmore-row.
Stafford: George Dean, 9, St. Mary's-grove.
Newcastle-on-Tyne: J. Straker Wilson, 23, Grey-street.
Barrow-in-Furness: George H. Huthwaite.
Sheffield: F. E. & S. Smith, 1, George-street.
Nottingham: Bromley, Cunliffe, & Co., Queen-street.
Bradford: John Gurney, 29, Kirkgate.
Leeds: Hirst, Turner, & Tennant, 5, East Parade.
Cardiff: E. B. Sims, 59, Mount Stuart-square.
Norwich: J. H. Hatch, Victoria Chambers.

Solicitors for Bovril, Limited.
Neish, Howell, & Macfarlane, 66, Watling-street, E.C.

Solicitor for the Company—Arthur T. Ashwell, Nottingham.

Auditors—Jackson, Pixley, Browning, Husey, & Co., Chartered Accountants, 58, Coleman-street, E.C.

Consulting Chemist—Wm. Harkness, F.I.C., F.C.S., Government Analyst.

Secretary (pro tem.)—W. A. Harris (Secretary, Bovril, Limited).

Registered Offices—30, Farringdon-street, London, E.C.

ABRIDGED PROSPECTUS.

OBJECTS.—This Company has been formed to acquire the whole assets of the highly successful commercial undertaking of Bovril, Limited. The business comprises the manufacture and sale of various popular food specialities, the most important of which is the preparation of Fluid Beef known all over the world as "Bovril." Bovril is prepared by a process which secures for the extract a great amount of nourishment, the sustaining properties of which are valuable to young and old, to the healthy as well as to the invalid. It combines the qualities of a food, a beverage, and a restorative. It is equally valuable for culinary purposes and for the sick room, and is, moreover, an article of unique dietetic value, enjoying the support and obtaining the recommendation of the medical faculty. Whether for brain workers or for those engaged in physical labour Bovril acts as a wholesome and stimulating support as well as a restorative, without producing any of the injurious reactionary effects of alcohol. The Company, it will be perceived, acquires a commercial enterprise of proved financial success, and the exclusive use of a name which is a household word. It is universally recognised that an established trade name—as in the case of Bass's Ale, Guinness's Stout, Coats's Thread, Colman's Mustard, or Huntley & Palmer's Biscuits—is a commercial asset of the highest possible value.

BUSINESS.—Some idea of the extent of the business may be gleaned from the fact that upwards of 100,000 retail establishments in the United Kingdom alone are at present selling the Company's products; in addition to which "Bovril" is sold at most of the important Hotels and Restaurants, and at Refreshment Buffets on the following Railways in Great Britain:—

London and North-Western, Great Western, Midland, Great Northern, Lancashire and Yorkshire, London and South-Western, Manchester, Sheffield, and Lincolnshire, London, Brighton, and South Coast, South Eastern, Metropolitan, Metropolitan District, London, Chatham, and Dover, Cheshire Lines, North British, Cambrian, Manchester South Junction and Altrincham, West Lancashire, Mid-Wales, Southport Extension, Great Northern, Ireland.

"BOVRIL."—"Bovril" is supplied to most of the Hospitals and Infirmaries, and similar Institutions in the United Kingdom. The British Government have recognised its value, and supplies have been furnished for recent campaigns, including the Chitral, Ashantee, and the Soudan Expeditions. The requirements of British and Foreign Governments for Campaigning Foods have received special attention, and Bovril, Limited, has recently produced preparations which have proved eminently suitable for the purpose. It is expected that this branch of the business will shortly become one of considerable importance and profit. These foods have been tried in active service and have gained unqualified praise. The Company's products have also been used in the Nansen, Jackson-Harmsworth, and Wellman Arctic Expeditions.

PROFITS.—These facts furnish adequate proof of the value of the "Bovril" preparations from a general point of view, and of the commercial importance and stability of the Company. It is considered undesirable, for trade reasons, to disclose the actual amount of the sales; but the following certificate deals with the figures during the past three years and part of the current year:—

58, Coleman-street, London, E.C.,
16th November, 1896.

To the Directors of BOVRIL (British, Foreign, and Colonial), LIMITED.

GENTLEMEN,

We have continuously Audited the accounts of Bovril, Limited, from the date of the foundation of the Company in the year 1889, and we certify that the net Profits of the last three years before charging Interest upon Debentures have been as follows, viz.:—

For the year ended 30th June, 1894, £21,822.
,, ,, 1895, £57,605.
,, ,, 1896, £88,789.

We further certify that the sales for the year ended 30th June, 1894, exceeded those for the year ended 30th June, 1892-3, by ... ... 15·42 %
The Sales for the year ended 30th June, 1895, exceeded those for the year 1892-3, by ... ... 52·32 %
The Sales for the year ended 30th June, 1896, exceeded those for the year 1892-3, by ... ... 105·90 %
And that for the four months ended at the 31st October, 1896, the sales exceeded those of 1892-3, at the rate of 166·81 per cent., which sales contain nothing but current orders supplied in the ordinary way.

We are, Gentlemen, Your obedient Servants,
JACKSON, PIXLEY, BROWNING, HUSEY, & CO.,
Chartered Accountants.

Looking to the progressive results shown in the Accountants' Report, and the daily increasing business, it is anticipated that the net profit for the first year of the New Company will approximate the sum of £150,000. This estimate is based on the assumption that the present rate of increase in the sales is only maintained, whereas for many reasons it may be confidently expected still further to advance. Great as are the sales of "Bovril" they are capable of greater development. The business has hitherto grown with such rapidity that the attention of the Management has practically been confined to its extension in the United Kingdom, although the nucleus of a substantial trade has already been formed in the Colonies and several foreign countries. One of the chief purposes of this Company is to enlarge the area of its operations abroad, and, if desirable, to sell portions of its rights to subsidiary Companies with this object. A substantial offer has already been made for certain of these rights, and it is now under consideration. It is not intended to part with any such privileges without reserving to the parent Company the sole right of manufacture. The beneficial effect of such an arrangement would be threefold, namely:—

1. A substantial capital payment to the Company;
2. An expansion of the Company's output and profits; and
3. Freedom from responsibilities in connection with the management of foreign business.

It is reasonable to assume that as a result of this policy of extension, coupled with the growing popularity of "Bovril" at home, the output will be much larger in the future, and the profits will be proportionately increased. There is practically no limit to the development of business in a commodity of such high repute and proved excellence as "Bovril," which has already established its superiority, and is every day growing in favour and securing for itself a wider range of customers.

DIRECTORS AND MANAGEMENT.—As a guarantee that the same commercial ability and enterprise which have led to the existing satisfactory results will be continued under the new Company, it may be stated that the Board of Directors includes several of the gentlemen who have successfully controlled the business in the past. Lord Playfair, who was the Chairman of the old Company, is one of the highest scientific authorities on the subject of Dietetics. Dr. Farquharson, M.P., an original Director, Mr. J. Lawson Johnston, the Founder of the business and Vice-Chairman of the old Company, and Mr. Andrew Walker, Managing Director since its formation, will act in similar capacities in the new Company. The large and efficient staff of the old Company is being retained, so that the business will be conducted as heretofore, and will go on without any interruption whatever.

PURCHASE PRICE.—The Purchase price is fixed at £2,500,000, payable in Cash, Shares, or Debentures, or any of them, at the option of the Directors; but the Vendor reserves the right of taking at least one third of the Deferred Shares in part payment of the Purchase Price. For this sum the Company acquires the business as from the 1st day of July, 1896, and the purchase comprises the whole assets of Bovril, Limited, including Goodwill, Trade Marks, Patent Rights, Freehold and Leasehold Property, Plant, Machinery, Office Furniture, Fittings, Stock-in-Trade, Advertising Material, Book Debts, Cash in Hand and at Bank, Contracts and Privileges of every description pertaining to Bovril, Limited, together with the profits accrued since the 30th June, 1896.

WORKING CAPITAL.—The Directors are satisfied that the large stock and cash in hand and at the Bank, including the profits which have accrued since June 30th, 1896, and which, in the ordinary course would have been distributed in dividend, will provide sufficient working capital.

PROPERTY.—The Freehold and Leasehold Properties include the Company's Warehouses, Head Office, and Branch Offices below referred to, together with the important site in Old-street, London (partly Freehold and partly Leasehold,) recently acquired by the Company for the purpose of erecting a new Factory and Warehouses, rendered imperative by reason of the rapid growth of its trade. The Head Offices of the Company are at 30, Farringdon-street, E.C., and the Warehouses at 63 and 64, Bath-st., City-road, E.C., Featherstone-st., E.C., and Shepherdess-walk, E.C.; besides which there are Branch Offices at Manchester, Newcastle-on-Tyne, Glasgow, Hull, Liverpool, Leeds, Dublin, Belfast, Birmingham, Edinburgh, and Brussels.

In addition to these Branch Offices, the Company has established working Agencies in New York, Paris, Vienna, Frankfort, Munich, Carlsruhe, Stockholm, Christiania, Lausanne, Seville, Sydney, Brisbane, Melbourne, Adelaide, Fremantle, W.A., Auckland, Christchurch, Tasmania, Port Elizabeth, Cape Town, East London, Durban, Bombay, Calcutta, Colombo, Rangoon, Singapore, Chili, Peru, Buenos Ayres, Canary Islands, Hong Kong.

PREFERENTIAL ALLOTMENT.—To Shareholders of "Bovril, Limited."—One-third of the Debentures and one-third of each class of Shares will be reserved for the Shareholders in the Old Company, "Bovril, Limited," whose names were on the Register on the 16th November, 1896, provided application is made on the Special Forms supplied to them for this purpose, and the Directors will endeavour as far as possible to make to such applicants a pro rata allotment according to their respective holdings in "Bovril, Limited."

To CUSTOMERS.—After the Shareholders in the old Company, the customers of the Company will as far as possible receive a Preferential Allotment. Applications from Customers must be made on forms marked "Customer," which will be supplied for this purpose.

The Vendor will pay all expenses of every kind up to and including the completion of the purchase.

A London Stock Exchange settlement and quotation will be applied for in due course.

Copies of the Prospectus, with Forms of Application for Shares and Debenture Stock, can be obtained at the Offices of the Company, or from their Bankers, Brokers, or Solicitors.

The Memorandum and Articles of Association, the Contracts, and Certificate specified above, can be seen at the Offices of the Company.

London, November 21st, 1896.

10/6 THE "PELICAN" SELF-FEEDING PEN 10/6

(PATENTED)

WRITES INSTANTLY AND CONTINUOUSLY.

Has Extra Large Reservoir of Ink. Secure against Leakage in any position. Flow of Ink regulated with the Greatest Nicety. POLISHED VULCANITE, HANDSOMELY ENCHASED, FITTED WITH SPECIAL BARREL PEN in 14-ct. GOLD, IRIDIUM-POINTED. Also

THE "NOTA BENE" STYLOGRAPH OR FLUID PENCIL

(PATENTED)

5/- 5/-

IS READY FOR INSTANT USE, WITHOUT ANY ADJUSTMENT. MAY BE CARRIED IN ANY POSITION, WITHOUT FEAR OF LEAKAGE.

POLISHED VULCANITE, HANDSOMELY ENCHASED, WITH NEEDLE, SPRING, & NOZZLE, MADE OF THE PRECIOUS METALS.

Sold by all Stationers. Wholesale only by the Sole Manufacturers, THOS. DE LA RUE & CO. Ltd., Bunhill Row, London, E.C.

The complete Furniture of a comfortable Bedroom: Wardrobe, Dressing Chest, Washstand. 2 Cane-seat Arm Chairs, Chamber Service Bed, Bedding, &c., folds into one small case measuring 6 ft. by 2 ft. 6 in. by 2 ft. Rigidity and appearance of glued-up Furniture. Patented all over the World. Invaluable to Colonists, Hotels, Officers' Quarters, Spare Bedrooms, Shooting Boxes, &c., &c. Suites at all prices, separate parts can be had. Obtainable at all Dealers' or direct from

THE
V.P. FOLDING BEDROOM SUITE & FURNITURE CO., LIM.
330, OLD STREET, LONDON, E.C.

Genuine Old Welch Dressers

(Inlaid and Carved Oak), from £6. 10s.

ILLUSTRATED PRICED CATALOGUES POST FREE.
ALL GOODS CARRIAGE PAID TO ANY STATION IN GREAT BRITAIN.

HEWETSONS,
TOTTENHAM COURT ROAD, London, W.

WATCHES FROM THE FACTORY BY POST

DIRECT TO THE WEARER!

57/- THE 'COUNSELLOR'

H. SAMUEL'S KEYLESS ENGLISH LEVER. A splendid Watch, highly finished interchangeable movement, with 15 JEWELS; three-quarter plate, most accurately constructed; CHRONOMETER BALANCE; tempered hairspring; polished wheels and pinions: flat crystal glass front. In highly-finished close-fitting SOLID SILVER cases, hall marked. H. Samuel's price £2. 17s.; in 14-CARAT ROLLED GOLD Case, consisting of two outer plates of 14-carat gold, lined inside with a case of specially prepared metal. Wears for years. H. Samuel's price, £4. 5s. Heavy 18-carat Gold Case, £13, SEVEN YEARS' warranty. A MONTH'S FREE TRIAL. Full amount returned if dissatisfied. LARGE SAVING on London prices. H. Samuel's "ACME" Sterling Silver Watches for Ladies and Gentlemen. Handsome, exact, and durable. Five years' warranty. Worth three guineas. H. Samuel's price 25s. H. Samuel's New Improvements, protected by HER MAJESTY'S ROYAL LETTERS PATENT, are only to be obtained in H. Samuel's Watches. Largest Sale! Highest Quality! Lowest Prices!

FREE. It will please you to read our new book (just published). Only necessary to send your NAME AND ADDRESS, and this handsome volume is despatched by next post. CONSIDERABLE REDUCTIONS effected by sending direct to H. Samuel for all requirements. Please say if we may have the pleasure of posting you this new book.

H. SAMUEL, Lever Watch Factory, MANCHESTER.

£20 TOBACCONISTS COMMENCING. Illd. guide (259 pages), 3d., "How to open respectably £20 to £2,000." Tobacconists' Outfitting Co., 186, Euston-rd., London. Mngr. H. MYERS, Est. 1866.

The "QUEEN" says:—"Few Silks can equal 'FAILLE INVICTA,' which is really a magnificent texture."

THE BEST WEARING FASHIONABLE BLACK SILK

THOROUGHLY TRIED AND RELIABLE

REGISTERED No. 93,095.

AT ALL SILK HOUSES.

"VANITY FAIR" says:—"I think nothing could be better than 'FAILLE INVICTA.'"

"MYRA'S JOURNAL" says:—"The 'FAILLE INVICTA' is fully recognised as the perfection of Black Silk."

OUR PUZZLES.

SPECIAL NOTICE.

"TRUTH" TOY AND DOLL SHOW.

It will have been seen from the announcement made last week that the coming Show is to be held at the ROYAL ALBERT HALL on December 16 and 17. This is excellent news, for experience has shown what an excellent place for such a purpose the Albert Hall is. It, however, now becomes more than ever necessary that the number of Dolls and Toys shall show no falling off. An unprecedently large demand for dressed Dolls exists at the Children's Hospitals this year, and it is to be hoped that no patient little sufferer will be disappointed. A few more Dolls, both large and small, still remain on hand, and can be sent at once to any ladies who may be willing to dress them by the middle of next month.

"TRUTH" PUZZLE, No. 927.

The Prize in this competition has been divided between QUEEN ANNE and J. C. CRAWFORD, whose songs were printed in TRUTH last week.

I hope to be able to print a further selection of Songs in the next number of TRUTH.

"TRUTH" PUZZLE, No. 931.

Every one agrees that the shapes of the Motor cars which are at present to be seen are unspeakably ugly; but no one seems ready to suggest what form they ought to take. Perhaps our Puzzle competitors can give some useful hints on the subject. At all events, the usual prize of Two Guineas is offered this week for

THE BEST SUGGESTION AS TO WHAT THE SHAPE OF THE MOTOR CAR OUGHT TO BE, DUE REGARD BEING PAID TO BOTH ELEGANCE AND UTILITY.

Competitors will please make their suggestions as briefly as possible; and take care that all answers reach me by the morning of Monday, December 7, at the latest.

CONDENSED RULES.

All answers to the current Puzzle must be sent in on or before the morning of the Monday week following the date of that Puzzle's publication, to the PUZZLE EDITOR, TRUTH Buildings, Carteret-street, Queen Anne's-gate, London, S.W. The answers must be signed by a nom de plume of not more than twelve letters, and must not be sent on post-cards, nor by telegraph, nor by hand; whilst in the case of new competitors the real name and address must be forwarded with the first reply sent.

ANSWERS TO CORRESPONDENTS.

 The real name, with the address, of E. J., winner of a half of Prize No. 918, is E. Jenner, Esq., 1, Inkerman-road, N.W.

 The real name, with the address, of LANCELOT, winner of half of Prize No. 924, is C. Douglas Rosling, Esq., Horwell School, Launceston, Cornwall.

 The real name, with the address, of TARBOX, winner of Prize No. 923, is the Rev. A. Cyril Pearson, Springfield Rectory, Chelmsford.

 The real name, with the address, of SCRIVENER, winner of Prize No. 925, is F. Percy Noble, Esq., Precentor's Court, York.

PHILALETHES.—Thanks for your note.

BLANCHE AUDLEY.—Your song arrived too late.

EAST ANGLIA.—Your letter shall have my immediate attention, and I thank you for sending it.

C. E. B.—I have passed your letter on to the Editor.

MISTLETOE.—The words "syringe" and "pickaxe" had to rhyme with two other words.

NEW ZEALAND.—It was a rhyme to both syllables of "syringe" that was wanted.

GO-AHEAD.—I have shown your P.S. to the Editor.

R. MARTIN.—Your alteration has been noted.

SIR P. FELIS.—It was impossible, I regret to say, to print your song.

APOSTROPHE.—The Printer's Devil is not always so black as he is painted, or perhaps I should say not so black as he looks.

W. W.—I am sorry to say that your "Early Springtime" arrived too late.

THE PUZZLE EDITOR.

"TRUTH" PUZZLE, No. 928.—ASSORTED SPECIMENS—GOOD AND OTHERWISE.

STANZAS CONTAINING SUGGESTED RHYMES FOR "SYRINGE" AND "PICKAXE."

Negations, in some English words, upon the prefix ir hinge—
E.g., "an ir-religious man," an ir-receptive syringe.
Scotch reader, dinna look sae blate, 'twould need a moral pickaxe
To plant my quip within your pate—a heavy, sharp, and thick axe! Eboracum.

1. Brave Abyssinia, with its Menelik axe,
Will join the Christian miner with his pickaxe.
The faith that once did on great Vladimir hinge
Burns brighter played on by the Moslem syringe.

2. Stage villains in the fifth act must at Virtue's footstool kir-r-inge,
And die shot by a Derringer as harmless as a syringe,
Stage miners show stage nuggets unearthed by the stage pickaxe,
And upas trees have been hewed down by Gladstone's idyl*lic* axe.

3. What if the laws of Moses did on frankincense and myrrh hinge,
Pure gems of truth immortal sprung from the Prophet's pickaxe.
Niagara's mighty cataract was once but as a syringe,
College dons remind the boys of this when hammering in their "hic hacs." Marplot.

An incident of the storming of the Bank of England by the mob during the bread riots of November, 1904.

Bill* burst the locks with dynamite injected through a syringe,
The roughs then hammered at the door with boulder, crowbar, brick, axe;
Until the trembling gate but hung suspended by a mere hinge,
And then a rebel smashed it down with blows of sturdy pickaxe. Scrivener.

* His ancestral name was Sikes.

"Avaunt!" the actress cried, "I'll make you c— ringe—!"
His fear was great, he seized near by a thick axe.
Her murd'rous weapon was—a garden syringe,
And his (between ourselves) a cardboard pickaxe. Malignant.

To twist poor Reason thus on her hinge
Is what the Romans called pervicax.
I find few English rhymes for syringe,
And not a blessed one for pickaxe. Rabelais.

PUPIL.

1. My lord's fair curls, my lady's fringe,
Bowed to the Revolution's quick axe,
And streets ran blood, as from a syringe,
That would not hide till turned by pickaxe.

PRECEPTOR.

2. A stammerer might make fringe into firinge.
I pass the Revolution's quick axe—
But can't you find a better rhyme to syringe
While coupling it to one with pickaxe?

NOT BY RUDYARD KIPLING.

3. It's Lombard-street to a China iringe,
A race'orse against a lot of sick 'acks,
Ses 'Arry, E squirted like a syringe
When 'is fancy stuck in the mud like a pickaxe. Norfolk.

HOPELESS AGITATION.

1. You might sooner cleanse th' Augean stalls with a common penny syringe,
Or clear away the Balkans with a Brummagem pickaxe,
Than right Armenian wrongs with words, and make the Powers stir in j-Udgment on the Turks' misrule and political nicknacks.

REPAIRED ROADS.

2. The cyclist skims along the streets with spinning wheels that whir in j-Ust the way we know so well when main-springs break in tick-tacks;
The hind wheel squirts his back with mud as if it were a syringe,
And he blesses vestrics, workmen, roads, steam-rollers, and pickaxe. A. A. G.

Just cut your bloomin' stick, ax
My pal to lend no syringe,
But bring his bloomin' pickaxe
To loosen down this 'ere 'inge. Camoens.

'Twere enough to make Old Nick ax
What the deuce will rhyme with pickaxe?
But on that, and also syringe,
The fate of TRUTH'S guineas here hinge. Aletheia.

The Lord Mayor's show. Procession of firemen with felling hatchets and hose-reel. Father, and son pick-a-back.

"Look! Teddy, thim's miners wi' pickaxe,
An' gar'ners from Kew wi' syringe."
"Sure! daddy, it's only a 'stick' axe,
Ye're teazin' or gwine off yer 'inge." Caledon.

"To ease the hinge of hunter's watch, would Mary use a syringe?"
To which did Mary prompt reply, "A feather, were it her hinge,
And oil must be the medium used, more potent than a pickaxe,
To lubricate the rusty joints of hunter or of sick hacks." Robert Martin.

Moll told to the beak how Bill put down his pickaxe
And squirted suds at her from out of a syringe,
And gave her, when falling down, kick upon kick-'acks,
And tore out her hair, which he called her fi-ringe. La Plata.

He mispronounced meringue as meryngе,
Thought the seringa was a syringe;
And when I said, "Come! what's a pickaxe?"
Replied "It is a sort of thick axe." Kingston.

All tools, from a carpenter's plane to a syringe,
Our soldiers should handle, as well as a quick axe,
For facts on which battles like Tel-el-Kebir* hinge
Are often the outcome of shovel and pickaxe.

* The correct pronunciation is with the accent on the last syllable.—Aimavi a.

If you cannot to some brain a lever de rire hinge,
Here's a plan that's as sharp and as short as a quick axe—
If the person is deaf, squirt it in with a syringe!
If the person is dense, drive it in with a pickaxe! Oom Paul.

While sprinkling some plants with my old garden syringe
I found a door-hinge and a joiner's light, slick axe;
The lady next door claimed the former as her hinge,
The latter I swopped for a strong, useful pickaxe. Shamrock.

A lady buys a blackthorn stick, a door-hinge, and a pickaxe,
And takes them to an outhouse where she kept a leaky syringe;
Now, in a tearing rage, she, with the "pick" her blackthorn stick hacks;
Anon, with the same weapon she attacks and batters her hinge. Shamrock.

TANTÆNE ANIMIS CŒLESTIBUS IRÆ.—Virgil.

Maud entered her garden, her flowers to syringe;
Her husband had injured one with a pickaxe.
Her temper, serene sometimes, turned on a queer hinge—
Maud made Hubby feel how severely a stick whacks. J. McGrigor Allan.

THE MARTYR.

"My fate," he said, "does not on judgments here hinge,
Nor dies my cause with fail of henchman's quick axe;
My blood may flow as if pressed from a syringe,
But Truth you bury not with spade and pickaxe." Maison Blanc.

Last September clumsy workmen "played old Harry" with my thick Ax-
Minster carpet, dropping on it bricks and mortar, spade and pickaxe;
'Twas past repair; you might as well try quenching fire with a syringe,
Or, as Polonius suggested, catching woodcock with a sp(i)ringe. Whig.

The navvy aloft with a swing wields his pickaxe;
The gard'ner on insects full drives with his syringe;
The hewer can't work when his "Davy" a wick lacks;
His wife says the hinge on his lamp-door is her hinge. Culpepper.

Yesterday we did inter Inge—
Some one killed him with a syringe.
We no more shall see him stick hacks,
Rendered powerless by his pickaxe. Felixicus.

This is mischief, I aver—hinge
Off my house-door with a pickaxe
Has been broken, and my syringe
Has been found between the brick-hacks. Felixicus.

You axe how it did occur, Inge?
Why, he struck me with a pickaxe,
And then soaked me with a syringe.
I don't know—you'd better Dick ax.
Felixicus.

I will give, without demur, hinge,
Greenhouse door, and garden syringe
For that very little pickaxe
You picked up between the brick-hacks.
Felixicus.

She stammered and was deaf; said the doctor, "Try a syringe."
But "oh!" she cried, "I cannot, 'twill wet and spoil my fringe."
Then in rage she stamped about and knocked down all the nick-nacks,
And chipped off bits of statuettes with the gardener's pickaxe. Risk.

The safe defied Sikes to get at the nick-nacks
Within it; he tried both with jemmy and pickaxe.
Said he, "'Taint no good; with a squirt or a syringe
I might as well try to get open this 'ere 'inge."
Cradle.

Of getting your guineas my hopes, my dear sir, hinge,
On clearing my brains by a strong mental syringe;
Each effort I make, my poor cranium, so thick, racks,
I'd more easily earn the amount with a pickaxe.
New Zealand.

Said Lord Dundreary, "If I had a squiringe,*
I'd souse that fellah wielding such a quick axe."
The man on whom he wished to use the syringe
Was damaging his stone wall with a pickaxe.
Excelsior.

* Combination of squirt and syringe, à la Dundreary.

When roads unrolled disturbed by pickaxe
Indent your tire with stone and brick hacks,
In vain your hopes you will, I fear, hinge,
When miles from home, upon your syringe.
Kilburn.

In Scottish head with hypodermic syringe
We might, perhaps, a joke or story queer inj-
Ect, were not its armour plating thick, acc-
Essible to nothing but a pickaxe.
Kilburn.

O, Captain Wells! type of sad sighs and sick achs,
Could thy syringe my love's fire inj-
Ure, or thy fireman's pickaxe? Kilburn.

Pickaxe and syringe, syringe and pickaxe!
I must find you a rhyme—though my brain too thick cracks;
Though a god vainly wooed hollow-hearted syringe,
Aid the lyre of us mortals who lowlier cringe.
Musafir.

Quoth John, "There's something wrong with hose and syringe
Used on this Turkish plant—perhaps some queer hinge Wants oiling. Stay! dead branches need a thick axe."
"Lop not," said Bill, the gardener, "where's your pickaxe?" Vivia.

Angelina, leave thy nick-nacks
Ere torrid suns thy ros'ry singe;
Fieldward Edwin strides with pickaxe,
Grasp thy hose and ply thy syringe!
Co.

The curling fern I sprinkle with my syringe,
The verbena, and the creeper climbing thick, acc-
Epting for its home the grotto ne'er inj-
Ured yet by mason's chisel, saw, or pickaxe.
Antique.

Believe me, dear TRUTH, that your effort to stir ing-
Genuity up for a neat rhyme to syringe,
My unfortunate brain, till it really is sick, racks;
And I can't dig one out, unless armed with a "pickaxe. New Zealand.

Said an Irish professor, collector of nick-nacks,
Intensely I long for a primeval pickaxe;
And sure for a genuine prehistoric syringe,
To my bitterest rival and foe I would c-r-r-ringe.
Aquila.

Upon a fair maid's verdict two lovers' hopes, sir, hinge;
One deftly waters plants and shrubs with a large syringe.
The other one, with a pick, the earth around quick hacks.
Who'll win? 'Knight of the syringe or knight of the pickaxe? Tommy Atkins.

MOLLY'S INVITATION.

Said Molly to Mike, "Put away that ould pickaxe,
Your trowel, and spade, and that splashering syringe:
I'm going with Betty to town for some nick-nacks,
A ribbon and hairpin or two for my fir-ringe."
K. W.

In London's Tower I saw the cruel quick axe,
That cut short noble lives—less base the pickaxe
Which crushes lifeless stones with noise and whirringe,
Scattering them wide, like water-sprays from syringe. Esperanza.

On our letters of old we used often to nick wax
With a crest well impressed—say an anchor or pickaxe,
And if deaf we had sometimes recourse to a syringe,
The wax to relax; oh! the thought makes me c-r-r-ringe. Pelican.

We are asked to make sense out of nonsense, and to furnish a rhyme for syringe;
Why not ask us to find out the use of a gate that has got ne'er a hinge?
Then, again, we are asked to discover a rhyme for a navvy's pickaxe,
So I'll go to my room and look over a box where I keep some nick-nacks. Pelican.

Deaf? Wax in ears, doctor said, fetch a syringe;
Out ran the nurse for it, her name it was Birringe,
Came back, in a joke, with the garden pickaxe,
Said, this will be best to break up the thick wax.
Aquila.

An elderly gentleman proposes to a young lady, who does not take the matter seriously. Scene:—A greenhouse, with vines, &c. The new hinges of the door attract the lady's attention at the eventful moment.

"Ax, Ma!" she said—"O! that's a nicer (h)inge—
Ax, Ma! You darling old stick, Ax!
Those vines have fly; so give me my syringe,
There, stupid, by the big pickaxe."
Gylippus.

The gate was jammed! No oil, no syringe
Had I, and so I used a pickaxe.
It opened, but I left a queer hinge,
And, I must own, a very sick axe.
Trocar.

THE FAITHLESS FRAULEIN: OR, THE PICKAXE AND THE SYRINGE.

Maximilian swore to make her cringe,
Dug her grave with spade and pickaxe;
But the maid, with pail and syringe,
Cooled the rage of love-sick Max.
Waynflete.

Old Mo.'s in the shop, if you're seeking nick-nacks.
Do your door need a knocker or hinge?
His stock is most varied—pot, pan, or pickaxe,
From a bicycle to a syringe. Waverley.

EUROPA LOQITUR.

O Sultan, see my nick-nacks,
Warships, shot, shell, and Derring-
Ers, coffin, spade and pickaxe!
Your country needs a syringe.
Myrah.

How oft on solemn things doth something queer hinge!
A man was hacked to pieces with a pickaxe.
The doctors tried transfusion with a syringe,
They failed; and some one on his tomb did stick Pax. Enyap.

Will you please, my ear to syringe?
From the clock I hear no tick-tacks;
Did you say "'Twas gone to Gorringe?"
I can't even hear that pickaxe.
Qu'Appelle.

I have a lamp, but it a wick lacks,
So it gives no more light than a pickaxe;
It's about as useful as a broken syringe,
Or a prison door, minus lock or hinge.
Lord Howe.

See how the sturdy rustic whacks,
The frozen pond with sharp pickaxe;
Then see him weakly quickly cr-r-ringe,
When the water spurts as from a syringe.
Llwslly.

To make a Scotchman humorous, the surgeon, bold, quick acts,
Putting humour in Scotty's head by means of a pickaxe;
And, as on his being successful, his name and fame, sir, hinge,
He injects humour in his blood, by means of a syringe. Tommy Atkins.

Answers have been received from: — Truth, Eglantine, Lyswys, Felixicus, Iota, Go Ahead, Selah, Felsberg, Noel, Heurteloup, Leveuball, Aquila, La Fleche, Llwslly, Crofter, New Zealand, Silver Mell, J. McGrigor Allan, Cast'ecomer, Broad Yorkshire, Salop, Lauriston, Philalethes. Troy, Mistletoe, Bobbins, Thirty Six, Maison Blanc, Tommy Atkins, Pluto, Senex, Antique, Xid, Tucharn, Co, Cradle, Emerald, Charles Harebell, Jingle, Scrivener, Jap, La Plata, Kingston, Venture, Blanche, Audley, Fritz, Christie Deas, Lloyd, Woss, Oom Paul, Fiurnus, Whig, Almaviva, Snooker, Plaitch, Bel Demonio, Joan, Porridge, Orlando, Henriette, Ace of Clubs, K.W., Jeannie, Camoens, Waverley, Erico, Black Poodle, St. Neiac, Turbox, I Fortunatu, Eromdarb, Nusskirk, Norfolk, Mr. Perrott, A. T. Bennett, Tristran, Lord Howe, Dan, Plumepierre, J. T., Coalheaver, Gylippus, Relwof, Cottager, Alastor, Gervase, M. Campbell, Lawson, Trocar, Waynflete, E. J., A. A. G., Tibicen, Hammond, Krukatoa, Risk, W. Todhuan, January, Viva, Esperanza, Excelsior, Toomevarn, Chilperic, Derfla, Culpepper, Aidee, Shamrock, Rex, Cortl au, Qu'Appelle, Marplot, Oceanian, T. Pot, M C D., Kilburn, E. E. B., Dosser, Holly, Gravella, Myrah, Edgcome, Syringe, Clou, Antelope. Carlos, Noiram, A. A. A. A. Fennytone, W. G. B., Ethmoid, Yiezil, Skye, Carfax, Tulip, Pentland

CHRISTMAS DOUBLE NUMBER.
Now Ready. Price 1s.
THE WOMAN AT HOME
for DECEMBER

Contains Interesting Sketches of
THE DAUGHTERS of QUEEN VICTORIA.
By SARAH A. TOOLEY and MARIE A. BELLOC.
THE EMPRESS FREDERICK.
PRINCESS ALICE. | PRINCESS LOUISE.
PRINCESS HELENA. | PRINCESS BEATRICE.
Magnificently Illustrated with beautiful Art Reproductions of 41 Portraits.

IAN MACLAREN'S CHRISTMAS STORY.
DR. DAVIDSON'S CHRISTMAS at DRUMTOCHTY.
By IAN MACLAREN.

ANNIE S. SWAN'S CHRISTMAS STORY.
THE COLONEL'S CHRISTMAS.
By ANNIE S. SWAN.

A FULLY ILLUSTRATED ARTICLE ON
LORD WOLSELEY. By One Who Knows Him.

AN UNEXPECTED LEGACY. Illustrated. By ADA CAMBRIDGE.
THE TRUTH ABOUT LADY BELVEDERE. Illustrated. By PAUL SEATON.
Mr. AUGUSTUS HARE AT HOLMHURST. Illustrated. By FRANCIS H LOW.
A NEW JOURNALIST. Illustrated. By ROBERT H. SHERARD.
&c., &c, &c.
London: HODDER & STOUGHTON, 27, Paternoster-row, E.C.

The most popular and most appreciative since 20 years.
FRANZ
JOSEF
Aperient
Water is the BEST.
The only Palatable Natural Aperient Water.

Crown 8vo, cloth, 3s. 6d. A NEW NOVEL, by HELEN MATHERS, Author of "Coming thro' the Rye," Ready Next Week, entitled
THE JUGGLER AND THE SOUL.

This day 1s. for Christmas Parties, Drawing-room Entertainments, &c.
SHORT PLAYS AND CHARADES
for young people, original, highly amusing, and only the simplest properties required.

SKEFFINGTON & SON, Piccadilly, London.

JUST PUBLISHED.
THE CHARIOT
OF THE FLESH.
A Novel.
By HEDLEY PEEK.

LAWRENCE & BULLEN, Ltd., 16, Henrietta-street, Covent Garden, London.
LONGMANS, GREEN, & CO., New York.

A Bad Complexion

4d

is often due to a bad soap.

BLOTCHES ARE REPULSIVE, AND WILL MAR THE APPEARANCE OF ANY FACE. YOU CAN'T GET RID OF THEM WITH BAD SOAP.

VINOLIA

IS A

COMPLEXION

4d

SOAP.

VINOLIA CREAM.—For Itching, Eczema, Face Spots, &c., 1/1½ and 1/9.
VINOLIA POWDER.—For Roughness, Redness, Toilet, &c., 1/1 and 1/9.

The Mutual Life Insurance Co. Of New York

Assets . . . exceed . . . 45 Millions Sterling.

INSURES AN INCOME

During Lifetime of Insured.

Life Policies - - - - - - - at 3½ per cent.
Life Option Endowments - at 4 „
Consols - - - - - - - - at 6 „

After Death of Insured.

Continuous Instalment - -
Debenture - - - - - - -
20 Year Bond - - - - -
} at 5 per cent.

Apply for Particulars to any of the Branch Offices, or to Head Office for the United Kingdom—

D. C. HALDEMAN,
GENERAL MANAGER,
17 & 18, CORNHILL, LONDON, E.C.

A WONDERFUL MEDICINE!

BEECHAM'S PILLS

Have been before the Public for more than fifty years, and have now the greatest sale of any Proprietary article. This has been achieved without the publication of testimonials, the convincing fact is, that BEECHAM'S PILLS RECOMMEND THEMSELVES.

WORTH A GUINEA A BOX

FOR ALL
Bilious & Nervous Disorders
SUCH AS
Sick Headache, Constipation, Weak Stomach, Impaired Digestion, Disordered Liver and Female Ailments.

Annual Sale, SIX MILLION BOXES.

Sold everywhere in boxes 9½d., 13½d. and 2/9 each.

STRAINED VISION.

DISTRESSING HEADACHES, indigestion, simulated neuralgia, and nervous depression, are frequently caused by some peculiarity of the Vision, which can at once be overcome by the use of proper glasses. See "OUR EYES" (Now in its Sixteenth Edition), price 1s.; by JOHN BROWNING, F.R.A.S., F.R.M.S., President of the British Optical Association, &c.
Or consult, free of charge—
MR. JOHN BROWNING,
OPHTHALMIC OPTICIAN,
63, STRAND, LONDON, W.C.

ROYAL EXCHANGE ASSURANCE.

SETTLEMENT POLICIES
Guaranteeing FIVE PER CENT. on the sum assured. No Trustees Required.
DEATH DUTIES
Provided for by a small annual payment through life.
ANNUITIES
Special Terms for Impaired Lives.

For Rates, apply to the Secretary,
Chief Office—ROYAL EXCHANGE, LONDON.

RUBINAT.

BEST

RUBINAT.

APERIENT.

Source Dr. Llorach.—SPANISH APERIENT MINERAL WATER. Dr. WEX, Official Chemist to the town of Hamburg, places Rubinat before the most vaunted of the German purgative waters. Is invaluable in all gout and intestinal complaints.

—Has none of the drastic and ofttimes irritating effects of other waters, which chiefly depend for their action upon magnesian salts of which they are largely composed.

E. GALLAIS & CO.,
90, Piccadilly, London, W.

RIDE SWIFT CYCLES

They are manufactured by the pioneer firm of the cycle industry, and the result of a quarter of a century's experience by practical cyclists and experts, which is responsible for the world-wide reputation of these famous machines.

THE SWIFT CYCLE CO., LTD.
(LATE COVENTRY MACHINISTS' CO.)

Showrooms—15 & 16, HOLBORN VIADUCT, E.C. WORKS IN COVENTRY.

Printed for the Proprietor by WYMAN & SONS, Limited, Great Queen-st. W.C. and published at 10, Bolt-ct. Fleet-st. E.C. in the Parish of St. Dunstan's-in-the-West, in the City of London. Cheques and Post Office Orders should be made payable to REGINALD E. BOOKER, "Truth" Buildings, Carteret-st. Queen Anne's-gate, S.W.

• TRUTH •

"Cultores Veritatis Fraudis Inimici."—Cicero.

No. 1040. Vol. XL. Thursday, December 3, 1896. Price Sixpence.

NOTICE.

The Twentieth Christmas Number of TRUTH,

ENTITLED

LIHUNGISMS,

IS READY THIS DAY,

(Thursday, December 3.)

PRICE ONE SHILLING.

It is profusely illustrated by Mr. R. A. Brownlie and Mr. Roland Hill.

The illustrations include FOUR DOUBLE-PAGE CARTOONS and TWO SINGLE-PAGE CARTOONS (printed in colours):—

1. Checkmate.
2. Right v. Might.
3. Changing the Leader.
4. Motormania.
5. A Good Joke. (From Mr. Cecil Rhodes' point of view.)
6. A Good Joke. (From Dr. Jameson's point of view.)

In response to various communications which reach me on the subject, I beg to notify that the terms of Subscription to Truth, which are payable in advance, are as follows:—To any address in the United Kingdom, for 3 months, 7s.; 6 months, 14s.; and for 12 months, 28s. The Thin Paper Edition is forwarded to countries within the Postal Union for 3 months for 7s. 8d.; 6 months, 15s. 4d.; and 12 months, 30s. 8d. Cheques and Post Office Orders should be made payable to the Manager, Truth, "Truth Building," Carteret-street, S.W.

ENTRE NOUS.

My faith in the kindness of the fair readers of Truth has been again abundantly justified. A fortnight ago I had to announce that, in consequence of the crowded state of the Fever Hospitals, the demand for dolls would this Christmas be greater than ever; and I added that a further supply had therefore been obtained. The whole of this supplementary consignment has been since applied for by ladies who have undertaken to dress the dolls in time for the Exhibition at the Albert Hall on the 16th and 17th inst., and I must sincerely thank all those who thus came so promptly to the rescue.

So far, then, so good; but the rest of my tale this week is not so encouraging. Those who are labouring with their brains and fingers to make the Truth Show a success are doing their duty most generously, but few of those who usually put their hands in their pockets to ensure the completeness of the Christmas distribution of Toys have as yet done so. Subscriptions are coming in with exceptional slowness; a state of affairs all the more disquieting when it is remembered that the demands made this year by the Hospital and Workhouse authorities are unprecedentedly great. It is now December 3; on the 16th the Show opens at the Albert Hall. If, then, that Show is to assume its usual proportions it is absolutely necessary that the Toy Fund shall have reached a total of £1,000 in the course of the next ten days. Toys cannot, unfortunately, be evolved for the occasion from one's inner consciousness. They have to be bought in the open market for hard cash, and it is high time, I may add, that they were purchased.

The matter is, indeed, such an easily intelligible one that there is no need to multiply words about it. On the one hand, are the twenty-nine thousand children eagerly awaiting their Christmas Toys. On the other are you, the readers of Truth. I am simply the medium of communication between you and them. What is your message to be?

The following amounts have been received since the previous list:—

C. A. R. Hoare, £3; Friends at Cromer, 3s. 6d.; M. S. B., Brighton, 5s.; Lady Lucas, £1. 1s.; Capt. W. Luard (in foreign notes), £2. 11s. 7d.; G. J. J., £2. 2s.: U. S., £1; E. G., £1. 1s.; G. and A. H., 10s.; R. and E. H. B., £3. 3s.; A. H. H., £2. 2s.; T. K., £2; Four Children P. L. A., £4. 4s.; Mrs. L'Amy, £1; L. H. P., 10s.; Vernon and Bertie, £1: Hibernian, 5s.; Dresden, £1. 1.; Emmie, £5; Myfanwy and Vera, 10s.; S. S., £5; H. J. M., £3; R. G. H., 2s. 6d.; Constance Gertrude Duke Scrivener, £1; James Britten, £1. 1s.; A. Bachelor, £2. 2s.; In Memory of Mrs. F. J. Horniman, £10; Adolph Hirsch, £10; W. B. Cregoe-Colmore, £10. 10s.; Reginal Ward Poole, £1. 1s.

It is not surprising that Prince Bismarck's revelations of secret history are exciting both annoyance and apprehension at our own Court. The Queen and Prince Albert corresponded for many years very confidentially, respecting all political and family affairs, with the late Emperor William; and it is understood that most of their letters, either original or copies, are in the possession of Prince Bismarck, who was allowed to deal as he pleased with all the late Sovereign's papers, both during his lifetime and for more than a year after his death.

There is to be a great gathering of the Royal Family at Osborne about the middle of January, when the Battenberg Memorial Chapel in Whippingham Church is to be dedicated by the Bishop of Winchester.

It was a mistake for the Queen to invite Mr. Bayard to dine and sleep at Windsor Castle on "Thanksgiving Day," when the American Ambassador had an official engagement in London; but it is stupid ignorance for an evening journal to blame the Lord Steward for the blunder, Lord Pembroke having no more to do with the affair than the Lord Chancellor or the Bishop of Oxford. These invitations are sent out by the Master of the Household, and the Corps Diplomatique are summoned to the Palace according to a regular rota.

The Prince and Princess of Wales and Princess Victoria, the Duke and Duchess of Coburg, the Duke and Duchess of Connaught, Princess Louise and Lord Lorne, the Duke and Duchess of York, and the Duchess of Albany, are to be the guests of the Queen at Windsor Castle from Saturday evening, the 12th, until after luncheon on Monday, the 14th. On the 14th at eleven o'clock, the Queen and the Royal Family are, as usual, to attend a memorial service in the Frogmore Mausoleum, which will be conducted by the Bishop of Winchester and the Dean of Windsor, while the hymns and anthem are to be sung by the choir of St. George's Chapel.

The Duke and Duchess of Coburg are to leave Clarence House towards the end of next week for Coburg, where they will entertain a family party during the Christmas holidays at their place in the town. The Duke of Coburg is going to the South of Europe in February for a couple of months, and the Duchess will then pay a visit to her eldest daughter, the Crown Princess of Roumania, at Bucharest.

The St. James's Gazette announced last week the impending betrothal of the King of Servia and Princess Alexandra of Coburg. The story was manifestly a mere fabrication for obvious reasons, to which may be added the trifling fact that Princess Alexandra was married about seven months ago to the Hereditary Prince of Hohenlohe-Langenburg.

I hear that the Duke of Fife is to figure in the New Year's-day list of honours, when he is to be created an extra Knight of the Garter, and he will be granted a special remainder, under which his principal titles will pass to his eldest daughter, in default of male issue.

The Duke of Cambridge is going to the Riviera early in January, and he will probably pay another visit to Egypt, returning to England at the end of April. A weekly journal states that the Duke is allowed by the Queen to occupy Gloucester House rent free. As a matter of fact, Gloucester House is not a Crown residence, but it is the private property of the Duke of of Cambridge, as it was bequeathed to him, with its contents, by his aunt the Duchess of Gloucester (Princess Mary), who died in 1857.

Up to the end of last week the Military Knights of Windsor on the Lower Foundation had not received the modest dole due to them on Michaelmas Day. Such dilatoriness in dealing with men who can ill afford to wait for their money is in the highest degree reprehensible. Who is the culprit, and what is his excuse?

For the Truth Hotel List, see page 1466 in the present issue.
For Hospitals and Appeals, see page 1464.
For Amusements, see page 1465.
For Our Puzzles, see page 1485.

Lord Bridport and Sir Edmund Commerell are next Tuesday to replace Lord Lawrence and Colonel Browne as Lord and Groom in Waiting on the Queen at Windsor Castle, and they will be on duty until the 22nd, when they are to be succeeded by Lord Ranfurly and Lord William Cecil, whose attendances last until January 5.

A correspondent points out that, whatever the rules of the Order of the Golden Fleece may be on the subject of every knight producing a Roman Catholic pedigree for eight generations back, it is quite certain that this rule has never been observed in practice. Among reigning European Sovereigns who wear the Austrian Order are the Emperor of Russia, the German Emperor, the Kings of Denmark, Norway and Sweden, Bavaria, Greece, and Saxony, and the Sultan of Turkey. The Prince of Wales also holds the Order. From this it is clear that in practice the Order is not limited to Roman Catholics, nor even to Christians.

Lord Caledon must have been astonished to read in a contemporary that he "has been elected a Representative Peer in the place of the late Lord Limerick." Lord Caledon has been an Irish Representative Peer for more than nineteen years. Lord Limerick was never a Representative Peer, for he sat in the House of Lords as Baron Foxford, a United Kingdom Peerage, which was created in 1815.

Yet another addition is made this week to the ever-increasing list of first-class West End hotels. The old Coburg Hotel, at the corner of Mount-street, Grosvenor-square, which disappeared a few months ago in the course of the improvements being carried out on this part of the Duke of Westminster's property, has now risen again in a palatial style, and is to be opened to visitors to-day (Wednesday). The new Coburg is externally quite in keeping with the splendid architecture which is making Mount-street one of the handsomest thoroughfares in London; and internally it offers everything in the way of taste and luxury that Messrs. Maple & Co. can supply, or that princes and millionaires could ask for.

The Brighton and Rottingdean Seashore Electric Railway has at last been opened to the public. If not quite what the Chairman claimed it to be, "the eighth wonder of the world," it is sufficiently curious to elicit a vast amount of speculation—principally as to its use. On going aboard the one car which constitutes the train, and, is capable of accommodating some 150 passengers, it is absolutely impossible to determine whether one has undertaken a land journey or a sea voyage, and this perplexity will haunt the average passenger during the whole hour of his transit to and from Rottingdean, unless, being of a nervous temperament, mal de mer should definitely settle the question for him. Brighton, in fact, is the gainer of another sensation which may be placed in the category of Great Wheels, Eiffel Towers, &c.

The Sanitary Engineering Co. (Carter Bros.), 65, Victoria-st., Westminster, for making Sanitary Surveys in London or country.

Women are wonderful beings when they associate themselves together. There is a Ladies' Cyclist Association, the members of which seem to have enforced a dress upon all connected with it. They were to be skirtless. Against this rule the minority has now objected, and successfully. Vainly the Secretary complained that "skirt riders are narrow-minded." The Association has had to allow those of its members who please, to wear the badge of narrow-mindedness. I really believe that, if women were to obtain votes, elections would turn upon some question connected with petticoats or bonnets; nor would they be contented with sumptuary laws in regard to their own dress, but they would insist on all men arraying themselves in some particular garb as a condition of voting for them. I tremble for my trousers; for the Highland costume is picturesque, and possibly I might be called upon by ladies of my constituency to don it.

A correspondent at one of the London clubs thinks that if I were to draw attention in TRUTH to the cruelty resulting from the use of bearing reins, it would do something towards lessening that cruelty. Evidently this gentleman is not a reader of TRUTH, or he would know that no subject has been more frequently dealt with in these columns; and also that my efforts have not been altogether in vain. There is plenty of room still for improvement in the prevailing fashion, but so far as I can judge, there is a growing opinion against bearing reins, and I trust it may continue to grow.

A year or two ago I took up the matter of the Royal Buckhounds in TRUTH, for I have always thought that anything with less of the redeeming features of sport than to cart a tame deer to some spot, turn it out, hunt it with dogs, and having hunted it down, put it back in its cart for another day's "sport," cannot well be conceived. When I was engaged in this crusade, I received many letters assuring me that the deer liked being pursued by dogs, although how the animals conveyed their singular idea of pleasure to the writers of the letters was not explained to me. Now that the Bishops have joined the crusade we may hope that the cruel tomfoolery of this Royal Hunt will soon cease.

The country unquestionably pays the costs. The salary of the Master of the Buckhounds (£1,200 per annum) is always enjoyed by a nobleman, the occupant of the post changing with a change of Ministers; besides this, there are salaries to huntsmen, whips, and others, the purchase and keep of horses and hounds, &c. I should suppose that the total outlay must be about £3,000 per annum. This is defrayed, it is true, from the Civil List. But when the amount needed to maintain the Sovereign was investigated, in order to arrive at the total necessary, this expenditure was included in the estimate. Strictly speaking, therefore, if the Civil List were relieved of this charge, the List should be reduced by the amount of the charge on it. I do not, however, think that this point is worth raising, in view of the desirability of this pack of hounds being discontinued. Her Majesty, therefore, would be the gainer through its abolition of £3,000 per annum.

It is suggested by the Bishops that the quarry should cease to be a deer, and should henceforward be a red herring. But the idea, as an attribute of Majesty, of the Sovereign keeping a lot of dogs to run after a red-herring, is childish. As a matter of fact, the question can be raised on the Estimates. The salaries of the Commissioners of Woods and Forests are voted each year. These Commissioners have the administration of the Crown Lands, and they present a detailed account of the receipts and expenditure of their departments each year. Generally in this account one of the items of expenditure is the maintenance of the Royal Kennels at Ascot, in which the deerhounds are lodged. It is open, therefore, to any M.P. to move a reduction of the salaries of the Commissioners, explaining that this is done in order to raise the question of the abolition of the Royal Hunt.

The Master of the Buckhounds enjoys the privilege of giving tickets for the Royal Enclosure on Ascot racecourse. It is the dream of every woman, who is struggling for social recognition in the charmed circles of fashion, to get into this Enclosure, and to condole with her friends who have failed to obtain the entry. To be the angel at the gate of this Paradise, with power to exclude or to admit the Peris disconsolate outside, adds, doubtless, an additional charm to the £1,200 attached to the Mastership. Moreover, the Master is part of the pageant of the Royal procession up the Ascot course. Arrayed in all his glory, and seated on a fine horse, he precedes the outriders to the carriages, filling all spectators with admiration for him and his horse. Lord Coventry, the Master of the Buckhounds, insists that there is no cruelty involved in the Royal pack. He would be more practical were he to explain why he should receive £1,200 per annum for occupying his post. If really we wish to encourage hunting by means of a subsidy, most sportsmen would agree that fox-hunting is more sportsmanlike than chasing a tame deer, and that consequently a subsidised pack of foxhounds, with the best huntsman of the county as their master, would be better than subsidised deer hounds with the mastership given to a Peer, who, beyond voting for his Party, has never done any political work, good, bad, or indifferent.

One man's meat is another man's poison, and this holds equally true in respect to amusements. There are three pleasures that I have never understood, (1) to go to a large public dinner, and, after eating much, to listen to many speeches; (2) to go to a large evening party, struggle up stairs, hang about for half an hour in a crowd, and then to struggle down stairs; (3) to stand at some point and to shoot down tame pheasants that are put up by beaters. They are respectively an abuse of eating, of social intercourse, and of sport. Last week the Prince of Wales and a select party visited Blenheim. The Daily Graphic favoured us with sketches of the sport. In one the Prince is shooting pheasants, in the other rabbits, and the Duke of Marlborough is at his side superintending the slaughter, arrayed in the garb of the circus gentleman who converses with the clown and receives the lady in his arms, when she leaps from her horse after jumping through hoops. In one "shoot" 2,000 pheasants were slain. And this is called sport! For my part I regard the poacher who goes forth in the dark with a dog, and comes back with a few pheasants, as much more of a sportsman than the battue shot.

FIRE PROTECTION OF COUNTRY HOUSES.—Merryweathers' system. Economy, convenience, efficiency. Illustrated particulars post free.—Write MERRYWEATHERS, 63, Long-acre, London.

Probably the majority of English Judges know more of law than of the "De Imitatione Christi," but Mr. Lawson Walton, before explaining to Judges what the book is, would do well to acquire a little more knowledge of it than he seems to have. "It is," he said, in the case of Lady Scott, "part of English literature." He might just as well have claimed Homer as part of English literature. Thomas à Kempis, its supposed author, was born in Kempen. He passed almost his entire life in an Augustinian monastery in the diocese of Utrecht, and died there in 1471. The second supposed author was John Gerson, Chancellor of the University of Paris; the third, John Geson, an Abbot, and the respective claims have been the subject of numberless disputes among the learned. It has remained for Mr. Lawson Walton to claim the book as a part of English literature. I am curious to know whom he regards as its author. A foolish claim to the authorship was once put forward for Hilton, an English monk, but this has been long abandoned.

Sir Edward Poynter is to be entertained at dinner this (Wednesday) evening by the Royal Societies Club, among the guests expected being the Danish Minister and representatives of the United States, Italian, and Swedish Embassies, Cardinal Vaughan, Sir Edwin Arnold, and a large contingent of Royal Academicians, including Messrs. Alma Tadema, Thorneycroft, Goodall, Mac Whirter, Orchardson, Solomon, and Richmond.

In reference to some remarks in last week's TRUTH on the opposition to the Alexandra Park licence, Mr. John Hawke, of the Anti-Gambling League, tells me that although the petition had of necessity to be drawn in form as a petition against the licence, the only object of it was to obtain a condition controlling the ready-money professional betting. "Our respect for the liberty of the subject," writes Mr. Hawke, "always has stood and always will stand in the way of any thought on our part of obtaining or using legal enactments against individual betting, however much we may regret its prevalence." This will be good news to many betting men.

Mr. Hawke also tells me that his Society has already stopped some of the advertisements of foreign lotteries which were mentioned in last week's TRUTH, and that they will be prepared to deal with any others which may be brought to their notice. I suppose, therefore, that I was right as to the law on this point. Can anybody enlighten me on another point under the Lottery Acts which I raised last week—namely, whether it is legal to sell in this country tickets for a foreign or Irish lottery?

TO THE "QUIET SUNDAY SOCIETY."

O members of the "Q.S.S.,"
  We duly note the ardent labours
By which you're seeking to secure
  A "Quiet Sunday" for your neighbours:
But, granting quiet is a boon,
  Why strive you to restrict to Sundays
What's good for Fridays, Saturdays—
  For Thursdays, Wednesdays, Tuesdays, Mondays?

The striking clocks that clang the hours
  When most of us are wooing slumber;
The whistles shrill which call for cabs
  In such an aggravating number;
The barking dogs that bay the moon,
  The crowing roosters which be-speak day,
Are bad enough on Sunday, true—
  But are they less so on a week-day?

Quite recently you pounced upon
  A milkman who, despite your warnings,
Persisted in his strident cry
  Of "Milk below!" on Sunday mornings.
So far so good; but we submit
  That needlessly your aims you fetter;
If only you would farther go.
  You'd do a very great deal better.

Milk's a necessity of life,
  Nothing can fitly supersede it;
There's not a day throughout the year
  That equally we do not need it.
So, if on week-days it is right
  That milkmen at our door should bawl it,
It follows, past all argument,
  It's right on Sundays, too, to call it!

But if there be no actual need
  For milkmen, when they milk deliver,
To herald their approach with cries
  Which cause the sensitive to shiver;
'Tis surely weakness to attempt
  To silent these, our noisy brothers,
On one day only of the week,
  And let them shout on all the others.

Quiet has no especial claim
  To be reserved for Sunday piety;
So, amplify, we pray of you,
  The raison d'être of your Society.
Widen its present narrow scope,
  And earn all London's warmest gratitude,
By taking for the time to come
  A much more comprehensive attitude.

Resolve, in short, to claim as yours
  A more alluring appellation,
Achieving future triumphs as
  A "Quiet Week Association;"
Nerved by a seven-fold confidence
  To make a most determined raid on
All sorts and kinds of needless noise,
  Whatever be the day 'tis made on.

"Sabbath desecration" and "Lord's Day observance" appear to have been the burning questions at the Scotch municipal elections, and if the silly bigots of the north were to have their own way, it is clear that there would be neither trains, trams, omnibuses, nor cabs to be had on Sundays, and public parks, and even gasworks, would be rigorously closed.

Last week the Dean and Chapter of Canterbury went through the ridiculous and contemptible farce of formally electing Bishop Temple to the Primacy. These reverend dignitaries, having prayed to Heaven for guidance in their choice, proceeded, as a matter of course, to elect the prelate whose name had been sent to them by the Crown. The whole function is a queer jumble of mummery and profanity. If the Dean and Chapter had been left to themselves, it is absolutely certain that Bishop Temple would not have been their choice; so that the result of the heavenly guidance is that they have made an election which they do not really approve of. A Dean and Chapter cannot refuse to elect the divine whose name is sent to them without incurring the very gravest penalties, so there is really no affinity with reason in the function, and it only goes on because it provides fees for a number of clerical and lay officials. In 1847 the Church of England protested en masse against the appointment of Dr. Hampden to the See of Hereford, and when the Dean informed Lord John Russell (Prime Minister) that he would oppose the "election," he was warned against breaking the law, and Prince Albert actually urged Lord John to prosecute Dr. Merewether for contumacy.

The Pall Mall Gazette informed its readers last Thursday that Dr. Temple "will shortly pay homage to the Queen, and at the same time be sworn of the Privy Council." As a matter of fact, Dr. Temple has been a member of the Privy Council for nearly twelve years, for he was sworn in directly after his appointment to the See of London. The Bishop of London is a Privy Councillor ex officio. Dr. Temple is to "pay homage" to the Queen at Osborne during the first week in January, at the same time as the new Bishop of London. This ceremony cannot take place until after both elections have been formally confirmed at Bow Church. Dr. Temple will vacate the See of London on the 22nd, and any preferment in the gift of the Bishop, which may fall vacant after that day until Bishop Creighton has done homage, will pass to the Crown.

An Archbishop of Canterbury has to pay out nearly £900 in fees before he can be enthroned. The Officials of the Board of Green Cloth, the Gentleman Usher of the Black Rod, the Clerk of Parliament, the Auditor of the Dean and Chapter of Canterbury, the Yeoman Usher of the Black Rod, and the doorkeepers of the House of Lords all profit by a vacancy in the Primacy. No sooner are these cormorants satisfied than a new Archbishop has to pay a very large sum as security for the library and heirlooms at Lambeth Palace.

By the way, the office of Secretary to the Board of Green Cloth is to be vacated at the end of the month by Mr. Thomas March, who is retiring after sixty years' service in the Household. This place, which is under the Lord Steward, is a sinecure, with a salary of £1,200 a year, and it will probably be abolished by the Queen, in which case the amount which will thus be saved out of the Civil List ought to be returned to the Treasury.

The Rev. Archibald Campbell, minister of the parish church of Crathie, and the Queen's Domestic Chaplain in Scotland, has been compelled to resign his charge, on account of ill-health. Dr. Campbell is a great favourite with the Queen, and the manse at Crathie, the parish in which Balmoral is situated, is full of tokens of the esteem in which he has always been held by her Majesty and other members of the Royal Family.

Dean Pigou has also been seriously ill, and is still confined to his room at the Deanery, Bristol. It is unlikely that he will be able to attend to any duty again before the New Year.

A curious state of ecclesiastical affairs is just now to be seen in the parish of Walsoken, in Norfolk. Since the beginning of November, the rector, the Rev. John Young, has ceased to officiate in the parish church, and his place has been taken by a curate, who, on his arrival, publicly informed the congregation that he had been sent by the Bishop to minister to their spiritual wants for an indefinite time. In the meanwhile, the rector has, I understand, betaken himself to a building in a remote corner of the parish which has not been used, at any rate for religious services, for a long time past, and there he is conducting divine worship. An incident in which the Rector of Walsoken was concerned came under notice in Truth on April 16 last, in connection with a public apology which the rector had offered, under pressure, to a gentleman residing in the neighbourhood. It is generally understood that the arrangement above described is the result of further pressure which the Bishop has brought to bear in order to terminate an ecclesiastical scandal, and, if that view of the matter is correct, Bishop Sheepshanks deserves all possible praise for the tact and success with which he has handled the matter.

After all the ecclesiastical trumpeting about the brilliant success of the Shrewsbury Church Congress, it must be a direful disappointment to the guarantors to find themselves called upon to pay five shillings in the pound. The practical lesson for the managers of such assemblies is that places should be selected where there is a suitable hall for meetings, instead of it being necessary

Winter Season, 1896.—How can last year's Sealskin Jacket be made to do duty as a fashionable garment for the present season? Take it to the International Fur Store, either 163 or 198, Regent-street, where special attention is given to remodelling these most useful garments. Perfect fit, great attention, and moderate charges may be relied upon. The only addresses of the International Fur Store (Jay's, Ltd.) are 163 and 198, Regent-street, London, W.

Borwick's Baking Powder. Pure & wholesome, assists digestion.
Borwick's Baking Powder. Guaranteed to be free from alum.
Borwick's Baking Powder. It has the largest sale in the world.

to build one. Next year's Church Congress is to meet at Nottingham under the presidency of Dr. Ridding, Bishop of Southwell.

The gentleman who sent me a story of "religious intolerance" from Dunmore East, which appeared in TRUTH of the 19th ult., does not seem to have fully investigated the facts. The Rector of Dunmore East informs me that the fund which was referred to was started by a gentleman for the relief of two Protestant fishermen, who had lost their boats in the gale, and that it was only when the committee met that the case of a Roman Catholic fisherman, whose boat had been sunk but raised again, was brought forward. It was then decided by the Committee that the fund could not be legitimately applied to this fisherman's case, whereupon a Protestant lady, who was on the Committee, undertook to make a special collection for this fisherman, to which the Rector himself, and his curate, as well as other Protestants, subscribed. This statement seems to dispose entirely of the suggestion that sectarian considerations prompted the decision that was arrived at; and I am glad to hear from the Rector that no distinction as between Protestants and Catholics has ever been made in his parish in relieving cases of distress.

One of my lady readers is very indignant at the presumption of the Bishop of Hereford in dogmatising upon female costume. She is of opinion that the real cause of the episcopal censure is not his lordship's objection to feminine "waistcoats," but jealousy of their adoption of "bishop's sleeves." If ladies, she says, ought not to imitate masculine garments, neither ought bishops to imitate those of the other sex. On this ground she calls on his lordship to give up his apron. If he can answer this argument, he is a clever bishop.

Porkopolis again! It seems that the degrees of the Universitas Nationalis Illinoiensis are not only being retailed by the London agency of that firm, but also by representatives in the provinces, and I have just come across a circular in which the Rev. S. Horn, of 29, George-street, Manchester, is the advertised representative of the business. The Rev. S. Horn seems to have lately removed from Manchester, and his present address is 23, Fishergate, Preston. Who is the Rev. S. Horn, and what is his agency worth? It may be useful to remind Lancashire people that the degrees that this reverend middleman sells are not University degrees at all, but merely bogus titles and distinctions, manufactured by a degree-factory in Chicago, which, if I am correctly informed, has not even a building of its own. No doubt most of those who buy these degrees do so with a deliberate intention of imposing on other ignorant people. But a certain number of the purchasers are themselves ignorant simpletons, who believe that they are getting a genuine University degree for their money, and it is as well that they should be undeceived on this point.

I have always been opposed to the imposition of religious tests on candidates either for the public service or private employment. After what has just happened at Macclesfield, however, I feel that as an employer of journalists myself I may have to modify my views. It appears that the chief reporter of one of the local papers has held various offices, including that of deacon at the St. George's-street Baptist Chapel. Recently he considered that his pastor had directed a personal attack at him in a certain sermon. He demanded an explanation, and found that the head and front of his offending in the eyes of the reverend gentleman was that he had been seen both at the theatre and the circus. He pointed out that his duties necessitated his attendance at all kinds of places, but this only seems to have convinced the intelligent and liberal-minded pastor that the profession of journalism was incompatible with membership of his church, and, on his proposition, the reporter's name was formally expunged from the church roll. Now, as it sometimes happens that I have to send members of my staff to places which, I dare say, even the Rev. Mr. Hobby would consider more iniquitous than a theatre or a circus, it will behove me to see that I never engage a Baptist. I should not object to him as a Baptist. But I could not possibly incur the responsibility of getting such an employee excommunicated by his pastor and fellow church members, which is apparently what would happen.

Some year or so ago, I called the attention of my readers to the work of the National Food Supply Association, which is engaged in supplying cheap meals on vegetarian principles in poor districts during the winter. The balance-sheet for 1895 shows a deficit of £322, and I dare say that when this fact is known there are many who will be ready to put the Association in funds for its work during the coming winter. For those who are so disposed I may mention that the office is to be found at the Memorial Hall, Farringdon-street.

A considerable amount of correspondence has reached me with reference to the allegations in last week's TRUTH respecting the management of Coventry Grammar School. It is also right to say at once that in some of the communications addressed to me all the allegations are either denied or explained away. In view of this conflict of evidence, I have thought it necessary to communicate with my original informant before dealing further with the matter in TRUTH. Should it turn out that my original information cannot be sustained, I need not say that I shall have great pleasure in giving full publicity to the other side of the case.

SPA WINTER SEASON.—Balmy climate. Only 12 hrs. from London. Cercle des Etrangers, with every Monte Carlo attraction, always open. Hotel tariff from 10fr. per diem. Address, Jules Crehay, Sec.

Epps's Cocoa is always found grateful and comforting both for breakfast, supper, and luncheon. It is sold in packets & 1-lb. tins, and labelled "James Epps & Co., Ltd.," Homœopathic Chemists.

At last I have come across a little military grievance which I am confident, will receive the deepest attention from the Commander-in-Chief and his colleagues, as soon as they hear of it. A Militia officer is in the greatest difficulty over the proper interpretation of the alterations in dress and equipment issued with Army Orders June 1, 1896. Here are some of his difficulties: (1.) When giving elaborate instructions respecting the trimming of mess jackets, why do the authorities say nothing about waistcoats? Is the trimming of these to be as heretofore, or is the white piping to replace the pre-existing lace, as on the jackets? (2.) When regiments which wore the roll collar before the present pattern mess jacket was introduced" are told that they "may revert to their original pattern," what is meant by the original pattern? Does it refer, as the context would seem to imply, to the shape of the collar only? or does it allow of the re-introduction of the various coloured facings which were abolished some fourteen years ago? and does it allow, as some regiments have decided, the use of "silk-cord shoulder cords" and slash cuffs on the sleeves? The urgent necessity for the elucidation of these points may be judged from the fact that the Colonel of one regiment is in absolute doubt on the subject, while at the same time "two of the best known London military tailors" have given their professional opinion that the details of the new mess kit rest with commanding officers! It is an awful thing to think of our military authorities being all at sixes and sevens on an important question of this kind, with all sorts of foreign complications looming on the horizon. Small wonder that foreign States consider that we have ceased to be a military Power. There is only one comfort for patriots in the face of this state of things. The authorities have invented a new helmet, "with a little button on top," in which Thomas Atkins ought to look like the great Panjandrum himself.

The most unqualified condemnations are passed by Indian Cavalry officers upon the new Cavalry Drill Book. Here are a few sample criticisms extracted from letters that have reached me:—"Full of inaccuracies, ambiguities, and omissions;" "only the old drill book imperfectly edited;" "only partially intelligible when studied side by side with the old book;" "the flood of 'corrections and emendations' that must inevitably follow will only make matters worse;" "as a monument of the incompetence, or carelessness, of the compiler, it is perhaps unique." Why was this book issued? It seems to be the general opinion that it was not required, and it has apparently created an infinity of trouble and perplexity in drilling native regiments.

